Whereupon A. B. Cummins offered the following preamble and resolution;

Whereas the Des Moines Union Railway Company has expended for construction from January 1st., 1893 to December 31st, 1893, the sum of seventeen thousand five hundred nineteen and 11-100 dollars, $17,519.11, which sum in-124 cludes the balance due on the settlement ordered to be made January 6th, 1893, of which sum the Wabash Ry. Co. has contributed, ... $ 8049.76,
D. M. N. & W. Ry. Co. has contributed.... 9469.35,

Total, ... $17519.11.

Now Therefore Be It Resolved that bonds of this Company be issued and delivered as follows; Eight bonds to the Wabash Ry. Co. and nine ,9, bonds to the Des Moines, Northern & Western Ry. Co.

Be it further Resolved that the President of this Company be authorized to withdraw seventeen bonds from the Central Trust Company, Truster, for the purpose indicated, and that the Trustee be requested to certify and deliver said bonds to the President of this Company.

Be it further Resolved, that the President shall deliver said seventeen, 17, bonds to the Treasurer and the Treasurer shall dispose of the entire number, to-wit; Eight bonds thereof shall be delivered to the Wabash Ry. Co., and Nine 9, bonds thereof shall be delivered to the Des Moines, Northern & Western Ry. Co. The Secretary then presented to the meeting a communication signed by O. L. F. Browne, Secretary of the Commercial Exchange, asking that this Company make a proposition to build a Union Passenger station in Des Moines, setting forth exactly what this Company asks to have done in the vacation and widening of streets and what this Company will do in return therefor; the cost of the proposed building finished, and the approximate terms upon which other Companies will be permitted to join in its erection and use.

123 Whereupon the following resolution was offered by C. M. Hays.

"Resolved that this Company make a proposition to the Committee of the Commercial Exchange having in charge the subject of the Union Passenger Railway Station, as follows:

First. The Company will require for such station, a continuous strip of ground from Fifth St. to Ninth St., unbroken by either streets or alleys crossing the same. It therefore will require the vacation of all streets and alleys lying between Fifth St. and Ninth St., running north and South, in so far as they cross the ground owned by the Company and which it proposes to use as a Union Passenger Railway Station; also the vacation and donation of the east and west alley between Cherry and Vine Sts., from Fifth to Ninth Sts.

Second. It will require the widening of Cherry St. by the addition of a strip of ground thirty-three, 33, feet wide upon the north side thereof from Fifth to Eighth Streets. This is absolutely essential in order to accommodate the business that will concentrate upon Cherry St. by reason of such passenger station.

Third. It will require that all damages, if any, caused by the vacation of said streets and alleys and the widening of Cherry St. be settled and adjusted without expense to the Company.

If the City or its citizens will cause the above changes to be made and things to be done, this Company will build a Union Passenger Depot sufficient to accommodate all of the roads now doing business in Des Moines and con-126 structed on a plan that will permit of future enlargement when necessary to meet the demands of the public. Such depot and train sheds shall cost presently not less than one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, $150,000.00 and shall be commenced within three months from the time that said streets have been vacated and widened and the damages, if any, thereto, settled and adjusted, and shall be completed within eighteen, 18, months from the date of the commencement of the work. All the railroads not now occupying said terminal property, but entering the city of Des Moines, as well as all railroads hereafter entering Des Moines, shall be allowed to occupy said Union Passenger Station upon equitable terms respecting rental, maintenance, and operation; the basis of said equitable terms being the payment of such sum of money as will on the whole pay a fair interest upon the value of the property after the payment of all costs of maintenance and operation."

Having offered said resolution, said C. M. Hays moved its adoption, which motion, being duly seconded, was unanimously carried.

Whereupon the Board adjourned.

Directors' Meeting, October 3, 1899.

Minutes of the Meeting of the Board of Directors of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, held at the office of the President of the Company in Des Moines, October 3, 1899.

F. C. Hubbell, President, presiding.

There were present, F. M. Hubbell, F. C. Hubbell, H. D. Thompson, A. B. Cummins, Cyrus Kirk, Jos. Ramsey, Jr., C. A. Goodnow and A. J. Earling.

H. D. Thompson resigned as a member of the Executive Committee and on motion of A. B. Cummins, C. A. Goodnow was elected a member of the Executive Committee.

Mr. Cummins moved that the contracts prepared by this Company and the C. B. & Q. Ry. Company, and the Keokuk & Western R. R. Company, be approved, and that the Officers of this Company be authorized to sign the same. No action taken.

F. M. Hubbell stated to the Directors that the Des Moines City Railway Company, in consideration of four hundred dollars ($400) to be paid by this Company to the Des Moines City Railway Company, said last named Company would go to the expense of removing six feet in width of the side-walk on the north side of Cherry Street, between 5th and 6th Streets, move the curb six feet north and put it in place, lay its track upon said strip of ground from which the sidewalk was removed, and operate its loop in front of the Union Station, and that 182 in the event this Company was not willing to contribute the said four hundred dollars ($400) toward the expense of said work, said City Railway Company would build its track along Cherry Street in the middle of the roadway. It was moved by Mr. Earling and carried that the above proposition be referred to the Executive Committee, with power to pay $400 if they thought best.

The contract between this Company and the Des Moines City Railway Company for the crossing of this Company's tracks of Maury Street, was presented and approved.

Mr. Hubbell offered the following resolution which was adopted.

Whereas, it seems desirable to enter into a new terminal contract with the Wabash R. R. Company and the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company, if the terms thereof can be agreed upon, it is therefore,

Resolved that a committee consisting of A. J. Earling, Jos. Ramsey, Jr. and F. M. Hubbell, be appointed to consider the subject and report to this Board.

The President read his annual report, together with the annual report of Superintendent Wagner, and his letter accompanying same, which are as follows:

"To the Directors of the Des Moines Union Railway Company.

Herewith I submit a brief report of the operation of this Company for the year ending December 31st, 1906.

At the last annual meeting the President was authorized to make an exchange of property with the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway Company of real estate in East Des Moines.

I attach hereto a blue print made from an accurate sur-225 vey of the premises showing the proposed new boundary lines between the properties of the two Companies, and am able to report that the matter is now in the hands of the Second Vice President of the Rock Island Company for final decision, with the recommendations of the several Departments through which the negotiation has passed during the year 1906, and we confidently expect to consumate the exchange at an early date.

In accordance with the authority of the Board the President subscribed for sixty shares of stock of the Iowa Transfer Railway Company, to which stock the following Railroads have also subscribed for equal amounts:

Chicago Rock Island & Pacific Ry.

Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Ry.

Chicago, Great Western Ry.

Des Moines Western Ry.

The transfer was completed and put in operation on October 1st 1906 and I am glad to say, is giving entire satisfaction to all the Companies using the same. The final cost of the yard, office and other accessories was $30,862.41 and the Board of Directors of the Iowa Transfer Railway Company authorized the issuing of one thousand dollars additional capital stock, to be divided among the five companies. Therefore, our Company should subscribe for two hundred dollars more of this stock.

The Des Moines Union Railway Company expended $1026.66 in building a connecting track from its main line to a connection with the Iowa Transfer Railway, as is shown by the Superintendent's report hereto attached.

The only additional tracks constructed by the Des 226 Moines Union during the past year are those mentioned in the Superintendent's report which are located west of the Water Works building. This construction was necessary in order that we might handle trains into and out of Des Moines. Owing to the increase in business, we were frequently without a single clear track in our west yard excepting the main line.

I again desire to call to the attention of the Directors to the necessity for a double main line from the east end of the Des Moines River bridge to East Fifth Street from which point we have double track to Chicago Great Western Junction.

The question of the Des Moines river bridge has been discussed with the Engineering Department, of the St. Paul and Wabash Companies, all of which correspondence is now in the President's office, and I shall be glad to have this question further discussed in view of the position taken by Mr. Cunningham of the Wabash Railroad Company.

During the past year this Company has been subjected to more litigation than in any previous year of its history, the Chicago Great Western Railway Company having brought suit in the Iowa District Court involving some eighty thousand dollars. At the hearing of this case the Great Western were defeated. Instead of appealing, they dismissed the case and have brought a new action in the Federal Court at Des Moines.

The County of Polk through its Tax Ferrets, brought action against this Company for mulct taxes on properties which we had permitted Anheuser-Busch, Schlitz and other Breweries to occupy with storage for handling their beers. The amount involved with the penalties was about Sixteen 227 Thousand dollars. I am glad to report that we have also won this case.

The case of Chas. Clark, switchman, killed December 20th 1905, which was referred to in report of last year, was settled in January 1906, for $200.00.

R. D. McMannus, Switchman, killed January 8th, 1906 for which the liability of our Company was beyond question, was settled at a total expense of $3108.70; this being the only expensive personal injury claim our Company has ever had.

The case of Wm. Froah, Trespasser, killed on our tracks by switch engine May 23d 1903, was disposed of during the year 1906 by dismissal at the cost of plaintiff.

At this moment we have no pending claims for personal injuries. Total amount paid for all personal injuries during the year 1906 was $3540.41.

This Company has loaned the sum of $75,404.59; some of the money at 4%, some at 5%, 5½% and 6%. All of the loans are amply secured. Schedule of loans hereto attached.

Our Company has recently ordered of the Baldwin Locomotive Works two switching engines, to be the same as our engines Nos. 4 and 5. These engines will be delivered to us in June 1907, and will cost $9700. each F. O. B. Des Moines.

I desire to add, in closing, my concurrence in the several recommendations made in the report of the Superintendent hereto attached.

Respectfully submitted,

F. C. HUBBELL, President."

"Des Moines January 3d, 1907.

Mr. F. C. Hubbell, President D. M. U. Ry. Des Moines.

Dear Sir:—

Referring to the close of the year 1906, I have to report the completion of the connection of our tracks with the Iowa Transfer Railway Company in East Des Moines at a cost of $1,026.66.

We have also constructed 4540 feet of side track west of the Water Works, with a capacity of Seventy-four (74) 229 cars, at a cost of $5,692.55.

We are greatly in need of additional repair tracks. The number of bad order cars, which came to us from our tenants, the Wabash and the C. M. & St. P., are far in excess of our rip track capacity, on this account we are unable to place as many cars on repair tracks as the prompt movement and shortage of cars demand. I therefore recommend that we build additional Repair Tracks to accommodate at least thirty (30) more bad order cars.

On account of increase in business, our present Round House is entirely too small and we need at least five (5) additional stalls, to properly care for the engines, which come to us from our tenant companies.

We have but one boiler to furnish steam to operate the machinery, heat the Round House and fire up engines. This is not sufficient for all these purposes, during cold weather, necessitating our using an engine, frequently, to assist in furnishing steam to take care of our requirements, this also being true when our one boiler requires repairs, an engine is expensive and not always available. I therefore recommend that an additional boiler be installed in the Boiler Room, so we may properly take care of our needs.

The past year has shown a large increase in our wheelage, and the indications are that the coming year of 1907 will surpass that of 1906.

Yours truly,

J. A. WAGNER."

Des Moines Union Railway Company.

(Directors Meeting) Des Moines Iowa January 3d, 1908.

Minutes of the annual meeting of the Board of Directors of the Des Moines Union Railway Company.

Immediately upon the adjournment of the Stockholders' meeting the newly elected directors, viz: E. W. McKenna, Chas. E. Vroman, E. H. Pryor, F. M. Hubbell, F. C. Hubbell, H. D. Thompson, G. C. Hubbell and N. T. Guernsey, convened as the board of directors.

The first business being the election of officers the following officers were elected by the unanimous vote of all of the directors.

F. C. Hubbell President

H. D. Thompson Vice President & Treasurer

F. M. Hubbell, Secretary.

Thereupon, the president read his annual report, including the annual report of J. A. Wagner, Superintendent, which are as follows:—

Des Moines Iowa January 1st 1908.

To the Directors of the Des Moines Union Railway Company:

Gentlemen:

Herewith a report from the Superintendent of this Company respecting business for the year 1907, which I will include and make a part of my report for the year 1907.

I desire especially to call the attention of the Directors to the necessity of a stronger bridge over the Des Moines River.

The bridge at present is overloaded as follows:

242 Compression members 15%
Flanges of stringers 25½%

Therefore, it is imperative that a stronger bridge be constructed at once, to take the place of the present structure, and in view of the necessity for a double track bridge, to accommodate the business of the Company, together with the obvious economy of building a double track bridge at this time instead of two single track bridges, I am taking preliminary steps toward the construction of a new double track bridge.

At a meeting in January 1907, authority was given to the President to subscribe for sixty shares of the capital stock of the Iowa Transfer Railway Company. It afterward developed that additional funds were necessary to complete the tracks and office and each of the companies, owners of the stock of the Transfer Company, subscribed for two additional shares, making the total increase, in the capital stock of the Iowa Transfer Railway Company, One thousand dollars.

Litigation has grown to be one of the principal features of the Des Moines Union Railway Company. The action brought by the Chicago Great Western Railway Company, for an accounting, has not progressed owing to the fact that that Company has delayed taking any evidence.

Since the last annual meeting the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company and the Wabash Railroad Company have brought action in the Federal Court, asserting that they are the beneficial owners of the Company's property, and asking for an accounting.

243 The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company has also brought action in the State Courts attacking the title to the west mile of track of the Des Moines Union Railway Company.

The Minneapolis & St. Louis Railroad Company has also served us with notice for an accounting on their bills, but the same has not yet reached the point of litigation.

The Des Moines Iowa Falls & Northern Railway Company's lease for the use of the Union Passenger Station expired December 31st, 1907, and that Company desires an extension of its lease, but asks for a modification of the rental charge. They are continuing to use the station subject to the action of the board of directors of this Company, at its meeting on January 24, 1908.

The year 1907 was fortunate in respect to personal injuries. The total expense for the year in settlement for injuries, including Surgeon's and Hospital fees, amounts to $1027.15.

I cannot close this report without again referring to the necessity for the fourteen hundred feet of second main line in East Des Moines, additional boiler capacity in the Round House, and additional stalls to the Round House in order to properly house the engines of our tenants.

Respectfully submitted,

F. C. HUBBELL, President.

244 Superintendent's Report for the Year 1907.

J. A. WAGNER.

245 The Treasurer reported orally, showing in detail how he had invested funds of the Company held by him.

On motion of Mr. Vroman, seconded by Mr. Pryor, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:—

Resolved, that the Treasurer of this Company be and he is hereby authorized and directed, until the further action of this board in the premises, to deposit all funds of this Company coming into his hands, in the Des Moines Savings Bank and the Iowa National Bank of Des Moines, Iowa; and the action of said Treasurer in heretofore depositing said funds is hereby approved ratified and confirmed.

Mr. Guernsey brought up the matter of the President's salary, and after a general discussion it was the sense of the meeting that the President is entitled to a reasonable compensation for the services rendered by him to the Company. At the request of Mr. McKenna this matter was passed for the determination of the amount of the President's salary to be taken up at the next meeting of the board.

On motion of Mr. Guernsey, seconded by Mr. Vroman, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Resolved that the president of this company be and he is hereby directed to, as soon as practicable, cause plans to be prepared for a new double track bridge across the Des Moines River, together with an estimate of its cost, and to submit the same to a meeting of this board to be called for that purpose;
246 and that in this connection the engineer of this company consult with the chief engineers of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company and Wabash Railroad Company.

The President reported a proposition looking to the construction of a track from a connection with the present tracks of the Company to the plant of the Iowa Portland Cement Company. After discussion of the matter the President was directed to cause a survey to be made and an estimate of the probable cost of this work, and pending this information the matter was passed.

The President reported to the meeting the pending differences with the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railroad Company as to the proper construction of that portion of the contract with the Des Moines & Fort Dodge Railroad Company, fixing the amount of rent to be paid by it.

Thereupon, it was determined that a brief upon the proper construction of this portion of the lease be prepared by N. T. Guernsey, the company's counsel, and the President was directed to adjust the matter upon the basis of making a minimum charge of four hundred dollars ($400) per month for two trains and in addition charging the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railway Company only for the actual days upon which trains in excess of the minimum two are run, and readjusting the account up to this time upon that basis.

Upon motion of Mr. Vroman, seconded by Mr. Thompson, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:—

Resolved, that the President and Secretary of this Company be and they are hereby authorized and directed to execute in behalf of this Company an extension of the present lease from this Company to the Des Moines Iowa Falls & Northern 247 Railway Company, such extension agreement to be attached to the original lease and to be in substantially the following form:—

The within contract, with all of its covenants and conditions, except as to compensation, is hereby extended to continue and remain in force for a term of six months, and thereafter until sixty days written notice of cancellation thereof by either party thereto.

The compensation to be paid by the second party hereunder shall be two hundred dollars per month, payable on the first day of the next succeeding month.

Executed in duplicate on this ..... day of January A. D. 1908.

Special Meeting of Directors. Chicago, Illinois May 5, 1899.

Pursuant to the call of the President, a special meeting of the Board of Directors was held at the office of the Company in the Old Colony Building, in this city, at 4:30 o'clock P. M. of this day.

And there were present Messrs. Earling, Goodnow, Hanson, Miller and Myers, ... 5

And absent Messrs. Keeler and Collins, ... 2

The President, having taken the chair, on motion, duly seconded, the reading of the minutes of the last meeting was dispensed with.

Mr. Miller stated to the Board that all the mortgage bonds which had been executed by the officers of this Company, amounted to the sum of $3,000,000; that of this sum $13,000 in bonds had been taken up, paid, and cancelled by this Company and are now in its possession; that $54,000 in bonds remained in the hands of the Metropolitan Trust Company, trustee of the mortgage, having never been issued to or by this Company, and that $2,933,000 in bonds were now held by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company.

That the St. Paul Company proposed to surrender these bonds to the trustee for the purpose of cancellation and destruction, and to procure a release of the mortgage of January 1st, 1895, in consideration of the conveyance which 433 this Company proposes to make of its railroad and property to the St. Paul Company; but that the Trust Company declined to make the release without a resolution of the Board of Directors of this Company, authorizing and requesting the trustee to cancel and destroy the bonds and to release the mortgage.

And thereupon he offered the following preamble and resolutions, which, being duly seconded, were unanimously adopted and are as follows;

Whereas, on the seventh day of March, 1895, this Company made and executed, under its corporate seal, to the Metropolitan Trust Company, of the City of New York, as Trustee, a certain mortgage deed of trust, bearing date January 1st, 1895, to secure the issue of not exceeding $5,415,000 in amount of bonds bearing even date with said mortgage, and payable twenty (20) years after said date, and bearing interest at the rate of four per cent per annum, payable semi-annually on the first day of January and July of each year; which said bonds were to be issued upon certain terms and conditions particularly set forth in said mortgage, to which mortgage reference is hereby made for greater certainty; and

In the office of the Recorder of Calhoun County, in said State, on said 21st day of March, in Book 37, of Mortgages, on page 359 of Calhoun County Records; and

In the office of the Recorder of Pocahontas County, in said State, on the 22nd day of March, 1895, in Book 28 of Mortgages on page 341, of Pocahontas County Records; and

In the office of the Recorder of Boone County in said State, on said 22nd day of March, in Book 82, on page 620 of Boone County Records; and

In the office of the Recorder of Dallas County, in said State, on the 23rd day of March, 1895, in Book of Mortgage Records, 128, on page 402, of Dallas County Records.

Being all the places where said mortgage was required by law to be recorded; and

Whereas, only $3,000,000 in amount of said bonds were executed by the officers of this Company and delivered to said trustee for its counter-signature, as required in said mortgage; and

Whereas, of the said $3,000,000 so as aforesaid delivered to said trustee, $2,915,000 in amount, being bonds numbered 1 to 2915, both inclusive, were countersigned by said trus-
435 tee, and delivered to this Company shortly after the execution and recording of said mortgage; and subsequently, and in the year 1898, $31,000 in amount of said bonds, —being numbered 2916 to 2940, both inclusive, and 2960 to 2965, both inclusive—were also countersigned by said Trustee and delivered to this Company, making in all $2,946,000 of bonds so countersigned and delivered; and

Whereas there are now in the hands of said trustee bonds issued under said mortgage—numbered 2941 to 2959 both inclusive, and 2966 to 3000, both inclusive—making in all $54,000 of said bonds so in the hands of said trustee; and

Whereas of the said $2,946,000 in amount of the bonds so as aforesaid executed, countersigned and delivered to it, this Company has taken up, paid, and cancelled $13,000 in amount of said bonds—being bonds numbered 2903 to 2915, both inclusive—and now has the same in its possession, and there are now outstanding in the hands of the public, bonds to the amount of $2,933,000; and

Whereas this Company desires that all of said $3,000,000 of bonds so as aforesaid executed by it, be cancelled and destroyed by said trustee, and that said mortgage of January 1st, 1895, be discharged of record;

Now, Therefore, be it

Resolved, That the said Metropolitan Trust Company, of the City of New York, Trustee, as aforesaid, be and is hereby authorized and requested to immediately cancel and destroy $54,000 in amount of bonds heretofore issued by this 436 Company, and hereinabove referred to and now in the hands of said Trustee, whether said bonds, or any of them, are or are not countersigned by said trustee, and also to cancel and destroy the said $13,000 in bonds heretofore paid by this Company and which are now tendered to said Trustee for this purpose, and

Resolved, That whenever and as soon as the remaining $2,933,000 in amount of the bonds issued by this Company, and

Whereas, The Board of Directors and Officers of this Company have executed its bonds for the sum of One Million

Eight Hundred Thousand Dollars ($1,800,000), dated January 1, 1899, and due fifty (50) years after date, with interest at the rate of four per cent per annum, payable semi-annually, on the first days of January and July of each year, and have secured the same by a mortgage or deed of trust to the Continental Trust Company of the City of New York, as Trustee, on the Des Moines Division of the Wabash Railroad, extending from the City of Des Moines, through the Counties of Polk, Marion, Monroe and Appanoose, to Moulton in the State of Iowa, and on the Hannibal and Quincy Railroad, extending from East Hannibal, through the Counties of Pike and Adams, to the City of Quincy, in the State of Illinois, as said roads are now, or may be hereafter constructed, maintained and operated, and of all the franchises, real estate rolling stock and other property and appurtenances of said roads, as the same are in said mortgage described, and which said mortgage is in words and figures as follows, to-wit:

And, Whereas, By the terms of said mortgage or deed of trust the bonds of the Company therein described can only be issued to the extent of One Million Six Hundred Thousand Dollars ($1,600,000), until such time as a majority in 491 interest of all the Stockholders of the Company shall, after sixty days' notice duly published, at a regular meeting, or at a special meeting duly called for that purpose, by resolution ratify and confirm said mortgage and expressly declare their intention and consent to have it operate as a lien upon all and every part of the property therein described for the equal benefit of the holders of all said bonds, to the full amount of One Million Eight Hundred Thousand Dollars ($1,800,000).

Now, Therefore, Be It Resolved, That said mortgage is hereby in all things ratified and confirmed, and then the bonds therein described shall have been issued to the amount of One Million, Eight Hundred Thousand Dollars ($1,800,000) in accordance with the terms and conditions of said mortgage, we hereby declare our intention and consent to have said mortgage operate as a first lien upon all and every part of the property therein described for the equal benefit of the holders of all said bonds to the full amount of One Million Eight Hundred Thousand Dollars.

Directors' Meeting, Oct. 5, 1897.

The following agreement which had been executed on behalf of The Wabash Railroad Company was presented to the Board.

(There is here inserted a copy of the agreement Exhibit No. 37 to the stipulation filed herein March 23, 1911.)

Mr. Ramsey stated that the reason for ratifying the old Des Moines Union contract was due to the fact that the Des Moines & St. Louis was the only Company bound by the old contract, as the Des Moines Northern & Western, having passed through the receivership, and been reorganized, it was not bound by the old contracts, and therefore in order to protect the interests of the Wabash and bind the Des Moines Northern & Western to bear its share of fixed charges, rental and expenses, the Wabash desired their ratification of the old contract, and after a number of meetings, the Des Moines Northern & Western agreed to ratify the old contract. In order to make the ratification complete it was thought best that the Des Moines Union, and Des Moines & St. Louis, and the Wabash Company, as operating the Des Moines and St. Louis, all become parties to the ratification; that there was no change in the terms of the old contract and that the ratification can only be in the interest of the Wabash Company, not only as a user of the property, but on account of increasing the value of the bonds held by the Purchasing Committee.

Upon Motion, duly seconded, Resolved, That the agreement dated July 31st, 1897 between the Wabash Railroad Co., the Des Moines Union Railway Company, and the Des Moines Northern & Western Railroad Company, ratifying and confirming the agreement made May 10, 1889, by the Des 493 Moines Union Railway Co. the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, and the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company, for the use of the terminal facilities etc. of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, is hereby approved, confirmed and ratified.

Defendants' Exhibit 239.

The Wabash Railroad Company.

Directors' Meeting, April 4, 1899.

The following letter was read to the meeting:

St. Louis, March 18, 1899.

O. D. Ashley, Esq.
President, New York.

Dear Sir:—

In 1882 the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Ry. Co. bought from Hoyt Sherman of Des Moines the strip of land described in the enclosed deed, but the title was taken in the name of Col. James F. How, trustee, and in order to make it clear that How held as trustee for the Wabash Co., he executed a declaration of trust setting forth that as the Wabash Co. had paid the purchase money he held as its trustee.

It seems, however, that How never made any deed to any one, and while the records in Mr. Lincoln's office show that he had the declaration of trust, he has never been able to find it since the fire. The property in question was conveyed, in 1889, along with other lots in Des Moines, to the Des Moines Union Ry. Co., but the legal title still remained in How. Some months ago the facts were presented to me, and at my request Mrs. How and her two sons executed to the Wabash Railroad Company a quit claim deed of all their rights and interests.

I sent that deed up to Mr. Hubbell, and he now writes me that in order to complete their title they should have a quit claim from the Wabash Company to the Terminal Company.

I have therefore, prepared the enclosed deed for you to 509 execute for the Wabash R. Co.

I think it entirely right for you to do so, and Mr. Hubbell is quite anxious to have it done and placed on record before our new mortgage is recorded. The mortgage only covers our leasehold interests in the Des Moines terminals, but in order to satisfy Mr. Hubbell, who has been doing considerable for our accommodation in the past two or three weeks, I would be glad to have you sign and acknowledge this quit claim deed, and return same to me at your earliest convenience.

Very truly yours,

(Signed) WELLS H. BLODGETT.

The President stated that, to carry out Col. Blodgett's request without delay, he had executed the deed referred to, in accordance with the authority conferred by the following paper:

New York March 21, 99.

We, the undersigned, Directors of The Wabash R. R. Co. hereby authorize the President to execute on behalf of the said Company quit claim deed to the Des Moines Union Railway Co. and referred to in Col. Blodgett's letter of March 18 99 to President Ashley.

Co., having been introduced, Mr. Welles of the Sub Committee, appointed at the meeting of July 26th, made a verbal report advising the acceptance of the propositions made by Messrs. Polk and Hubbell; whereupon on motion of Mr. Ashley, it was Voted That this Committee recommend the acceptance of the proposition of Messrs. Polk and Hubbell to buy the interest in the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company for first mortgage six per cent bonds to the amount of $450,000.00 according to the terms and conditions understood by Mr. Joy;

the bonds to be guaranteed principal and interest by Messrs. Polk and Hubbell and the sale to include only one quarter of the terminal property formerly owned by the Wabash Railway Company and General Dodge; this sale leaving the Purchasing Committee or the new Wabash Company in possession and ownership of one-half of said terminal property.

Some discussion followed in regard to the proposed modifications of the proposition of the Purchasing Committee suggested by the Committee of the Bondholders, but no formal action was taken.

Adjourned,

O. D. ASHLEY, Secy.

4th. This arrangement to continue until the contemplated decree and sale have been completed and the property has been legally acquired according to the agreement.

5th. In case of any obstruction or delay in carrying out the plan as detailed in the agreement to such an extent as to render it doubtful of completion within a reasonable time, it shall be in the power of either the Purchasing Committee

Polk & Hubbell or the new Company shall be entitled to any expenditure they may have made in repairing or operating the road over and above the amount of its net receipts, and in case they have received net earnings in excess of such expenditure, then the balance constituting such excess shall be paid over to the Purchasing Committee."

and on motion of Mr. Joy the transfer was authorized and approved in accordance with the suggestions.

Messrs. Joy, Hubbard, Welles, Ashley and General Swayne were present at this meeting.

Meeting of Purchasing Committee.

February 18th, 1890. New York, Feb. 18th a meeting of the Purchasing Committee was held at the office of the Wabash Railroad Company. Present, Messrs. Joy, Hubbard, Welles, and Ashley.

The minutes of previous meetings were read and approved.

Mr. Ashley reported that he had sold to F. M. Hubbell of Des Moines, Iowa, $135,000 of the Des Moines Union Railway Company mortgage bonds, out of $270,000 held by the Committee at their par value, and accrued interest in cash, the sale carrying also one quarter part of the interest of the Committee in the stock of the Des Moines Union Railroad Company. The amount had been paid and credited to the Purchasing Committee by the Treasurer of the Wabash Railroad Company, and the bonds delivered.

On motion of General Hubbard, the sale and settlements were approved.

Mr. Ashley also submitted a proposition he had made to F. M. Hubbell of Des Moines, Iowa, for a sale of the $450,000.00 mortgage bonds of the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company, subject to the ratification of the purchasing Committee and the Wabash Railroad Company.

This proposition was as follows:

"Chicago, February 11, 1890.

To F. M. Hubbell, Esq.
Des Moines, Ia.

Dear Sir:—

"In behalf of the Purchasing Committee of the Bondholders of the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Ry. Company, I am 518 authorized to accept a proposition from you to buy the $450,000.00 bonds issued May 20th, 1888 upon the following terms and conditions:

I am also willing to agree as one of the Purchasing Committee that upon the payment of each installment, as aforesaid, to deliver to you $45,000.00 in bonds of the Des Moines & Northwestern R. Co., but as I have not consulted my associates upon this point, this clause must be subject to the ratification of the whole committee, which I will try to secure.

Second. It is understood that the sale, terms and conditions, as before stated, are to be subject to the approval and ratification of the Board of Directors of the Wabash 519 R. R. Company, but I will agree to recommend to the Board all, or so much of the foregoing as may be ratified by the Purchasing Committee.

Third. It is also understood that in case you accept the foregoing proposition you shall procure such action on the part of the Des Moines & Northwestern Ry. Co., for the sale of said property last aforesaid.

Fourth: It is understood that you will accept the undertaking of the Wabash Railroad Company to idemnify you as purchaser against any claim or liens which may exist upon any of the property sold by the Purchasing Committee to Polk & Hubbell, or the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company.

(Signed) O. D. ASHLEY, Sec'y.,

Mr. Ashley stated also that he had nearly succeeded in selling the Des Moines Union Railway mortgage bonds ($204,000) but had been obliged to suspend negotiations on account of the interference with the old agreement, caused by the foreclosure of the Des Moines & Northwestern and the Des Moines & Northern, which roads have since been consolidated. Memorandum—1899.

The transfer of assets remaining in the possession of the Purchasing Committee having been delayed in various ways, and especially by the proposed construction of the line between Moulton and Albia, by which line of railway the entire line of the Des Moines & St. Louis from Albia to Des Moines can be utilized, it became necessary for the Committee to transfer that line to the Wabash Railroad Company. This was accordingly done and the Committee received from The Wabash Railroad Company $670,000 for the same. This amount, having been paid to the Wabash Railroad Company, was credited to the Purchasing Committee.

The accounts of the Committee having been examined by E. B. Pryor, Assistant Auditor of the Wabash Company on the ..... 1899, the Board of Directors of that Company passed resolutions holding the Committee harmless and accepting the accounts of the Committee, a deed conveying the property in the hands of the Purchasing Committee was executed as of date of August 18th, 1898, and the functions of the Committee have ceased, except as to outstanding accounts with the railway Share and Agency Company of London, November 1st, 1899. This last account is necessarily kept open in connection with the reorganization plan, under which certain debenture bonds and Stock are still to be exchanged and on which certain assessments and penalties are due.

Whereas the Narrow Gauge Railway Construction Company of Iowa did heretofore to-wit: on the 8th day of Dec. 1880 enter into a contract with the Des Moines North Western Railway Company and the Wabash St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company, whereby it agreed to build certain extensions of the Des Moines Company's road.

And Whereas the Wabash Company by the terms of said contract as a consideration for furnishing its bonds to aid in such extensions and taking a lease of said road, became entitled to one-half of the Stock of the Des Moines road and will be jointly interested in the same with the Construction Company.

And Whereas it is to the interest of both parties hereto that the same shall be prudently and economically constructed.

Now therefore to that end it is agreed by and between the parties hereto

That if said extension can be completed and equipped for less than the avails of the 7000 per mile in Bonds provided for in said contract in addition to the subsidies acquired along the line of said extension, then so much thereof as shall not be used shall be returned to the Des Moines Company and cancelled or otherwise disposed of as said Company shall direct. The Wabash Company will not however require nor will it as a stockholder in the Des Moines Company or lessee of its railroad insist on the Construction Company expending upon the construction and equipment of said extension more than the avails of said $7,000 per mile of said Bonds in addition to the subsidies acquired along the line of said extension.

Dear Sir—I have just received a letter from Col. How in which he says that Mr. Hopkins told him that he thought it was understood that he (Col. How) was to subscribe for the stock of the D. M. & St. L. road. Col. How is now waiting for official information in that respect. I will let you know just as soon as I hear from him, and also whether he wants the deeds made direct to him personally or as Trustee, from the parties in whose names you have the original deeds made.

In all cases where you pay any money for this right of way, you should make out vouchers in favor of yourself, if you furnish the money, for the amount, and let them go through the regular run, the same as for any moneys expended for any other purpose on account of the D. M. & St. L. Ry. Whenever you make out any vouchers for right of way, have the items full on the face of the face of the voucher, stating the lot and the block, in whose name the deed is taken and what proportion of the purchase price is paid, also if any of the amount stated on the voucher is paid for recorder's fees, for getting up abstracts or anything of that sort. Send them to me approved by 529 Mr. Clarkson, and I will forward them to St. Louis, so that the money can be refunded you. This will answer your letter to Col. How, on the same subject.

If you wish other names to make deeds to besides those I gave you, you might add G. S. Grover, Joseph Dickson, or W. H. Blodgett of St. Louis, who are all connected with the legal department in St. Louis.

Yours truly,

Gents.
I have yours of the 15" advising me that you can sell the north half of lot 6, block 22 at 1800.00. The price is certainly very satisfactory and it seems to me that we don't want the land, but I would like to have you talk with Mr. Kinney before we come to any conclusion in the matter.

I also have a letter from Mr. Hubbell giving me price of parts of other lots which he says he can sell. My impression is that we don't need the north half of lots between 8" and 12" streets. Will you please confer with Mess. Clarkson & Runnels and with Mr. Kinney and get their views in the matter and let me know if they agree with me. We can then if we so decide take steps to sell at price you name, which seems to me satisfactory. My only hesitation about deciding the matter now is that I remember that certain property down in that locality will be needed for shoproom for narrow gauge road and probably for an interchange yard between the two roads and don't wish to sell anything that may be required for this purpose.

Dear Sir,
As you are aware we have charged to the Des Moines & Northwestern road a quantity of rails which property should be charged to the Des M. & Northern, there may be other charges which have been made to Des M No West'n a portion of which should be billed against D M & Northern, likewise there may be, (I do not know that there is,) some counter-charges to be made against the D M No West'n. We are anxious to find out just how the account stands between the two companies & therefore I have requested Mr Trumbull our ass't auditor to go to Des Moines and go over with you these accounts with a view (to) such an adjustment. The amount the D M & N W will owe for the half interest in the track between Des Moines & Clive and for the whole of the track between Clive and Waukee, and for which the D M N W road should have credit, I have requested Mr. Trumbull to show separately. While he is there I have asked him also to see whether everything which should be charged against J. F. How, Trustee in the city of Des Moines has been so charged & whether the other properties have had credit for any such charges.

532 Mr Trumbull will leave here on Sunday evening & I hope you will arrange to be in Des Moines on his arrival and also have Mr. Kinney there, and have these accounts all finally adjusted.

Dear Sir:

I have your letters of May 31st and April 5th. I notice in your statements of April 5th that the cost of the work done by me was $131,995.50, while the cost as made up to May 31st was $126.824.11. I send you herewith copy of the Wabash statement in which you will notice they give us a credit for expenditure of only $103.436.48. I do not exactly understand these figures. Can you reconcile them, or tell me where the discrepancy occurs? I notice the Wabash people cut down by one half the cost of the construction from the corporation line to Cleve, and from Cleve to Waukee they cut down the cost $6000, while they increase the cost on account of the State limits $2000.

There is nothing added for superintendance or interest. I suppose you will expect us to add them here. Are you sure you have carried into this account every thing that should be there? These statements run up the cost of the road some $30,000 or $40,000 above what has been heretofore reported to me.

Very truly yours,

(Signed) G M DODGE.

P. S. Please explain to me fully the item of expenditure by Wabash, Des Moines to Clive, $15,174.06.

June 3d. The difference in the figures showing expenditures in the city limits and from city to Clive occurs namely as follows:

An item of $1800 paid by you for real estate in Des Moines was reported as belonging to the account of city limits to Clive. This error was discovered when Mr. Trumble was here and which increases amount expended in city and reduces amount expended between city and Clive.

As to the deductions in cost of road from Clive to Wauker it came as follows:

It was found that although I had paid for splices, spikes, bolts, and ties for the road to Wauker and had taken credit for them, yet when we came to finish the road to Boone we were compelled to borrow from the Wabash supplies quite a large amount of all of these, the value of which was ascertained to be $6,199.71, which was deducted from amount expended by you from Clive to Wauker, namely, $49,857.18. Less supplies $6,199.71. Total Clive to Wauker $43,657.47. City limits to Clive $46,775.25. Inside of city limits $36,391.39. These are footed, $126,824.11. As you own one half 537 of the road from city to Clive it is proper for you to collect from Wabash only one half of the item of $46,775.25.

For the same reason as the Wabash furnished all the iron from city limits to Clive it is proper for you to pay for one half of it, namely, one half of $15,174.06. We added nothing for superintendence or interest, leaving that for you to settle with the Wabash. We think the account is correctly stated.

please give me a statement of what is collected and send check for same. I would like to know at the same time just what is remaining unpaid on account of taxes voted for us and when we can expect the payment.

I have never received from you a statement of the rents collected on property belonging to J. F. How Trustee or the road, in Des Moines, there must be a number of houses on the property which we bought which are rented and there should be considerable due us from that source. Please give me a detailed statement of the amount collected showing from what time & to what time payment covers.

Gentlemen:

Some two years ago when our Auditor called on you to adjust the account between the Des Moines & Northwestern Ry. Co., Genl. Dodge, and the Wabash; in the settlement ~~the former~~ (Genl D—) was credited with cost of the land he had purchased in Des Moines, with the understanding that it was to be deeded to J. F. How, Trustee, in which name stood most of the other property belonging to the R. R. and I understood that Mr. Hubbell prepared deeds and sent them to Genl Dodge for his signature but for some reason they were not then executed. It is important now to have these deeds executed, and I yesterday telegraphed, asking you where they were; and just have your telegram, that you know nothing of them which is a surprise to me, as the information I had, that they were prepared, came from one of your firm. As you are thoroughly acquainted with the matter, will you prepare such deeds from Genl Dodge to J. F. How, Trustee, and send them to ~~New York~~ (me) to be executed.

Gentlemen. Yours of Aug. 7th received. It is necessary to have a deed of the property, spoken of in your letter, as belonging to the St. L. D. M. & N. Ry, as well as that which was in the name of Gen. Dodge. Please send me a deed for the same to James F. How trustee and if the Officers of the Company live in Des Moines have them execute it. And if it has to be executed by Gen Dodge prepare it and send it to me and I will forward it to him to be executed. I have telegraphed you today to this effect. This property was as you know to be left separate from the Roads in one name with the idea of having a terminal company in which all roads should have a proportionate interest and in making up the account against the Boone R. To run two years from the time the title is delivered to Polk & Hubbell, and to be redeemable at their option at any time before maturity upon payment of principal and accrued interest, and if paid within one year from

Referring to a conditional contract dated October 9th, 1886, between Messrs. Polk and Hubbell, of the one part, and the Wabash Purchasing Committee, so called, of the other part, and to an agreement dated September 10th, 1887, made between the same parties, and to an agreement dated May 29th, 1888, signed by the Central Trust Company of New York, and assented to by said Purchasing Committee, and to an agreement dated May 15th, 1889, between said Purchasing Committee and the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company, the parties interested in said agreements do hereby covenant, undertake and agree as follows:

First: F. M. Hubbell, of Des Moines, Iowa, agrees to buy and does hereby buy from the said Purchasing Committee forty-five first mortgage bonds of the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company, each for the principal amount of $10,000, being the same bonds now held by said Central Trust Company, and mentioned in said agreement of May 29th, 1880.

Second: The said F. M. Hubbell agrees to pay for said bonds as follows, to-wit: He will pay and deliver to the said Purchasing Committee when this agreement is signed bonds of the Des Moines Union Railway Company of the par value of $115,000. The said Hubbell will also pay to said Purchasing Committee $285,000, in ten monthly instalments as follows, to-wit: April 1, 1890, $28,500. May 1st, 1890, $28,500; June 1st, 1890, $28,500; September 1st 1890, $28,500; October 1st, 1890; $28,500; November 1st, 1890 $28,500; December 1st, 1890, $28,500; January 1st, 1891, $28,500; February 1st, 1891, $28,500; March 1st, 1891, $28,500. It is understood and agreed that said Hubbell may, at his pleasure, anticipate payment of any of the amounts above mentioned and thereby stop interest thereon.

Third: The said Purchasing Committee agrees to sell to said F. M. Hubbell the said forty-five First Mortgage Bonds of the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company each for the principal amount of $10,000, as aforesaid, and to assign and transfer, as said Committee hereby does, to said F. M. Hubbell all the rights of said Committee with respect to said forty-five bonds in consideration of the payments to be made by said Hubbell as hereinbefore specified and to deliver to said Hubbell $45,000, par value of said Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company bonds (being one-tenth of 564 the total amount thereof) upon the payment by said Hubbell of each one of the notes above mentioned with interest as aforesaid.

Fourth: Polk and Hubbell and the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company assent to this agreement and release the said Purchasing Committee and its individual members from all liability in respect to all or any of the agreements mentioned in the preamble to this contract, so far as such liability might otherwise be charged upon the estate of said committee not heretofore conveyed and so far as the members of said committee might otherwise be individually liable. It is, however, expressly understood and agreed by both the parties hereto that nothing herein contained is meant or shall be construed to release or waive any agreement or liability made or assumed by said committee and which by the terms of any decree of court or conveyance by said committee has been charged upon any property whatever which said committee has heretofore purchased or conveyed. And the said F. M. Hubbell joins in said release, in consideration that the Wabash Railroad Company agrees to perform said contracts so far as they are not superseded hereby and so far as said Purchasing Committee would otherwise be bound to perform the same and to protect and hold harmless the parties to said agreements to the same extent that the said Purchasing Committee would be bound to protect them and hold them harmless if this release had not been made.

265 Fifth: In consideration of the premises and in consideration also of its interest in the bonds of the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company and of its obligation to protect the said Purchasing Committee in respect to the several contracts and agreements herein mentioned which it hereby recognizes and acknowledges, the Wabash Railroad Company by authority of its Board of Directors undertakes and agrees to perform the several agreements and the conditional contract mentioned in the preamble to this contract so far as the same are not superseded by this contract and so far as the said Purchasing Committee would be bound to perform the same if not released by the last preceding article hereof; and agrees to protect and hold harmless Polk and Hubbell, F. M. Hubbell and the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company against any claims or liens which may exist upon any of the property sold by said Purchasing Committee to Polk and Hubbell or to the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company according to the true meaning and intent of the agreements mentioned in the preamble to this contract, and especially to protect them against the claim of the Des Moines & Fort Dodge Railroad Company now pending in the supreme court of the United States as cause numbered 256 on the calendar of said Court and against all claims that may arise from any of the matters mentioned or referred to in said cause numbered 256 aforesaid.

Dear Sir:—

Referring to the copy of the resolutions adopted at the meeting of the Directors of the Des Moines Union Ry. Co., which you sent me, I notice one error, where the resolution says that one-half of the stock should be transferred to me, it should read three fourths; of this three-fourths, one-fourth I suppose will eventually go to you when you carry out your arrangement with the Purchasing Committee but the three-fourths should be turned over to me and the resolution was so passed. Please make the correction on the books and notify me that you have done so.

Jas. F. How,
St. Louis, Missouri.

Dear Sir,—

Yours of the 19th instant in regard to copy of resolution of the Des Moines Union Ry. Co. is received.

The original resolution, which was introduced by you, and passed by the company authorizing the issuance of three-fourths of the capital stock of the Des Moines Union Ry. Co. to you for the Purchasing Committee, and one-fourth to the St. Louis Des Moines & Northern Ry. Co. In entering the same up the words "one-half was inserted by mistake, instead of three-fourths". The record has now been corrected, so as to correspond with the original resolution. We are not advised as to what right the Purchasing Committee have to the stock. We suppose however they acquired it by purchasing the stock of the Des Moines & St. Louis R. R. Co.

It seems to us that the entire stock of the company $2,000,000 should not be issued at present but that three-fourths of the stock actually issued should be delivered to you and one-fourth to General Dodge. We would like your views in regard to this matter.

Yours truly,

Gentlemen;

Mr. Ashley was in here to-day with a statement in figures of the expenditures upon the terminals. He seemed to think that in some way or other I ought to pay the balance of the quarter, or that it would be hardly fair for me to receive ¼ of the stock; but I explained to him the facts of my settlement with the Wabash, which you probably remember. They agreed to take bonds for their expenditure, and I agreed to pay interest upon my ¼ of the expenditure which I have done up to date, and when they receive the bonds, they of course will take their interest from the coupons. If this matter comes up between you and him please explain that to him. The original intention of the Wabash, you know, was to pay for the whole and take bonds but in the settlement I turned in what I had expended.

Mr. Ashley also wanted to issue bonds for the roundhous expenditure and the lots owned by you, and have each Co. take its proportion, and make payments. I do not object to that, as we would have to make the payments any way, we can make them direct to the terminal company as well as to the Wabash, and take bonds for the amount we pay in. But there should be turned over on the roundhouse $5000 insurance money. That you want to attend to.

We are drawing up the form for bringing other companies in, which he will take with him to St. Louis. It is based 571 on the Peoria & Pekin agreement, of which you have a copy.

Yours truly,

(Signed) G. M. DODGE.

Dear Sir:—

I enclose the deeds from Gen'l Dodge to the Des Moines Union Ry. Co. which Col. Blodgett has examined and pronounces all right. In your letter transmitting these deeds, you say that they will not be recorded until the bonds are ready to be issued for them; it appears to me that before the mortgage is signed the deeds should be recorded and certainly before the bonds are issued. I think that the understanding was, that on receipt of the deeds, Gen'l Dodge and myself were to have an agreement from the Terminal Co. that each was to receive so many bonds for themselves or the parties they represent as soon as the bonds could be prepared; indeed I hold such a receipt to be turned over to the Purchasing Committee as soon as my deeds are put on record. Let me know what you decide about this matter and if it is determined to record the deeds at once, I will forward mine or will forward them as soon as you want them.

Please let me know what the law is in Iowa regarding the liability of a party giving a warranty deed? Are they liable for more than the consideration stated in the deed; this is the limit to the liability in this state and is the limit I understand under the common law but I understand that in 573 some states this is different, hence my inquiries concerning the Iowa law.

Yours truly,

JAMES F. HOW,

Dear Sir:

Your letter of the 31st ult. enclosing two deeds, one from the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern, and the other from

G. M. Dodge to the Des Moines Union Railway Company for certain property in Des Moines is received.

We delivered to General Dodge the contract of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, to give him the bonds, and stock of the company when the same are issued, in payment for said terminals. If the deeds are satisfactory to you we will put them on record at once.

In regard to the law in Iowa relating to the liability of the party giving warranty deed would say my understanding is that the warrantor is liable only to the extent of the consideration paid him for the property with six per cent interest thereon, less any rents that may have been received from the property by him. If this inquiry is made with reference to the deed you make to the company would say inasmuch as you held the property as trustee for other parties, I should make the conveyance as such and should only make a special warranty deed.

Yours most obtly,

J. S. POLK.

Enclosed please find a deed from the Des Moines & St. Louis Ry. Co. to the Des Moines Union Ry. Co. for the property owned by the former Co. in Des Moines. Please have same executed by Mr. Clarkson as President, and by Mr. Hubbell as Secretary and return same to me as Mr. Blodgett wishes to see that it is properly executed before it is put on record.

I understand that the Des Moines Northwestern Ry. make no deed as they have no property in Des Moines to transfer. Am I correct about this? If not, I would like to see their deed before it is recorded.

Mr. Ashley is in town and I have just had a talk with him concerning the amendments to the proposed contract for the use of the Des Moines Union Depot that you desire viz;—that the Purchasing Committee should surrender one-fourth of their stock for the benefit of the Depot Co. Mr. Ashley says that this is an arrangement which he could not agree to on behalf of the Purchasing Committee being satisfied that they would not approve of the surrender of any of their stock without a consideration. The contract as submitted last Monday, he feels is a perfectly fair one, as it requires each Co. to pay interest on the bonds only in proportion to their use of the property and he hopes that on reconsideration of the matter you will see the justness of this provision, or if you prefer, that question can be left to arbitration, you to select one arbitrator, we the other, they to select the other if they cannot agree. I trust that you will make up your minds to adopt the contract as submitted so that the matter can be closed up and the bonds then disposed of so as to make the necessary improvements and expenditures that are required.

Dear Sir:—

At the last annual meeting of the stockholders of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, I suggested to those present several matters in which, in my opinion, the articles of incorporation of the company ought to be amended. Upon this there was a resolution offered and adopted, appointing you and myself a committee to re-draft these articles, and present our changes to a meeting of the stockholders on the 18th of February. I have made a draft of amended articles thinking it would save time to be able to present something tangible to you whenever we could get together. I regard the matter as an important one, and a change as absolutely necessary for the proper conduct of the company. We shall have to hold a consultation in regard to the matter within a short time, and I write to ask you when and where this consultation shall be held. If you desire me to come to St. Louis, I will endeavor to do so, if you can fix a day sometime three or four days in advance of the time you write. Be good enough to give me an early reply and oblige.

Gen. G. M. Dodge,
No. 1 Broadway, New York.

Dear Sir:—

On account of Col. Blodgett's absence from home, I find that I will not be able to have a consultation with him, until shortly prior to the meeting of the stockholders of the Des Moines Union Railway Company called for February 18; therefore I enclose you a copy of the proposed amendments as they have been prepared by me, and also a copy of a resolution, which I have thought ought to be submitted to and passed by the stockholders after the amendments have been made.

You will observe that these amendments are directed to two purposes, first, to clear up the ambiguity and uncertainty with respect to the amount of stock to be issued on account of the original purchase of the property, second, to enable the Des Moines Union Railway Company to act in all matters without the previous authority of three corporations. I have endeavored to protect the interest of the minority as fully as it is protected in the present articles, that is to say, under the amendments as now proposed the company cannot do anything of importance without the affirmative vote of the one-quarter of the stock which your road will represent 20m or the vote of one of the directors which you will always be able to control. By this arrangement, you will have as effective a negative upon the conduct of the company exerted directly by your stock, as you now have by requiring the previous formal action of the Des Moines & Northern Railway Company. I have given the matter the most careful attention, and while Mr. Hubbell was at first disposed to oppose the amendments which I have prepared, after a full explanation with him, I believe that he will support them. If this reaches you before he leaves New York, it will be well to talk the matter over with him. In any event give me your ideas as fully as you can, and particularly if you do not expect to be here.

Dear Sir:—

I have yours of April 1st this morning. The result of my conversation with Messrs. Joy and Welles is a rather vague idea that we ought not sell $100,000 of the Des Moines Union R'y Terminal Bonds and one-eighth interest in the capital stock at less than $115,000 and accrued interest on the Bonds, and I do not feel authorized to offer it at any less price. If, however, you will make me a definite bid of the best price you can, I will communicate it to the other members of the Committee and give you an early and definite reply. It must be understood, of course, that a one-eighth interest in the capital Stock shall be sufficient to represent a proprietorship in the Company according to the understanding we had when you were here.

Dear Sir:—

I am just in receipt of yours of the 17th, giving list of certain property that you have purchased in Des Moines, which you offer to sell to the Des Moines Union Railway Company, at the price you paid for same, with interest from the date of purchase, said offer to be accepted at any time within thirty days of the date of your letter. As I understand it, this question will have to be acted upon by the Board of Directors of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, and I suppose your letter is written with the idea of ascertaining how Mr. Hays and myself would vote on the question at such a meeting. It is our opinion that your offer should be accepted, provided the Des Moines Union Railway Company can pay for the property in their bonds at par, with accrued interest.

Dear Sir:—It has been suggested to me that perhaps we can arrange for the negotiation of the Des Moines Union R'y Co.

bonds, including those owned by the Purchasing Committee and yourself, with parties in London or New York. In order to do this, I should like to have you forward to me a description of the property mortgaged and your valuation of the same, together with copies of the agreements of the lessee companies, and copies, also, of the mortgage and bond. Also a statement of what improvements it is proposed to put upon the property.

I have said that I thought these bonds could be sold at a price which would net 90 to the holders, and I think now is the time to begin the negotiation. The Purchasing Committee hold $205,000 of these bonds, and I think you individually, have over $100,000. It will be necessary in making this negotiation to unite all of these bonds in one mass, so that the seller may control the market and the sale can be made pro rata according to the contributions.

Let me hear from you at your earliest convenience, and believe me,

Yours truly,

O. D. ASHLEY.

Mr. F. M. Hubbell,
Prest. Des Moines Union Ry. Co. Des Moines, Ia:

Dear Sir:—

I have yours of the 27th in regard to switch to the works of the National Starch Manufacturing Company, West Des Moines, which happened to reach me just as President Ashley was in my office discussing other matters and I therefore laid it before him for his opinion. He agreed with me in my view of the matter, as expressed to you when we discussed it when I saw you in Des Moines last and that is, if it was necessary to run the track off of the main line of the Wabash Road, it should be owned and controlled by this Company, with the privilege to the Des Moines Union, however, of access to and from the Works on the payment of a reasonable car and engine trackage rate. We would not be willing to dispose of the portion of the Wabash main track that would lie between that switch and the present terminus of the Des Moines Union track. In the first place, we would expect a much larger price for the property than the Des Moines Union Railway would, in all probability, be willing to pay, and there are other reasons which we can foresee that would make such action unwise. If the Starch Company desire us to put in the track for them at their expense, in order that they may control the ownership (as I understand from you it is their desire 629 to do) we will be very glad to take the matter up at an early date.

Yours truly,

Mr. F. M. Hubbell,
Secy. & Treasurer,

Dear Sir:—

I have your favor of the 19th, in regard to N. 2-3 of lot 6, block 15, bought by Swift & Co. and now offered to us at $8,663.80.

While it seems to me that it is desirable that the lot should be owned by the Des Moines Union Company, we are not in such position that we feel we can, conveniently, advance the amount that would be chargeable to us on usual basis for distributing the expense of such purchase. I think since you are now the largest holder in Des Moines Union Bonds and stock, you should sell the lot to the Company and take bonds at par for same. As a Director of the Des Moines Union Company, I am willing to approve getting lot in this way, but I am not willing to approve of it on basis of each Company contributing its proportion of the purchase price and taking bonds therefor.

Yours truly,

Dear Sir:—

Your favor of the 20th is received and noted. Enclosed I send you a copy of the Articles of Consolidation and Incorporation and Trust Mortgage of the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railway Company. There has been bonds issued on this property to the amount of $2,770,000. I have no printed copy of the Articles of Incorporation of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, but will say they were drawn by our Attorney, Mr. A. B. Cummins, and I think are all right, and if important to you, can have a copy made and sent you. The amount of bonds authorized by that Corporation is $800,000, bearing 5% interest, of which amount $612,000 have been issued. I enclose plat of Des Moines Union. We have about five miles of right of way occupied by about twenty miles of track. The Des Moines, Northern & Western Railway Company own one-fourth of the capital stock of the Des Moines Union Railway Company. The Wabash own one-eighth and five-eighths is owned by individuals.

632 Defendants' Exhibit 309.

This Indenture, made this Fifteenth day of March A. D. 1894, by and between the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railway Company, hereinafter called the "Des Moines Company," a corporation of the State of Iowa, and the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company, hereinafter called the "St. Paul Company," a corporation of the State of Wisconsin, authorized to own and operate Railroads in the State of Iowa,—Witnesseth:

1. That the Railroads of said Companies intersect, are connected and can exchange traffic each with the other at Madrid and Herndon, in the State of Iowa, and by reason of such connections can form a through Line, reaching the principal Cities and Towns in said State, and States adjacent, and each can furnish to the other traffic not otherwise obtainable.

2. That it is for the interest of both Companies to establish and maintain close traffic relations with each other, and, so far as they lawfully may, to work jointly for their common benefit as against competing lines of Railroad.

3. That the St. Paul Company owns and controls a large amount of the Capital Stock of the Des Moines Company, and desires to have a voice in directing its traffic affairs; and

4. That, in consideration of the benefits and advantages which they expect to derive from this undertaking, and of their mutual and dependent covenants hereinbelow set forth, the said Companies have agreed and do hereby agree each with th other, as follows, to-wit:

633 First. The Des Moines Company hereby agrees that the entire amount of its indebtedness, secured by Mortgage on its Railroad and property, is Two Million, Seven Hundred and Seventy Thousand Dollars in Bonds, bearing interest at the rate of Four per cent. per annum until January 1st, 1897, and thereafter at Five per cent. per annum, together with the interest accrued to this date on said Bonds; and that it will not, without first obtaining the written consent of the St. Paul Company, make or execute any other or further Mortgage on said premises, and will not increase its present bonded indebtedness, except by the issue of Bonds at par for the actual cost of property hereafter acquired, and that the Bonds, if any, so to be issued shall not, without like consent, bear interest at a higher rate than Four per cent. per annum; and it also agrees that it will faithfully endeavor to reduce the rate of interest on its Bonds now outstanding so that they shall, from and after April 1st, 1897, bear interest at not exceeding Four per cent. per annum.

Provided however, that this Section shall not be construed so as to prevent the Des Moines Company from making a new Mortgage, and issuing new Bonds thereunder, for the purpose of renewing or extending its present mortgage indebtedness; but provided also, that the new Bonds so to be issued shall bear interest at not exceeding Four per cent per annum, and shall not exceed in amount the aggregate of the principal sum of the present outstanding Bonds of said Company and the interest thereon which shall have accrued and be unpaid at the time of the issuing of new Bonds therefor; and provided, further, that said new Bonds, or their proceeds, shall be 634 used only for the purposes aforesaid, and that the present outstanding Bonds and coupons, exchanged therefor or redeemed thereby, shall be canceled when and as so exchanged or redeemed.

Second. The Des Moines Company further agrees that the entire amount of its Capital Stock now issued and outstanding is Four Million, Two Hundred Thousand Dollars, divided into Forty-two Thousand Shares of One Hundred Dollars each, and that all said Shares have equal rights and preferences; and that it will not, without first obtaining the written consent of the St. Paul Company issue any other or further shares, except at par for the actual cost of property hereafter acquired.

Third. The Des Moines Company further agrees that its Board of Directors shall consist of not more than Seven members, and that it will appoint a Traffic Manager, who shall have charge of, and full powers in regard to, its Freight and Passenger Traffic, and who shall be at all times acceptable to the St. Paul Company, and that the rates on all traffic covered by or contemplated in this Agreement shall be made by, or with the consent of, the St. Paul Company.

Fourth. The Des Moines Company further agrees to maintain its Railroad, equipment and appurtenances in good order and repair, and to operate its trains in close connection with the trains of the St. Paul Company, and to accept, as its share of the revenue which may be derived from the traffic contemplated herein, the divisions mentioned and set out in the next succeeding Section hereof.

Fifth. The St. Paul Company hereby agrees that on all traffic by it received from or delivered to the Des Moines 635 Company the following divisions shall be made:

(a) On Freight traffic between Chicago, or points taking Chicago rates, and points on the Lines of the Des Moines Company, that Company shall receive forty per cent (40%) and the St. Paul Company sixty per cent (60%) of the gross rate.

(b) On Freight traffic between points on the St. Paul Company's lines east of the Mississippi River, taking higher than Chicago rates, and points on the lines of the Des Moines Company, that Company shall receive thirty-five per cent (35%) and the St. Paul Company sixty-five per cent (65%) of the gross rate.

(c) On Freight traffic between Minneapolis, Minnesota Transfer and St. Paul, or other points taking the rates of said Stations, and points on the Lines of the Des Moines Company, that Company shall receive thirty-five per cent (35%) and the St. Paul Company sixty-five per cent (65%) of the gross rate.

(d) On Freight traffic between points on the St. Paul Company's lines in Iowa and points on the lines of the Des Moines Company, that Company shall receive forty per cent (40%) and the St. Paul Company sixty per cent (60%) of the gross rate.

(e) On Freight traffic between points on the St. Paul Company's lines in North and South Dakota and Minnesota, and points on the lines of the Des Moines Company, that Company shall receive thirty-five per cent (35%) and the St. Paul Company sixty-five per cent (65%) of the gross rate.

(f) On Freight traffic between points on which the rate shall be made up of the two local rates, each Company shall be entitled to its local rate.

636 (g) On Passenger traffic between points on the Lines of the St. Paul Company and points on the Lines of the Des Moines Company, the last named Company shall receive its local rates, except in cases of special arrangements which the parties hereto may, from time to time, mutually agree upon.

(h) On any traffic not hereinabove provided for, delivered by either party to the other, just and equitable divisions shall be made from time to time, as circumstances may require.

Sixth. It is mutually understood and agreed by and between the parties hereto that the term "gross rate", as used herein, means the proportion of the through rate which accrues to both parties hereto; and that all accounts, settlements and payments, growing out of this agreement, shall be presented and made monthly.

Seventh. It is further mutually understood and agreed that neither party hereto shall discriminate against the other in favor of any other line of Railroad or any transportation Company, in respect to any traffic covered by this agreement, and that both Companies shall work jointly for their common interest as against competing Lines; and that each Company will, so far as it lawfully may, turn over to the other Company all traffic destined to points on such other Company's Lines or reached by reasonably direct connections thereof.

Eighth. It is further mutually understood and agreed that if any question shall hereafter arise touching the construction of this contract, or any part thereof, or concerning the business or mode of transacting the business to be carried on 637 under its provisions, or concerning the observance or performance of any of its conditions, upon which question the parties hereto cannot agree, the same shall be submitted to the arbitrament of three disinterested persons familiar with such business and experienced in railroad management, to be chosen: One by the Des Moines Company, one by the St. Paul Company, and the other by the two so chosen. The party desiring such arbitration shall select its arbitrator, and give written notice thereof to the other party, and if either of the parties hereto shall fail to name an arbitrator within twenty days after notice as aforesaid has been by the other given to it, the arbitrator named by the party giving such notices shall name and appoint an arbitrator for and on behalf of the party so in default, and the arbitrator so named and appointed shall have the same power and authority as though he had been chosen by such party. The said Arbitrators shall, so soon as possible after their selection, meet at the City of Chicago, unless they shall designate some other place of meeting, to hear and decide the questions submitted to them, and shall give to each party reasonable notice of the time and place of such meeting; and after hearing both parties in regard to the matter in dispute, and taking such other testimony, or making such examinations and investigations as they, the said arbitrators, may deem necessary, they shall make in writing their award upon the question or questions so submitted to them, and serve a copy thereof on each party hereto; and such award of said arbitrators, or a majority of them, shall be 638 final and binding upon said parties, and each or either party shall immediately make such changes in the management or conduct of its business, or such payments or restitution, as the case may be, as are in and by such award required of it to be made: Provided, however, that until the said arbitrators shall make their award upon any question or questions submitted to them, the business, settlements and payments to be transacted and made under the terms of this agreement shall continue to be transacted and made in the manner and form existing prior to the arising of such question or questions.

Lastly. It is further mutually understood and agreed that, subject to the faithful observance and performance by each party of all its covenants and agreements hereinabove set forth, this agreement shall be and remain in force for Ten Years from and after the First day of November, 1893; provided however, that the St. Paul Company may terminate the same at any time after the 1st day of February, 1899, by giving to the Des Moines Company sixty days' previous notice in writing of its desire and intention so to do; and provided also, that it may, if it so elects, terminate the same without notice on the Second day of April, 1897, if at that time the Des Moines Company has failed to perform any of its covenants contained in the First Article hereof, or if the Mortgage Bonds of the Des Moines Company then bear interest at a higher rate than Four per cent per annum; but provided always, that at any such termination each Company shall be released from all obligation or liability to the other, except for the 639 payment of any then unpaid award of arbitrators, or of any balances due or to become due for traffic carried under the terms of this Contract.

In Witness Whereof, the Des Moines Company and the St. Paul Company have caused these presents to be executed by their proper officers thereto duly authorized and their Corporate Seals to be hereto affixed and properly attested, the day and year first above written.

642 Defendants' Exhibit 312.

October 17, 1894.

Mr. Chas. M. Hays,
Vice Prest. Wabash Ry. Co.,
St. Louis, Mo.

Dear Sir:—
In the purchase of the Heath lots and the lots upon which the freight house is built, the D. M. Union incurred an indebtedness of $50,775.00 which at the time was expected to be placed in St. Louis at a very low rate of interest but on account of a sudden stringency in the money market, your Company was unable to place this loan and it has been carried temporarily by the Equitable Life Ins. Co. of Iowa, at eight per cent interest. The paper is past due. While the Insurance Company is very willing to continue the loan at the present rate of interest, I feel that the D. M. Union ought to get a lower rate of interest, if possible. The loan is well secured by a mortgage on the lots and by a deposit of $60,000 of D. M. Union first mortgage bonds. I think we could make some arrangement whereby the debt can be reduced to about $40,000 by payment out of this Company's Surplus Earnings in the near future, thus improving the security. With this accomplished, cannot your Company arrange with your eastern financial agents, to carry this loan on a five per cent basis? In the event that the loan is placed in the east by you, we would want it for a time certain, so that the Union Company would not be embarrassed by being called upon without notice to pay this large amount of money.

We would like to have this loan fixed so that $3,000 of 643 it could be paid every six months out of future Surplus Earnings with option to this Company to pay it all on any interest day after three years. The interest can be payable semi-annually, both interest and principal payable either in St. Louis or New York as may be found desirable.

Yours truly,

Dear Sir:—

Replying to yours of Oct. 17th relative to the indebtedness of $50,775.00 incurred by the Des Moines Union Ry. Co. in connection with the purchase of the Heath lots.

I note your suggestion that we should apply our surplus earnings and reduce the debt to the amount of $40,000.00 and your inquiry if with this accomplished we can arrange to carry the loan on a 5% basis.

Upon looking into the matter I find I can make a loan for three years, with the Commercial Bank on the basis of 6% per annum, interest payable semi-annually, and $5000.00 to be paid every six months. Or, if you prefer, you can make it $5000.00 payable at the end of every year. They would want the collateral you mention, of deed of trust on the property, and $60,000.00 of the Des Moines Un. Ry. First Mortgage bonds.

I enclose form of collateral notes and suggest that if this proposition is accepted, you draw up interest notes to run with each principal note, executing the notes in the two places provided therefor, and send to me with the $60,000.00
645 Des Moines Un. Ry. First Mortgage Bonds, deed of trust and abstract of title to the property conveyed, when I will arrange to get the money and forward you by express.

Dear Sir:—

On my return Monday from a week's absence in the East, I found your letter of Oct. 30th, relative to the new loan on the Heath property.

Yesterday being a holiday I did not have an opportunity to see the Bank officers but have seen them this morning, and as a result, wired you as follows:

"Reply to yours of October thirtieth delayed by absence "from home. Bank states that they do not want to hold the "matter open indefinitely, but if you will send the papers "within the next four or five days, will carry out the loan as "proposed."

If you will now have the drawing up of the necessary paper hastened, can get the matter in shape.

Mr. Chas. M. Hays,
Vice Prest. Wabash R'y Co.,
St. Louis, Mo.

Dear Sir,—

Herewith I hand you two notes one due in 6 months and one due in one year for the approval of your banker. The date of the collateral bonds is not inserted, as I did not have the date at hand. If the form of notes is satisfactory, in other respects, we will fill out the remainder of the blanks and execute the notes as per schedule which I hereto attach:

Note Due.	Amount.	Amount Collateral.
6 months,	$ 3,000.00	$ 4,000.00
12 "	3,000.00	5,000.00
18 "	3,000.00	4,000.00
24 "	3,000.00	5,000.00
30 "	3,000.00	4,000.00
36 "	3,000.00	5,000.00
36 "	22,000.00	33,000.00
Total,	40,000.00	60,000.00

These notes will have as security, in addition to the $60,000.00 collateral bonds, a first mortgage upon the real estate in Des Moines for which the Company paid $50,775.00. If the notes are satisfactory, please return them promptly for execution.

We are having the necessary resolution prepared, authorizing the cancellation of the present mortgage on the Heath lots and authorizing the making of a new mortgage to secure your bank. As soon as the resolutions are completed, I will 648 send same to you for your approval before our Board passed it.

You will notice that the notes are dated December 1st. It will bother us to make payment of $10,775.00 before that date and if agreeable to your banker, we would like to have that date fixed as the commencement of the new loan. We trust the bank will raise no objection to having the collateral bonds proportioned to the several notes. We are undertaking to pay $3,000 every six months on this loan and should we find it impossible to raise the money, we would want the collateral attached to each note, in order to make loan elsewhere to take up the debt to the bank.

Dear Sir:—

I have your two favors of November 8th relative to the $40,000.00 loan to the Des Moines Union Railway Company for the purpose of taking up existing loan on the Heath property.

I have submitted your letters to President Wm. Nichols of the Commercial Bank, and he suggests that instead of drawing your notes as per samples you enclosed, that you draw them as pay copy I herewith send you, providing for letting the interest run with the notes and insert as collateral for the notes in addition to the bonds, reference to the deed of trust covering description of the property.

As the bank is holding the money for the purpose of making the loan and does not want to be at a loss of too much interest, would prefer to have the notes as of date November 15th. If you will have them drawn up as above, properly executed, and send direct to Mr. Wm. Nichols, President of the Commercial Bank, he will send you check for principal of the notes. I have enclosed with this, a few additional blank notes for your use as you may find necessary.

650 The form of resolution for passage by Board of Directors of the Des Moines Union Railway is satisfactory. As I start Monday morning for our annual inspection trip and will be out on the line of the road for ten days, I cannot well arrange to be in Des Moines to attend meeting to take action on these resolutions, although I shall arrive there on our trip on the 18th inst. at 9:40 P. M. and leave the following morning at seven o'clock.

As the bank is getting somewhat impatient awaiting the consummation of this loan, I will be obliged to you if you will have the matter hurried as much as possible.

Mr. Roswell Miller, President,

Dear Sir:—

Have you heard from New York with reference to the provisions of the new first mortgage bonds which are to be executed by the Railroad Company successor to the present Des Moines, Northern & Western Ry. Co?

Since I saw you in Chicago I have had an interview with Genl. Dodge and told him of our conversation, and he seems to think $300,000. of bonds in the treasury for new equipment, additional terminals, and new construction is sufficient, and as much as should be provided for that purpose. He is willing to have $10,000. per mile issued for new extensions.

I desire to have this matter understood as speedily as possible, as I wish to place the copy in the hands of the engraver.

The road is to be sold on the 15th of December, and we hope to have the sale confirmed by the first of January, and a new company organized by that time. The Court may, however, require thirty days to elapse between date of sale and date of confirmation.

Hoping to hear from you soon, I remain,

Dear Sir:—

I have yours of the 22nd instant.

I have not heard again from Mr. Bond, but presume that I shall shortly, and will then communicate further with you. I am still of the opinion that $10,000 per mile for extensions is too small to be of any use. It would be better not to have any provision for extensions than to have an insufficient one. You cannot build and complete a road through an average country for $10,000 per mile. You can do the grading and lay the track for perhaps a little less than that amount, but by the time the road gets well settled and is ballasted and put in permanent condition you will have expended much more than that.

I think the amount authorized for extensions should be liberal enough to take care of the cost, and that there should be a proviso that of such authorized amount anly so much shall be used as represents the actual cost, as is the case in our general mortgage.

633 $300,000 treasury bonds for equipment, additional terminals and improvements is a very small sum. When the road is ballasted it will eat up a good part of it. To be sure it does not need ballasting now, but when you are making a long mortgage you have to look into the future, and as in the case of the bonds issued for extensions, you can protect the owners of the property by the proviso that bonds shall only be issued for actual cost. However, I will leave the matter for Mr. Bond to settle with our Executive Committee, and will then advise you.

I understand you are negotiating with the Iowa Central to let them in on the Des Moines terminal. I do not see how they can be of any advantage to your road. The Terminal Company can get a little revenue out of them, but to my mind the D. M. N. & W. will lose two dollars for every dollar they may get from them. You will be simply introducing another competitor.

Dear Sir:—

I am this morning in receipt of letter from Mr. Bond, from which I quote the following relative to the views of the Executive Committee:

"At our Executive Committee meeting yesterday your letter of the 13th with reference to the Des Moines, Northern & Western Ry. Co. foreclosure, and the importance of providing in the new mortgage for an issue of bonds for additional road and improvements, was submitted, and it seemed to the Committee quite important that the new mortgage should provide for such further issue. It would seem that the holders of the present bonds would be amply protected, for if our company obtain control, it is not probable that we should overload the new company, and doubtless, eventually the whole property would be brought in as a part of the St. Paul property."

I think you are perfectly safe in making a liberal provision for extensions and for improvements so long as issue is limited to actual cost.

New York, 19 Nov. 1894.

D. M. N. & W. Ry.,

Roswell Miller, Esq.,
President.

Dear Sir:—

I am in receipt of your letter of the 13th with other papers relating to the foreclosure of the original Des Moines, Northern & Western Ry. mortgage, and a new issue of bonds carrying 4% interest to the extent of $2,930,000 upon the present 150 miles of completed and equipped main track; and I note your inquiry as to whether in our opinion the new mortgage should provide for further issue of bonds for extensions. Also your calling attention to the last clause of the purchasing committee's agreement whereby the provisions previous existing for bonds Nos. 1 to 650 entitling such holders to six per cent of the gross earnings until January 1, 1897. The papers would have been presented to our committee on Thursday last; but no committee meeting was held as that was the day set for the funeral of Mr. J. Hood Wright. As I understand the matter the old mortgage now being foreclosed provided for an issue of bonds to the extent of $18,500. per mile of road. The new mortgage proposes to increase this mileage amount to nearly $20,000. per mile. ($2,930,000 upon 150 miles). And a copy of the new bond provides that $8,000 per mile additionally only may be issued for completed and equipped main track hereafter acquired by construction or purchase. There is nothing in the 657 mortgage, as suggested in your letter providing for an issue of bonds for improvements. Without having an opportunity of consulting our committee, it seems to me that the new mortgage should make provision in amount equal to the old mortgage for additional road that may be purchased or acquired; also a reasonable amount for improvements. As I understand it was originally contemplated to extend the Boone line into Hamilton and Webster counties to coal properties somewhere in the vicinity of Fort Dodge. If our company should hereafter acquire control of this property leaving a considerable minority in the stock outstanding, we should, of course, have to finance any extensions and improvement expenditures; and it would be hardly possible to do this without some provision should be made in the mortgage for the cost of such additional road and improvements.

I note your second letter of same date, as to Mr. Hubbell's suggestion that you should acquire an interest in the stock of the Des Moines, Northern & Western Co. It seems to me that your impressions are correct; that while there may be some money in it, it might be objectionable in case, as is very probable, negotiations affecting stockholding interests between the two companies should hereafter be necessary.

I will not return the papers as you request by this mail, as I hope within a day or two to get together some members of our committee long enough to read them with your letters and mine; and when I do I will advise you as to any expression of opinion they may make.

Des Moines, Iowa, Mch. 1, 1895.

Roswell Miller, Pres.,
C. M. & St. P. Ry. Co.,
Chicago, Ill.

Dear Sir:—

The foreclosure of the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railway Company mortgage is now complete, and the title of the property is in G. M. Dodge, F. M. Hubbell and F. C. Hubbell as Purchasing Committee of the bondholders. The new Company, called Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Company, has been organized. The articles of incorporation provide, among other things, that the capital stock shall be $8,000,000, divided into shares of the par value of $100 each. They further provide that the consideration to be paid for the railway property shall be $2,915,000 of the first mortgage bonds of the company, and $4,372,500 of its capital stock; the stock issued being 50% in excess of the bonded indebtedness as required by law.

The new company will of course assume the current obligations of the old company, and receive its current income. All that remains to be done is the execution of the mortgage, and the issuance of the bonds and stock. The members of the Purchasing Committee, as well as the respresentatives that your company is to have upon the Board, have been omitted from the Board of Directors as named in the articles of incorporation, for the reason that it was necessary to have persons who were here to execute the articles, and it was thought best not to have any member of the Purchasing Committee up-

662 on the Board until after the transfer is made. We intend to at once hold a meeting of the Board, authorize the purchase of the property from the Purchasing Committee for the consideration above named, and then re-adjust the Board in accordance with our agreement with you; that is to say, three of the persons named in the articles will resign, and there will be elected in their stead the persons whom you desire on the Board. The new Board as thus changed will then authorize the execution of the mortgage and the issuance of the bonds to the amount of $2,915,000, to be delivered to the Purchasing Committee for the purpose of being substituted for the bonds of the old company, with their accumulated interest. It will also authorize the issuance to the Purchasing Committee of stock to the amount of $4,372,500 for the distribution by the committee as provided in the Purchasing Committee's agreement. This meeting of the Board should be held at the earliest possible moment, and I suggest Tuesday, the 5th day of March, as the time for holding the meeting, inasmuch as it is of great importance to us to get the bonds out and in the hands of the persons entitled to them as soon as we can do so. I would be very glad if you would see that the three persons who are to represent your Company on the Board are present on that day. In any event you will please indicate to me the names of the Directors you want, and if I do not hear from you I shall take it for granted that the three representatives now on the Board of the old company are to be put on the Board of the new company.

Yours very truly,

I suggest that the firm of F. M. Hubbell & Son, buy the lot from the Des Moines Union Ry. and then make their arrangements for the erection of the building. It does not seem to me it should be the policy of the Des Moines Un. Ry. to purchase property simply for the purpose of locating thereon free of rental, warehouses or industries of any kind, and if as you say, the lot is at one side and will never be needed for tracks, that is all the more reason for our selling it and relieving the tenant companies of the Des Moines Union Ry. to that extent of the interest charge on the property.

Dear Sir,—

Referring to attached would advise the Carbondale Coal Company are now in bankruptcy but in the process of reorganization with prospect of interesting very considerable capital. They ask us to make an answer to attached letter. Possibly they will use the letter as an inducement to capitalists to take their new stock and possibly might show the letter to the C. R. I. & P. Road in order to make a better trade with them. However, we think enough of the scheme to wish to know your views. The Carbondale people had figured on building a line from their mines to connect in Des Moines with other lines. It occurred to us that the Wabash might be willing to sell to the D. M. Union the west three miles of its main line into Des Moines; thus enabling the D. M. U. to reach the Carbondale Company's land and connection with their tracks could be made at little expense. Should this be brought about, it seems to us that all the D. M. Union paid the Wabash for Wabash tracks would be almost clear gain as D. M. U. would maintain the three miles which the Wabash now has to maintain. If D. M. U. is enabled to reach the Carbondale plant and handle their switching, would it be acceptable to you to count cars going to C. G. W. and D. M. & W. on wheelage basis and cars going to C. & N. W. as switched cars at rate of $3.00 per car?

Dear Sir:—

Your favor of May 1st, with letter and blue print from R. E. Sears of the Carbondale Coal Co. received, and the letter is herewith returned.

As I wired you last night, the Wabash does not care to sell any portion of their main line to the Des Moines Union Ry. although we would be willing to either divide with that Company on fair terms, any switching rate which might be necessary to make to meet the competition of other lines reaching the track of the coal company; or we would lease to the Des Moines Union Ry. on a fair rental, the right of use of the three miles of Wabash main track referred to.

So far as rates for performing this service are concerned, I would say to them we would make the same switching rate as made by our competitors, and that the rate would be "per car" and not "per ton."

In regard to their supplying the Des Moines Union with coal, I would advise them they would have an opportunity with other coal companies, to bid for our coal supply.

Dear Sir,—

Replying to yours of the 7th with respect to Carbondale track, we regret that your Company is not willing to sell three and one-half miles of your line adjoining the D. M. Union. However, your suggestion that we pay rental for the same is very satisfactory, provided the rental charge is made low enough to warrant the handling of coal business over the same. We would like to have the lease as permanent as possible, say ten years, and the rental based on the number of cars passing over your tracks. From the nature of this coal business, it means that there will be as many empties go eastward as there are loads westward so that one-half of the cars will be empties. The D. M. Union will have to make such a rate as will prevent the Carbondale people from building their own track. They are a strong company and it was their first intention to build their own independent line to Des Moines to connect with the various lines here. In the event that you do not feel like making a low enough rental charge for Carbondale people to pay, would you consider the question of selling a strip of ground off the north side of your right-of-way for three and one-half miles and allowing the Carbondale people to construct a line on the same?

I have an appointment with these people Tuesday morning and would be obliged to have a full answer from you at 671 that time, if possible.

Referring to your letter of May 10th. We will make you trackage charge of one dollar per loaded car and fifty cent per empty when handled with Des Moines Union engines between the mine of Carbondale Co. near Des Moines and the Des Moines Union track. We would not want to make this agreement for any long period of time but subject to notice by either party of desire to terminate, we would not want to sell strip of ground off of our north right of way for the Carbondale people to construct their own line.

Dear Sir:

Your favor of May 10th, relative to the use of the three and one-half miles of our line adjoining the Des Moines Union Ry. to reach the Carbondale Coal Company's plant, received. A rental based on the car trackage rate for the use of this track when cars are handled by the Des Moines Union engines, will be most satisfactory to us. I accordingly wired you last night that we would make an agreement covering the desired use of the track on the basis of $1.00 per loaded cars and 50 cents per empties when handled by Des Moines Union engines.

This is about as low as I feel we could permit the use of the track, and while I would be willing to make the arrangement for one or two years, subject to a sixty days notice on the part of either party of a desire to terminate, I would not care to make it of any more permanent a character than that, on the terms named.

If these figures are satisfactory and the arrangement is concluded, we will have it put in the form of a regular agreement for execution by our respective companies.

As I wired you, we would not want to sell a strip along the North side of our right of way.

Dear Sir:—

I sent you a dispatch this morning asking if you would join us in making a sale of the block of Des Moines Union R'y Co. Bonds held by General Dodge, yourself and the Wabash. I have had a talk this morning with a member of a prominent London banking house, and if I can get bonds enough I think there is a fair chance to get 90 and accrued interest, net, to us. But success depends somewhat, I think, upon the amount of bonds we can control.

J. H. Davis & Co. of this city advertise in their circular these bonds for sale at 95 and interest, and I thought they were acting for you. I called upon them this morning and inferred that while they had some bonds for sale they were not yours. At all events, I want to see if I can unite an amount sufficient to tempt the London bankers. If I can do so it will open the way also to a sale of the bonds in the treasury, when we wish to dispose of them. There have been sales lately of terminal bonds in another city at a price considerably lower than these, but they are not strictly a first mortgage and I have, therefore, claimed that these bonds were of a higher rank.

676 Will you be good enough also, whether you consent to unite with us or not, to send me a description of the property covered by the mortgage, amount of land and cost, and also an estimate of its present value according to recent land sales in Des Moines, adding also such information as you think would be useful to any one desiring to purchase the bonds. I have represented that this property being in the center of the city with its track running through the heart of it and costing only the amount of bonds outstanding, is worth very much more than the amount of that mortgage.

Please reply promptly, and oblige,

Yours truly,

O. D. ASHLEY.

Dear Sir:—

I have your letter of the 25th inst. I think the Des Moines Terminal Bonds ought to be listed on the New York Stock Exchange at once, but the application must be made by the proper officers of the Company. I think Mr. Davis knows where some of the bonds, which have been sold, are located, and Mr. Hubbell can probably indicate where the rest may be found, as he has sold most of his own.

Dear Sir:—

I received your letter of May 20th in due course and thank you for the information contained therein.

General Dodge in reply to my letter says that he intends to hold the bonds he owns as an investment, and therefore he does not wish to sell. I am afraid I cannot furnish an amount of bonds sufficient to tempt foreign buyers, but they have the matter now under consideration. General Dodge wants to have the bonds listed and I suggest that you take the necessary steps for the officers of the company to make the application at the Stock Exchange. Any assistance I can render in the matter you can depend upon; but I hope the application will be made soon as the listing of the securities will give them a marketable value at once.

I hope your negotiations with the C. & Northwestern will be successful. If we could get that company, or the St. Paul Road, to use our terminals, we could at once erect a handsome union station and all parties would be benefitted.

Now that you have as I understand disposed of your interests in the D. M. Northern & Western property to the St. Paul, will you not turn your attention to the Des Moines & St. Louis Road with the view of making some trade for that property? I think you might manage is so as to make it pay you for the trouble.

Before we decide to take this action, please have estimate made and advise me as to what it would cost to rebuild with brick? Should we ultimately decide on this, the cost over and above what it would cost to renew it with a building of similar character and material as at present, should be covered by the issue of Des Moines Union bonds. In fact we would not want to advance any money for this purpose, and would therefore suggest that the construction of the building be deferred until we can provide the money by the sale of bonds.

Dear Sir:—

I have yours of July 31st, relative to negotiations with the Carbondale Coal Company for the handling of their busines via. the Des Moines Un. Ry. and note your proposition to them that they should convey to the Des Moines Union all the tracks they now have, carrying with it the right on the part of the Des Moines Union to break the connection the coal company now has with the C. R. I. & P. Ry., also requiring the coal company to pay the cost of building the new track connecting the coal company's tracks with the Wabash, and the extension of track from their present shaft to the new shaft.

I expect the Des Moines Union could, in consideration of these undertakings on the part of the coal company, afford to consent to switch their coal from mines to Des Moines at 15 cents per ton.

I do not think the rate of car trackage I named you in my letter of May 14th, for the use of our track between the connection with the coal company and Des Moines Union tracks, viz. $1.00 per loaded car and fifty cents per empty, is an excessive price. We might, however, agree that 681 when the business developed to a volume in excess of an average of twenty loads handled per day, it should be on the basis of seventy-five cents per loaded car and forty cents per empties when handled by Des Moines Union engines.

Dear Sir:—

Years ago when the Des Moines yard was laid out, the main track in the west yard was laid so far south as to encroach on the C. R. I. & P. right-of-way. There is no good way to change this, because in moving one track north we would have to move twenty.

I have had an intimation from the C. R. I. & P. people that they would consent to sell the D. M. Union that part of their right-of-way now occupied by our tracks. The amount of ground required for this is about equal to three regular sized lots in Des Moines. I think the price which the C. R. I. & P. will ask will not be exorbitant.

Have I your authority to purchase this extra right-of-way providing the price is reasonable?

Memorandum Of Agreement, made and entered into this 31st day of August A. D. 1895, by and between the Wabash Railroad Company, party of the first part, and the Des Moines Union Railway Company, party of the second part,

Witnesseth:

Whereas, the party of the second part, in order to reach the tracks of the Carbondale Coal Company located immediately East of the City of Des Moines, Iowa, desires the use of the main track of said Wabash Company extending from the point of connection with the track of the said Union Company, to the point of connection with the said switch tracks of the said Carbondale Coal Company, a distance of . . . . . miles, for the handling of coal from the mines of said Coal Company.

Now, Therefore, in consideration of the covenants and stipulations hereinafter set forth, the parties hereto agree, each with the other, as follows:

First: The Wabash Company hereby grants unto the said Union Company the right to use the said main tracks and appurtenances, for the purpose of moving loaded and empty cars to and from the mines and tracks of said Coal Company with its own engines and crews.

Second: The said Union Company agrees to pay to the said Wabash Company, and the said Wabash Company agrees to accept in full payment, for the use of said track, the sum of One Dollar for each loaded car, and fifty cents for each empty car transported over said track by the motive power of said second party. Should the number of loaded cars moved over said track by the said Union Company during any 687 month, reach an average of twenty cars per working day, then the said Wabash Company will and hereby agrees to charge for such track service a rate of seventy-five cents per loaded car and forty cents per empty car, for all the cars so transported over said track during said month, which charge the second party agrees to pay.

Third: That the second party will pay all mileage which may be charged for cars moved over said track by its engines and crews, and will reimburse said first party for any and all payments of money that it may be required to make on this account.

Fourth: It is further understood and agreed between the parties hereto that this contract governs only the business which the said Union Company proposes to move to and from the said switch tracks of the said Coal Company, and no other.

Fifth: All property transported by the Union Company over the tracks of the said Wabash Company, shall be at the risk of the Union Company. The said Union Company assumes all risk and responsibility for damage or injury to persons or property transported or owned by it growing out of or caused by any imperfection of said tracks and appurtenances, or misplacements of switches or for any damage to stock or injury that may occur to persons while walking on the said track by being struck by trains of said second party, as well as all risks of damage or injury to persons or property growing out of or caused by fire set out by the locomotives of the said Union Company, or for any other damage that may arise from the movement of the trains handled by the Union Company.

688 In cases of damages or injuries to persons or property occurring on the trains of either party while on the said track, the proper officer of the said Wabash Company shall adjust and settle same, and a release shall be made to both companies, providing that the said Wabash Company shall not make any settlement of a claim which the Union Company is to pay under the provisions hereof without consultation with the proper officer of the said Union Company.

The said Union Company promises and agrees to protect and save harmless the said Wabash Company against any claims or demands on account of injuries to persons or property transported by it and also against any claims or demands on account of any injuries to any employee of the Union Company, and promises to repay the Wabash Company, any sums which it may be required to disburse because of such claims. It will also pay to the said Wabash Company full compensation for any injury to persons or property for which the said Wabash Company may be held liable by reason of the negligence or want of care or caution of the servants or employes of the Union Company, or by reason of the use by the Union Company of defective machinery or appliances. Provided, however, that any damage arising from the carelessness of the sole employes of the Wabash Company, shall be paid by the Wabash Company.

When any injury or damage to persons or property shall be caused by the operation of trains over the track hereinbefore described, and it cannot be determined which party is responsible therefor, the cause shall be regarded as concealed, and the compensation made to the party injured shall 689 be apportioned to and paid by the parties hereto in equal parts.

Sixth: This contract to remain in full force and effect so long as the Union Railway desires to move freight from and to said switch; provided, however, that it may be terminated at any time after three years from the date hereof by either party giving the other thirty days written notice to that effect.

Seventh: That all questions arising under this agreement which cannot be amicably adjusted by the proper officers of the parties hereto, shall be finally settled by arbitration, as is customary between railroad companies.

In Witness Whereof, the parties hereto have caused these presents to be signed by their duly authorized officers the day and year first above written.

Dear Sir:—

I have yours of the 21st inst. In reply will say the reorganization would have been completed some time ago had it not been for the fact that Mr. Solon Humphreys owned 15 bonds which he had deposited as collateral for a loan in Hartford. The owner of the loan died, and Mr. H. had considerable difficulty in getting his bonds deposited with the Metropolitan Trust Company for exchange. However, I received a dispatch yesterday from General Dodge's secretary, Mr. J. T. Granger, stating that Mr. Humphreys' 15 bonds had been deposited with the Metropolitan Trust Company. As soon as I hear from the Trust Company that it has the bonds, with authority to make the exchange, the sale will be confirmed by the court, and the Company reorganized.

The securities, however, cannot be exchanged until the bonds are printed. The New York Bank Note Company is printing the bonds and while it is agreed to deliver the bonds to us in six weeks from the time the proof was furnished, it now insists on taking 12 weeks to do the work. We are informed by the Bank Note Company that the engraving is finished and that the bonds are now being printed, but that the printing will not be finished until about the first of March.

I think I can assure you that early in the month of March the reorganization will be completed, every bond of 691 the old Company will have been exchanged, every share of stock taken in and cancelled, and stock in the New Company issued in lieu thereof.

The sale of the road occurred about the 15th of December, and was bid off by the Purchasing Committee,—General Dodge, F. M. Hubbell and F. C. Hubbell.

I now enclose statement showing the amount of stock issued in the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railway Co. and the names of each stockholder. In the re-organization it became necessary, in order to comply with the Iowa Statute, that the amount of stock of the new Company should be $4,372,500. I enclose statement showing the amount of stock and the ownership in the new Company, being the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Co. 40% of the whole amount of stock is equal to $1,749,000. One-fifth of this amount is represented by 3498 shares which your Company has earned under its contract with F. M. Hubbell and F. M. Hubbell & Son, dated March 15th, 1894. I therefore now enclose you Certificate #2 for 3498 shares of stock issued to Roswell Miller, Trustee, and suggest that you endorse it for transfer,—one share each to Messrs. Ripley, Earling and Myers, and the residue (being 3495 shares) to your Company, or to any person you choose. Please date the transfer March 5th, 1895, and return it to me for the purpose of issuing new stock. I make this suggestion so that your three Directors shall each have one share of stock. You will find herewith enclosed the following certificates of stock, viz:

Ctf. #3 for.....3498 shares
Ctf. #4 for.....3498 shares
Ctf. #5 for.....3498 shares
Ctf. #6 for.....3498 shares
Ctf. #8 for.....6734 shares

I have prepared and now enclose a form of receipt, using the same language as was used in the receipt signed by you as Trustee, dated July 21st, 1894, wherein you receipted to Frederick M. Hubbell and Frederick M. Hubbell & Son, for 2,268 shares of stock in the old Company. Will you please sign and return to me the enclosed blank receipt, together with all of the stock in the old Company, covered by your receipt dated the 21st of July last; and I will then forward you receipt for that stock.

Certificates #3, #4, #5 and #6 cover 32% of all of the stock of the new Company, and Certificate #8 covers 15.4% of the stock which your Company has an option to purchase.

Hoping you will find this all satisfactory, and that I shall hear from you very soon, I am,

Yours truly,

(Signed) F. M. HUBBELL,
President.

Dear Sir:—

I have your favor of the 11th inst. with enclosures as stated, and will give the several matters attention.

I find by the record of sale of the D. M. N. & W. Ry that the amount found by the court to be due was:

Bonds outstanding	$2,770,000.00
Coupons and interest thereon	121,060.98
Total	$2,891,060.98

Sale was made for $2,840,000. The court in approving sale announced the deficit $79,971.59. You issued in payment to the purchasing committee $2,915,000 first mortgage bonds—leaving a difference of $4,971.59 between this amount and the judgment. How was this provided for?

The new issue of stock is $4,372,500; the old issue was $4,200,000. What items does the increased issue represent?

I suppose you will get from the Trust Company a satisfaction of the old mortgage or a certificate of cancellation of bonds by the Commissioner, for the public records.

Yours truly,

(Signed) ROSWELL MILLER.

May 15, 1895

Mr. Roswell Miller,
Prest. C. & St. P. R'y. Co.,
Chicago, Ill.

Dear Sir:—
I have yours of the 13th inst. While it is true that the Court rendered a judgment for $79,971.59, being the amount of the deficit, this amount is not collectible.

It was ascertained that $2,915,000, would cover all that was due to the bondholders, together with all expenses of foreclosure, including interest to January 1st, 1895, on the bonded debt of the old Company.

On the 1st of January 1895 there was paid in cash $13,000 being interest on bonds #1 to #650, both inclusive, by reason of which there was covered back into the treasury of this company, out of the $2,915,000 of bonds, the amount of thirteen bonds, being bonds #2903 to #2915, both inclusive, so that the bonded debt of the Company is really $2,902,000.

You ask about the difference of $4,971.59 being the difference between the amount of the bid plus the amount of the judgment for deficit, as compared with $2,915,000. In reply will say I think our attorney took a judgment against the old Company for $4,971.59 more than it should have been, but as the judgment is of no value I suppose it makes no difference.

The occasion for the amount of new stock being $4,372,500 comes about in this way. The bonded debt being $2,700 915,000 the Laws of Iowa require that the stock shall be in amount 50% greater than the debt. If you add 50% to $2,915,000, you will have $4,372,500. Our contract with the C. M. & St. P. R'y. Co. under date of March 15th, 1894, provided that the capital stock of the new Company shall not exceed its mortgage indebtedness more than fifty per cent (50%) (See page 4 Paragraph 5 of Contract).

All of the bonds issued under the old mortgage have been surrendered to the Commissioner who has cancelled and deposited them with the Clerk of the United States Court at Des Moines.

The Metropolitan Trust Company did not certify the new bonds until the Clerk of the Court here gave that Company a certificate showing that all of the old bonds had been surrendered to him and cancelled.

If desired, we can procure an order of Court to have the old bonds destroyed by fire.

The old mortgage is effectually cancelled by the decree of the Court and surrender and cancellation of the bonds.

I have your favor of the 14th inst. and now send to you, under separate cover, three printed copies of the record of reorganization.

Within a day or two I will have a statement of earnings and expenses since January 1st, last, prepared and sent to you, and I will continue to forward you these statements as fast as they are made up.

Yours truly,

(Signed) F. M. HUBBELL, President.

Dear Sir,—

F. M. Hubbell & Son own the north 44 ft. of Lot 6 in Block 15, and all of Lot 3, Block 15, being property immediately south of the depot. This is needed for railway purposes and in fact was bought by us in anticipation of the Railway Co's needs. The railway tracks are now occupying a part of this property.

The D. M. Union owns Lot 6 in Block 20, being known as the Heath Lot and the north 22 ft. of Lot 8, in Block 30, known as the Darby Gill property.

I believe it would be to the advantage of the D. M. Union to make an exchange of the Heath and Darby Gill property, which is out of the line of the right-of-way of the D. M. Union and will never be needed for tracks, for an equal amount of F. M. Hubbell & Son's ground lying directly south of the depot. I should think that an exchange of one foot of F. M. Hubbell & Son's ground for one foot of the railway land would be a fair way. If F. M. Hubbell & Son owned the Heath lot, they would be in better shape to find a good tenant and shipper, while they are prevented from building any permanent structure on the ground south of the depot, well knowing that the same will be needed for railway purposes. Please advise.

The Association of Iowa Egg and Butter Dealers meet at Des Moines this week, with view of building in Des Moines a manufacturing plant to make egg case fillers. They now propose to locate on the land of the Carbondale Coal Company. As there will be a large attendance, it has been requested that the Des Moines Union take the members of the Association out to the Carbondale land to look over the ground. This we are willing to do if the Wabash will allow us trackage free. If the industry is located on the Carbondale land, you of course understand that it will be greatly to the benefit, not only of the Des Moines Union, but also the Wabash. Mr. F. C. Hubbell, Supt. D. M. N. & W. R. R. Co.,

Dear Sir:—
I have your statement showing the number of cars of coal from Carbondale mines from January 1st to August 1st, 1896, and although you say in your note attached that it explains itself, I must admit that I do not understand the statement. This dullness on my part is probably due to my not being posted as to the manner of handling this traffic.

As I understand it, however, the Wabash company makes a charge for trackage of $1. for each loaded car and 50 cents for each empty car between the Des Moines Union tracks and Carbondale Junction, and that the rate per ton on this coal from the mines to Des Moines is 30 cents, i. e. on all coal for local consumption in Des Moines.

Your statement shows 1679 loads handled; 426 of these were handled in Des Moines Union cars and I presume these 426 cars covered all that was used locally in Des Moines, the remaining 1253 cars having been treated as the business of the Des Moines Northern & Western Road.

The gross revenue to the D. M. U. Ry. Company was $2131.42, and I presume this total revenue accrued from charge applied only on the 426 loads, making an average of less than $5 gross per car, which would indicate at 30 cents per ton, that D. M. U. cars averaged less than 17 tons per car.

715 What revenue, switching charge or trackage expense did the D. M. U. Company receive on the 1253 cars which went to the D. M. N. Ry., or did these cars count only in fixing the percentage to be paid of the D. M. U. expense. If they are handled on the latter plan, will you kindly advise me how they are counted, i. e., did they count each time they entered and left the terminals both on the East and North or only once, as a loaded and empty car passing through the City?

I trust you will pardon the numerous questions I am asking, but I have to ask questions in order to get posted on matters in which the Wabash Company is interested.

If you will therefore kindly write me at some length, explaining the entire system of handling this coal traffic, I shall appreciate it.

Very truly yours,

J. RAMSEY, Jr.,

Wabash R. R., St. Louis, Mo.

Dear Sir:—

Replying to yours of the 21st with reference to Carbondale business, would advise your understanding of the trackage charge of $1.00 for loaded and 50 cents for empty cars is correct. The reason that the gross revenue to the Des Moines Union, per car, for the number of cars handled between Carbondale and Des Moines is so small, is that D. M. N. & W. cars are very small, most of them being 30,000 capacity cars, only a few of them being 60,000 capacity. As stated in my several letters, the business handled from Carbondale mine is treated as though it was on the Des Moines Union tracks and business from the mine to points on the D. M. N. & W. are handled by the switching crews of the Des Moines Union and billed out as Des Moines Union force in just the same manner as any other business originating in Des Moines. The Des Moines Union counts the D. M. N. & W. wheels when they come on the terminals from the west and when they leave the terminal going west, but do not count any wheelage when cars go to the Carlsondale mine. But D. M. N. & W. pays the trackage charge due the Wabash on cars loaded at Carlsondale for points on D. M. N. & W. I believe this answers all points.

Yours truly,

Dear Sir:—

I have just sent you the following telegram which I now confirm: "We can buy southeast corner Eighth and Cherry Streets 66x132 feet, being Lot 1, Block 4, Original Town, for eleven thousand, five hundred dollars. Will Wabash advance one-half of this amount and take its pay in D. M. Union bonds? This is the lot we talked about when you were here. We recommend its purchase."

The purchase of the lot in question would give the D. M. Union Company the entire front from Seven to Eighth Streets and it is upon these two lots you thought the Great Western freight house should be located, instead of on the block immediately east. We have gone to a great deal of trouble to get this option and I am satisfied that it is as low as we will ever be able to buy the property and whether Mr. Stickney gets it or not, I think the D. M. Union ought to buy it now and thereby obtain the entire Cherry street front from Fifth to Eighth streets.

We understood when you were here that you were in favor of acquiring this property in order to be in condition to trade with Mr. Stickney. Hoping to receive a favorable reply from you at once, I am,

If you have no authority for doing this, I shall ask you to have an account made up showing all of the cars handled for the D. M. N. & W. Dear Sir:—

Replying to yours of the 3rd respecting the question of wheelage on cars which are handled between Des Moines and Ross Junction over your line would advise yours is the only company which receives any revenue from this movement and if there was any wheelage to be charged for this movement of cars, it would properly be chargeable to the Wabash R. R. as the cars go out and come in over your track and this would be in conformity with our wheelage charge against the C. G. W. R. R. However, at the time the contract was made between the Wabash R. R. and the D. M. Union Ry. it was understood that inasmuch as the D. M. Union Ry. leased the use of the track to Ross Junction that the same would be treated as D. M. Union rail and therefore, for the purpose of counting D. M. Union wheelage, the movement of cars over this rail, by the crews of the D. M. Union Ry. would not be counted against any of the tenant companies.

Mr. F. C. Hubbell,
Prest. D. M. U. Ry. Co.

Dear Sir:—

Replying to your favor of the 23rd. As I understand the present method of counting cars and wheelage in and out of Des Moines, as against the companies using its tracks (except the D. M. N. & W.) it is as follows:

The tenant line is charged with one car into Des Moines, and if that car is delivered to a connection at Des Moines, and goes beyond, or is even switched by that connection to some other point in Des Moines, it is charged as another car against the road bringing the car in, and when a tenant line receives a car from a connection, it is charged as one car, and when the tenant line takes that car out of Des Moines, it is again charged, so that in all cases (excepting the D. M. N. & W. to the Carbondale Coal mines) a car passing through Des Moines, or from a tenant line to a connection is charged as two cars.

The fact that the Wabash Company charges $1.50 per car for the use of its rails between Des Moines and Ross Junction does not affect in the slightest the question of charging the D. M. N. & W. with the wheelage on each car to and from the Carbondale mines which goes out of Des Moines on the D. M. N. & W. Road to any point west of the Des Moines Union tracks.

This coal is billed from the Carbondale mines on D. M. N. & W. billing and the D. M. U. Ry. Co. does not receive one 723 cent of revenue for the service. It is true, probably that the cost of the switching crews, engine service, etc., to the Des Moines Union Company for this service is prorated the same as the cost of its other services between the tenant lines, but even this only renders the discrimination in favor of the D. M. N. & W. and against the Wabash more glaring, for the reason that this service increases the expenses of the D. M. U. Co., which increase is prorated between the Companies on the unfair basis above set forth.

I must therefore insist upon the wheelage of the D. M. N. & W. and the Wabash company being corrected back to the expiration of the period fixed by the agreement, which was entered in to at the time this service was begun.

Furthermore, while on this subject, I desire to call your attention to the fact that the use made of the property of the D. M. Union Company by the D. M. N. & W. having all of its shop work, general repairs, etc. performed at the shops of the D. M. U. Co. and the use of its terminal tracks for the storage of all bad order cars and cars waiting for repairs, and also the use of the services of the Master Mechanic and foreman of the D. M. U. Co. for the general repair work at any point on the line of the D. M. N. & W. Company is an unfair use of the Union property and employes, unless special compensation in addition to the regular wheelage proportion of the expense is paid therefor by the D. M. N. & W. and the information I have leads me to believe that no special compensation has been paid for such service.

Yours truly,

Mr. J. Ramsey, Jr.
V. P. & G. M. Wabash R. R.,
St. Louis, Mo.

Dear Sir:

Replying to yours of the 27th would advise the D. M. Union wheelage is now counted in the same manner as it has always been and the plan adopted for counting the wheelage was inaugurated when the Wabash Company dominated the policy of this company.

The tenant lines are charged with one car into Des Moines when it comes on the D. M. Union track. If the car goes to a connecting line for loading or unloading, where it is necessary for the tenant line to pay a charge, the D. M. Union does not make a wheelage charge for delivering the car to such connection, but in case the car is delivered to a line which is a tenant of the D. M. Union and this tenant makes a charge for the car, then the D. M. Union charges wheelage to such tenant in and out. Therefore, you will see that as your Company is receiving the revenue for the cars handled in the Carbondale business and are relieved from wheelage charge on the cars in both directions, you are fairly treated.

Respecting the third paragraph of your letter, as the D. M. N. & W. does not go to Carbondale, I do not understand how a charge against that Company could be made for cars which the D. M. Union handles in the Carbondale business. Carbon-725 dale mines are located on the D. M. Union tracks in every respect the same as the Packing House and you might just as well ask the D. M. N. & W. to pay a wheelage charge when a car goes to the packing house as when it goes to the Carbondale mine.

The D. M. Union Ry. leases of the Wabash road the right to use your track to Ross Junction and you make bills upon us each month for the rental. This track is either the D. M. Union's, and therefore no wheelage charge can be made, or else it is Wabash track and your company is liable for the wheelage.

Respecting the fourth paragraph of your letter would advise the manner of billing I do not consider an operating question, but one which is handled wholly in the freight department. If the General freight agent of the Des Moines Northern & Western Ry., sees fit to instruct the agent at Des Moines to bill shipments one way or another, it is not a question of wheelage or a question in which any other tenant is interested from the standpoint as a tenant line. I would further state with reference to the last part of paragraph four of your letter, there does not seem to be any material increase in the Yard Expense since the commencement of the Carbondale business. If you will compare statements of expense of October, 1896 with October 1895 you will see the Yard Expense will not bear out your proposition and October, 1896, Yard Expense was largely increased by the running of the Wild West Show trains which earned the D. M. Union the very considerable revenue.

I would call your attention to the fact that since 726 the Carbondale business has been handled by the D. M. Union Ry. Co. the wheelage of the D. M. N. & W. has increased so much that they are now paying forty per cent of the total wheelage; while before this, Carbondale business was handled by the D. M. Union, the D. M. N. & W. wheelage was so much smaller that the Wabash wheelage was about forty per cent of the total wheelage and is now about twenty per cent. This is a direct advantage to your company.

The Carbondale traffic is new business and increases the D. M. U. wheelage to just that extent. The fine coal is used in the northwest and the lump chiefly for locomotive purposes. There is no reason why your company should not be glad to see this traffic increase as much as possible. For your information would state that nine-tenths of this coal is handled on a rate based on continuous mileage and as the revenue is divided between the C. M. & St. P. Ry. and the D. M. N. & W. Ry. you can readily see that the D. M. N. & W's earnings are very thin and when that company pays wheelage two ways and pays the D. M. Union $1.50 trackage, there is very little left to represent earnings. It cost the D. M. N. & W. $3.63 per car in the month of October for all the Carbondale coal which they handled. You will see therefore, this coal business is taxed as heavily as the traffic will bear.

Answering the fifth paragraph of your letter, would further state that the question of Carbondale wheelage was clearly understood by all concerned at the time the arrangement was made a year ago. As there has been no change in the method of keeping the accounts and as this contract 727 has been interpreted in this manner for one year by the people who made it, we cannot change it now. Of course you recognize that the D. M. Union must be its own judge of the manner in which wheelage is counted. While on this subject, allow me to present this matter to you in still a different phase. You probably have noticed that wheelage in Des Moines yard runs more than one dollar per car each day. The D. M. N. & W. bring about 20 empty cars into Des Moines every day for Carbondale business which are loaded and returned, making 40 wheels or more than $40.00 which they pay to the D. M. Union. It takes about three hours time for the switch engine to make the trip to Carbondale with these 20 cars each way. The billing is a matter of small expense. The D. M. N. & W. further furnishes the D. M. Union with the cars necessary to handle the switching business for the city trade.

Respecting the last paragraph of your letter would advise the contract under which the D. M. N. & W. is doing business with the D. M. Union Ry. provides that the D. M. Union will furnish adequate shop facilities for the repairs of engines and cars. This part of the contract has been verily complied with by the D. M. Union; their shops having burned down some years ago and only partially rebuilt. The machinery of the shop was more or less damaged by the fire and has never been properly repaired. The D. M. N. & W. Ry. have been compelled therefore to purchase and place in the D. M. U. shops a number of necessary tools and up to date has rendered no bill for rental charge on same. However, the 728 condition of the shops is now so deplorable that at the annual meeting of the D. M. Union next month, the D. M. N. & W. will serve notice on the D. M. Union to place their shops in shape to make repairs in an economical and expeditious manner.

I have written at considerable length hoping that I can show you that the D. M. Union is acting fairly with all of its tenants and showing partiality to none.

Yours truly,

F. C. HUBBELL,
Prest.

Mr. F. C. Hubbell,
Pres't, D. M. U. Ry. Co.,
Dear Sir:—

Replying to your favor December 1st. The Keokuk & Western, according to their advertised schedule, have three trains arriving and three trains departing from Des Moines, an average of 6 per day, excepting Sunday. This would be 156 trains per month, and on the basis proposed in your letter, they would pay 96 cents per train for the use of tracks and station, together with all of the expenses of ticket agent, light, heat, taxes, etc.

It strikes me that this is a very low charge and one which in all probability would be less per month to the K. & W. than the present cost of their passenger station terminal expenses.

I see no reason for placing such a low estimate on the value of the Des Moines Union Terminals, and I believe you can secure $250.00 per month from them, just as easily as $150.00.

Dear Sir:—

Permit me to remind you of our understanding to the effect that you would have prepared at once a new agreement for the tenant companies of the Des Moines Union Railway Co. to sign, this new agreement being considered necessary on account of the foreclosure of the Des Moines & Northwestern. I understand that the agreement will be exactly as before, except that the time must be made to correspond with the life of the bonds, or to be made for a period to extend beyond their maturity.

I write now for the purpose of urging the immediate preparation of this agreement, as without it we cannot well dispose of our bonds. When it is ready please forward it to Colonel Blodgett, asking him to examine the same and to send it to me as soon as possible. I should not suppose it would take long to have the agreement prepared and as time in this case is of importance I hope you will see that the paper is gotten under way at once. Perhaps you have already taken the matter in hand and if so, so much the better.

Yours truly,

731 Defendants' Exhibit 363.

December 31, 1896.

Mr. A. B. Cummins,

Dear Sir:—

Herewith I hand you copy of the Articles of Incorporation of the D. M. & Union Ry. Company, also copy of the terminal contract made by the D. M. Union with the Des Moines & St. Louis, the Des Moines N. W., and the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Companies.

Mr. Ashley is very anxious to have the Des Moines Union Company cancel the old contract and enter into a new one with the Des Moines Northern & Western R. R. Co. and the Des Moines & St. Louis R. R. Co. so as to strengthen the D. M. Union Bonds which he wishes to put on the market, the strength to come from the fact that the terminal company will have a specific obligation of the D. M. N. & W. R. R. Company to pay rent.

I wish you would prepare this new contract before you go to Cleveland, if possible. I submit the following suggestions, viz:

On page 1 of the present contract the extent of the present railway seems to be limited to the eastern boundary line of the city on the east, and to Farnham Street on the west. I suggest that there be no limit, either east or west.

On page 4, I think the last Five (5) lines of section 4, should be left out, they not being pertinent for the reason that there are no narrow gauge cars in the city.

Section 8. Can this not be left out entirely? It seems to me to be wholly unnecessary.

732 Section 11. When Sec. 11 is read in connection with the Articles of Incorporation, it occurs to me that this section is entirely unnecessary. Section 22. In reference to Sec. 22 stating the duration of the contract, I wish to say that it is understood that the new contract shall not run longer than the old one, viz., until May 1st, 1918.

Section 24. I think Sec. 24 needs considerable remodeling. In the first place, the Purchasing Committee owns 1/8 of the stock, the Des Moines, Northern & Western R. R. Co. 2/8, and F. M. Hubbell & Son 5/8. I think it is desirable to have the new contract recognize the ownership of the stock as it now exists, hence the last 7 lines of Sec. 24 are unnecessary as the Wabash Company and the D. M. N. & W. Company each being bound to always have a Director in the Des Moines Union Company, can decide whether or not new railroad companies shall be admitted. This section is at this time, making us considerable trouble in getting the approval, or consent to the contract recently made with the Great Western. We have not yet obtained the formal consent of the owners of the Des Moines & St. Louis Co., to the making of that contract.

In reference to Section 26, it seems to me that this section was rendered entirely obsolete by the adoption at a subsequent time, of the Articles of Incorporation, and there is but very little, if any, of it that is now adopted to our present condition.

Yours truly,

(Sgd.) F. M. HUBBELL, Secretary.

Dear Sir:—

I have your letter of the 28th inst. urging the preparation of a new terminal contract between the Des Moines Union Railway Company on the one side and the Des Moines, Northern & Western R. R. Company and the owners of the Des Moines & St. Louis Road, as parties of the second part.

January 6th, 1897.

Mr. O. D. Ashley, President,
#198 Broadway, New York City.

Dear Sir:—

Referring to your letter of December 30th, in which you ask that we lose no time in the preparation of a new contract between the Des Moines Union Company and its tenant companies, will say that as I wrote you some days ago, the matter has been placed in the hands of Mr. Cummins, who has been urged to draw up a new contract as soon as possible.

The difficulty with Mr. Cummins seems to be this, he does not know with whom the contract is to be made, and he has written to Col. Blodgett asking for information on that subject.

I have in my hands a letter from Mr. Ramsey, dated January 1st, 1897, in which he says with reference to the Des Moines & St. Louis Road—"There are no officers or organization in existence. All of the property and franchises being held by a Committee, it seems to me their assent would be sufficient." This is in reference to the assent to the contract recently made with the Chicago Great Western Company.

Now if the Des Moines & St. Louis Company is extinct, the contract, it would seem, would have to be made by the Wabash Company, or by the Purchasing Committee. However, Mr. Cummins and Mr. Blodgett will no doubt settle it very soon.
I am hurrying it as fast as I can. If there is any de-735 lay, it will be caused by Mr. Blodgett.

Yours truly,

Dear Sir:—

Yours of the 6th received. Mr. Ramsey is mistaken in saying that there is no organization of the Des Moines & St. Louis

R. R. Co. in existence. There is a board of directors and it can be called together without difficulty. Colonel How, the last President is dead, but, of course, the vacancy can be filled at the next meeting. The Purchasing Committee hold their title to this property through the ownership of the stock, and the corporation is not only in existence but must be kept so.

Colonel Blodgett has been here this week, but has now returned to St. Louis and it was understood between him and myself that he would at once call a meeting of the directors of the D. & St. L. in St. Louis. He will notify you and Mr. Cummins to this effect and ask you, probably, to go to St. Louis for one day in order to secure a quorum of the Directors. He has the whole programme marked out and I think will proceed to its execution at once. You will probably 737 hear from him early next week and I hope you and Mr. Cummins will be able to meet him in St. Louis, as he may request.

Meantime there is no reason why Mr. Cummins should not proceed with the new contract, counting upon the signature of the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad.

I thank you for your active co-operation in the matter and hope we shall succeed in getting the new agreement under way without further delay.

Mr. F. C. Hubbell,
Prest. D. M. U. Ry. Co.,

Dear Sir:—

I have your favor of the 12th relative to the C. & G. W. refusal to pay their proportion of the terminal expenses on passenger car wheelage.

Not having a copy of the C. & G. W. contract under which they have been operating in the past, I am not in a position to express any opinion regarding the equity of their claim, but unless their contract specifies to the contrary, it certainly seems to me that a through train should be counted in and out. This is the universal rule at all Union Stations, as the train is a train into the station bringing passengers in, and it is also a train out, taking passengers away from the city, and if I were you, I would certainly insist upon a settlement of these bills, unless, as I say above, the contract is to the contrary.

I think I would also object to submitting it to arbitration as it would not be fair to the other tenant lines to give the C. G. W. Co. an opportunity of securing different terms for the use of the property, than has been given to the other lines for years past.

As the C. G. W. Company have completed their contract with you for the use of the property for the next twenty-five years, I think you are in a position to meet "bluff" with 740 "bluff"; in other words, say to Mr. Stickney that unless he pays the bills as they have been rendered, that he cannot continue to use the Union Station under the old contract.

I think you would have the right to shut him out for refusal to pay bills rendered in accordance with the contract binding on all the tenants.

Col. W. H. Blodgett, Gen'l. Sol'r.

St. Louis, Mo.

Dear Sir:—

tract, and the reasons which are stated in Mr. Ramsey's letter for the changes. I agree that if the relations between the Des Moines Union Co. and Wabash Co. were such as to enable the former to increase the rentals to be paid at its own pleasure, the agreement would be seriously defective; but I think that both Mr. Ramsey and yourself have overlooked the fact that the Wabash R. R. Co., or the Purchasing Committee for it, is the owner of one-eighth of the capital stock of the Des Moines Union; that no further stock can be issued without the affirmative vote of that part of the stock, or some part of it, that you represent; that it requires more than seven-eighths of all the stock to elect a Board of Directors, and that it requires the unanimous action of the Directors to authorize the transaction of any business except that which pertains to the ordinary operation of the property; that there is an Executive Committee provided for in these articles upon which the 753 Wabash always has had and always will have a representative; and that the articles cannot be amended without the consent of the one-eighth interest that you hold. The Des Moines Union Co. was reorganized in 1889 or 1890 for the express purpose of putting these safeguards into its Articles of Incorporation and enabling it to enter into a contract with those of its tenant companies which owned stock in the Des Moines Union Co., and not turn over the management of the company in form to the tenant companies. I quote some of the provisions of these articles:

Art. III contained the following:

"The remaining capital stock, to-wit: sixteen thousand shares or any part thereof, shall be issued by the authority of a resolution of the stockholders adopted by the vote of more than seven-eighths of all the stock theretofore issued."

Art IV contains the following:

"The affairs of the corporation shall be managed and its business conducted by a board of directors composed of eight persons, who shall be elected by the stockholders at their regular annual meeting to be held at the office of the company in Des Moines, Iowa, on the first Thursday in January of each year; and they shall hold their offices for one year, and until their successors are elected and qualified; but at all future elections of directors it shall require the votes of more than seven-eighths of all the stock theretofore issued to elect any director."

"The Board of Directors shall have the power to author-754 ize the execution of mortgages, to issue bonds, to enter into contracts, to purchase property, to construct buildings, to make leases, to authorize the institution of condemnation proceedings, and to do all such other things as may be proper or necessary for the corporation to do; but with respect to the matters above mentioned and all other matters except the ordinary operation of the property, the Board can only act upon the affirmative vote of all its members."

I have no doubt that you will find at Mr. Ramsey's office a copy of these amended articles.

I observe that the substitute which you propose for the proviso to Sec. 1, and your substitute for Sec. 9, as well as the material interlineations save one, which I shall hereafter mention, have reference to a control to be exercised by the tenant companies over the Des Moines Co. I cannot but believe that when you consider the articles of incorporation you will agree with me that the changes need not be further considered.

With respect to the change in Sec. 4, which would require the Des Moines Co. to credit upon its expenses and disbursements the accounts received by it for switching charges, rental of houses and things of that character, Mr. Hubbell has written to Mr. Ramsey recalling to his attention the situation, which absolutely precludes the disposal of such revenues of the company in that way.

I have no objection to any assignee or successor of the 755 Des Moines, Northern & Western so that it shall be as broad and comprehensive as that which is applied to the Wabash. The language is different because of the peculiar arrangement between the Wabash and the Des Moines & St. Louis.

Awaiting your reply, I am,

(Signed) A. B. CUMMINS.

F. C. Hubbell, Pres.,

Dear Sir:—

I have your favor of the 22nd inst. with respect to the Des Moines Union contract. I have a telegram from Col. Blodgett asking me to send him a copy of the amended articles of the company, which will go to-day, and assume that when he has examined them he will reply to my letter in which I pointed out the protection his company would receive through them. When the draft is returned to me do not forget to make the suggestion with regard to putting in the gold clause.

Yours very truly,

Defendants' Exhibit 377.

Ex. "D" to Dep. of A. B. Cummins.

The Wabash Railroad Company.
General Solicitor's Office.
Wells H. Blodgett, Gen'l. Solicitor.

St. Louis, March 26, 1897.

F. M. Hubbell, Esq.,
Des Moines, Iowa.

Dear Sir:—

I was so busy yesterday I could not get the amendments to the contract off last night. I now inclose them.

The first change is in the proviso to the granting clause in Section one. That, in the form in which I now present it, is intended to prohibit the Des Moines Company from hereafter making exclusive grants of any portions of the terminals without the written consent of the tenants. (2). It prohibits the Des Moines Company from admitting other tenants on different terms than those herein granted to the Wabash and Des Moines, Western and Northern without their consent, and (3) it prohibits the Des Moines Company from making leases of portions of said terminal grounds not now needed for railroad purposes, for more than six months, without the written consent of the tenant companies.

2nd. I send Section 3 in two forms, and I need not go into any detailed explanation of them. Number one is founded upon the theory, that the Des Moines Company may do a switching business during the whole period of the lease, paying, on a wheelage basis, the same proportion of interest charges, cost of maintenance and operating expenses, as 758 is paid by the tenants, and using its net revenue throughout the term in improving the property. That is the form suggested by Mr. Ramsey and myself.

Number two, presents the section as you and Mr. Ashley suggested. Under it you are to switch and handle cars for others than tenant companies, and collect the revenue, until the net profits, together with the rentals from portions of the ground, amount to fifty thousand dollars, of which sum thirty-five thousand dollars is to be applied on the floating debt, and the balance used for a working fund. And after the fifty thousand dollars has been realized, all the net revenues from switching is to go to the tenant companies to reduce their expenses, on a wheelage basis.

These changes in the contract present the main features to which the other sections are to conform. I have not gone through the various sections in detail to see what changes, if any, will be needed. I understand, however, that if you accept the changes in Section one, and Section three in either of the forms in which that section is now presented, no further change need be made, excepting such as may be necessary to make the contract harmonious in all its parts. I do not know, of course, but what the phraseology of these amendments as I present them, can be improved upon, but I think they embody the essential ideas.

Mr. Ashley goes home tonight, but before leaving he examined carefully the amended sections, and he thought them drawn in accordance with the conclusions reached when you were here.

Very truly yours,

(Signed) WELLS H. BLODGETT.

Section 3. Having so ascertained the monthly aggregate of all the items and sums mentioned in the preceding section, which shall embrace every item of expense or liability of whatsoever name or character (excepting taxes, repairs and other expenses on such portions of said property as the Des Moines Company may have leased, or which it may claim the right to lease and collect and retain the rentals) there shall then be deducted therefrom the amount, if any, which other railway companies may be under obligations to pay by virtue of contracts for the use of said property, or parts thereof, and also all revenues and rentals due from individuals or companies for the enjoyment of privileges, or the use of space at, or in the passenger station, and also all the rentals due from every company or person whomsoever, for the use of railroad tracks, facilities, or privileges for the preceding month, and the remainder shall be provided by the Des Moines & St. Louis Company, the Wabash Company, the Des Moines Northern & Western Company and the Des Moines Company, in gold coin of the United States of America, of, or equal to, the present standard of weight and fineness, in the proportion that the wheelage of each of said companies bears to the entire wheelage over said terminals during such preceding month, exclusive of the wheelage of the Chicago & G. W. Railway. And it is expressly understood, that for the purpose of ascertaining their said monthly liability, the total wheelage of all parties using said terminals, excepting the Chicago & G. W. Railway shall 760 be considered. And it is understood and agreed that the Des Moines Company shall have the right to make leases, as provided in section one of this contract, of such portions of said grounds as are not then required, of used for railroad or terminal purposes; but that said privilege of the Des Moines Company to make leases and collect and retain the revenues shall not include the right to grant any privilege, or the use of any space at or in the passenger station, or other buildings erected or used for railroad purposes, or the right to make any lease or contract for the use of any tracks or other railroad facilities. But it is agreed that none of the revenues of the Des Moines Company, derived from the rentals of such portions of said grounds as it is herein authorized to lease, or the revenues derived from tolls, or switching service performed, shall be considered in ascertaining the aggregate sum to be provided each month by the Des Moines Company and the lessees herein.

And it is further agreed that all revenues derived by the Des Moines Company from said rentals, tolls, or switching charges in excess of its proportion of said aggregate expenses, shall (after paying taxes on so much of said property as it is entitled to lease for its own benefit) be used by the Des Moines Company in paying its present floating indebtedness, not exceeding thirty-five thousand dollars; the establishment of a working capital, not exceeding fifteen thousand dollars, or in improving said terminal properties for the benefit of the parties using the same for railroad purposes, in such manner as the Executive Committee may direct.

of Albert B. Cummins.

which shall embrace every item of expense or liability of whatsoever name or character (excepting taxes, repairs and other expenses on such portions of said property as the Des Moines Company may have leased, or which it may claim the right to lease and collect and retain the rentals) there shall then be deducted therefrom the amount, if any, which other railway companies which pay upon any other than a wheelage basis may be under obligations to pay by virtue of contracts for the use of said property, or parts thereof, and also all revenues and rentals paid by individuals or companies for the enjoyment of privileges, or the use of space at, or in, the passenger station, or other buildings erected and used for railroad purposes, and all the rentals due from every company or person whomsoever, for the use of railroad tracks, facilities, or privileges, for the preceding month; and the remainder shall be paid by the Des Moines & St. Louis Company, the Wabash Company, the Des Moines Northern & Western Company, in the gold coin of the United States of America of or equal to the present standard of weight and fineness, in the proportion that the wheelage of each of said companies bears to the entire wheelage of the tenant companies paying on a wheelage basis over said terminals during such preceding month.

762 And it is expressly understood and agreed, that the Des Moines Company reserves the right to switch, handle and transfer cars over said terminal tracks for other than tenant companies, to and from industries, and to and from other railroads with which its tracks connect, upon such terms and for such compensation as may be fixed by the Executive Committee; and it shall also have the right to make leases, as provided in Section One hereof, of such portions of its property as are not at the time required by the lessees herein, or either of them, for railroad or terminal purposes. And the Des Moines Company shall have the right to collect, and shall collect and retain all charges due for switching, handling and transferring such cars, and also all rentals due under such leases, until the aggregate of such collections amount to the sum of fifty thousand dollars ($50,000.) and out of the sum last aforesaid, not exceeding thirty-five thousand dollars ($35,000.) shall be applied to the payment of the present floating indebtedness of said Des Moines Company, and the balance shall belong to said Des Moines Company and constitute a working fund, to be expended from time to time in improving said terminal properties, for the benefit of the parties using the same for railroad purposes, in such manner as the Executive Committee shall direct.

It is further agreed that after said sum of fifty thousand dollars shall have been realized from the sources aforesaid all revenues thereafter derived from switching, handling and 763 transferring cars shall be credited monthly upon the bills of the tenant companies herein and such other tenant companies as may by subsequent contract become entitled thereto, and each of said tenant companies shall receive a credit for the percentage thereof that its wheelage for the month for which the credit is made, bears to the total wheelage, for said month, of all the companies entitled to participate in said revenues. But it is further understood and agreed, that after said sum of fifty thousand dollars shall have been realized, as aforesaid, all revenues thereafter derived from the rentals of such portions of said grounds as the Des Moines Company is herein authorized to lease, shall belong to said Des Moines Company and shall be used in improving said terminal properties for the benefit of the parties using the same for railroad purposes, in such manner as the Executive Committee shall direct. It is understood that the privilege reserved to the Des Moines Company of making leases of such portions of said property as are not at the time required by the lessees herein for railroad or terminal purposes, shall not be understood as including the right to grant any privileges, or the use of any space at or in the passenger station, and used, or the right to make any lease or contract for the use of any tracks or other railroad facilities or privileges.

J. Ramsey, Jr., Vice Prest & Gen'l Manager.

St. Louis, Mo. March 26, 1897.

Personal.

Dear Mr. Hubbell:

After considerable trouble I have arranged matters, so as to give you the option between the two propositions as to switching &c. All other matters have, as I understand it, met your approval. The papers will go to you tonight, Col. Blodgett says, and I hope you will have them promptly accepted. If there is any further trouble, I shall despair of arriving at any new agreement, and shall feel inclined to drop the matter entirely, and let things take their course. I think this will be unfortunate for the D. M. Union Co., for as matters now stand, it will be useless to attempt to list the bonds, and this, in turn will make it hard to negotiate the remaining lands for depot purposes. We can never realize the advantages which the D. M. U. R. Co. possesses until a commodious union station is built, and the longer the delay, the greater the injury to the enterprise will be.

I rely, therefore, not only upon prompt action on your part in regard to this new agreement, but upon your avoidance of petty conditions, which are of no substantial value as compared to the general purpose and effect of this new agreement.

Yours truly,

(Signed) H. H. ASHLEY.

Exhibit "A" to A. B. Cummins Deposition.

Office of
The Wabash Railroad Company,
195 Broadway,

New York, May 18, 1897.

F. M. Hubbell, Esq., Sec'y.,
Des Moines Union Railway Co.,
Des Moines, Iowa.

Dear Sir:

I had an interview here on the 15th. with Mr. Ramsey and Col. Blodgett, and in accordance with our understanding at the end of the conference, they will go to Des Moines as soon as Col. Blodgett returns to St. Louis. They can probably arrange this for next week which begins on the 24th., and will notify you in time in order to arrive at some definite conclusion, if possible, as to the proposed new agreement between the Des Moines Union Railway Company and the tenant lines. This timely notice will enable you to arrange to have Mr. Cummins present, if you so desire it.

I read over a copy of the proposed form very carefully, and I could see nothing to which you could offer a serious objection. As to the allotment of the expenses in the freight department, I do not think it a matter of much consequence, so far as we are concerned, whether the calculation is made upon wheelage or tonnage basis, although I think the tonnage basis is the fairest and most approved method; but as to the distribution of expenses in the passenger department, there 766 can be no question but what the wheelage basis should be upon the passenger cars. It would not, perhaps, be a matter of much consequence, if we continue to use the present "ramshackle" structure for a passenger station, but if we are to have a new and comparatively expensive station, it is obvious that a calculation upon a wheelage basis of both freight and passenger cars would be unfair to all parties. On this point I think Mr. Ramsey is right.

There are certain fundamental principles in an agreement of this character, which I think should govern all parties interested in the permanent success of this terminal station. The most important of these is in the adoption of provisions which now and hereafter shall give equally fair conditions to the tenant companies. It is, I presume, not only desirable to keep all the companies now participating in the terminal facilities; but equally important to offer fair inducements to the companies we may wish to bring into the same station. Now, if the wheelage basis is to include freight as well as passenger cars, what equality could there be among tenants who have separate freight stations, and those who have not? It would simply saddle the companies which use the freight accomodations of the Terminal Company with an undue proportion of the expenses of the passenger station. Under such conditions we should be unwilling to enter into an agreement to use a new station, if constructed.

I think upon reflection you will conclude that the wheelage basis of the passenger station, must be upon passenger 767 cars alone, in order to determine the contribution of each Company.

I consider an arbitration clause indispensable in an agreement of this kind, and see no good reason for your objection to it. It is in the present agreement and should be in the new.

I believe it to be your desire to promote the success of the Des Moines Union Railway Co. and I am heartily in accord with you in that respect; but, in my opinion, this object can only be secured by the adoption of liberal and perfectly fair terms to tenant companies. The moment it is suspected that advantages are sought for one Company over another, there will be friction, jealousy and obstruction. I do not accuse you of any such design, for I have always found you fair in the many transactions we have had together, but I think you should scrupulously avoid the consideration of terms which might lead to such a conclusion by others.

For these reasons I urge the prompt execution of an agreement which will be mutually fair and mutually satisfactory. Whatever concessions or changes, to which we have agreed thus far, have been in your favor, and I think I may claim to have smoothed some of the matters which were in question, and which you considered essential to the financial interests of the Company. I hope, therefore, to see a similar spirit of conciliation on your part.

This is the last attempt I shall make to bring about a new agreement. If this fails we must simply stand upon 768 the old, and let things take their course.

I believe in the erection of a new and commodious passenger station, as the most important matter to be carried out, in order to ensure the permanent success of this enterprise. The longer this is delayed the more uncertain will be the future of the Terminal Company. Without a satisfactory agreement, embracing fair and equal terms, I am confident there will be much less progress in the development of this property than would otherwise attend it.

Much will, in my judgment, depend upon the policy now to be decided, as to whether this shall be an enterprise of rapid and substantial improvement, or one of slow and doubtful growth. The enterprise can be made attractive or repellant, according to the wisdom of its management. It has splendid advantages, but they will be neutralized unless properly and skilfully utilized.

Yours truly,

(Signed) O. D. ASHLEY, President.

769 Defendants' Exhibit 382.

Ex. "C" to Dep. of A. B. Cummins. This is a copy of what we sent to Mr. Ramsey early in Feby.

This Agreement, made and entered into this 3rd day of February 1897, by and between the Des Moines Union Railway Company, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Iowa, (hereinafter termed the Des Moines Company), the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Iowa, (hereinafter termed the Des Moines & St. Louis Company), the Wabash Railroad Company, a corporation organized and existing under the Laws of the State of Missouri (hereinafter termed the Wabash Company), and the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Company, a corporation organized and existing under the Laws of the State of Iowa, (hereinafter termed the Des Moines, Northern & Western Company) Witnesseth: That

Whereas the said Des Moines Company is the owner of a railway system in and about the City of Des Moines, Iowa, which system consists of valuable terminal facilities in the said City of Des Moines as hereinafter described; and

Whereas, the Des Moines & St. Louis Company is the owner of a line of railway terminating in the City of Des Moines; and

Whereas, the said Wabash Company operates the line of the said Des Moines & St. Louis Company under lease; and

Whereas the Des Moines, Northern & Western Company is the owner of and operates a line of railway terminating in the said City of Des Moines; and

770 Whereas, in order to prevent unnecessary expense, inconvenience, and loss, and in order to facilitate the public convenience and safety, it has become, for the mutual interest of the parties hereto, that the Des Moines & St. Louis Company, the Wabash Company and the Des Moines, Northern & Western Company shall have the use of the terminal facilities of the Des Moines Company as hereinafter prescribed and provided;

Now Therefore, in consideration of the premises and the mutual covenants and agreements herein contained, it is agreed by and between the parties hereto, each for itself and not jointly, as follows, to-wit:

Section 1. The Des Moines Company grants to the Des Moines & St. Louis Company, the Wabash Company, operating the said Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad, and the Des Moines Northern & Western Company, the use (in common with such railway companies as heretofore have or may hereafter enter into contract with the Des Moines Company) of its railway system, consisting of the terminal property aforesaid, including main and side-tracks, passenger and freight depots, depot grounds, lands, yards, shops, round houses and transfers, and all betterments, renewals, improvements and additions to the same, until May 1st, 1918.

Provided, however, that this grant shall not be construed to embrace any lands, tracks, yards, transfers or depots, of which the said Des Moines Company may heretofore have 771 granted or may hereafter grant the sole and exclusive use to another railway company or other railway companies. It is, however, understood and agreed that any such exclusive grant hereafter made shall not interfere with the reasonable use by the grantees herein of the said terminal facilities as they now exist.

Provided further, that such use shall at all times be subject to the reasonable regulation and control of the said Des Moines Company, which shall at all times manage and operate said terminal property in the interest and for the benefit of such railway companies as have acquired or may hereafter acquire the right to use the same.

And said Des Moines Company agrees to keep and maintain its said railway system in good condition and repair, and to provide and maintain all such engines, machinery, appliances, buildings and structures, and all such servants and employes, as shall be reasonably necessary for the conduct of its business and the moving and handling of cars, passengers and freight, for said several grantees herein named, and the housing and care of their engines; and the said Des Moines Company further agrees to switch all cars, handle all freight, house and care for all engines of the said several grantee companies, which may be delivered to it or which may come upon its said terminal property, in so far as the said companies may request it so to do.

And the said Des Moines Company further agrees that the use hereby granted of the said railway system and terminal facilities shall be without preference or unreasonable 772 precedence for or to itself or to any of the lessees of its said terminals in the matter of train time schedules, or the handling or switching of cars and trains and occupancy of depots, or the occupancy of said property or any part thereof, or in the service herein agreed to be performed; always, however, subject to such reasonable control and descretion by the said Des Moines Company as may be necessary to avoid confusion and expedite the management of its business.

Section 2. The aggregate amount to be paid by the said Des Moines & St. Louis Company, the Wabash Company and the Des Moines, Northern & Western Company to the Des Moines Company for the use hereinbefore granted and the services so to be performed, shall be ascertained as follows, to-wit:

1st. There shall be ascertained the amount required to pay five per cent. interest annually upon the mortgage bonds of the said Des Moines Company, whether now or hereafter issued, one-twelfth of which, less any deduction hereinafter provided for, shall be payable monthly as herein specified.

2nd. At the expiration of each month, or as soon thereafter as practicable, there shall be ascertained the expense of maintaining renewing and repairing the property of the said Des Moines Company, including the maintenance, renewal, and repair of tracks, depots, round houses, shops, engine houses, tools, yards, transfers, etc., during the preceding month. And in like manner there shall be ascertained the taxes or assessments, general or special, levied upon or against 773 the property of the said Des Moines Company and paid during the preceding month, or to be paid during the next succeeding month, and the insurance, if any, paid during the preceding month, or to be paid during the next succeeding month.

3rd. There shall be likewise ascertained the costs and expenses of every nature connected with the operation of the railway system of the said Des Moines Company, including the operation of its main and side-tracks, freight and passenger depots, depot grounds, yards, transfers, shops, round houses and other properties, which is to include every liability created and every item of expense or disbursement incurred or made by the said Des Moines Company, whether herein specifically mentioned or not, including interest upon any floating debt, except the expense specified in section 7 hereof.

Section 3. Having so ascertained the monthly aggregate of all the items and sums mentioned in the preceding section, which shall embrace every item of expense or liability of whatsoever name or character, there shall be deducted therefrom the amount, if any, which other railway companies may be under obligation to pay by virtue of contracts for the use of said property, or parts thereof, for the preceding month, and the remainder shall be paid by the Des Moines & St. Louis Company, the Wabash Company and the Des Moines, Northern & Western Company (in the gold coin of the United States of or equal to the present standard of weight of fineness) in the proportion that the wheelage of each of said tenant companies bears to the entire wheelage of all of said 774 companies during such preceding month. And it is expressly understood and agreed that none of the revenues of the Des Moines Company whether derived from rentals, tolls, switching services performed, or otherwise, except the rentals from other railway companies using said terminals or a portion thereof shall be deducted for the purpose of ascertaining the fair monthly aggregate.

The said Wabash Company for itself agrees to make the payment hereinbefore provided for at the times and in the manner prescribed so long as it operates the railroad of the said Des Moines & St. Louis Company, and when the said Wabash Company ceases to operate the railroad of the Des Moines & St. Louis Company its obligation to so pay, and all the obligations herein assumed by it shall at once determine and be and become the obligations of whatever company operates the said railroad; it being the intention that the obligations of this lease, so far as they pertain to the Des Moines & St.

Louis Railroad, shall attach to and become the obligations of the successor of the said Wabash Company in the operation of the said Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad, and any company succeeding the Wabash Company in such operation shall be held by the operation of trains over the said Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad, and upon the property hereby leased, to assume all the obligations herein undertaken by either the said Des Moines & St. Louis Company or the said Wabash Company.

And it is further agreed that the obligations herein assumed by the Des Moines, Northern & Western Company shall pass with the railroad it now owns and operates, and shall become the obligations of any assignee, grantee or successor of the said Des Moines, Northern & Western Company in the 775 ownership or operation of the said Des Moines, Northern and Western Railroad.

And any company succeeding the Des Moines Northern & Western Company in such ownership or operation shall be held by the operation of trains over the said Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad and upon the property hereby leased, to assume all the obligations herein undertaken by said Des Moines, Northern & Western Company.

Section 4. If the amount, or any part thereof, due from any other railroad company or companies for the use of the property herein demised, or any part thereof, shall not be paid when due, then the sum so due and unpaid shall on demand of the said Des Moines Company be paid to it by the tenant companies under this agreement on a wheelage basis as hereinbefore defined.

Section 5. The said Des Moines Company shall, on or before the tenth day of each month, or as soon thereafter as practicable, make out and present to each of the tenant companies herein an account showing the amount due from them respectively for the preceding month, and payment thereof shall be made within five days thereafter. All claimed omissions or errors in said accounts, or exceptions thereto, which may be taken by the tenant companies, shall be subsequently adjusted between the parties, but shall not delay the prompt payment of the accounts as rendered by the Des Moines Company.

Section 6. It is further agreed that if any one of the tenant companies herein named shall for any reason fail or refuse, for a period of thirty days after the same has become due 776 and has been demanded, to pay the sum or sums due from it under this contract as aforesaid, then the said Des Moines Company may take from any moneys in its hands belonging to the said defaulting Company, or in the hands of its agents the amount of said sum or sums, and apply sufficient thereof to meet said demand or demands. Should the sum in the hands of the said Des Moines Company or its agents be insufficient to meet the amount due under this agreement, and the same shall still remain unpaid, said Des Moines Company shall have the right to exclude the said delinquent tenant from said premises, and the company so failing to pay shall at the option of the said Des Moines Company, forfeit all rights under this agreement and the said Des Moines Company may thereupon, with the consent of the remaining tenant companies herein, transfer and assign the rights of the company so failing, to any other party or parties, for such sum as it may determine, and the same may be thereafter held and enjoyed by said assignee or assignees; but it is understood and agreed that nothing herein shall prevent the said Des Moines Company from enforcing its claim or claims, against any delinquent lessee or lessees, by any proper action, either at law or in equity, to recover any amount which may be at any time due and unpaid, in the event that the said Des Moines Company shall so elect.

Section 7. The cost and expense of operating the engine houses and their appurtenances, and each of them, including the cost of turning and housing engines, furnishing water and sand, and of wiping and washing and firing up, shall be borne by each of the tenant companies herein named in such 777 proportion as the number of road engines of each company in and out of said engine house during the period for which said cost and expense is made up bears to all the engines of the tenant companies in and out of the same.

All repairs to engines & cars shall be charged for and paid by each of said companies for which the work is done on the basis of actual cost of labor and material, and all services rendered, supplies and labor furnished to any of the tenant companies parties hereto for their own benefit, and which are not properly a portion of the joint expenses, shall be charged directly to said company on such equitable terms as may be agreed upon between the Superintendent of the Des Moines Company and the Superintendent of the Company to which the service is rendered.

Section 8. The said terminal property hereby leased shall be used by the said tenant companies for all their trains entering or departing from the said City of Des Moines, Iowa.

Section 9. The said Des Moines Company shall make, publish and enforce such rules and regulations for the use, management and operation of the said terminal property by all of the tenant companies using the same as it from time to time may consider prudent and necessary.

Section 10. The Des Moines Company shall keep accurate books of account of the various items of interest, insurance, taxes, construction, improvement, operation, maintenance and repairs, and other disbursements upon and about the premises embraced in this agreement, and said books shall show 778 the amount of work done for and fuel or other material furnished to each of the said tenant companies, and the amount of fuel or other material received from each of said companies; and said books shall give such other details as will at all times enable the said tenant companies to make accurate settlements of their accounts as provided for in this agreement; and said books may at all proper and reasonable hours be examined and inspected by the respective Superintendents, Auditors or Treasurers of said tenant companies, or by an authorized accountant.

Section 11. The said Des Moines Company shall also keep an accurate record of all the engines and cars of each tenant company arriving at and departing from said terminal station or said depot grounds, transfers and yards, and the cars of foreign roads that may be switched onto or from said terminals, for the benefits of the said tenant companies or others, and of all the engines which have been housed in said engine houses in each month; and as hereinbefore provided, said Des Moines Company shall furnish to the said tenant companies a full, true and detailed statement of all the expenditures made, and of all the fuel and other supplies used, delivered and received, of all the cars and engines received, handled or switched, all work done or repairs made, and of all the engines housed and other expenses connected with the operation of said property during the month next preceding.

Section 12. All damages which may be received by any 779 engine or engines, car or cars, while being moved by the said Des Moines Company for the aforesaid tenant companies or either of them at or upon any part of the premises embraced in this agreement shall be repaired by the Des Moines Company, and the cost of such repairs shall be borne and paid by the said tenant companies on a wheelage basis.

Section 13. All damages to property caused by any engine or engines, car or cars of the said tenant companies occupying said terminals while being switched, managed and controlled or under the management and control of the Des Moines Company, or by any imperfection in the track or tracks laid on said premises, and all injuries which may at any time be received by any person or persons, including employes, in, about, around or upon said terminal station, depot grounds, tracks, yards, shops, round houses, transfers, etc., caused through or by the said Des Moines Company or any of its agents, officers or servants, shall, if settled at all, be adjusted and settled by said Des Moines Company, and the sum thus paid in settlement or settlements, or as damages if not settled, shall be considered as a part of the expenses of operating said terminals, and shall be divided and paid upon said wheelage basis as herein defined.

Now Therefore, in consideration of the premises and the mutual covenants and agreements herein contained, it is agreed by and between the parties hereto, each for itself and not jointly, as follows, to-wit:

Section 1. The Des Moines Company grants to the Des Moines & St. Louis Company, the Wabash Company, operating the said Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad, and the Des Moines, Northern & Western Company, the use (in common with such railway companies as heretofore have or may hereafter enter into contract with the Des Moines Company) of its railway system, consisting of the terminal property aforesaid, including main and side-tracks, passenger and freight depots, depot grounds, lands, yards, shops, round houses and transfers, and all betterments, renewals, improvements and additions to the same, until May 1st, 1918.

Provided, however, that this grant shall not be construed to embrace any lands, tracks, yards, transfers or depots of which the said Des Moines Company may heretofore have granted or may hereafter grant the sole and exclusive use to another railway company or other railway companies. It is, however, understood and agreed that any such exclusive grant hereafter made shall not interfere with the reasonable use by the grantees herein of the said terminal facilities as they now exist.

786 Provided further, that such use shall at all times be subject to the reasonable regulation and control of the said Des Moines Company, which shall at all times manage and operate said terminal property in the interest and for the benefit of such railway companies as have acquired or may hereafter acquire the right to use the same.

And said Des Moines Company agrees to keep and maintain its said railway system in good condition and repair, and to provide and maintain all such engines, machinery, appliances, buildings and structures, and all such servants and employes, as shall be reasonably necessary for the conduct of its business and the moving and handling of cars, passengers and freight, for said several grantees herein named, and the housing and care of their engines; and the said Des Moines Company further agrees to switch all cars, handle all freight, house and care for all engines of the said several grantee companies, which may be delivered to it or which may come upon its said terminal property, in so far as the said companies may request it so to do.

And the said Des Moines Company further agrees that the use hereby granted of the said railway system and terminal facilities shall be without preference or unreasonable precedence for or to itself or to any of the lessees of its said terminals in the matter of train time schedules, or the handling or switching of cars and trains and occupancy of depots, or the occupancy of said property or any part thereof, or in the service herein agreed to be performed; always, however, subject to such reasonable control and discretion by the
ness.

Section 2. The aggregate amount to be paid by the said Des Moines & St. Louis Company, the Wabash Company and the Des Moines, Northern & Western Company to the Des Moines Company for the use hereinbefore granted and the services so to be performed, shall be ascertained as follows, to-wit:

1st. There shall be ascertained the amount required to pay five per cent. interest annually upon the mortgage bonds of the Des Moines Company, whether now or hereafter issued, one-twelfth of which, less any deduction hereinafter provided for, shall be payable monthly as herein specified.

2nd. At the expiration of each month, or as soon thereafter as practicable, there shall be ascertained the expenses of maintaining renewing and repairing the property of the said Des Moines Company, including the maintenance renewal and repair of tracks, depots, round houses, shops, engine houses, tools, yards, transfers, etc., during the preceding month. And in like manner there shall be ascertained the taxes or assessments, general or special, levied upon or against the property of the said Des Moines Company and paid during the preceding month, or to be paid during the next succeeding month, and the insurance, if any, paid during the preceding month, or to be paid during the next succeeding month.

788 cluding the operation of its main and side-tracks, freight and passenger depots, depot grounds, yards, transfers, shops, round houses and other properties, which is to include every liability created and every item of expense or disbursement incurred or made by the said Des Moines Company, whether herein specifically mentioned or not, including interest upon the (any) floating debt except the expense specified in Section 7 hereof.

Section 3. Having so ascertained the monthly aggregate of all the items and sums mentioned in the preceding section, which shall embrace every item of expense or liability of whatsoever name or character, there shall be deducted therefrom the amount, if any, which other railway companies may be under obligation to pay by virtue of contracts for the use of said property, or parts thereof, for the preceding month, and the remainder shall be paid by the Des Moines & St. Louis Company, the Wabash Company and the Des Moines Northern & Western Company in the proportion that the wheelage of each of said tenant companies bears to the entire wheelage of all of said companies during such preceding month.

The said Wabash Company for itself agrees to make the payment hereinbefore provided for at the times and in the manner prescribed so long as it operates the railroad of the said Des Moines & St. Louis Company, and when the said Wabash Company ceases to operate the railroad of the Des Moines & St. Louis Company its obligation to so pay, and all the obligations herein assumed by it shall at once determine and be and become the obligations of whatever company oper-789 ates the said railroad; it being the intention that the obligations of this lease, so far as they pertain to the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad, shall attach to and become the obligations of the successor of the said Wabash Company in the operation of the said Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad, and any company succeeding the Wabash Company in such operation shall be held, by the operation of trains over the said Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad, and upon the property hereby leased, to assume all the obligations herein undertaken by either the said Des Moines & St. Louis Company or the said Wabash Company.

And it is further agreed that the obligations herein assumed by the Des Moines, Northern & Western Company shall pass with the railroad it now owns and operates, and shall become the obligations of any assignee, grantee or successor of the said Des Moines, Northern & Western Company in the ownership or operation of the said Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad.

Section 4. If the amount, or any part thereof, due from any other railroad company or companies for the use of the property herein demised, or any part thereof, shall not be paid when due, then the sum so due and unpaid shall on demand of the said Des Moines Company be paid to it by the tenant companies under this agreement on a wheelage basis as hereinbefore defined.

Section 5. The said Des Moines Company shall, on or before the tenth day of each month, or as soon thereafter as practicable, make out and present to each of the tenant companies herein an account showing the amount due from 790 them respectively for the preceding month, and payment thereof shall be made within five days thereafter. (All claimed omissions or errors in said accounts, or exceptions thereto, which may be taken by the tenant companies or either of them, shall be subsequently adjusted between the parties, but shall not delay the prompt payment of the accounts as rendered by the Des Moines Company.)

fuse, for a period of thirty days after the same has become due and has been demanded, to pay the sum or sums due from it under this contract as aforesaid, then the said Des Moines Company may take from any moneys in its hands belonging to the said defaulting company or in the hands of its agents the amount of said sum or sums, and apply sufficient thereof to meet said demand or demands. Should the sum in the hands of the said Des Moines Company or its agents be insufficient to meet the amount due under this agreement, and the same shall still remain unpaid, said Des Moines Company shall have the right to exclude the said delinquent tenant from said premises, and the company so failing to pay shall, at the option of the said Des Moines Company forfeit all rights under this agreement, and the said Des Moines Company may thereupon, with the consent of the remaining tenant companies herein, transfer and assign the rights of the company so failing to any other party or parties for such sum as it may determine, and the same may be thereafter held and enjoyed by said assignee or assignees; but it is understood and agreed that nothing herein shall prevent the said Des Moines 791 Company from enforcing its claim or claims against any delinquent lessee or lessees by any proper action, either at law or in equity, to recover any amount which may be at any time due and unpaid, in the event that the said Des Moines Company shall so elect.

Section (7). The cost and expense of operating the engine houses and their appurtenances, and each of them, including the cost of turning and housing engines, furnishing water and sand, and of wiping and washing and firing up, shall be borne by each of the tenant companies herein named in such proportion as the number of road engines of each company in and out of said engine house during the period for which said cost and expense is made up (bears to all the engines of the tenant companies in and out of the same)

792 All repairs to engines & cars shall be charged for and paid by each of said companies for which the work is done on the basis of actual cost of labor and material, and all services and facilities rendered, supplies and labor furnished to any of the tenant companies parties hereto for their own benefit, and which are not properly a portion of the joint expenses, shall be charged directly to said company on such equitable terms as may be agreed upon between the Superintendent of the Des Moines Company and the Superintendent of the company to which the service is rendered.

Section (8). The said terminal property hereby leased shall be used by the said tenant companies for all their trains entering or departing from the said City of Des Moines, Iowa.

Section (9). The said Des Moines Company shall make, publish and enforce such rules and regulations for the use, management and operation of the said terminal property by the the tenant companies using the same as it from time to time may consider prudent and necessary.

Section (10). The Des Moines Company shall keep accurate books of account of the various items of interest, insurance, taxes, construction, improvement, operation, maintenance and repairs and other disbursements upon and about the premises embraced in this agreement, and said books shall show the amount of work done for and fuel or other material furnished to each of the said tenant companies, and the amount of fuel or other material received from each of said companies; and said books shall give such other details as will at all times enable the said tenant companies to make accurate settlements of their accounts as provided for in this agreement; and said books may at all proper and reasonable hours be examined and inspected by the respective Superintendent, Auditors, or Treasurers of said tenant companies, or by an authorized accountant.

Section (11). The said Des Moines Company shall also keep an accurate record of all the engines and cars of each tenant company arriving at and departing from said terminal station or said depot grounds, transfers and yards, and the cars of foreign roads that may be switched onto or from said terminals, for the benefit of the said tenant companies or others, and of all the engines which have been housed in said engine houses in each month; and as hereinbefore provided, said Des Moines Company shall furnish to the said tenant companies a full, true and detailed statement of all the expenditures made, and of all the fuel and other supplies used, delivered and received, of all the cars and engines received, handled or switched, of all work done or repairs made, and of all the engines housed and other expenses connected with the operation of said property during the month next preceding.

Section (12). All damages which may be received by any engine or engines, car or cars, while being moved by the said Des Moines Company for the aforesaid tenant companies or either of them at or upon any part of the premises embraced in this agreement shall be repaired by the Des Moines Company, and the cost of such repairs shall be borne and paid by the said tenant companies on a wheelage basis.

Section (13). All damages to property caused by any engine or engines, car or cars of the said tenant companies occupying said terminals while being switched, managed and controlled or under the management and control of the Des Moines Company, or by any imperfection in the track or tracks laid on said premises, and all injuries which may at any time be received by any person or persons, including employes, in, about, around or upon said terminal station, depot grounds, tracks, yards, shops, round houses, transfers, etc., caused through or by the said Des Moines Company or any of it agents, officers or servants, shall, if settled at all, be adjusted and settled by said Des Moines Company, and the sums thus paid in settlement or settlements, or as damages if not settled, shall be considered as a part of the expenses of operating said terminals, and shall be divided and paid upon said wheelage basis as herein defined.

Provided, however, that the said tenant companies and each of them using said terminal facilities hereunder, shall at its own cost and expense bear, settle and pay all damages to property belonging to the parties hereto or to third parties, and all injuries to persons when said damages or injuries are done to or by its own trains while said trains are being moved by its own engines and are being operated and controlled by its own crews, unless such damages or injuries are occasioned by the act, neglect or fault of the employes or servants of 795 the said Des Moines Company or by some imperfection in its track or tracks, machinery, tools, appliances, apparatus, etc.; and in case such damages or injuries are so occasioned by the act, negligence or fault of the servants of the said Des Moines Company, or by any imperfection in its said tracks, machinery, tools, appliances, apparatus, etc., then said payment or payments shall be made by the said Des Moines Company, and shall be considered as a part of the expenses of said terminals, and shall be divided and paid upon a wheelage basis as herein defined.

Section (14). It is further agreed by and between the said Des Moines Company and each of said tenant companies that either of said tenant companies may sell, assign and transfer to any one railway company all its right under this agreement or it may mortgage to any one party all its interest and right under this contract; but it shall not subdivide, sublet, mortgage or assign to any other company or person a portion of its said rights and privileges herein, and any assignment, mortgage or lease made by any one of said tenant companies which may be held sufficient to admit its assignee, mortgagee or lessee or their assigns to the possession of said property shall be held sufficient to exclude and shall exclude the company making such lease, mortgage or assignment from its rights and privileges in and upon said property under this contract; but this clause shall not be so construed as to prevent either of said tenant companies from contracting to do the business or handling with its own engines the traffic or cars of any other railroad company to and from said city upon such terms as the 796 said Des Moines Company may approve, provided the line of such other railroad company connects with the line of such tenant company not less than twenty miles from said City of Des Moines.

Section (15) Whereas the several tenant companies herein named have obligated themselves severally to pay as a part of the compensation for the use of said premises a sum sufficient to pay the interest on the whole number of bonds issued and used or to be hereafter issued and used by said Des Moines Company in purchasing, improving and equipping the terminal properties herein described.

Now, therefore, in consideration of the premises, the said Des Moines Company hereby agrees to and with each of the said tenant companies that it will not at any time hereafter issue or dispose of any of its said bonds except for the purpose of purchasing with them or their proceeds additional terminal property or for improving or equipping that now owned by it in the said City of Des Moines or vicinity.

Witnesseth, That

Whereas the said Des Moines Company is the owner of a railway system in and about the city of Des Moines, Iowa, which system consists of valuable terminal facilities in the said city of Des Moines as hereinafter described; and

Whereas, the Des Moines & St. Louis Company is the owner of a line of railway terminating in the city of Des Moines; and

Whereas, the said Wabash Company operates the line of the said Des Moines & St. Louis Company under lease; and

Whereas, in order to prevent the unnecessary expense, inconvenience and loss, and in order to facilitate the public convenience and safety, it has become necessary for the mutual interests of the parties hereto, that the Des Moines & St. Louis Company, the Wabash Company and the Des Moines Northern & Western Company shall have the use of the terminal facilities of the Des Moines Company as hereinafter prescribed and provided;

Now Therefore, in consideration of the premises and the mutual covenants and agreements herein contained, it is agreed by and between the parties hereto, each for itself and not jointly, as follows, to-wit:

Section I. The Des Moines Company grants to the Des Moines & St. Louis Company, the Wabash Company, operating the said Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad, and the Des Moines Northern & Western Company the use (in common with such railway companies as heretofore have or may hereafter enter into contract with the Des Moines Company), of its railway system, consisting of the terminal property aforesaid, including main and side tracks, passenger and freight depots, depot grounds, lands, yards, shops, round houses and transfers, and all betterments, renewals, improvements, and additions to the same, until May 1st, 1918.

Provided, however, that this grant shall not be construed to embrace any land, tracks, yards, transfers or depots, of which the said Des Moines Company may have heretofore granted, or may hereafter grant, the sole and exclusive use to another railway company or other railway companies. It is understood and agreed, however, that no such exclusive grant shall be hereafter made to any railroad company, or for its use, without the written consent and approval of the grantees herein, their successors or assigns. It is also agreed that no other tenant Railway company shall be hereafter admitted by said Des Moines Company to the use of said terminals, or any part thereof, upon terms different from those contained in this agreement, without the written consent of the grantees herein, their successors or assigns. But it is agreed that said Des Moines Company shall have, subject to the conditions of this agreement, the right to make leases of such portions of said grounds and premises as are not required for railroad or terminal purposes; but no such lease shall be made, for a period of more than six months, or for the erection or operation of elevators, warehouses, coal yards or manufacturing purposes, or for other similar uses without the written consent and approval of the grantees herein, and all such leases of portions of said property shall be terminated by said Des 802 Moines Company at the earliest practicable day after said tenant companies, or either of them, shall have given notice of a desire to use such grounds for railroad or terminal purposes.

(The proviso just inserted is on a piece of paper pasted on to the original draft. There is at the top of this piece of paper in the handwriting of Mr. F. M. Hubbell: "Sent copy of this to W. H. Blodgett March 29, 1897", and in typewriting in parenthesis; "Proposed as a substitute for the proviso on page 2.)

Provided further, that such use shall at all times be subject to the reasonable regulation and control of the said Des Moines Company, which shall at all times manage and operate said terminal property in the interest and for the benefit of such railway companies as have acquired or may hereafter acquire the right to use the same.

And said Des Moines Company agrees to keep and maintain its said railway system in good condition and repair, and to provide and maintain all such engines, machinery appliances, buildings and structures, and all such servants and employes, as shall be reasonably necessary for the conduct of its business and the moving and handling of cars, passengers and freight, for said several grantees herein named, and the housing and care of their engines; and the said Des Moines Company further agrees to switch all cars, handle all freight, house and care for all engines of the said several grantee companies, which 803 may be delivered to it or which may come upon its said terminal property, in so far as the said companies may request it so to do.

And the said Des Moines Company further agrees that the use hereby granted of the said railway system and terminal facilities shall be without preference or unreasonable precedence for or to itself or to any of the lessees of its said terminals in the matter of train time schedules, or the handling or switching of cars and trains and occupancy of depots, or the occupancy of said property or any part thereof, or in the service herein agreed to be performed; always, however, subject to such reasonable control and discretion by the said Des Moines Company as may be necessary to avoid confusion and expedite the management of its business.

Section 2. The aggregate amount to be paid by the said Des Moines & St. Louis Company, the Wabash Company and the Des Moines, Northern & Western Company to the Des Moines Company for the use hereinbefore granted and the services so to be performed, shall be ascertained as follows,

1st. There shall be ascertained the amount required to pay five per cent interest annually upon the mortgage bonds of the said Des Moines Company, whether now or hereafter issued, one-twelfth of which, less any deduction hereinafter provided for, shall be payable monthly as hereinafter specified.

804 newing and repairing the property of the said Des Moines Company, including the maintenance, renewal and repair of tracks, depots, round houses, shops, engine houses, tools, yards, transfers, etc., during the preceding month. And in like manner there shall be ascertained the taxes or assessments, general or special, levied upon or against the property of the said Des Moines Company and paid during the preceding month, or to be paid during the next succeeding month, and the insurance, if any, paid during the preceding month, or to be paid during the next succeeding month.

3rd. There shall be likewise ascertained the costs and expenses of every nature connected with the operation of the railway system of the said Des Moines Company, including the operation of its main and side tracks, freight and passenger depots, depot grounds, yards, transfers, shops, round houses and other properties, which is to include every liability created and every item of expense or disbursement incurred or made by the said Des Moines Company, whether herein specifically mentioned or not, including interest upon any floating debt, except the expense specified in section seven hereof.

Section 3. Having so ascertained the monthly aggregate of all the items and sums mentioned in the preceding section, which shall embrace every item of expense or liability of whatsoever name or character (excepting taxes, repairs and other expenses on such portions of said property as the Des 805 Moines Company may have leased, or claims the right to lease and collect and retain the rentals) there shall then be deducted therefrom the amount, if any, which other railway companies that pay upon any other than a wheelage basis, may be under obligations to pay by virtue of contracts for the use of said property, or parts thereof, and also all revenues and rentals paid by individuals or companies for the enjoyment of privileges, or the use of space at, or in the passenger station, or other buildings erected and used for railroad purposes, and all the rentals due from every company or person whatsoever, for the use of railroad tracks, facilities or privileges, for the preceding month; and the remainder shall be paid by the Des Moines & St. Louis Company, the Wabash Company and the Des Moines Northern & Western Company, in the gold coin of the United States of or equal to the present standard of weight and fineness, in the proportion that the wheelage of each of said companies bears to the entire wheelage of the tenant companies paying on a wheelage basis over said terminals during such preceding month.

And it is expressly understood and agreed, that the Des Moines Company reserves the right to switch, handle and transfer cars over said terminal tracks for other than tenant companies, to and from industries, and to and from other railroads with which its tracks connect, upon such terms and for such compensation as may be fixed by the Executive Committee; and it shall also have the right to make leases, 806 as provided in section one hereof, of such portions of its property as are not at the time required by the lessees herein, or either of them, for railroad or terminal purposes. And the Des Moines Company shall have the right to collect, and shall collect and retain all charges due for switching, handling and transferring such cars, and also all rentals due under such leases, until the aggregate of such collections amount to the sum of fifty thousand dollars ($50,000) and out of the sum last aforesaid, not exceeding thirty-five thousand dollars ($35,000) shall be applied to the payment of the present floating indebtedness of said Des Moines Company, and the balance shall belong to said Des Moines Company and constitute a working fund, to be expended from time to time in improving said terminal properties, for the benefit of the parties using the same for railroad purposes, in such manner as the Executive Committee shall direct.

It is further agreed that after said sum of fifty thousand dollars shall have been realized from the sources aforesaid all revenues thereafter derived from switching, handling and

transferring cars shall be credited monthly upon the bills of the tenant companies herein and such other tenant companies as may by subsequent contract become entitled thereto and each of said tenant companies shall receive a credit for the percentage thereof that its wheelage for the month for which the credit is made, bears to the total wheelage for said month, of all the companies entitled to participate in said revenues.

But it is further understood and agreed that after said
807 sum of fifty thousand dollars shall have been realized as aforesaid, all revenues thereafter derived from the rentals of such portions of said grounds as the Des Moines Company is herein authorized to lease, shall belong to said Des Moines Company, and shall be used in improving said terminal properties for the benefit of the parties using the same for railroad purposes, in such manner as the Executive Committee shall direct.

It is understood that the privilege reserved to the Des Moines Company of making leases of such portions of said property as are not at the time required by the lessees herein for railroad or terminal purposes, shall not be understood as including the right to grant any privileges, or the use of any space at or in the passenger station, or other buildings erected and used for railroad purposes, or the right to make any lease or contract for the use of any tracks or other railroad facilities or privileges.

(Section 3 is pasted on to the original contract, and it is not possible to read what is under it, and it is stricken out. At the top of the page in the handwriting of Mr. F. M. Hubbell there is this: "Sent copy of this to W. H. Blodgett March 29, 1897".)

The said Wabash Company for itself agrees to make the payment hereinbefore provided for at the times and in the manner prescribed so long as it operates the railroad of the said Des Moines & St. Louis Company, and when the said Wabash Company ceases to operate the railroad of the 808 said Des Moines & St. Louis Company its obligation to so pay, and all the obligations herein assumed by it shall at once determine and be and become the obligations of whatever company operates the said railroad; it being the intention that the obligations of this lease, so far as they pertain to the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad, shall attach to and become the obligations of the successor of the said Wabash Company in the operation of the said Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad and any company succeeding the Wabash Company in such operation shall be held by the operation of trains over the said Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad, and upon the property hereby leased, to assume all the obligations herein undertaken by either the said Des Moines & St. Louis Company or the said Wabash Company.

And it is further agreed that the obligations herein assumed by the Des Moines Northern & Western Company shall pass with the railroad it now owns and operates, and shall become the obligations of any assignee, grantee or successor of the said Des Moines Northern & Western Company in the ownership or operation of the said Des Moines Northern & Western Railroad. And any company succeeding the Des Moines Northern & Western Company in such ownership or operation shall be held by the operation of trains over the said Des Moines Northern & Western Railroad and upon the property hereby leased, to assume all the obligations herein undertaken by said Des Moines Northern & Western Company.

809 Section 4. If the amount, or any part thereof, due from any other railroad company or companies for the use of the property herein demised, or any part thereof, shall not be paid when due, then the sum so due and unpaid shall on demand of the said Des Moines Company be paid to it by the tenant companies under this agreement on a wheelage basis as hereinbefore defined.

Section 5. The said Des Moines Company, shall on or before the tenth day of each month, or as soon thereafter as practicable, make out and present to each of the tenant companies herein an account showing the amount due from them respectively for the preceding month, and payment thereof shall be made within five days thereafter. All claimed omissions or errors in said accounts, or exceptions thereto, which may be taken by the tenant companies, shall be subsequently adjusted between the parties, but shall not delay the prompt payment of the accounts as rendered by the Des Moines Company.

Section 6. It is further agreed that if any one of the tenant companies herein named shall for any reason fail or refuse, for a period of thirty days after the same has become due and has been demanded, to pay the sum or sums due from it under this contract as aforesaid, then the said Des Moines Company may take from any moneys in its hands belonging to the said defaulting company, or in the hands of its agents the amount of said sum or sums, and apply sufficient thereof to meet said demand or demands. Should the sum in 810 the hands of the said Des Moines Company or its agents be insufficient to meet the amount due under this agreement, and the same shall still remain unpaid, said Des Moines Company shall have the right to exclude the said delinquent tenant company from said premises, and the company so failing to pay shall at the option of the said Des Moines Company, forfeit all rights under this agreement, and the said Des Moines Company may thereupon, with the consent of the remaining tenant companies herein, transfer and assign the rights of the company so failing to any other party or parties, for such sum as it may determine, and the same may be thereafter held and enjoyed by the said assignee or assignees; but it is understood and agreed that nothing herein shall prevent the said Des Moines Company from enforcing its claim or claims, against any delinquent lessee or lessees, by any proper action, either at law or in equity, to recover any amount which may be at any time due and unpaid, in the event that the said Des Moines Company shall so elect.

Section 7. The cost and expense of operating the engine houses and their appurtenances, and each of them, including the cost of turning and housing engines, furnishing water and sand, and of wiping and washing and firing up, shall be borne by each of the tenant companies herein named in such proportion as the number of road engines of each company in and out of said engine house during the period for which said 811 cost and expense is made up bears to all the engines of the tenant companies in and out of the same.

All repairs to engines and cars shall be charged for and paid by each of said companies for which the work is done on the basis of actual cost thereof to the Des Moines Company, and all services rendered, supplies and labor furnished to any of the tenant companies parties hereto for their own benefit, and which are not properly a portion of the joint expenses, shall be charged directly to said company on such equal and equitable terms as may be agreed upon between the Superintendent of the Des Moines Company and the Superintendents of the respective companies for which the services are rendered or the supplies furnished subject, however, to the approval of the Executive Committee.

Section 8. The said terminal property hereby leased shall be used by the said tenant companies for all their trains entering or departing from the said City of Des Moines, Iowa.

Section (12.) Said Executive Committee subject to the approval of the Board shall make, publish and enforce such rules and regulations for the use, management and operation of said terminal properties including stations, depots, depot grounds, yards and tracks, by all the parties hereto as it may from time to time consider necessary.

Section (13.) The Des Moines Company shall keep accurate books of account of the various items of interest, insurance, taxes, construction, improvement, operation, maintenance and repairs, and other disbursements upon and about the premises embraced in this agreement, and said books shall show the amount of work done for and fuel or other material furnished to each of the said tenant companies, and the amount of fuel or other material received from each of said companies; and said books shall give such other details as will at all times enable the said tenant companies to make accurate settlements of their accounts as provided in this agreement; and said books may at all proper and reasonable hours be examined and inspected by the respective superintendents, Auditors or Treasurers of said tenant companies, or by an authorized accountant.

Section (14.) The said Des Moines Company shall also keep an accurate record of all the engines and cars of each tenant company arriving at and departing from said terminal station or said depot grounds, transfers and yards and the cars of foreign roads that may be switched onto or from said terminals, for the benefits of the said tenant companies or others, and of all the engines which have been housed in said engine houses in each month; and as hereinbefore provided, said Des Moines Company shall furnish to the said tenant companies a full, true and detailed statement of all the expenditures made, and of all the fuel and other supplies used, delivered and received, of all the cars and engines received, handled or switched, of all work done or repairs made, and of all the engines housed and other expenses connected with the operation of said property during the month next preceding.

Section (15.) All damages which may be received by any engine or engines, car or cars, while being moved by the said Des Moines Company for the aforesaid tenant companies or either of them at or upon any part of the premises embraced in this agreement shall be repaired by the Des Moines Company and the cost of such repairs shall be deemed an operating expense and borne and paid by the said tenant companies on a wheelage basis.

Section (16.) All damages to property caused by any engine or engines, car or cars of the said tenant companies occupying said terminals while being switched, managed and controlled or under the management and control of the Des Moines Company, or by any imperfection in the track or tracks laid on said premises, and all injuries which may at any time be received by any person or persons, including employes, in, about, around or upon said terminal station, depot, grounds, tracks, yards, shops, round houses, transfers, etc., caused through or by the said Des Moines Company or any of its agents, officers or servants, shall if settled at all, be adjusted and settled by said Des Moines Company, and the sum thus paid in settlement or settlements, or as damages, if not settled, shall be considered as a part of the expenses of operating said terminals, and shall be divided and paid upon said wheelage basis as herein defined.

Provided, however, that the said tenant companies and 814 each of them using said terminal facilities hereunder, shall at its own cost and expense bear, settle, and pay all damages to property belonging to the parties hereto or to third persons and all injuries to persons when said damages or injuries are done to or by its own trains while said trains are being moved by its own engines and are being operated and controlled by its own crews, unless such damages or injuries are occasioned by the act, neglect or fault of the employes or servants of the said Des Moines Company or by some imperfection in its track or tracks, machinery, tools, appliances, apparatus, etc., and in case such damages or injuries are so occasioned by the act, negligence or fault of the servants of the said Des Moines Company, or by any imperfection in its said tracks, machinery tools, appliances, apparatus, etc. then said payment or payments shall be made by the said Des Moines Company, and shall be considered as a part of the expenses of said terminals, and shall be divided and paid upon a wheelage basis as herein defined.

Section (17.) It is further agreed by and between the said Des Moines Company and each of said tenant companies that either of said tenant companies may sell, assign and transfer to any one railway company all its right under this agreement, or it may mortgage to any one party all its interest and right under this contract; but it shall not subdivide, sublet, mortgage or assign to any other company or person a por-815 tion of its said rights and privileges herein, and any assignment, mortgage or lease made by any one of said tenant companies which may be held sufficient to admit its assignee, mortgagee or lessee or their assigns to the possession of said property shall be held sufficient to exclude and shall exclude the company making such lease, mortgage or assignment from its rights and privileges in and upon said property under this contract; but this clause shall not be so construed as to prevent either of said tenant companies from contracting to do the business or handling with its own engines the traffic or cars of any other railroad company to and from said city upon such terms as the said Des Moines Company may approve, provided the line of such other railroad company connects with the line of said tenant company not less than twenty miles from said city of Des Moines.

Section (18.) Interest on bonds hereafter issued by the Des Moines Company shall not be reckoned under the first paragraph of section two hereof unless such bonds were issued with the consent of the party sought to be charged with such interest.

816 Section (19.) It is further understood and agreed that this contract is entered into in lieu of and as a substitute for a certain agreement entered into on the 10th day of May 1889, between the Des Moines Union Railway Company, the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company, and the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, and the said last named agreement is by the execution hereof forever terminated, and for the purpose of quieting all controversies with respect to the full execution and performance of said last named contract by each of the parties thereto it is stipulated and agreed that the same has been fully performed, provided however that all unsettled claims and accounts between the parties hereto shall be adjusted and settled in like manner as though they had arisen under this agreement, and that the capital stock of the said Des Moines Union Railway Company therein mentioned is now rightfully held as follows, to-wit:

Ex. "I" to A. B. Cummins, Dep.

This Agreement, made and entered into this (21) day of (July) 1897, by and between the Des Moines Union Railway Company, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Iowa, (hereinafter termed the Des Moines Company), the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Iowa, (hereinafter termed the Des Moines & St. Louis Company), the Wabash Railroad Company, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Missouri (hereinafter termed the Wabash Company), and the Des Moines Northern & Western Railroad Company, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Iowa (hereinafter termed the Des Moines Northern & Western Company) Witnesseth, That which system consists of valuable terminal facilities in the said City of Des Moines, as hereinafter described; and

Whereas the said Des Moines Company is the owner of a railway system in and about the City of Des Moines, Iowa,

Whereas the Des Moines & St. Louis Company is the owner of a line of railway terminating in the City of Des Moines; and

Whereas the said Wabash Company operates the line of the said Des Moines & St. Louis Company under lease; and

Whereas the Des Moines Northern & Western Company is the owner of and operates a line of railway terminating in the said City of Des Moines; and

Whereas in order to prevent unnecessary expense, inconvenience and loss, and in order to facilitate the public 819 convenience and safety, it has become necessary, for the mutual interests of the parties hereto, that the Des Moines & St. Louis Company, the Wabash Company and the Des Moines, Northern & Western Company shall have the use of the terminal facilities of the Des Moines Company, as hereinafter prescribed and provided;

Now Therefore, in consideration of the premises and the mutual covenants and agreements herein contained, it is agreed by and between the parties hereto, each for itself and not jointly, as follows, to-wit:

Section I. The Des Moines Company grants to the Des Moines & St. Louis Company, the Wabash Company, operating the said Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad, and the Des Moines Northern & Western Company, the use (in common with such railway companies as heretofore have, or may hereafter enter into contract with the Des Moines Company) of its railway system, consisting of the terminal property aforesaid, including main and side tracks, passenger and freight depots, depot grounds, lands, yards, shops, round houses and transfers, and all betterments, renewals, improvements, and additions to the same, until May 1st 1918,

Provided, however, that this grant shall not be construed to embrace any lands, tracks, yards, transfers or depots, of which the said Des Moines Company may have heretofore granted, or may hereafter grant, the sole and exclusive use to another railway company or other railway companies. It is understood and agreed however, that no such exclusive grant shall be hereafter made to any railroad company, or for its use, without the written consent and approval of the grantees herein, their successors or assigns. It is also agreed of said terminals, or any part thereof, upon terms different from those contained in this agreement, without the written consent of the grantees herein, their successors or assigns. But it is agreed that the said Des Moines Company shall have, subject to the conditions of this agreement, the right to make leases of such portions of said grounds and premises as are not required for railroad or terminal purposes; but no such lease shall be made for a period of more than six months, or for the erection or operation of elevators, warehouses, coal yards, or manufacturing purposes, or for other similar uses, without the written consent and approval of the grantees herein, and all such leases of portions of said property shall be terminated by said Des Moines Company at the earliest practicable day after said tenant companies, or either of them, shall have given notice of a desire to use such grounds for railroad or terminal purposes.

Provided further, that such use shall at all times be subject to the reasonable regulation and control of the said Des Moines Company, which shall at all times manage and operate said terminal property in the interest and for the benefit of such railway companies as have acquired or may hereafter acquire the right to use the same.

And said Des Moines Company agrees to keep and maintain its said railway system in good condition and repair, and to provide and maintain all such engines, machinery, appliances, buildings and structures, and all such servants and employes, as shall be reasonably necessary for the conduct of its 821 business and the moving and handliag of cars, passengers and freight, for said several grantees herein named, and the housing and care of their engines; and the said Des Moines Company further agrees to switch all cars, handle all freight, house and care for all engines of the said several grantee companies, which may be delivered to it or which may come upon its said terminal property, in so far as the said companies may request it so to do.

And the said Des Moines Company further agrees that the use hereby granted of the said railway system and terminal facilities shall be without preference or unreasonable precedence for or to itself or to any of the lessees of its said terminals in the matter of train time schedules, or the handling or switching of cars and trains and occupancy of depots, or the occupancy of said property or any part thereof, or in the service herein agreed to be performed; always, however, subject to such reasonable control and discretion by the said Des Moines Company as may be necessary to avoid confusion and expedite the management of its business.

Section II. The aggregate amount to be paid by the said Des Moines & St. Louis Company, the Wabash Company and the Des Moines, Northern & Western Company to the Des Moines Company for the use hereinbefore granted and the services so to be performed, shall be ascertained as follows, to-wit:

1st. There shall be ascertained the amount required to pay five per cent. interest annually upon the mortgage bonds of the said Des Moines Company, whether now or hereafter issued, one-twelfth of which, less any deduction herein-
822 after provided for, shall be payable monthly as hereinafter specified.

2nd. At the expiration of each month, or as soon thereafter as practicable, there shall be ascertained the expense of maintaining, renewing and repairing the property of the said Des Moines Company, including the maintenance, renewal, and repair of tracks, depots, round houses, shops, engine houses, tools, yards, transfers, etc. during the preceding month. And in like manner there shall be ascertained the taxes or assessments, general or special, levied upon or against the property of the said Des Moines Company and paid during the preceding month, or to be paid during the next succeeding month, and the insurance, if any, paid during the preceding month, or to be paid during the next succeeding month.

3rd. There shall be likewise ascertained the costs and expenses of every nature connected with the operation of the railway system of the said Des Moines Company, including the operation of its main and side tracks, freight and passenger depots, depot grounds, yards, transfers, shops, round houses and other properties, which is to include every liability created and every item of expense or disbursement incurred or made by the said Des Moines Company, whether herein specifically mentioned or not, including interest upon any floating debt, except the expense specified in section seven hereof.

Section III. Having so ascertained the monthly aggregate of all the items and sums mentioned in the preceding section, which shall embrace every item of expense or liability of whatsoever name or character (excepting taxes, repairs and 823 other expenses on such portions of said property as the Des Moines Company may have leased, or claims the right to lease and collect and retain the rentals), there shall then be deducted therefrom the amount, if any, which other railway companies that pay upon any other then a wheelage basis, may be under obligations to pay by virtue of contracts for the use of the property, of said Des Moines Co. or parts thereof, including all rentals to be paid by the Chicago &

Great Western Ry. Co. and also all revenues and rentals paid by individuals or companies for the enjoyment of privileges, or the use of space at, or in the passenger station, or other buildings erected and used for railroad purposes, and all the rentals due from every company or person whomsoever, for the use of railroad tracks, facilities or privileges, for the preceding month; and the remainder shall be paid by the Des Moines & St. Louis Company, the Wabash Company, the Des Moines Northern & Western Company, in the gold coin of the United States of America, of or equal to the present standard of weight and fineness, in the proportion that the wheelage of each of said companies bears to the entire wheelage of the tenant companies paying on a wheelage basis over said terminals during such preceding month.

And it is expressly understood and agreed, that the Des Moines Company reserves the right to switch, handle and transfer cars over said terminal tracks for other than tenant companies, to and from industries, and to and from other railroads with which its tracks connect, upon such terms and for such compensation as may be fixed by the Executive Committee; and it shall also have the right to make leases, as provided in section one hereof, of such portions of its property as are not at the time required by the lessees herein, or either of them, for railroad or terminal purposes. And the Des Moines Company shall have the right to collect, and shall collect and retain all charges due for switching, handling and transferring such cars, and also all rentals due under such leases, until the aggregate of such collections amount to the sum of fifty thousand dollars ($50,000.) and out of the sum last aforesaid, not exceeding thirty-five thousand dollars ($35,000.) shall be applied to the payment of the present floating indebtedness of said Des Moines Company, and the balance shall belong to said Des Moines Company and constitute a working fund, to be expended from time to time in improving said terminal properties, for the benefit of the parties using the same for railroad purposes, in such manner as the Executive Committee shall direct.

It is further agreed that after said sum of fifty thousand dollars shall have been realized from the sources aforesaid all revenues thereafter derived from switching, handling and transferring cars shall be credited monthly upon the bills of the tenant companies herein and such other tenant companies as may by subsequent contract become entitled thereto and each of said tenant companies shall receive a credit for the percentage thereof that its wheelage for the month for which the credit is made bears to the total wheelage for said month, of all the companies entitled to participate in said revenues.

But it is further understood and agreed that after said sum of fifty thousand dollars shall have been realized as 825 aforesaid, all revenues thereafter derived from the rentals of such portions of said grounds as the Des Moines Company is herein authorized to lease, shall belong to said Des Moines Company and shall be used in improving said terminal properties for the benefit of the parties using the same for railroad purposes, in such manner as the Executive Committee shall direct.

It is understood that the privilege reserved to the Des Moines Company of making leases of such portions of said property as are not at the time required by the lessees herein for railroad or terminal purposes, shall not be understood as including the right to grant any privileges, or the use of any space at or in the passenger station, or other buildings erected and used for railroad purposes, or the right to make any lease or contract for the use of any tracks or other railroad facilities or privileges.

The said Wabash Company for itself agrees to make the payment hereinbefore provided for at the times and in the manner prescribed, so long as it operates the railroad of the said Des Moines & St. Louis Company, and when the said Wabash Company ceases to operate the railroad of the said Des Moines & St. Louis Company its obligation to so pay and all the obligations herein assumed by it shall at once determine and be and become the obligations of whatever company operates the said railroad; it being the intention that the obligations of this lease, so far as they pertain to the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad, shall attach to and become the obligations of the successor of the said Wabash Company in the operation of the said Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad, and any 826 company succeeding the Wabash Company in such operation shall be held by the operation of trains over the said Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad, and upon the property hereby leased, to assume all the obligations herein undertaken by either the said Des Moines & St. Louis Company or the said Wabash Company.

And it is further agreed that the obligations herein assumed by the Des Moines Northern & Western Company shall pass with the railroad it now owns and operates, and shall become the obligations of any assignee, grantee or successor of the said Des Moines Northern & Western Company in the ownership or operation of the said Des Moines Northern & Western Railroad. And any company succeeding the Des Moines Northern & Western Company in such ownership or operation shall be held by the operation of trains over the said Des Moines Northern & Western Railroad and upon the property hereby leased, to assume all the obligations herein undertaken by said Des Moines Northern & Western Company.

Section IV. If the amount, or any part thereof, due from any other railroad company or companies for the use of the property herein demised, or any part thereof, shall not be paid when due, then the sum so due and unpaid shall on demand of the said Des Moines Company be paid to it by the tenant companies under this agreement on a wheelage basis as hereinbefore defined.

Section V. The said Des Moines Company shall, on or before the tenth day of each month, or as soon thereafter as practicable, make out and present to each of the tenant companies herein an account showing the amount due from them respectively for the preceding month, and payment thereof shall be made within five days thereafter. All claimed omissions or errors in said accounts, or exceptions thereto, 827 which may be taken by the tenant companies, shall be subsequently adjusted between the parties, but shall not delay the prompt payment of the accounts as rendered by the Des Moines Company.

Section VI. It is further agreed that if any one of the tenant companies herein named shall for any reason fail or refuse, for a period of thirty days after the same has become due and has been demanded, to pay the sum or sums due from it under this contract as aforesaid, then the said Des Moines Company may take from any moneys in its hands belonging to the said defaulting company, or in the hands of its agents the amount of said sum or sums, and apply sufficient thereof to meet said demand or demands. Should the sum in the hands of the said Des Moines Company or its agents be insufficient to meet the amount due under this agreement, and the same shall still remain unpaid, said Des Moines Company shall have the right to exclude the said delinquent tenant company from said premises, and the company so failing to pay shall at the option of the said Des Moines Company, forfeit all rights under this agreement, and the said Des Moines Company may thereupon, with the consent of the remaining tenant companies herein, transfer and assign the rights of the company so failing, to any other party or parties, for such sum as it may determine, and the same may be thereafter held and enjoyed by the said assignee or assignees; but it is understood and agreed that nothing herein shall prevent the said Des Moines Company from enforcing its claim or claims against any delinquent lessee or lessees, by any proper action, either 828 at law or in equity, to recover any amount which may be at any time due and unpaid, in the event that the said Des Moines Company shall so elect.

Section VII. The cost and expense of operating the engine houses and their appurtenances, and each of them, including the cost of turning and housing engines, furnishing water and sand, and of wiping and washing and firing up, shall be borne by each of the tenant companies herein named in such proportion as the number of road engines of each company in and out of said engine house during the period for which said cost and expense is made up, bears to all the engines of the tenant companies in and out of the same.

The cost and expense of operating and repairing the passenger station, including the cost of heating, lighting, cleaning and also the salaries and wages of all the agents and servants there employed, less any amounts paid by other tenants for use of said station, shall be borne by each of the tenant companies herein named, in such proportion as the number of passenger cars of each, in and out of said station during the period for which such cost and expenses are made up bears to the total number of passenger cars of all said tenant companies in and out of said station during said period.

The cost and expense of operating and repairing the freight house, including the cost of loading and unloading all freight handled at the request of either of the tenant companies herein named, and also the salaries and wages of all agents and servants there employed, by the Des Moines Company 829 shall be borne by each of the tenant companies herein named, in such proportion as the number of freight cars of each tenant company in and out of said terminals, during the period for which such cost and expenses are made up, bears to the total number of freight cars of each (said) tenant company in and out of said terminals during said period.

All repairs to engines and cars shall be charged for and paid by each of said companies for which the work is done on the basis of the actual cost thereof to the Des Moines Company, and all services rendered, supplies and labor furnished to any of the tenant companies, parties hereto, for their own benefit, and which are not properly a portion of the joint expenses, shall be charged directly to said company on such equal and equitable terms as may be agreed upon between the Superintendent of the Des Moines Company and the Superintendents of the respective companies for which the services are rendered, or the supplies furnished, subject, however, to the approval of the Executive Committee.

Section VIII. The said terminal property hereby leased shall be used by the said tenant companies for all their trains entering or departing from said City of Des Moines, Iowa.

Section IX. The Directors of the Des Moines Company shall annually appoint an Executive Committee of three, upon which the Wabash Company, or its successors shall have a representative (to be selected by it), so long as (they, or either of them) use the terminal property hereunder.

Section X. The management of the depot grounds and terminal facilities, including station buildings, tracks, roundhouses, shops, etc., shall be in charge of a Superintendent, who shall be unanimously selected by the Executive Committee. Said Superintendent shall, in the performance of his duties, be governed by such reasonable regulations as may from time to time be established by said Executive Committee, approved by the Board of Directors.

Section XI. The salary of said Superintendent shall be fixed by the Executive Committee, subject to the approval of the Board, and the compensation of other agents and employes shall not be higher than is paid by railroad companies in the vicinity for similar services.

Section XII. Said Executive Committee, subject to the (approval of the) Board, shall make, publish and enforce such rules and regulations for the use, management and operation of said terminal properties, including stations, depots, depot grounds, yards and tracks, by all the parties hereto, as it may from time to time consider necessary.

Section XIII. The Des Moines Company shall keep accurate books of account of the various items of interest, 830 insurance, taxes, construction, improvement, operation, maintenance and repairs, and other disbursements upon and about the premises embraced in this agreement, and said books shall show the amount of work done for and fuel, or other material furnished to each of the said tenant companies, and the amount of fuel or other material received from each of said companies; and said books shall give such other details as will at all times enable the said tenant companies to make accurate settlements of their accounts, as provided in this agreement; and said books may at all proper and reasonable hours be examined and inspected by the respective Superintendents, Auditors or Treasurers of said tenant companies, or by an authorized accountant.

Section XIV. The said Des Moines Company shall also keep an accurate record of all the engines and cars of each tenant company arriving at and departing from said terminal station or said depot grounds, transfers and yards, and the cars of foreign roads that may be switched on to or from said terminals, for the benefit of the said tenant companies or others, and of all the engines which have been housed in said engine houses in each month; and as hereinbefore provided, said Des Moines Company shall furnish to the said tenant companies a full, true and detailed statement of all the expenditures made, and of all the fuel and other supplies used, delivered and received, of all the cars and engines received, handled or switched, of all work done or repairs made, and of all the engines housed and other expenses connected with the operation of said property during the month next preceding.

831 Section (15) All damages which may be received by any engine or engines, car or cars, while being moved by the said Des Moines Company for the aforesaid tenant companies or either of them at or upon any part of the premises embraced in this agreement, shall be repaired by the Des Moines Company, and the cost of such repairs shall be deemed an operating expense and borne and paid by the said tenant companies on a wheelage basis.

Section (16) All damages to property caused by any engine or engines, car or cars of the tenant companies occupying said terminals while being switched, managed and controlled or under the management and control of the Des Moines Company, or by any imperfection in the track or tracks laid on said premises and all injuries which may at any time be received by any person or persons, including employes, in, about, around or upon said terminal station, depot grounds, tracks, yards, shops, round houses, transfers, etc., caused through or by the said Des Moines Company or any of its agents, officers or servants, shall, if settled at all, be adjusted and settled by said Des Moines Company, and the sum thus paid in settlement or settlements, or as damages, if not settled, shall be considered as a part of the expenses of operating said terminals, and shall be divided and paid upon said wheelage basis, as herein defined.

Provided, however, that the said tenant companies and each of them using said terminal facilities hereunder, shall at its own cost and expense, bear, settle and pay all damages to property belonging to the parties hereto, or to third parties (persons) and all injuries to persons when said damages or injuries

832 are done to or by its own trains while said trains are being moved by its own engines and are being operated and controlled by its own crews, unless such damages or injuries are occasioned by the act, neglect or fault, of the employes or servants of the said Des Moines Company or by some imperfection in its track or tracks, machinery, tools, appliances, apparatus, etc.; and in case such damages or injuries are so occasioned by the act, negligence or fault of the servants of the said Des Moines Company, or by any imperfection in its said tracks, machinery, tools, appliances, apparatus, etc., then said payment or payments shall be made by the said Des Moines Company, and shall be considered as a part of the expenses of said terminals, and shall be divided and paid upon a wheelage basis, as herein defined.

Section (17) It is further agreed by and between the said Des Moines Company and each of said tenant Companies that either of said tenant companies may sell, assign and transfer to any one railway company all its rights under this agreement, or it may mortgage to any one party all its interest and right under this contract; but it shall not subdivide, sublet, mortgage or assign to any other company or person a portion of its said rights and privileges herein, and any assignment, mortgage or lease made by any one of said tenant companies which may be held sufficient to admit its assignee, mortgagee, or lessee, or their assigns to the possession of said property, shall be held sufficient to exclude and shall exclude the company making such lease, mortgage, or assignment from its rights and privileges in and upon said property under this contract; but this clause shall not be so construed as 833 to prevent either of said tenant companies from contracting to do the business or handling with its own engines the traffic or cars of any other railroad company to and from said city upon such terms as the said Des Moines Company may approve, provided the line of such other railroad company connects with the line of such tenant company not less than twenty miles from said City of Des Moines.

Section (18) Interest on bonds hereafter issued by the Des Moines Company shall not be reckoned under the first paragraph of Section Two hereof, unless such bonds were issued with the consent of the party sought to be charged with such interest.

Section (19) It is further understood and agreed that this contract is entered into in lieu of and as a substitute
834 for a certain agreement entered into on the 10th day of May 1889, between the Des Moines Union Railway Company, the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company, and the St. Louis,

Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, and the said last named agreement is, by the execution hereof, forever terminated, and for the purpose of quieting all controversies with respect to the full execution and performance of said last named contract by each of the parties thereto, it is stipulated and agreed that the same has been fully performed: Provided, however, that all unsettled claims and accounts between the parties hereto shall be adjusted and settled in like manner as though they had arisen under this agreement; and that the capital stock of the said Des Moines Union Railway Company therein mentioned, is now rightfully held as follows, to-wit:

Mr. O. D. Ashley, President,
Wabash R. R. Company,

Dear Sir,—

There has been considerable delay in preparing the Statement of Condition of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, for the purpose of having its Bonds listed. However,

I have finally gotten together the statistics which I think you will need. I enclose them to you herein with this suggestion, that you look it over, and use the facts therein contained for the purpose of preparing a statement which will comply with the requirements of the Committee on Stock List.

When you have this statement prepared as you think will be satisfactory, if you will send it to me, I will have six copies gotten up in as good shape as I can, and will have them signed and sent to you without delay. I am unable to procure a better map of the city of Des Moines than the one which I now send to you. I have delineated in red the right of way owned by this Company, together with several pieces of acre property. It is as near accurate as possible to show on a map made on such a small scale.

Hoping that the facts which I now enclose will enable you to prepare a satisfactory statement, and very much regretting the delay, I am,

Yours truly,

(Signed) F. M. HUBBELL,
Secretary.

F. M. Hubbell, Esq., Secretary,
Des Moines Union Ry. Co.,
Des Moines, Iowa.

Dear Sir:—

Your favor of the 18th of July with enclosure was received just on the eve of my departure for a short vacation, otherwise I would have replied before.

I enclose draft of application for listing of your bonds. In addition to this, it will be well for you to have prepared a blue print, which will show in some detail the land and tracks owned by the Terminal Co. This you or your representative can bring on at the proper time. Also please send the latest financial statement of the Company's condition. If there are any statements in this proposed application which are not true, please change them, as the examination made by the Committee is very searching, and it would not do to make any mistake. The Committee will also want copies of any agreements which you may have with the Tenant-Companies.

Please get the application into shape and we will present it and let you know when you shall be required to appear before the Committee,

Yours truly,

Committee on Stock List.

New York Stock Exchange.

March 1st, 1895.

The Committee on Stock List meets each Monday at 3:15 P. M., and all applications to list new securities must be filed with the Secretary of the Exchange, on or before the Wednesday previous.

Requirements from Applicants.

In all cases of application for placing either Stock or Bonds of Railroad Companies on the List, it is required that there shall be filed as above stated Statement of the location and description of the property, and when possible a map should be furnished. Statements should give Title of the Company; when organized, and by what authority; route from ..... to .....; miles of road completed and in operation, and contemplated extension; gauge; iron rails, steel rails, equipment; liabilities and assets; earnings; number of shares and par value; a list of its officers, etc.; office of the Company; transfer office and registry. If reorganization of an old road, the particulars should be stated. Six copies of this statement in type, or made by typewriter, and signed by an officer of the Company, should be furnished to the Committee.

When application is made to place the securities of any railroad corporation upon the List, the applicant must pre-843 sent a certificate from a Civil Engineer stating the actual physical condition of the property at a recent date.

Where applications are made to list securities of a corporation, which has been insolvent and has been reorganized, this Exchange will require a full and complete Financial Statement of said corporation for a period covering at least one year before its reorganization; i. e., a detailed statement of its earnings and receipts from every source, a detailed account of all expenditures, and the amount of its outstanding indebtedness in detail of every description, and a balance sheet of its books; also the amount and description of the various securities issued by such reorganized corporation, and the purposes, in detail, for which they are issued.

Applications to place Bonds on the List (Six copies required) must give a description of the Bonds, viz.: The amount of the issue; the date of issue; the maturity; the par value of each kind of Bond issued; the series of numbers under each mortgage; the rate of interest; when payable; the place of payment; the place of transfer, if with privilege of registration; and the names of the trustees. Six copies of the mortgage and other printed documents must also be furnished, and the issue must be only on such portions of road as are actually completed.

The Committee must also be furnished with a certificate from the County Clerk of each County in which the mortgaged property is located, that such mortgage has been recorded in each of such Counties; or should the laws of the State 844 in which the same is located not require a record to be made in the several Counties, a certificate of the Secretary of the State, of the proper record of the same; or a copy of the Mortgage with the certificates of record properly endorsed thereon, certified by the Trustee to be a true copy.

Applications to list securities of Industrial Companies must be accompanied with a copy of Charter or Act of Incorporation; By-Laws of the Company; opinion of Counsel that the Company has been legally organized and that the securities have been legally issued; a full description of the property, real, personal and leased; opinion of counsel that real estate owned is free and clear, except as to liens stated; appraisal of disinterested parties as to market value of real estate and personal property; report of responsible expert accountants, showing results of business each year for the period of at least two consecutive years if possible; and a balance sheet showing assets and liabilities of recent date.

Applications to list securities of other Companies must be accompanied with full information as to property, financial condition, and results of business as indicated above.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of One Hundred Dollars, to cover the cost of printing and other expenses of the Committee, said fee to become the property of the Exchange, whether the application is accepted or rejected. On application for listing additional amounts of Stock or Bonds already on the List, the fee is Fifty Dollars.

845 Checks should be drawn to the order of the Chairman of the Committee on Stock List, to whom all applications should be addressed.

Trustees of Mortgages.

It is recommended that a Trust Company or other Corporation be appointed a Trustee of all Mortgages, but when a State Law requires a local individual Trustee, then a Trust Company or a Corporation be appointed as Co-Trustee.

The Committee does not approve of an officer of a corporation being a Trustee of its securities.

In all cases where two or more liens have been placed upon the property of any corporation seeking the listing of its securities upon the Exchange, each deed of trust must be made to a Trustee or Trustees separate and distinct from those to whom the other mortgages have been issued.

The Trustee must present a certificate acknowledging the acceptance of the trust and giving the numbers and amounts of Bonds executed in accordance with the terms of the Mortgage, and in case of additions, the Trustee must certify to the completion of the portion of the road covered by the additional Bonds.

It is requested that a Trustee shall furnish opinion of Counsel as follows:

"We have examined the Mortgage, dated .....18..., made by the ..... Company to the ..... Trust Company of ..... as Trustee, to secure an issue of ..... Bonds of said Company to an amount not to exceed $..... We find the action of the Directors and Stockholders in respect to this 846 Mortgage to be in conformity with the laws of the State of .....; and the Mortgage and Bonds therein provided for to be, in all respects, valid and binding obligations of the Company."

Engraved Certificates Required.

The face of every Bond, Coupon, or Certificate of Stock must be printed from steel plates which have been engraved in the best manner, with such varieties of work as will afford the greatest security against counterfeiting.

For each document or instrument there must be at least two steel plates, viz.: A Tint plate from which will be printed an anti-photographic color, so arranged as to underlie important portions of the face printing, and a Face plate containing the vignettes and lettering of the descriptive or promissory portion of the document, to be printed in black, or in black mixed with a color.

These two printings must be so made upon the papers that the combined effect of the whole, if photographed, would be a confused mass of lines and forms, to effectually secure against counterfeiting by scientific processes.

It is required that a sample of each issue of Stock or Bonds shall be shown to the Committee (to be left with the Committee, if possible), so that it may be ascertained whether proper precautions have been taken against forgery; and no form of Stock Certificate or Bond will be accepted unless it has been carefully engraved by some responsible Bank-Note Engraving Company, whose work is admitted by the Exchange.

Registration.

The Constitution of the Exchange provides that all active Stocks must be registered at some Institution satisfactory to the Committee; and each application must be accompanied by a letter from the Registrar stating the amount of Stock registered at the time of application, and also by "The Form of Agreement with Registrars," duly executed, provided such form has not been already filed with the Committee.

It is required that the same Trust Company, or other satisfactory Agency, should not be both Registrar and Transfer Agent. The duties of such offices should be performed by different Companies or Agencies.

In any case of increase of Capital Stock, except for Convertible Bonds already listed, at least thirty days' notice of such increase must be given in writing to the Stock Exchange, and application must be made through the Committee on Stock List to the Governing Committee to have such new Stock declared a good delivery, and the Registrar is not authorized to register the new Stock until notified by this Committee that the Stock has been listed.

All Signatures upon Securities must be written. Stamped Signatures will not be accepted by the Committee.

Certificates of Stock.

In preparing Certificates of Stock, it should be borne in mind that the Power of Attorney endorsed upon the same must contain a full bill of sale, must be irrevocable, and should contain a power of substitution.

848 After any Stock has once been placed on the List, any change in the form of Certificate, or place of Registry must receive the consent of this Committee, or the Stock will be liable to be stricken from the List.

In any case, the Governing Committee may, if reasons for so doing shall appear to exist, refuse to make new issues of Stock a good delivery, and to allow dealings therein, or in the whole Capital Stock, or in the Bonds of any Company, either for a time or permanently, as the case may seem to require Certificates of Deposit in Trust.

Institutions, Firms or Corporations which are depositaries of securities under plans of reorganization, protection or associate action, are requested to accept on deposit only such securities as are good delivery in this Exchange, provided, however, that in any case where said depositaries find it necessary to accept securities which are not a good delivery, they shall issue therefor a distinctive certificate which will indicate such fact.

When bonds are deposited with Institutions, Firms or Corporations, which are depositaries under plans of reorganization, protection, or associate action, certificates therefor shall be considered as representing the deposit of coupon bonds. When certificates are issued for deposit of registered bonds, said certificates must bear on their face evidence of such fact.

Recommendations.

This Exchange recommends to the various corporations whose securities are here dealt in, that they shall print, publish and distribute to stockholders, at least fifteen days 849 prior to annual meetings, a full report of their operations during the preceding fiscal year; together with complete and detailed statements of all income and expenditures, and a balance sheet showing their financial condition at the close of the given period. And this Exchange urges the stockholders of the several corporations, to take such action as may be necessary for the accomplishment of this recommendation.

George W. Ely,
Secretary

SALEM T. RUSSELL,
Chairman.

April 15, 1896.

Mr. O. D. Ashley, President,
Wabash R. R. Co., #195 Broadway,
New York, N. Y.

Dear Sir,—I have your letter of recent date, in regard to listing Des Moines Union Railway bonds.

In reply have to say we have had an engineer at work for several months making an accurate map of the Des Moines Union Ry. Company's property, locating its tracks, etc., the work being done by actual surveys and measurements of the ground. This map it is expected will be completed within a week or two, then we will have blue prints made of it in small sections so we can furnish the Committee of the Stock Exchange with a good map of the property. As I understand it, a map of the property is required, and the delay has been due to the fact that we wanted to furnish a good map. I will not lose sight of this matter, and hope in a very short time to have everything complete.

If you should say to me that the making of an accurate and elaborate map is not required, I could probably complete the other data and send it to you very soon.

Yours truly,

(Signed) F. M. HUBBELL,
Secretary.

Dear Sir:—

I have yours of the 15th. I do not remember any stipulation in the Stock Exchange circular which requires a map, as stated by you, but it may be that you are right. At all events as the work is well under way and can be completed within a short time, it will be advisable to wait until you can furnish it with the other information. When you are ready for this I will try to aid you in listing the bonds of the Des Moines Union Railway Co. The importance of this recognition by the Stock Exchange I think you fully appreciate.

Yours truly,

Sept. 28, 1897.

Mr. O. D. Ashley, President,
195 Broadway, New York.

Dear Sir:—

I have today sent to you another blue print showing the right-of-way and lands of the Des Moines Union Ry. Company, also a copy of the report which the Des Moines Union has just made to the Railroad Commissioners of Iowa. If this report is not what you want to give to the Committee of the Stock Exchange, then will you not please make out from this report such facts as you want to have furnished to the Committee of the Stock Exchange, and send it to me and I will sign and return it to you.

I also enclose herewith a request made by the Des Moines Union Company to the Committee of the Stock Exchange, to have 800 Des Moines Union Ry. Company bonds listed. As I understand it, you now have several copies of the terminal contract with the Chicago Great Western Company, copies of the terminal contract recently entered into by and between the Des Moines Union, the Wabash, and the Des Moines, Northern & Western Companies, two blue prints, a full report of the Company made to the Railroad Commissioners, and our application to have the bonds listed, which I think is all that is required.

I now enclose draft on New York to your order for $100, which I understand is the amount required to be paid 853 to the Committee whether the bonds are listed or not. Kindly receipt and return the voucher to me, and oblige,

Yours truly,

(Signed) F. M. HUBBELL,

Committee on Stock List,
New York Stock Exchange.

A-1971.

Des Moines Union Railway Company.

Des Moines, Iowa,
September 28, 1897.

The Des Moines Union Railway Company hereby respectfully asks to have placed on the stock list of the New York Stock Exchange 800 of its First Mortgage 5% Bonds for $1,000 each, Nos. 1 to 800, amounting to $800,00. The bonds bear semi-annual coupons, payable May and November 1, at the office of the Central Trust Co., New York. The bonds are secured by a first mortgage to Central Trust Company of New York, dated November 1, 1887, maturing November 1, 1917, bearing interest at the rate of 5 per cent per annum. The principal and interest of said bonds are payable in gold coin of the present standard. The principal may be registered at the office of the Wabash Railroad Company, 195 Broadway, New York.

The Des Moines Union Railway Company is a corporation organized in 1884 under the laws of the State of Iowa, with an authorized capital of $2,000,000 ($400,000 issued) shares of $100 each, and "the objects of the corporation and the general nature of the business to be transacted are the purchase, lease, construction, ownership, maintenance and operation of a system of railway in, around and about the City of Des Moines, Polk County, Iowa, including the construction, purchase, ownership, maintenance and use of a union depot, depots, freight houses, railway shops, repair shops, stock 855 yards, and whatsoever other things may be useful or convenient for the operation of railways at terminal stations, as well as the transfer and switching of cars from the line or depot of one railway to another, or from the various manufactories, warehouses, elevators, or other sources of traffic to each other or to any of the railways or depots thereof, now constructed or hereafter to be constructed in or around said City of Des Moines; also to lease terminal facilities to and furnish and perform terminal services for all railways whose lines reach or pass through or near the said city of Des Moines; and the corporation shall possess all the powers conferred upon railway corporations by the laws of the State of Iowa, including the power to condemn private property for its use."

The Des Moines Union Railway Company is the absolute owner of a right-of-way across the original city of Des Moines from the east to west, a distance of four miles, together with 25 acres of land not laid out into lots, all of which is centrally located in said City of Des Moines.

The Company owns over five miles of main track and branches, 2 miles of second main track and 7 7/100 miles of yard tracks and sidings, the bridge across the Des Moines River, 3 switching engines, the passenger and freight depot, round houses, and other buildings appurtenant to the conduct of the business of the Company as now carried on.

The terminal facilities offered by this Company are at present shared by the Des Moines & St. Louis R. R. (owned by the Wabash R. R. Co.) the Chicago Great Western Railway, and the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad. Each of these companies for itself has agreed to pay monthly, as rental for the facilities used, a sum equal to one month's 856 interest on the outstanding bonds, besides they pay for their proportion of the expense of operation. In addition, the Company derives considerable revenue for switching cars for other railroads (not tenants) and in rents for the use of various portions of the property.

The office of the Company is at Des Moines, Iowa. Herewith find the following papers, viz: Six copies of mortgage, one of which bears the certificate of the Recorder of Polk County, Iowa, respecting the recording of same, and has attached the certificate of the Central Trust Company of New York, signifying its acceptance of the trust; blue print showing location of tracks and real estate of company.

Dear Sir:

I have just received from the Central Trust Company their certificate as Trustee, in which they state that they have "authenticated and issued" 628 of the First Mortgage Bonds. You have explained in a letter to Mr. Ashley the reason for the difference which exists between the balance sheet and the Central Trust Company's certificate; but in order to obviate an explanation to the Listing Committee of the New York Stock Exchange, it has been thought advisable here to add $59,000 to the cost of road and equipment in the general balance sheet and to increase the amount of First Mortgage Bonds issued from 569 to 628 inasmuch as the Stock Exchange, in view of the certificate of the Central Trust Company, will insist that the 59 bonds referred to are issued.

I enclose herewith new balance sheet and new statement of receipts and expenditures. You will note in the general balance sheet that I have consolidated the "Bills Payable" into one item and have called "Surplus Earnings" "Profit & Loss." You will note also a slight change made in the statement of 866 receipts and expenditures. This is thought best so as to make it appear on the face of the statement that the year's operation of the Company yielded a surplus above expenses, and dispenses with the explanation which you have made on your statement.

If you approve of these alterations will you be good enough to wire me on receipt of this letter so I can furnish the Stock Exchange with new statements made out, as corrected above.

Yours truly,

(Signed) J. C. OTTESON, Secretary.

P. S. Mr. Ashley desires me to say that there has been a small lot of bonds of the Des Moines Northern & Western offered here as low as 45. He thought you would like to know of this.

I note what you say about Des Moines, Northern & Western R. R. bonds being offered as low as 45. Please let me know how large a block was offered at that price and the name of the person who made the offer.

Mr. F. C. Hubbell,
Pres't, D. M. U. Ry. Co.,

Dear Sir:—

Replying to yours of the 19th. I am hardly prepared to advise fully regarding the rebuilding of the D. M. U. shops, as I am utterly in the dark as to the amount which would be received from the Insurance Company on account of the fire and damage to tools.

The character and dimensions of the shop necessary at Des Moines will depend entirely upon the work which is to be performed there, and naturally it would take a much larger and more expensive shop if all of the general road repair and machine work of the D. M. N. & W. is to be done there, than it would if the repairs of the D. M. U. Co. and such repairs to the engines of the tenant lines as are rendered necessary to take care of engines running in and out of that terminal, were simply taken care of.

If the requirements of the D. M. N. & W. system are to be met, then the D. M. N. & W. should pay such proportion of the cost of this shop and tools as would be fair and proper, and also pay either a fair rental for the general additional shop room and yard space required on account of these additional repairs, or such proportion of the general and other expenses of the shop as would justify the Des Moines 870 Union in going to this additional expense on account of the D. M. N. & W.

I do not wish to be small in regard to this matter but it is certainly only fair that the D. M. N. & W. should pay more for the special service it is receiving at the shop, etc. than it has been paying in the past.

Yours truly,

J. RAMSEY, JR.,

Dear Sir:—

Replying to attached will say the monthly bills we render against your company show every item of expense at the round house and shops, including all work, material, and supplies which are charged against the Des Moines Union and Wabash Companies. Do I understand that you want us to make you a copy of bills rendered against the Des Moines, Northern & Western R. R. for labor and material on their engines? This, I feel, is hardly justified as each month you check our original record and have full access to the books of the company. The only objection I have to doing it is that it will require another report to be made and as the several tenants are rather free in their requests for reports from us, we dislike to add a new report unless it is absolutely necessary. Please advise.

Dear Sir:—

The attached papers were held in my office expecting to take this subject up with you personally when you were in Des Moines, but were overlooked, owing to your anxiety to get away.

Mr. Wheeler has a location free of rent on our tracks, furnished by F. M. Hubbell. Lumber or other material billed to him at Des Moines is placed on his switch and by him unloaded. He is a builder of bridges and deals in southern oak. When he makes a sale or when he needs some material for building his own bridges, he naturally reships from these yards. If the shipment goes forward via the C. G. W., Wabash, or D. M. N. & W. he has the privilege of loading without any charge for switching. If, however, he loads for the C. R. I. & P., C. B. & Q., or C. W. N. W. it is only fair that he pay a switching charge for the service. I am certain that this would be the rule under similar circumstances if Mr. Wheeler was located on any of the other lines. We wish to do whatever we can to help your St. Louis business, but do not see why we should perform this kind of service free and it cer-874 tainly is not a service which can be properly termed a wheelage item because of not going out over your road. The question would naturally arise how many wheels would we be entitled to charge. Please let me hear from you.

Feby. 7, 1898.

Mr. J. Ramsey, Jr.,
V. P. & G. M. Wabash R. R.,
St. Louis, Mo.

Dear Sir:—

To-day the City Council passed the Des Moines Union Depot Ordinance substantially the same as the copy which I sent to you in New York. The only amendment of interest provides that the east and west street running from Fifth to Sixth street shall be thirty feet wide instead of twenty-two feet. The Council wished to make the street thirty-six feet wide and passed the amendment in that way, but upon our absolute refusal to take the ordinance providing for a thirty-six foot street, we agreed on thirty feet and they reconsidered the amendment and passed the ordinance that way.

I consider that we have a valuable franchise and that it is in better shape than any previous ordinance which we have ever introduced. The only party who could have made us any trouble on this ordinance is Kingman & Company owning lots 5 and 6 in block 9, Original Town of Fort Des Moines. They were here and made a very stubborn fight and in order to pull their fire, I to-day bought their property for our individual account, paying them $27,500.00 cash for the same. This may not be of any interest to you from a Wabash standpoint, yet it will result in relieving the terminal company from an expensive law suit.

The ordinance provides that we accept it within five days and as I wish to go east early this week, I shall file an 877 acceptance of same before I leave town in order to complete the contract. You will note the ordinance provides that the railway company will assume and pay all damages which abutting owners may succeed in establishing against the city. This is a common provision in all similar ordinances, but the Supreme Court of our state has for years held that there can be no damages as a matter of law. All the attorneys in Des Moines are agreed on this proposition, so we have nothing to fear from that section of the ordinance.

I will have the architect go ahead with the detail drawings at once, conforming the building to your suggestions made when Mr. F. M. Hubbell and myself were in St. Louis.

With respect to facilities during the building of the new station, would say we now have part of the permanent platforms in place and we can build in Sixth St. a wooden structure one story high, which these platforms will serve, which ought not to cost us to exceed three hundred to five hundred dollars, and which will be suitable for temporary waiting rooms and ticket room. We can move the present baggage room westerly from its present site and abandon the brick structure now occupied by us as a depot so that the contractors in building the new structure will not be interrupted in any way by the old building or the traveling public. I can so arrange the premises that our passengers can be kept from any dangerous contact with the materials or the operations connected with 878 building the new structure and when the new building is finished, we can tear down our temporary wooden structure and the material will all be useable. We will move all our offices out of the depot at an early day, taking some quarters farther up town. I think Mr. Wagner can furnish space at the freight house for your dispatcher's office if you desire to avail yourself of the same.

I trust you will agree with our steps. If, however, you have any changes to suggest, please let me hear from you very promptly.

Yours truly,

F. C. HUBBELL,
Prest.

The Wabash Railroad Company.

General Solicitor's office.

Wells H. Blodgett, Gen'l Solicitor.

St. Louis, Nov. 23, 1898.

Joseph Ramsey, Jr.,
Vice President & General Manager.

Dear Sir:—

I return herewith draft of contract between Des Moines Union Railway Company and Iowa Central Railway Company, for use of the Des Moines terminals. The contract, with one or two exceptions, seems all right.

Section 15 seems to introduce something new, and I do not know exactly what it means. It seems to contemplate the receipt of revenue by the Terminal Company from depot privileges, rents of offices in stations, switching, and for the use of real estate, and provides that those revenues shall be used by the Terminal Company either as a working capital; in the payment of its floating debt, or the enlargement or betterment of its terminal properties.

Now, if the Terminal Company, has, under its several contracts already made, revenues from the several sources named, it would seem all right for it to apply them to the discharge of the indebtedness named, or to the betterment of its terminals. But why put anything about that matter in this contract? The Terminal Company, like any other corporation, or individual, has the right, without any covenant to that effect with a tenant, to use its income in paying its debts, or improving its property. So, if that section is merely intended to give the Terminal Company the right to pay its own debts with its own money, I think it might as well be left out. If, on the other hand, this new section is intended by any sort of inference or construction, to confer upon the Terminal Company a right to collect rentals and make switching charges that are not authorized under contracts with its present tenants, then I think it might as well be omitted, because if anything is to be done that will change their agreements or the relations of the present tenants to the Terminal Company, the matter is one to be taken up directly with the present tenants, and whatever changes are to be made, that are to affect them, should be made in their contracts, rather than in this one. As to whether there should be any changes in the existing contracts, I now express no opinion.

Again, there is apparently a conflict between Sections Two and Three and Section Sixteen of the agreement as written. Section 2 provides, "that at the expiration of each month there shall be ascertained the expense of maintaining, repairing, and renewing the terminal property, including the maintenance, repair and renewal of * * depots," which language includes, as I would think, both passenger depots and freight depots. The same section also provides that "there shall likewise be ascertained the costs and expenses, of every nature, connected with the operation of said terminal property including freight and passenger depots."

The 3rd section then provides that having ascertained these amounts, there shall be deducted from the sum of all said expenses, the rental paid by the "Great Western Company," and that the Iowa Company shall then pay that part of the remainder, which bears the same proportion to the whole of said remainder, that the wheelage of the Iowa Company bears to the entire wheelage of the Wabash Company, the Des Moines Northern & Western Company and the Iowa Company.

Now it seems to me as though the above sections 2 and 3 were complete and were intended to fix, among other things, the exact measure to which the Iowa Company was to contribute to the cost of maintaining, repairing, renewing and operating the Passenger Station.

But, you will notice, that in Section Sixteen the extent to which the Iowa Company is to contribute to the expenses of the Passenger Station, is specifically defined and limited to the items there enumerated. As to whether the covenants in Sections 2 and 3, or those in Section 16, should prevail, I express no opinion. I simply say, I do not think they are the same. If they are, the same, then one of them should be stricken out. And if they are not the same, and it is the desire to retain the provisions of Section 16, then Section 2 should be so amended as to make that fact clearly appear.

I think that might be done by inserting after the word "Company" in the first line of Sec. 2, the words, "except as provided in Section 16." The first paragraph of Section 2 would then read as follows:

"Sec. 2. The Iowa Company, except as provided in Section 16, agrees to pay to the said Des Moines Company, monthly, a sum of money to be ascertained as follows, to-wit:"

682 Not being familiar with the reasons for the insertion of Section 16, I am not prepared to give any opinion with respect to it, but, in the absence of some very good reason, that has not occurred to me, I would think the contract more complete and satisfactory with Section 16 omitted.

Very truly yours,

WELLS H. BLODGETT.

Dear Sir:—

I have your two letters of November 22nd. We have sent to Mr. Myers all of the right of way deeds and condemnation proceedings that we have of the Fonda line and the Boone line, together with the record books of the right of way of both lines, also a map of the Fonda line. There is no map in existence of the Boone line.

I herewith enclose you a copy of the articles of incorporation of the Des Moines Union Railway Company.

In regard to the Des Moines Union Ry. Company's property, will say that it extends across the city of Des Moines as it existed prior to 1890, viz. from the east line of section 2, township 78, range 24, to west 28th street, a distance of 4 miles.

The recital in the terminal contract adopted May 10th 1889 is an error.

The Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad extends from west 28th street to Fonda, with a branch from Clive to Boone.

Its total mileage is 145.643 miles. It owns $100,000. of 894 the capital stock of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, being one-fourth of all of the capital stock of that company outstanding.

Kindly acknowledge receipt.

Dear Sir:—

I observe that the contract between the Des Moines Union Railway Company and the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Company is only for 20 years. I think it should be for 50 years. Have you any objection to extending it for so long?

Dear Sir:—

I have yours of the 2nd inst. asking for a copy of our express contract. I now enclose to you a copy of that contract.

In regard to the ownership of the road between Farnham Street and 28th Street, there is this to be said, that a part of the right-of-way was deeded to the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Ry. Company, and a part of it to the Des Moines Union Ry. Company. Another contract stands in the name of James F. How, as Trustee for the Des Moines & St. Louis R. R. Company, and certain other rights were acquired by the Des Moines & St. Louis R. R. Company, in a contract made with the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Ry. Company.

I will take with me to New York, a map of this portion of the road, showing as well as I can, about the right-of-way deeds.

As the Des Moines Union Ry. Company has title to by far the greater part of the right-of-way to 28th Street, it has been understood between the Des Moines Union Ry. Company and the Des Moines, N. & W. R. R. Company, that the Des Moines Union's property extends to 28th Street, and that the Des Moines, N. & W. R. R. Company's property commences at the same point.

900 We have no trackage contracts except the lease with the Des Moines Union Ry. Company, a copy of which we gave to your Mr. Adams.

Yours truly,

(Signed) F. M. HUBBELL.

Delivered a map of D. M. Union from 12th Str. to 28th Str. to Roswell Miller and Frank S. Bond in New York, Dec. 8, 1898. It had names of grantee on each tract.

Dear Bro. & Son:

Miller got in this A. M., 11 o'clock and said he was ready to pay if I would write him a letter that the D. M. N. & W. R. R. Co. should have a contract with D. M. Union same as the present for 50 or 100 years. I told him that would not give the stock a chance to grow in value, besides I could not speak for Mr. Ramsey, that R. would no doubt want as good a contract as Miller got. Miller & Bond pressed me hard to sign a letter which would make the Union stock worthless in our hands. I was not willing to do it without consulting you. I have agreed to go and see Mr. Ramsey and try to make a 100 year contract, the compensation to be adjusted every 25 years, but it must also suit us. They thought we wanted the money so bad we would sign the letter. They had all of Dodge's stock and all of Martin's stock and had it reissued to the C. M. & St. P.

Dodge	232,100
$	508,300
Their 40% is	1,749,000
Total owned by C. M. & St. P..	2,257,300
½ of all the stock is	2,186,250
C. M. & St. P. have a majority of ..	$71,050 and also owns $175,600 contributed by Martin & Dodge 902 toward the 15% so they can elect the next Board of Directors of D. M. N. & W. R. R. and two Directors of D. M. Union Ry. in Jany. They are anxious to have the lease made and I have told them that I would go right at it, but not in such a way as to make D. M. Union stock worthless. We must decide now what is necessary to make our stock valuable.

Yours truly,

(Signed) F. M. HUBBELL.

Dear Sir:—

Enclosed herewith I hand you a copy of the contract of the D. M. Union Ry. Co. with the Chicago Great Western and a copy of the Gilcrest and of the Getchell contracts. I will endeavor to have Mr. Cummins write a short opinion respecting both contracts and will send it to you at St. Louis. He is very busy in the trial of some important cases at this time and it is very difficult to get to him. Would thank you very much for prompt reply from Chicago giving me your views.

Dear Sir:—

Hoyt Sherman, Assignee, made a deed to James F. How, Trustee, on the 26th of November, 1883, for the consideration of $2373.00 which deed is recorded in Book 138, Page 13, and covers about three-eighths of a mile of right-of-way in the west part of the city.

We find no deed to the Des Moines Union Railway Company for this piece of land. There was a declaration of trust signed by Mr. How about the year 1882. I wish you would send me a copy of this declaration of trust, and make any suggestions that you think will assist in perfecting the record title to this land, in the Des Moines Union Ry. Company.

Neither this office nor the Chief Engineer's Dept. can find the declaration of trust referred to by Mr. F. M. Hubbell in the accompanying correspondence, covering ⅜ mile of right of way in west part of the City of Des Moines. If Mr. Hubbell can furnish us a better description, giving say the city blocks, if any which are traversed by the right of way, or will give us a description of the property as set out in the deed recorded in Book 138, page 13 we will make an effort to locate it. The only declaration of trust executed by James F. How, trustee, referred to in any records in this office is dated July 19, 1887, and was sent to Mr. W. S. Lincoln Chief Engineer, by Col. How himself on November 27th, 1891, and the property Mr. Hubbell is inquiring about may be included in that declaration of trust but that fact can not be ascertained until a more definite description of the lots and blocks is given.

I have yours of December 22. The description of the land conveyed by Hoyt Sherman, Assignee, to James F. How, Trustee, dated November 26th, 1883, recorded in Polk County records Book 138, Page 13 is as follows:

"Commencing at a point on the section line eighteen hundred and eighty-three feet south of northwest corner of Section No. Eight in Township No. Seventy-eight (78) North Range No. Twenty-four (24) West; thence north 61½° east on a line parallel to and fifty (50) feet from the center line of the St. Louis, Des Moines and Northern R. R. Track as now constructed Five Hundred and Seventy-eight (578) feet; thence north 64½° east Eight Hundred (800) feet; thence north Fifty-eight 58° east Eight Hundred Seventy-two (872) feet to the east line of lot No. Four (4) of the Official Plat of the North West quarter of said Section No. Eight (8); thence south along said line One Hundred and Twenty-five (125) feet to the north line of the right of way of the C. R. I. & P. R. R. Co.; thence south 55° West along said right of way line (which is 50 feet from center of track) Twenty-three hundred and Thirty (2330) feet to the Section line; thence north along the Section line Three Hundred and fifteen (315) feet to the place of beginning."

I think there was a declaration of trust signed by Mr. How, dated January 2, 1882. I have not a copy of it but I find among the records of the Des Moines Union Company, notice of the existence of such a declaration of trust.

If you find that the declaration of trust dated July 19, 1887 covers the description above given, I would be obliged to you if you would furnish me a copy of that declaration of trust.

I herewith return the letter of Mr. Lloyd.

Terminal Contract.

between the

and the

Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Company.

This Agreement, made and entered into this..... day of December, A. D. 1898, by and between the Des Moines Union

Railway Company, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Iowa, and hereinafter termed "Des Moines Company", party of the first part, and the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Company, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Iowa, and hereinafter termed "Des Moines, Northern & Western Company," party of the second part, Witnesseth: That

Whereas the Des Moines Company now owns and operates a terminal line of railway in the City of Des Moines, Iowa, extending from the east line of Section two (2), Township seventy-eight (78), Range twenty-four (24), in said city of Des Moines, westward to West Twenty-eighth Street in said City, and has acquired or constructed main and side tracks, depots, depot grounds, lands, yards, shops, round houses, freight houses, and other terminal facilities, and intends to 912 acquire and construct other facilities of that character; and

Whereas the said terminal facilities of the Des Moines Company, or a portion thereof, are now used by each of the following named railroad companies, to-wit: The Wabash Railroad Company, the Chicago Great Western Railway Company and the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Company, under contracts heretofore executed; and

Whereas there now exists a contract, entered into on the 10th day of May, 1888, by and between the said Des Moines Company, the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, The Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company and the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, and continuing for a period of thirty years from the 1st day of May, 1888, providing for the use of said terminal facilities and the compensation to be paid therefor, which last named contract was modified in part and confirmed in part by an agreement entered into on the 31st day of July, 1897, between the said Des Moines Company, the Wabash Railroad Company and the said Des Moines, Northern & Western Company; and

Whereas the parties hereto desire to enter into a contract looking to the use of the said terminals by the said Des Moines, Northern & Western Company for a period of thirty years from and after the expiration of the said agreement so entered into on the 10th day of May, 1889, and expiring 913 on the 30th day of April, A. D. 1918, to the end that during the said period of thirty years the said Des Moines, Northern & Western Company may have and enjoy the right to use the said terminal railway of the said Des Moines Company, or a part thereof, under the terms and conditions hereinafter set forth, and in common with such railway companies as may have now acquired or may hereafter acquire the right to use the same, and so make the terminals of the said Des Moines Company the terminals of the said Des Moines, Northern & Western Company during the whole of said period.

Now Therefore, in consideration of the premises and the mutual covenants and undertakings herein contained, it is agreed between the parties hereto as follows, to-wit:

Section 1. The said Des Moines Company, in consideration of the payments to be made to it by the said Des Moines, Northern & Western Company as hereinafter specified, hereby grants to the said Des Moines, Northern & Western Company the use, for a period of thirty (30) years beginning on the 1st day of May, 1918, in common with such other railway companies as now have or may hereafter acquire the right to use the same, of its said terminal railway, with all the facilities and appurtenances thereunto belonging, except that part of said terminal property, the exclusive use of which has been heretofore granted to the Chicago Great Western Rail-914 way Company under and by virtue of an agreement entered into between the said Des Moines Company and the said Chicago Great Western Railway Company, bearing date July 2nd, A. D. 1896.

The above grant shall include the use of the passenger station buildings now in existence or hereafter constructed, and shall include the right to receive and discharge passengers and baggage, the right to receive and discharge express matter, the use of the said passenger stations by passengers, and the services of the necessary employes, baggagemen and ticket agents, but shall not extend beyond the ordinary use of stations for passenger traffic. It shall also include such terminal tracks, switches, buildings, structures and appurtenances as shall be hereafter added to the said terminal property; provided, however, that if the said Des Moines Company shall exclusively lease any hereafter acquired property to any railway company which may enter said terminals after the date of this contract, no part of the cost of such property shall be considered in determining the rental to be paid by the said Des Moines, Northern & Western Company as hereinafter specified and provided.

And the said Des Moines Company agrees to keep and maintain said terminal property in good condition and repair, and to provide and maintain all such engines, machinery, appliances, buildings and structures, and all such servants 915 and employes, as shall be reasonably necessary for the conduct of its business and the moving and handling of the cars, passenger and freight, of the said Des Moines, Northern & Western Company, and the housing and care of its engines; and the said Des Moines Company further agrees to switch all cars, handle all freight, and house and care for all engines of the said Des Moines Northern & Western Company which may be delivered to it or which may come upon its said property, in so far as the said Des Moines, Northern & Western Company may request it so to do.

Sec. 2. The said Des Moines, Northern & Western Company agrees that it will, in each month of the said period of thirty years, pay to the said Des Moines Company in the manner hereinafter specified a sum of money to be ascertained as follows, to-wit:

First. There shall be ascertained each month the amount required to pay five per centum upon the whole cost to the said Des Moines Company of its said terminal property as it then exists, and one-twelfth thereof, less any deduction hereinafter provided for, shall be payable monthly during the said period to the said Des Moines Company as hereinafter specified; and for the purpose of fixing a basis for the ascertainment of such cost it is expressly agreed between the parties hereto that the cost of the said terminal property at the date of the execution of this contract is One million, one 916 hundred and forty-nine thousand, seven hundred and thirty-one and nine-one-hundredths ($1,149,731.09) dollars, and in ascertaining the cost in the several months during the said period of thirty years there shall be added to the said sum of One million, one hundred and forty-nine thousand seven hundred and thirty-one and nine-one-hundredths ($1,149,731.09) dollars the cost of all additions and betterments made after the date hereof; and it is further expressly agreed by the parties hereto that such additions and betterments shall embrace all those expenditures of the said Des Moines Company which are ordinarily and according to the custom of railway companies charged to Construction Account, and that hereafter the said Des Moines Company shall keep a Construction Account in the regular books according to the said custom and practice, and the said account as shown by the said books shall be accepted by the parties in any controversy respecting such subject as prima facie evidence of the cost of the said terminal property from and after the date of this contract; provided always that the said sum of One million, one hundred and forty-nine thousand, seven hundred and thirty-one and nine-one-hundredths ($1,149,731.09) dollars is agreed upon finally and conclusively as the cost of the said terminal property at the date of this contract.

Second. At the expiration of each month of said period 917 or as soon thereafter as practicable, there shall be ascertained the expenses of maintaining, repairing and renewing the terminal property of the Des Moines Company, including the maintenance, repair and renewal of tracks, depots, round houses, engine houses, and all and every kind of property owned and used by the Des Moines Company during the preceding month; and in like manner there shall be ascertained the taxes, general or special, levied upon or against all the property of the Des Moines Company and paid during the preceding month, or to be paid during the next succeeding month, and the insurance, if any, paid during the preceding month, or to be paid during the next succeeding month.

Third. There shall be likewise ascertained the costs and expenses of every nature connected with the operation of said terminal property, including freight and passenger depots, depot grounds, round houses, transfers, tracks, and every other property or appurtenance thereof, which is to include every item of expense or disbursement incurred or made by the Des Moines Company not hereinbefore mentioned.

Sec. 3. Having so ascertained the monthly aggregate of all the items and sums mentioned in the preceding section, there shall be deducted therefrom the amount, if any, which other tenant railway companies may then be under obligations to pay to the Des Moines Company for the use of the herein demised property, or parts thereof, for the preceding 918 month, and the said Des Moines Northern & Western Company shall pay the remainder to the said Des Moines Company; said payments to continue monthly, as aforesaid, during the said period of thirty years, and all payments herein provided for shall be made in gold coin of the United States of or equal to the present standard of weight and fineness.

Sec. 4. If the amount or any part of the amount due from a railway company or railway companies using or occupying the said terminal property under a contract or contracts with the said Des Moines Company is not paid when due, then the sum so due and unpaid shall also, on demand of the said Des Moines Company, be paid to it by the said Des Moines, Northern & Western Company, and if it is thereafter paid by such other company or companies, then the same shall be refunded to the said Des Moines Northern & Western Company.

Sec. 5. The Des Moines Company shall, on or before the tenth day of each month of said period, or as soon thereafter as practicable, make up and present to the Des Moines, Northern & Western Company an account showing the amount due hereunder for the preceding month, and payment thereof shall be made within ten days thereafter.

Sec. 6. If the said Des Moines, Northern & Western Company shall for any reason fail or refuse, for a period of sixty days after the account is rendered as aforesaid and the same is due, to pay any of the several sums provided in this contract to be paid, then the Des Moines Company may take from any money in its hands or in the hands of its agents belonging to the Des Moines, Northern & Western Company the amount so due, and apply sufficient thereof to meet said demand or demands, and if the sum so taken be insufficient to pay the amount due under this agreement, and the same shall still remain unpaid, the Des Moines Company shall have the right to forfeit, cancel and annul this contract; but it is expressly understood and agreed that nothing herein contained shall prevent the Des Moines Company from enforcing its demand or demands against the said Des Moines Northern & Western Company by any proper action, either at law or in equity, or from recovering the amount which may at any time be due or unpaid, if it shall so elect.

Sec. 7. The management of the said terminal property, including stations, buildings, tracks, round houses, shops, etc., shall be in charge of a Superintendent of the Des Moines Company, who shall in the performance of his duties be governed by such regulations as may from time to time be established by the Des Moines Company. The salary of said Superintendent and the compensation of other agents and employes of the Des Moines Company shall not be higher than are paid by railway companies in the vicinity for similar services.

Sec. 8. It is mutually agreed that the use hereby granted of the said terminal property to the said Des Moines, 920 Northern & Western Company shall be without preference or unreasonable precedence for or to the Des Moines, Northern & Western Company, or any lessee using or occupying the said terminals, in the matter of train schedules or in the handling or switching of cars and trains, and the occupancy of depots or the occupancy of said property or any part thereof, so far as respects the services herein agreed to be performed; always, however, to be subject to such reasonable control and discretion by the Des Moines Company as may be necessary to avoid confusion and to expedite the management of the business; and the said Des Moines Company shall from time to time make, publish and enforce such rules and regulations for the use, management and operation of said terminal property by all the parties using the same as may be reasonable, and as it may from time to time consider necessary.

Sec. 9. The Des Moines Company shall keep accurate books of account showing in detail all the expenditures made by it, and said books shall give such details of the business of the said Des Moines Company as will at all times enable the parties hereto to make accurate settlements of their accounts as provided for in this agreement; and said books may at all reasonable and proper hours be examined and inspected by the Superintendent of the said Des Moines, Northern & Western Company, or by any competent accountant in its employ. The said Des Moines Company shall also keep 921 such record as will enable it at all times to ascertain the amount paid to it or becoming due to it under contracts from other railway companies for the use of the said terminals or any part thereof, to the end that it may at all times be accurately known what amounts, if any, are to be deducted in each month of the said period from the entire sum ascertained in the manner provided for in Section 2 hereof.

Sec. 10. All damages which may be received by any engine or engines, car or cars, of either party hereto, while being switched by the said Des Moines Company at or upon any part of the premises embraced in this agreement, shall be repaired by the Des Moines Company for the party to whom such rolling stock belongs, and the cost of such repairs shall enter into the sum to be ascertained as provided in Sec. 2 hereof.

Sec. 11. All damages to property other than as above described caused by any engine or engines, car or cars, of any railway using said terminals, or by any imperfection in the track or tracks laid upon said premises, and all injuries which may at any time be received by any person or persons in, around, about or upon said premises, shall, if settled at all, be settled and adjusted by the Des Moines Company, and the sum or sums thus paid in settlements shall enter into the sum so to be ascertained under Section 2 hereof. Pro-922 vided however that no settlement involving more than five hundred dollars shall be made of any claim for personal injury or death except with the consent and approval of the said Des Moines Northern and Western Company. (The preceding underscored words are in the handwriting of Roswell Miller.) And Provided, further that the said Des Moines, Northern & Western Company shall at its own sole cost and expense bear, settle and pay all damages to property belonging to itself, to the said Des Moines Company, or to third persons, and all injuries to persons, when said damages or injuries are done to or by its own trains while said trains are being moved by its own engines and operated and controlled by its own crews, unless such damages or injuries are occasioned by the neglect or fault of the servants of the Des Moines Company, or by some imperfection in its track or tracks, and in case such damages or injuries are occasioned by the act, negligence or fault of the Des Moines Company, or by any imperfection in said tracks, then settlements and payments shall be made by the Des Moines Company as in this section first provided.

Sec. 12. All persons employed and paid, either permanently or temporarily, by said Des Moines Company in the maintenance and operation of said terminals, shall be deemed and taken to be the employes and servants of the Des Moines Company only.

Sec. 13. The Des Moines, Northern & Western Company agrees that it will, during the whole of the said period 923 of thirty years, use the said terminals for all its passenger and freight trains destined to or departing from said City of Des Moines, Iowa.

Sec. 14. The revenue of the Des Moines Company from depot privileges, rents of offices in Union Station, or other depots, switching, passenger business done on its own behalf and rents from real estate, and miscellaneous earnings shall belong absolutely to the said Des Moines Company, and shall not be considered in the ascertainment of the sum provided for in Section 2 hereof. (Opposite this section on the margin are the words: in the handwriting of Mr. F. M. Hubbell: "Objected to by Roswell Miller, Dec. 27 1898")

Sec. 15. It is further agreed that if the said Des Moines Company shall hereafter be required to construct, or if it shall desire to construct a viaduct or viaducts over or under any of its tracks upon any public street or alley for the protection or convenience of the public, or if by municipal, legislative or other legal action it shall be required to make changes or modifications in any of its said tracks, bridges and appurtenances for the safety and convenience of the public, then the cost of constructing any such viaduct or of making any such change or modification shall be entered in said Construction Account, and shall be considered and held to be a part of the cost of the said terminal property.

924 Sec. 16. If at any time there shall arise any dispute with reference to any account rendered by the said Des Moines Company to the said Des Moines, Northern & Western Company, all claimed omissions or errors in such account or accounts, and all exceptions thereto which may be taken by the said Des Moines, Northern and Western Company, shall be subsequently adjusted between the parties, but shall not delay the prompt payment of the said account or accounts as rendered by the said Des Moines Company.

Sec. 17. In case any difference shall hereafter arise between the parties hereto concerning the management of said terminal station, depots, grounds, yards, tracks and other terminal facilities of the said Des Moines Company, with respect to any matter not herein provided for or concerning any other matter or thing connected therewith but not herein expressly provided for, or concerning any of the accounts of said Des Moines Company, such differences shall be referred to three competent men experienced in railroad management, who shall, as soon as practicable after they are chosen, proceed to examine and determine what would be just and equitable for each of said parties to do in and about the matter in dispute. Each party shall choose one of said arbitrators and the two thus chosen shall select the third arbitrator and the decision in writing of a majority of said arbitrators 925 with respect to the matter submitted shall be furnished to and be thereafter binding upon each of the said parties. Provided, however, that such differences shall have no effect on the course of business at said terminal station, depot grounds, yards, etc., until the final decision of said arbitrators shall be made; but such business shall continue to be transacted, and such settlements and payments as are herein provided for shall be made as before, until the matter in dispute shall be determined by the said arbitrators, and thereupon such payments or restitution shall be made as may be required by the decision of said arbitrators. (Opposite this section on the margin are the words in the handwriting of Mr. F. M. Hubbell: "Mr. Geo. R. Peck prepared a new section No. 17 which is hereto attached. Mr. Miller objected to this one. F. M. Hubbell.")

Sec. 17. In case any difference shall arise between the parties hereto concerning the management of said terminal station, depots, grounds, yards, tracks and other facilities of the said Des Moines Company, or in respect to the accounts of said Des Moines Company, or in respect to any other matter or thing growing out of this contract or the relations of the parties hereto under the same, such differences shall be referred to three competent men, experienced in railroad management, to be selected as hereinafter provided. That is to say, the party desiring an arbitration shall name one competent person to act as arbitrator, and shall notify, in trator, and the two persons so named as arbitrators shall, within fifteen days thereafter, name a third competent arbitrator. If either party shall for thirty days after being notified of the selection by the other party of an arbitrator neglect or refuse to appoint a second arbitrator, then the arbitrator first appointed may select a second arbitrator, and the two arbitrators so selected shall select a third. (Attached to the contract and immediately preceding it is attached the following):

This terminal contract between the Des Moines Union Railway Company and the Des Moines Northern & Western Railroad Company was prepared by A. B. Cummins at the instance of Roswell Miller, President of the Chicago, Milwau-928 kee & St. Paul Railway Company. Mr. F. M. Hubbell presented it to Mr. Miller and his attorney, George R Peck, December 27th, 1898 and it was agreed to by Mr. Miller, excepting Section #14 which he wanted left out, and Section #17 was also objected to and Mr. Peck prepared a substitute for it, which is hereto attached.

With these changes made, Mr. Miller expressed himself as satisfied with the contract.

Dear Sir:—

The attached correspondence has been referred to me by Mr. Ramsey. For some reason I seem to have forgotten all about this piece of land conveyed by Hoyt Sherman to Col. How. It is my recollection that How conveyed everything to the Wabash Railroad Company, and that the Wabash Company then conveyed all to the Terminal Company. But if I understand you correctly, the record shows the conveyance of the property by Sherman to How, and no subsequent conveyance by How to any one. If that is the case, I think the matter can be arranged. I think the deed to J. F. How, 'Trustee', is the same as a deed to How individually, and that a release from Mrs. How and her two sons (both of whom are of age), would cure everything, and I believe they would be willing to sign a release if the circumstances were explained to them.

Please return the papers with any suggestions you may have to make with respect to the matter. We cannot find the declaration of trust referred to in the correspondence as having been executed by Col. How, July 19th, 1887, and the probabilities are it was burned in our office fire in October, 1897.

Very truly yours,

I have yours of December 31st, ult, with papers attached. I have prepared and now enclose a new description of the premises, which I suggest be used by you in procuring a deed from the heirs of Mr. How.

I also enclose a blank quit-claim deed for your information as to what kind of an acknowledgment to a deed, is required in this State. If the heirs of Col. How are willing to use any stronger language than the words "Quit-claim" you can insert the words "We hereby sell, convey and quit-claim."

I herewith return all papers.

Dear Sir:—

On the 26th of November, 1883, Hoyt Sherman, as assignee, conveyed to Jas. F. How, as trustee, a strip of land in Des Moines about $\frac{3}{8}$ of a mile in length, for the sum of $2373.00. It seems that Col. How never executed any deed to the Wabash Company or to the Terminal Company, for which the purchase was made, and in so far as the records show, the title is now in his heirs. I think Mrs. How and her two sons will be willing to execute a conveyance to the Terminal Company, but before asking them to do so, I would like, if possible, to find the check given by the Wabash Company to Hoyt Sherman. All those Terminal properties at Des Moines that were conveyed to Col. How as trustee, were paid for on Wabash vouchers and checks, and no doubt you will find this one among the checks issued in November 1883, provided your records for that period are still accessible.

Please find inclosed a quit claim deed from Mrs. James F. How and her two sons, to the strip of land in Des Moines, conveyed some years ago by Hoyt Sherman to James F. How, trustee. The deed is made to the Wabash Railroad Company, but my recollection is that the Wabash Railroad Company has already granted the property to the Des Moines Union Railway Company, so that this release will inure to the benefit of the Union Railway Company, same as though made directly to it. I have not the conveyances before me, but if any release or conveyance is necessary from the Wabash Company, you can let me know.

F. M. Hubbell, Esq.,
Des Moines, Iowa.

Dear Sir:—

I wrote you Saturday that I had prepared and sent to Mr. Ashley a quit-claim deed from the Wabash Railroad Company to Des Moines Union Railway Company, for the tract of land in Des Moines acquired from Hoyt Sherman. I now write to say there is not the least danger that our new mortgage will cast a cloud on your title to that tract. The mortgage only conveys to the Trust Company the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad 'as the same now is or may be hereafter constructed or operated in the State of Iowa, commencing at a point in or near the City of Des Moines, where said road connects with the tracks of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, and extending from thence in a southerly direction through the counties of Polk, Marion and Monroe to the town or city of Albia in said county of Monroe, a distance of about 67 miles ..... and also all the leasehold rights and privileges of the Wabash Company to the use and enjoyment of the tracks, stations and terminal properties of the Des Moines Union Railway Company in or near said City of Des Moines, including also the rights and interests of the Wabash Com-
955 pany in and to a certain terminal contract, dated the 31st day of July, 1897, and made by and between the Des Moines Union Railway Company, the Wabash Railroad Company and the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Company, and in and to another contract dated the 10th day of May, 1889, and made by and between the Des Moines Union Railway Company, the Des Moines and St. Louis Railway Company, the Des Moines and Northwestern Railway Company and the St. Louis, Des Moines and Northern Railway Company'."

I think it might be well, however, for you to hold the quit-claim deed from Mrs. How and her sons until Mr. Ashley has executed and returned the quit-claim deed from the Wabash Company to the Des Moines Union Railway Company, and if, in the meantime, the new Wabash mortgage is placed on record, and you and Mr. Cummins think it would be better not to record the deed I sent you from Mrs. How and her sons to the Wabash, and afterwards record the quit-claim deed from the Wabash to your company, I will then take the matter up with Mrs. How and her sons, and endeavor to have them execute the new deed directly to your company, without passing the title through the Wabash Company. It is rather a delicate matter, however, and I would rather not ask them to execute a new conveyance without it seems really necessary to do so. It will not be any trouble to secure a new conveyance from Mrs. How and one of the sons, but the other son has very queer notions about such things. He refuses to accept any portion of his father's estate, and it is quit difficult to get him to sign any paper which seems to imply that he has any interest, by inheritance or otherwise, in anything that belonged to his father. This latter information I give to you privately, so that you may know my reasons for pre-956 ferring to work the matter out without obtaining from him any further conveyance.

Very truly yours,

Dear Sir. I am in receipt of yours of yesterday, concerning quit claim deed from Wabash Railroad Co. to Des Moines Union Ry. Co., for tract of land in Des Moines conveyed by Hoyt Sherman to James F. How, trustee.

I herewith inclose same, and request that you put same on record at once. I do not, as I have already written, think the new Wabash mortgage would cloud the title of the Terminal Company, but to save all question on that point I have asked Mr. Cummins to hold the mortgage until your quit claim is recorded. As soon as that is done, please inform Mr. Cummins and oblige

Yours Very Truly,

September 25, 1899

Mr. Ramsey, Jr., V. P. & Genl. Manager,
Wabash Railroad Company,
St. Louis, Mo.

Dear Sir:—

Mr. F. M. Hubbell was in Chicago last Thursday and had an interview with Messrs. Roswell Miller and A. J. Earling, at which time those two gentlemen stated that they would be unwilling to consent to the approval of the lease now pending between the Des Moines Union Railway Company, and the C. B. & Q. and Keokuk & Western R. R. companies, unless the Des Moines Union Company would give to the C. M. & St. P. Ry. Company a lease for 50 years. They fear that at the end of the present lease, May 1st 1918, the Directors who are then managing the Company will not deal fairly with them in making a lease for the further use of the premises, hence take the position above stated, that they will approve no other leases until they get one approved for themselves. Do you approve of the position they take in the matter, or are you and Mr. Magee willing to approve the lease as now prepared? An early answer will greatly oblige.

Messrs. Miller and Earling must think a new lease to their Company would be of very great value, if they are willing to forego for a period of 18 years, their portion of the rents which undoubtedly would be received from the Keokuk & Western, C. B. & Q., C. & N. W., and C. R. I. & P. Ry companies.

963 Assuming that the Burlington and its proprietary Road would pay on an average of.....$6,500 per annum
The C. & N. W. Ry. Co.,..... 9,000 " "
The C. R. I. & P. Ry. Co. say,.....15,000 " "

Total,.....$30,500 per annum

the C. M. & St. P. Ry. Company's share of these rents, would be, on the present wheelage, about 75% or $22,875, thus it seems that the C. M. & St. P. Ry. Company is willing to lose $22,875 annually rather than not get an extension of its preent lease for a period of 32 years beyond the time when the present lease expires.

Mr. F. C. Hubbell,

Dear Sir:—

I have yours of the 25th relative to the position taken by Messrs. Miller and Earling of the St. Paul regarding the extension of their lease of the Des Moines Union property.

I have not given this subject sufficient attention to make a definite and decided reply to your question. There is much that might be said in favor of the extension of the lease to the Wabash and the C. M. & St. P. for a period of fifty years and it seems to me that the Des Moines Union Company would be glad to have the lease extended. While I would favor the extension of both of these leases, I am not prepared to take the position held by Mr. Earling, namely, that no other lease should be executed unless our leases are extended. The execution of leases to other companies may be of sufficient importance to the Wabash and the St. Paul to justify their approval of such lease even if their own leases are not extended, and yet, as the St. Paul and the Wabash Companies are now, and will be for the next nineteen years, in the position of guaranteeing to the Des Moines Union Company the rentals 965 and expenses of the entire property regardless of whether new lines should continue to use the property or not, it seems to me that the Des Moines Union Company, in recognition of the position of our respective companies, should be perfectly willing to extend the leases of both companies for the period suggested by Mr. Earling.

Yours very truly,

J. RAMSEY, Jr.,

Mr. J. Ramsey, Jr.,

Dear Sir:—

At the annual meeting of the D. M. Union to-day Mr. Earling brought up the subject of a track from the eastern ter-mines of the D. M. Union to connect with the Christy and Carbondale coal mines. The C. M. & St. P. Road is short of coal for engine purposes and are desirous of increasing their supply from the Des Moines fields. The amount of track to be built is approximately three miles. The engineering difficulties are very slight. The principal expenses will be rails, ties, and the cost of the right of way. We estimate roughly the right of way at $6,000 and the cost of the track at $16,000 making a total of $22,000. The C. M. & St. P. people tell us that they can take from Des Moines for engine purposes thirty cars per day every day in the year. This will very materially increase the wheelage of that road, and will be a very desirable thing both for the D. M. Union and also for your road because the larger the wheelage of the C. M. & St. P. road the less of the expense of the terminals will fall on the Wabash. If you favor this, will you kindly give me your prompt authority for us to go ahead with the work of securing the right of way. We would like to take the winter months for securing the right of way in hopes that we 973 can get it for considerably less than our estimate and then be able to commence the work of building the road the first thing in the summer.

Yours truly,

F. C. HUBBELL,

Dear Sir:—

Further replying to yours of the 6th would advise in our proposed extension to the Carbondale mine, we contemplate having our main line at its present eastern terminus and taking a direct easterly course to the mines. This will not require us to use any of the Wabash track. Since writing my letter of the 4th we have been looking up the question of right of way and find that it will not be as expensive as stated in my letter of the 4th. I now think that $4,000 ought to cover the cost of the right of way. Would thank you to give me an early reply regarding the proposed new track.

If we are to get the right of way at the right price, we should gather it in as opportunity presents.

Jany. 27, 1900.

Mr. J. Ramsey, Jr.,
V. P. & G. M. Wabash R. R.,
St. Louis, Mo.

Dear Sir:—

My first letter to you on the subject of the Carbondale extension stated the estimated cost of the same, which estimate was made by Mr. Earling and the balance of the directors who were in attendance at the annual meeting. I wrote you in my letter of the 25th that the cost of the right of way would probably be less than the estimate, as we have already opened negotiations for some of the right of way and think we can acquire it at private sale before it is known that it is wanted for railroad purposes. We had this line surveyed some two or three years ago and it is not necessary for us at this time to resurvey it. It is desirable to pick up the right of way quietly.

If the extension is made it naturally would be a part of the D. M. Union and business originating upon it would be handled by the D. M. Union the same as other business and would result in increasing the total wheelage of the terminal, company very materially. This, I think, I explained to you. This increase in the C. M. & St. P. wheelage would result in that Company paying a proportionately larger wheelage and inasmuch as wheelage in our company covers every item of 977 expense, you can readily see that while the investment of the D. M. Union will be in the neighborhood of $20,000 the C. M. & St. P. Company will be paying their proportion of interest and all other expenses and charges upon the whole terminal by reason of using this extension. We, as directors and owners of the terminal company feel that it is a good thing for the company and strongly recommend the proposed extension.

In my opinion there should be no charge made for the haul from the mines to the city because the cost of handling this coal would be very much less per car than any other class of business which the terminal company handles for its tenants, while the C. M. & St. P. road would pay the same wheelage upon this coal traffic that it pays on other business which costs the terminal company more to handle.

Yours truly,

F. C. HUBBELL,
Prest.

As I am advised by Mr. Earling that he will not attend the meeting to-morrow and that his representative will oppose the execution of the contracts referred to, it will not be worth my while to go up. While I would like to see the other roads in the terminals, I will vote on this question as the St. Paul. Therefore nothing definite would result from the meeting.

The proposed contract is strictly in accordance with your views as expressed to us and your sanction was had before contract was agreed upon. We now ask that you vote in accordance with your previous authority and not place the Des Moines Directors in an embarrassing position. We believe the Chicago Directors will not oppose the contract as they will not like to be placed in an unfavorable light before the Des Moines Public by offering unreasonable objections to the occupancy of the Union Depot by all the railway companies which Des Moines so much desires. I trust you will come or send a proxy to ratify the contract.

F. C. Hubbell:

I am in favor of getting all the lines at Des Moines into the Union Station, but I think Mr. Earling's position is a proper one, namely, that no new line should have any better contract than is held by the present Companies who are really the guarantors of the whole Des Moines terminal expenses and fixed charges. The Wabash has now only one vote in the board and could not prevent the ratification of the contract if the St. Paul directors should be in favor of it. It is therefore not necessary for me to attend the meeting.

Mr. J. Ramsey, Jr.,
V. P. & G. M. Wabash R. R.
St. Louis, Mo.

Dear Sir:—

Replying to yours of the 29th respecting the proposed extension to Carbondale, will say at the meeting of the directors to-day the subject was more fully discussed and now the proposition is in this shape. The C. M. & St. P. people will furnish the rail and ties and Hubbell, Son & Co. will furnish the money to buy the right of way, grade the road and the necessary labor and material to complete it. The D. M. Union will make a charge of $1.50 per loaded car for each loaded car handled over the proposed extension until the $1.50 car will reimburse the C. M. & St. P. road and Hubbell, Son & Co. for the amount of their advances, together with interest on the same; after which the charge of $1.50 per car shall cease and traffic shall be handled over this track thereafter in the same manner as over any other part of the terminal property. Under this arrangement the D. M. Union will become the owner of over two miles of very productive and valuable railroad without it costing the D. M. Union a penny. This is certainly getting something for nothing. It is Mr. Earling's idea to build the track with new heavy rail and first class ties and therefore the track will not be expensive to maintain for many years. Under this arrangement there will be nothing 982 added to your burdens for interest charge and the cost, as I have previously explained, of handling this coal traffic will be less per car than the other wheelage handled by the D. M. Union. Therefore, you will see, no hardship is placed on the Wabash Co. nor upon the D. M. Union Company. If with this understanding you will consent to the arrangement, I will have a proper form of resolution prepared in accordance with this letter and send it to you for your approval.

Yours truly,
F. C. HUBBELL, Prest.

J. Ramsey, Jr., Vice Pres't. and Gen'l Manager.

St. Louis, Mo. January 31st, 1900.

Mr. F. C. Hubbell,
President, The Des Moines Union Ry. Co.,
Des Moines, Iowa.

Dear Sir:—
I have yours of the 30th.

The proposition of the St. Paul Road and of Hubbell, Son & Co. to furnish the right of way, rails, cross ties, etc., the cost of which is to be refunded to these parties from revenues received from the operation of the extension, does not change the question an iota. It practically amounts to borrowing the money from these two parties, instead of issuing bonds or getting it in some other way. The result will be same, namely: that this extension which will be of no value whatever to the Wabash Company will afterwards be operated partly at the expense of the Wabash Railroad, as all of the expense of the operation of that branch will be divided on the same basis as the cost of operating the present terminal, and that is, on the wheelage basis, and the Wabash will pay its full proportion of the branch expenses on every car it handles in and out of Des Moines, without getting one carload of traffic out of the extension.

The interest charge on the cost of this extension, the cost of operating it with a reasonable profit to the Des 984 Moines Union Ry. should be borne by the traffic handled on the branch and a proper charge either per car or per ton for business to and from the St. Paul Road or any other connection, should be made, as well as on all local coal traffic to and from the City of Des Moines. I will oppose its construction and operation on any other basis, as far as I can.

Yours very truly,

(Signed) J. RAMSEY, Jr.

985 Defendants' Exhibit 471.

After the expiration of the present contract the St. Paul Company agrees that one-fourth of the amount paid for rentals by other companies than those now occupying the Des Moines Union shall be taken by the Des Moines Union for the purpose of paying dividends, provided that these dividends shall not exceed 5 per cent., and that any surplus earnings which shall accrue over and above the rental paid by the St. Paul and Wabash shall also go to the payment of dividends; that there shall be no limit to the dividends paid by these surplus earnings. Surplus earnings to mean rentals of offices, rentals of real estate and switching charges, less the actual cost of switching, and less taxes levied upon the property rented, because it is not used for railroad purposes.

987 Defendants' Exhibit 473.

Feby. 17, 1900.

Mr. J. Ramsey, Jr.,
V. P. & G. M. Wabash R. R.,
St. Louis, Mo.

Dear Sir:—

Replying to yours of the 16th would advise that the D. M N. & W. in the past and the C. M. & St. P. Ry. in the present pay to the D. M. Union Ry. Co. $1.50 per car for every car going to the Carbondale mines. This $1.50 is the amount which the D. M. Union Ry. pays to the Wabash Company under the trackage contract existing between the Wabash and the D. M. Union. I enclose herewith a rough sketch, which is not even drawn to a scale, but which will, I think, explain the trackage question relating to the Carbondale. I have marked upon the plat with an "X" the east end of the D. M. Union Ry. where it connects with the Wabash, and have also marked with an "X" the point known as "Ross Junction", it being about two miles between the two points named and it is for the trackage over these two miles that the Wabash receives $1.50 per car. The Carbondale Coal Co. built all of the track from Ross Junction to their mine and maintain the same. With this situation made plain to you, I will endeavor to answer the balance of your questions.

988 Answer to question. 1. The D. M. Union made no extension and therefore paid no money on account of it.

#2. The total number of cars handled from the Carbondale mines since our arrangement was made is 15,187. Of this number the D. M. Union has taken on an average about two or three cars per day for engine coal, which engine coal is used not only for their own use, but for the Wabash and C. M. & St. P. engines, which are coaled at Des Moines. A very small number of cars, possibly five a month, are brought to Des Moines on the basis of twenty cents per ton and the balance go out over the C. M. & St. P. road for Sioux City and other Missouri River points. It would be quite a task and take several days to give you the exact number of cars handled in each way.

I cannot quite understand your third question. Do you wish to know the revenue of the C. M. & St. P. on coal which has been billed out over that line from the Carbondale? If so, I do not know whether it would be proper for me to furnish it. As to, the revenue received by the D. M. Union for such coal, as has come to Des Moines locally, I can have this information figured up for you and will send it to you in two or three days, as quickly as we can make it up. As to the passenger traffic, it amounts to only ten or fifteen dollars, being a charge which we have made on two or three occasions for switching a carload of miners out to the mines.

As to the fourth question will say there is no possible expense to the D. M. Union for the maintenance, operation and taxes on the so-called Carbondale branch.

As to the fifth question, there was no resolution of the Board necessary.

Yours truly,

F. C. HUBBELL,
Prest.

991 Defendants' Exhibit 475.

Feby. 22, 1900.

Mr. J. Ramsey, Jr.,
V. P. Wabash R. R.,
St. Louis, Mo.

Dear Sir:—

Replying to yours of the 20th respecting the Carbondale coal traffic would advise the statement furnished you of revenue of the D. M. Union is for coal handled between the Carbondale mines and Des Moines for consumption in Des Moines, or in your own words "it is local coal".

You are correct in your understanding that no extra charge is made against the D. M. N. & W. beyond the toll per car for use of the Wabash track.

Replying to your next question, the Carbondale track was built by the Carbondale people. They pay the taxes and all maintenance. We simply use it in handling the coal traffic. The carbondale does not pay to the D. M. Union anything on account of the D. M. Union handling the Carbondale coal.

Answering the next paragraph of your letter will say your understanding is correct of the manner in which the wheelage of the old D. M. N. & W. (now the C. M. & St. P. Ry.,) has been counted in handling the Carbondale coal traffic. Answering the last part of this paragraph will say if a Wabash car comes into Des Moines and is switched to the C. R. I. & P. to go to some industry or unloading tracks, the D. M. Union does not count this movement in your wheelage account. Soon after you assumed the management of the Wabash road, the subject of the Carbondale business was quite thoroughly 992 gone into and it was our understanding that the manner of handling it was entirely satisfactory and I personally feel that the way it is now being handled is a fair method. I base my opinion, as explained to you, upon the ground that the cost of handling the Carbondale coal traffic is much less per car than handling the miscellaneous business of the D. M. Union and further more the wheelage charge which the C. M. & St. P. Ry. now pays added to the $1.50 per car which goes to your Company, is all that the traffic will bear and any further charge upon this business would simply result in diverting all of it to the C. R. I. & P. who also have access to the Carbondale mines.

It is the desire of the D. M. Union to be fair between its tenants and any modification in the method of counting the Carbondale wheelage, which the C. M. & St. P. Ry., will accept will be entirely satisfactory to us.

Yours truly,

F. C. HUBBELL,
Prest.

Mr. F. C. Hubbell,

Des Moines, Iowa.

Dear Sir:—
I have yours of March 31st.

As I understand your letter and plan attached, the warehouse of the Luthe Hardware Company is to be located on property belonging to F. M. Hubbell & Sons, and that the twelve foot strip which is to be used for the side track to said warehouse is to be located on the east side of the warehouse building and on the land of F. M. Hubbell & Sons.

If this understanding of mine is correct, why should not Hubbell & Sons furnish the right of way for this track for a nominal rental,—say $1.00 per annum—to the Des Moines Union Railway Company. These are the conditions which we would naturally expect to be complied with by any other party wishing a private siding on their own land to a warehouse. $816.00 for a 12 foot frontage is pretty nearly $70.00 per front foot.

Yours very truly,

J. RAMSEY, Jr.

Mr. J. Ramsey, Jr.,
V. P. & G. M. Wabash R. R.,
St. Louis, Mo.

Dear Sir:—
Replying to your message in reference to the track of the Luthe building, will say we recognize that fifteen feet would be a better right of way than twelve feet, but cars and engines can be operated on twelve feet of ground and as land is valuable at this point, we thought it best not to leave out any more ground than possible. In other parts of our yard we have put tracks in on twelve foot centers. The track in question will not be a private siding but will be used not only by Luthe Bros. but also by the Des Moines Bale Tie Co. and by Pease Bros. This track can be extended farther north and in fact the people north of us are asking us if we cannot so arrange.

The lot on which this track is to go was bought by Hubbell, Son & Co. and we are only asking the D. M. Union to reimburse us for this actual cost, and the price is much below the real value of the lot. We believe that this track will be one of the best of the D. M. Union's business tracks. I fully recognize the justice of your position that tracks should be put in on right of way furnished free as a general rule, and no doubt you are aware that we have given to the 995 D. M. Union a considerable amount of right of way without any expense to the Union, some of this right of way being worth at the time we gave it, a very large sum of money. The fact that we stand ready to furnish the Union right of way free in our manufacturers' addition and are willing to build buildings for factories and wholesale business or furnish them substantial assistance to build their own buildings, is the main reason that the D. M. Union Railway is coming so fast into prominence at Des Moines. It has now been four or five years since any buildings have been built, requiring railway facilities, on any other road than the Des Moines Union. You will certainly recognize that it has taken a great deal of work on our part, besides a very liberal policy, to make this kind of a record.

Yours truly,

F. C. HUBBELL,
Prest.

Feby. 4, 1901.

Mr. J. Ramsey, Jr.,
V. P. & G. M. Wabash R. R.,
St. Louis, Missouri.

Dear Sir:—

Herewith I hand you a blue print showing the tracks of the Des Moines Union as they now exist between West Seventh street and West Eleventh street. Perhaps you are not aware of it, but we have had a very long and bitter litigation with the Getchell & Martin Manufacturing Company, who are the owners of Lots three and four in block 4, lots one, two, seven and eight in block nine, lots one and two and the east half of lots seven and eight in block fourteen. Some years ago we made a contract with these people to put a track in the east and west alley north of their property and afterwards adopted this track for our south main line. They sued us to compel us to remove the track entirely from the alley, on which point they were beaten in the district court, but the court held that we could not use this south track for a main line but only for a side track. This case is now pending in the supreme court. The very best that we can hope from the supreme court is an affirmation of the decision of the lower court. Therefore in any event we are reduced to a single main line from our Passenger station to West Tenth street.

We are under contract with the Chicago Great Western to maintain a double main line at this point and in de-997 priving them of this track we are in fact violating our contract with them. They have been more than usually patient with us in this case, which has now run a number of years, but the time will certainly come in the near future when they will insist on our furnishing a double main line. This can only be done by our making a compromise with Getchell and Martin. In my opinion a better trade can be made at the present moment than at any time since the litigation commenced.

We asked for authority from the Railroad Commissioners, and obtained it, to condemn a strip of ground fourteen feet wide off of the north side of the Getchell and Martin property, but have never dared to invoke the aid of a jury because we were afraid the damages would be assessed so very high as to give Getchell and Martin another club to use on us. For example;

On Lots three and four, block four, is the Getchell and Martin planing mill, and fourteen feet off of this property would damage it to the extent of $10,000.00

We estimate a strip fourteen feet wide off of Lots two and seven, in block nine, and lot two, block fourteen, would be assessed at about $3500. each, ... 10,500.00

North thirty-nine feet of the east half of lot seven, block fourteen, ... 1,000.00

This would be a very heavy damage and at the same time, would give the Des Moines Union a very small amount of additional room for tracks.

998 The only plan which seems to be possible to bring about an adjustment of this controversy, on a basis which is not prohibitive, is to buy of Getchell and Martin all of lots one, two, seven and eight in block nine, lots one and two and the east half of lots seven and eight, in block fourteen, and have this consideration cover the damage to the mill property; thus settling the whole controversy.

Looking to the future, I believe the Des Moines Union should own all of the property between West Eighth and West Eleventh streets, and between the Des Moines Union tracks and the present Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific tracks, but this would be a very large expenditure for the Des Moines Union to make at the present time, and I do not urge it, but only suggest it to you. Therefore, if the Des Moines Union could buy the north thirty-nine feet off of lots two and seven, in block nine, the north thirty-nine feet of lot two and the north thirty-nine feet of the east half of lot seven in block fourteen, F. M. Hubbell Son & Company will buy the balance of the Getchell and Martin property west of Eighth street. The Des Moines Union by buying the thirty-nine feet in question, would be enabled to put two team tracks thereon with a sufficient and commodious driveway between them to serve the two tracks. At the same time they would be getting rid of the damage to the mill property, and also will have acquired the east and west alley at this point, which is sixteen and one-half feet wide.

I do not know on just what terms I can buy this prop-999 erty. Our negotiations with Getchell and Martin have run over a number of months and their price at the commencement of the negotiation was $8,000 per lot for the six principal lots ..... $48,000.
and for the east half of lot seven, block fourteen, ... 4,000.

Total ..... $52,000.

I have gradually beaten them down until I feel confident they would sell all of that property for $36,000 and I suggested to them on Saturday that I would recommend we buy the property on the basis of $33,000.

The property in question is the most desirable warehouse location in Des Moines. It also could be made the best site for team tracks that it is possible for the Des Moines Union to obtain. Mr. Calkins is quite familiar with this controversy, and also with the real estate in question. I understand that Mr. Calkins is of the opinion we need some additional team tracks at the present time.

Getchell and Martin wish to make improvements upon their mill property to increase their facilities, and if they should do so, before our controversy is settled, it will simply result in increasing the damages which we would have to pay, should we resort to condemnation. They wish to make these improvements during the early spring, in order to have the benefit of the increased space for their summer business. Therefore it is desirable that we come to an early decision on this 1000 question. If you are coming west soon, I hope you will find it possible to come to Des Moines and look over the situation on the ground. If you cannot come, I would like to have something definite from you at an early day.

For your information will say that F. M. Hubbell, Son & Company own all of the property not owned by Getchell & Martin, between west Eighth and west Eleventh streets.

Yours truly,

F. C. HUBBELL, Prest.

Mr. F. C. Hubbell,
President, The Des Moines Union Railway,
Des Moines, Iowa.

Dear Sir:—

Replying to yours of February 4th.

If the St. Paul Company is willing to purchase the Getchell and Martin property between Eighth and Tenth streets, the Wabash Company will also agree to the purchase. I am in favor, however, of purchasing all of the property referred to instead of purchasing the 39 feet as suggested by you and permitting Hubbell & Sons to purchase the remainder. My experience in the Des Moines and other terminals has convinced me that it is not wise to purchase property piece meal when you are convinced that ultimately you will require the entire property, and if we buy part of this property to-day and Hubbell & Sons buy the other part, it will be but a few years until we will have to buy the rest of it from Hubbell & Sons.

However, the difficulty which confronts us in the Des Moines terminal proposition is the raising of the funds to make these and other purchases and the improvements which are necessary on the property. The stockholders expect the tenants, which in this case are the St. Paul and Wabash Companies only, to furnish all of the money necessary to take care 1002 of the growth of the property and yet the stockholders decline to make such extensions of the leases of the tenant companies as would justify them in furnishing the money necessary to pay for the increased facilities. In plain words, the tenants are expected to furnish all the money and in a comparatively few years the property which they have purchased and paid for will belong to the stockholders of the Des Moines Union Company, and the present tenants will be, to a certain extent, at the mercy of the stockholders in the making of new leases. If Mr. Hubbell will agree to the proposition which has been made by Mr. Earling and myself of an extension of the present leases of the St. Paul and Wabash Companies, I think matters will work much more smoothly at Des Moines and that there will be but very little difficulty in providing for future requirements.

Dear Sir:—

Replying to yours of the 12th will say that I am glad that you are in favor of buying all of the property in question instead of the 39 feet. It was the policy of the Wabash in the past to buy as little real estate in Des Moines as possible, and that was why I suggested that the D. M. Union purchase the 39 feet and Hubbell, Son & Co. the balance. There is of course a little difficulty respecting the method of raising funds for the uses of the D. M. Union. However, the five-eighths of the stock represented by Hubbell Son & Co. are ready to advance their full quota of the money. They have always done this in the past, and in fact have put up most all of the money which has gone into the D. M. Union Ry. Co. they having bought of you practically all of the bonds which you have had of the company at a time when the bonds had no market and Hubbell, Son & Co. in recent years have furnished all of the money which has been needed by the company from time to time. We have worked in season and out of season for the good of the D. M. Union, and we believe that its present prosperous condition is almost wholly due to our money and our labor. It is not the policy of Hubbell, Son & Co. to treat the Wabash and the C. M. & St. P. Companies in any but a fair manner. We have never 1004 knowingly done anything to injure the two Companies. We have never refused to give the Wabash and C. M. & St. P. a long contract, and are willing to enter into negotiations with you at once looking to a long termed contract. We wish to treat your companies as partners in this property, and it will be our aim to offer you a new contract on such a basis as one partner should in fairness offer to another. If you and the C. M. & St. P. Co. think that the time has arrived for the making of a new contract, I suggest that the negotiations be opened that it may be discovered who among us are willing to do the fair thing.

April 25, 1901.

Mr. J. Ramsey, Jr.,
V. P. & G. M. Wabash R. R.,
St. Louis, Mo.

Dear Sir:—

Herewith I hand you a clipping from a newspaper from which you will note that the Chicago & North Western are about to construct a new passenger station at Des Moines and we are told it will be a very handsome one. In case this building is built it will then give all the railroads entering Des Moines independent and sufficient passenger stations so that the Des Moines Union cannot expect to get any additional revenue by reason of other railroad tenants. This loss to the Des Moines Union for rental and also for maintenance is a direct loss to your company and the St. Paul company not only as stockholders in the Des Moines Union, but as tenants, because all the money paid to the Union by tenant companies is deducted from your bills and tends to make them that much smaller.

We are well aware that there is a disposition to allow no other companies to enter the Union station until the Wabash and St. Paul roads are given new contracts and upon a basis which we as stockholders in the Des Moines Union cannot concede. The Des Moines interests shall continue to work for what we believe to be the best interests of the terminal company and are willing to make all reasonable concessions to your company and the St. Paul Company. We believe that you agree with us in reference to the ad-1006 mission of other tenants and regret that you feel it is to your interests to concur in the policy of the St. Paul road with reference to Des Moines Union affairs. The admission of new tenants into the Des Moines Union at the present moment to us is only to gratify a sentiment long cherished to have a Union Station at Des Moines not only in name, but in fact because we all understand that the rentals will go to the Wabash and St. Paul Companies.

Pardon me for again bringing this subject to your attention. I have felt that it is a duty that I owe to the Des Moines Union to do everything possible to further its prosperity and I have also felt that it is my duty to advise your company and the St. Paul company of this step of the North Western road. If the Chicago & North Western and the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Roads were occupying our station on a fair rental basis, it would relieve your company and the St. Paul Company from all passenger expense at Des Moines. Even in these times of great prosperity it seems strange that any railroad can refuse such a chance. I feel that the only chance to influence Mr. Earling will be through you and I greatly hope for your cooperation as I feel that this is the last opportunity to bring about an agreement.

I have yours of April 25th.

You are no more in favor of having all railroad lines use the Union Station at Des Moines than I am and I would be very glad to see this result brought about. At the same time I am constrained to agree with Mr. Earling that the present tenant companies, which have carried the burdens of the property all these past years and which to-day, and for the remaining period of their leases, are forced to guarantee the Des Moines Union Company against the failure of other companies to pay rentals or other charges, are entitled to as good terms and as long time leases as would be given by the Des Moines Union Company to any other road. Your proposed lease to the Burlington was actually for a period of fifty years on a very low (comparatively speaking) rental, and yet you decline to extend the period of the St. Paul and Wabash leases so that these companies would be protected by a lease equal to that of the Burlington. In my opinion, this request of the St. Paul and the Wabash is not an improper nor an unreasonable one.

1010 The St. Paul and the Wabash, up to the present time, have been the companies which have built up the terminals, have carried all of its fixed charges, have furnished a large amount of the cash required for improvements and additions, and they are entitled to consideration at least equal to that given to outside companies which you now wish to get into the station.

I would be very glad to have this matter arranged so as to secure the use of this station by all lines while, at the same time, protecting the interests of your present tenants.

Yours very truly,

Mr. J. Ramsey, Jr.,
V. P. & G. M. Wabash R. R.,
St. Louis, Mo.

Dear Sir:—

Replying to yours of the 2nd respecting the Des Moines Union situation would advise that the C. B. & Q. contract was only for a period of seventeen years, or the exact date that your own contract expires. I have tried to make this point clear to you in previous letters, but you are evidently still under a misapprehension as to the terms of the C. B. & Q. contract. In the original draft of the contract it did provide for a longer period, but the C. B. & Q. waived that point and were willing to take a contract for seventeen years. This being the case, and as all the money which the C. B. & Q. was to pay was to go to your company, and the St. Paul company, and inasmuch as you concurred in all the original negotiations of the C. B. & Q. contract it seems to me that it satisfies every objection which you have raised to the contract.

Referring to the burdens which you have mentioned that the Wabash and St. Paul have had to carry for so long a period, would call your attention to the fact that the St. Paul road did not become interested in the Des Moines Union property until about two years ago and to our minds the St. Paul road has had no burdens to carry. As to the burdens carried by your own line I have in part explained the past history to you.

Would further state that in the organization of the Des 1012 Moines Union the Wabash received a very large "rake off" and it was this transaction, coupled with others which followed while the Wabash was still a dominent factor in the company that loaded the Des Moines Union with debts and during the first years of the company when it was recognized by all that the company had been overloaded and that the bonds were not a good security, F. M. Hubbell & Son bought most of the bonds held by the Wabash at a price above the market value of the bonds. However this is all ancient history and to my mind ought not to enter much into our considerations in making a new contract.

You and Mr. Earling both seem to think that the guaranty (so called) of the Wabash and St. Paul is a very serious matter to your companies and of very great value to the Des Moines Union. We do not consider the guaranty of any more value to us than your simple agreement to pay your rentals and in the new contract with your company we will leave out the feature of the guaranty so as to eliminate at the start one of the features on which you and Mr. Earling have dwelt at such length.

Mr. Goodnow has asked me to go to Chicago this week to take up with him the question of a new contract, and while we feel that it is not advisable for the Des Moines Union to enter into a new contract with your company or the St. Paul company at this time in view of the fact that we have a contract which will not expire for seventeen years, nevertheless I shall go to Chicago and endeavor to outline a contract which will be acceptable to the Des Moines directors. Inasmuch as 1013 any new contract if made with your company will give the Wabash and the St. Paul the benefit of any money paid to the Des Moines Union under the C. B. & Q. contract, is it not very desirable that we renew our negotiations with the C. B. & Q. and endeavor to secure them at once? Even though Mr. Goodnow and I can agree on the general plan of the new contract it will in the nature of things take a long time to consummate it as all these contracts do and it seems to me that the making of the C. B. & Q. contract should be urged while the C. B. & Q. company are in the humor to trade. After having secured the C. B. & Q. I believe we will be able to get a very much higher rental from the C. & N. W. because the C. & N. W. need our station both for their competitive business with the St. Paul and also because of their very large interchange business with the C. B. & Q.

I would be very glad to see the Northwestern as well as the Burlington company use our Union Station, but, as I have stated in previous correspondence, I do not feel that the use of this station by other lines will be of sufficient direct benefit to the Wabash to justify our sacrificing any of our present rights or accepting any terms and conditions for an extended lease which would not fully protect the Wabash in all of its interests. I have been waiting since the receipt of yours of the 6th to hear from you as to the result of your interview with the St. Paul people in Chicago relative to the new lease. Referring to yours of January 24th with reference to our building for Schwarzchild and Sulzberger will say we constructed a building for the Cudahy Packing Company to all intents and purposes the same as S. & S. will require and it cost us fifty-five hundred dollars. It has been the usual practice for F. M. Hubbell, Son & Co. to advance the money to build these buildings and as soon as the rents from the building reimburse Hubbell, Son & Co. then the rents and the building belong to the Des Moines Union. If the Des Moines Union could spare the funds of course it would be my choice to have them build the building with their own money, but as you will recall the Des Moines Union is always in need of funds for its ordinary operation. The rental which S. & S. would pay us we consider very remunerative, and at the same time we would secure their business which makes it doubly attractive. The C. M. & St. P. people have given their authority and expressed their willingness that the funds for building the buildings be advanced by Hubbell, Son & Company. This last however is a matter of detail and either plan is agreeable to us. Please advise promptly as S. & S. advised they will send their men to Des Moines in a very short time to close this trade.

I do not in any way endorse the same. We did not deny the statements in the paper, because it has never been our policy to take any notice of newspaper items. It is true that the article places the Wabash company in a wrong light, but if you feel that a denial is desirable, I suggest that it come directly from your company, or that you write me just what kind of a denial you desire.

Referring to the latter part of your letter relating to our good faith with respect to the management of the Des Moines Union will say I had hoped that our past record would be a sufficient proof of our loyalty to our company as officers and directors. We never have voted, nor have we ever done anything knowingly that would injure the Des Moines Union Railway Company nor have we ever before had any one intimate to us that our intentions were of doubtful propriety.

I wrote to you and also to Mr. Goodnow at some length on September 20, 1901, urging you to favor a contract 1022 with the Iowa Falls road, and also urging you to induce Mr. Earling to modify his position. I have at different times since September, by correspondence and personally, urged the C. M. & St. P. officers to consent to the Des Moines Union entering into an arrangement with the Iowa Falls road for freight terminals and I hand you herewith a copy of the last letter which I received from Mr. Goodnow, showing that they still refuse to alter their position. I again desire to suggest that you write to Mr. Earling to withdraw his positive refusal to allow the Iowa Falls road to use our terminals for freight purposes. As stated in my letter of September 26th, our firm owns the necessary property to furnish the Iowa Falls road a very ample convenient, and desirable terminal, including the necessary ground for storage, shops, round house, etc. We have bought this property very carefully and propose to allow the Iowa Falls road, or any other road seeking entrance into Des Moines, to use our property on very liberal terms. This so-called "new terminal company" will not be in opposition to the Des Moines Union because we propose to only offer it to such roads as cannot get facilities from the Des Moines Union. You certainly will recognize that our interests in Des Moines make it necessary that a railroad, seeking entrance into Des Moines, should have ample and cheap terminal facilities, and we have placed ourselves in a position to take care of all new comers, and we cannot see wherein we act in bad faith, if we only trade with such railroads as the Des Moines Union refuse to receive. On the contrary, we, who represent a majority of the stockholders of the Des Moines Union, feel that an injustice has been done us and our Company in refusing both the Iowa Falls Company and the C. R. & Q. Company. I should be pleased to have you write me and state to me candidly what the objections are to our position. Your answer to my letter of September 20th, did not indicate to us that you considered our position wrong, and inasmuch as we have put forth so much effort in the upbuilding of the Des Moines Union, we feel entitled to a candid expression from you.

Defendants' Exhibit 494.

The Wabash Railroad Company.

General Offices.

J. Ramsey, Jr., President.

St. Louis, Mo. March 5, 1907.

Mr. F. C. Hubbell,
President, Des Moines Union Railway,
Des Moines, Iowa.

Dear Sir:—

I beg to acknowledge receipt of yours of March third.

While in the first paragraph of your letter you seem to deny the correctness of the newspaper article referred to in my letter of February 25th and in the second paragraph seem hurt by what I say regarding bad faith in the management of the Des Moines Union and say you have never voted or ever done anything knowingly to injure the Des Moines Union Railway Company, the balance of your letter goes on outlining to a certain extent your position and you say "we have placed ourselves in the position to take care of all new comers and we cannot see wherein we have acted in bad faith if we only trade with such railroads as the Des Moines Union refuse to receive" and further "This so called 'new terminal company' will not be in opposition to the Des Moines Union because we propose to only offer it to such roads as can not get facilities from the Des Moines Union."

From the above, it is evident to me that the newspaper article was based on facts and that Hubbell & Sons have organized either a new terminal company or are preparing to offer terminal facilities to new roads in competition with the 1025 Des Moines Union. In your first paragraph you admit "it is true that article places the Wabash in a wrong light" but at the same time, by not having denied the correctness of the statement, at least so far as the Wabash is concerned you seem to be perfectly willing to allow the Wabash Company to be put in a wrong light before the people of Des Moines practically through information which has evidently come from either your office or from those conversant with your plans for new terminal facilities.

By reference to the correspondence passing between us on the subject of the Des Moines, Iowa Falls & Northern Company using the Des Moines terminals, I need only refer you to my letter of September 24th in which I use the following language: "I am in favor of admitting this road or any other road to the use of the Des Moines terminals on the same terms and conditions as the use of them is granted to the present tenants". This was also the position of the Wabash Company relative to the C. B. & Q.

So far as I understand Mr. Earling's views on this question of admitting other roads to the use of the terminals, he stands on exactly the same ground as the Wabash does, namely, that any other company can be admitted on the same terms and conditions as the Wabash and St. Paul companies. This condition of the admission of new companies is strictly in accordance with the contract which the Des Moines Union Company entered into with the present tenant lines and the present tenants are not asking anything outside of their contract rights when they insist that that term and condition be com-1026 plied with.

By reference to Mr. Earling's letter of March 25th addressed to you, you will find the only objection he urged at that time against the admission of the Des Moines, Iowa Falls & Northern was that that road was purely a paper road and had no existence, and in his opinion it would be "time enough to consider the making of a contract with that company when it has a road in actual operation."

As you well know, the only difference really between the tenant lines and Hubbell & Sons (owners of the controlling stock interest in the Des Moines Union) is that the tenant companies object to the admission of other companies to the use of these terminals at a less rental and on better terms than those held by the present tenants for the purpose of increasing the value of the stock of the company at the expense of the present tenants.

You ask me to state candidly what the objections are to your position. I will give them as requested, candidly: You are the president of the Des Moines Union and as such President you have no right, officially or personally to encourage, aid or abet in the slightest manner the construction or development of any other terminal company in the city of Des Moines. If you wish to do so, you should resign your position of president and allow some one, whose sole interest would be that of the Des Moines Terminal Company and the protection of the rights of the tenant companies under the contract existing between the Des Moines Company and the tenant lines.

Yours very truly,
J. RAMSEY, Jr., President.

Dear Sir:—

Replying to yours of the 5th, and answering the first part of your letter will say that we did not feel that we had authority to make a public denial for the Wabash Company respecting its attitude towards the Des Moines Union Railway Company. In my letter to you of the third, I asked you either to make a denial yourself, or to send me the form of denial which you would like to have made by us. We have never said that the Wabash were opposing the admission of other roads to the Des Moines Union Terminals.

Answering the latter part of your letter will say we understand perfectly that your company is willing to allow the Iowa Falls or any other road to use our terminals under the same terms and conditions with yourselves and the C. M. & St. P. Company, but your understanding respecting Mr. Earling's views on this subject is entirely wrong. Mr. Earling has positively refused to allow the Iowa Falls road to use any part of the Des Moines Union Terminals for freight purposes under any circumstances. It is not a question of rental. He simply refuses to consider any proposition for freight terminals.

Dear Sir:—

Merrs. Schwarzchild & Sulzberger, pork packers of Kansas City are asking for a location upon our tracks, for a distributing house the same as Armour, Swift and other packers have. They are asking us to build a building for them the same as the one we constructed for Cudahy Packing Co., a few years ago. We are charging Cudahy eighty dollars per month for a lease of ten years. We will provide in the S. & S. lease for the right on our part to cancel the lease at any time on six months notice, in case we need the ground for railroad purposes the same as is now provided in the Cudahy lease. It is our opinion that we will not need this ground for tracks within the ten years period and possibly much longer, and we believe that this is a desirable acquisition for the Des Moines Union to secure.

In order that it might not cost the Des Moines Union any money, will say that F. M. Hubbell Son & Company are willing to advance all the money that it will cost to build the building and will take the rents from the building as they are paid by S. & S. until the rents repay Hubbell, Son & Company for the money advanced with interest. after which time the building will belong to the Des Moines Union, free and clear and the rents will belong to the Des Moines Union. I would like to have as early answer as possible to this proposition.

Copy to Mr. Goodnow.

Dear Sir:—

Replying to your letter of February 10th.

In my opinion, the Wabash Company would not be justified in selling its track and right of way between the Carbondale

Mr. J. A. Wagner,

Dear Sir:—

Referring to our conversation of today, I have to advise you that I will at once proceed to draw up a new contract between the Wabash Railroad Company and the Des Moines Union Railway Company, on the lines as agreed upon between us, namely, to allow your company the use of the main track of the Wabash Railroad Company from the point of connection (with) the tracks of the Union Company to a point of connection with the switch tracks to be laid by the Carbondale Coal Company at or near Old Hastie. The contract will be for a period of five years, with the privilege of renewal for five years additional, with the right on the part of the Wabash Railroad Company to cancel the contract at any time after the expiration of the first five years upon giving six months' written notice to the Des Moines Union Railway Company.

The Des Moines Union Railway Company to transport the cars over the track with its own motive power and the compensation to the Wabash Railroad Company to be the sum of 1032 $1.00 for each loaded car and 50c for each empty car transported over the said track in either direction; this rate to apply whether the cars are destined to the switch at Ross Junction or the new switch to be established near Old Hastie.

The contract will also provide that your company may be at liberty to change the track connection at Ross Junction, making the connection on the south side of the trestle instead of the north side, as now located.

Yours truly,

(Signed) E. B. PRYOR.

1033 Defendants' Exhibit 500.

This Agreement made and entered into this 27th day of March, A. D. 1903, by and between the Wabash Railroad Company, party of the first part, and the Des Moines Union Railway Company, party of the second part, Witnesseth: That

Whereas, the party of the second part, in order to reach the tracks of the Carbondale Coal Company, located east of the City of Des Moines, desires the use of the main track of the party of the first part, extending from the point of connection with the track of the party of the second part, to the points of connection with the said switch tracks of said Carbondale Coal Company, at what is known as Ross Junction, and at or near what is known as Old Hastie, as shown upon the blue print hereto attached, marked Exhibit A., and made a part of this agreement, for the handling of coal from the mines of said Coal Company;

Now Therefore, in consideration of the covenants and stipulations herein set forth, the parties hereby agree, each with the other, as follows:—

First. The party of the first part hereby grants unto the party of the second part the right to use its said main track and appurtenances, as shown in red upon said blue print, for the purpose of moving loaded and empty cars to and from the lines and tracks of said Coal Company, as shown on said blue print, with its own engines and crews.

The party of the second part shall also have the right to change the present switching connection at Ross Junc-1034 tion so as to make the connection on the south side of the trestle at said point, as indicated on said blue print and shall have the right to make the connection near Old Hastie, either from the east or west as shown on said blue print.

Second. The party of the second part agrees in consideration of the rights herein given it, to pay to the party of the first part, for the use of said track, the sum of One Dollar ($1.00) for each loaded car, and Fifty Cents ($.50) for each empty car transported over said track by the motive power of said second party, in either direction, and whether destined to or transported from the coal switch at said Ross Junction, or the switch near Old Hastie, which payment shall be made to the party of the first part at the end of each month, during the continuance of this agreement.

Third. The party of the second part will also pay all mileage which may be charged for cars moved over said track by its engines and crews, and will re-imburse said first party for any and all payments of money that it may be required to make on this account.

Fourth. It is further understood and agreed between the parties hereto that this agreement governs only the business which the party of the second part proposes to move to and from the said switch tracks of said Coal Company, and no other.

Fifth. All trains of the party of the first part shall at all times have precedence over trains of the party of the second part in the use of said track, and said party of the second part shall be subject to and governed by the time schedules and rules and regulations of the party of the first part, in the use of said track.

Sixth. All property transported by the party of the second part over the tracks of the party of the first part, shall be at the risk of the party of the second part. The said second party assumes all risk and responsibility for damage or injury to persons or property transported or owned by it, growing out of or caused by any imperfection of said tracks and appurtenances, or misplacements of switches, or for any damage to stock or injury that may occur to persons while walking on the said track by being struck by trains of said second party, as well as all risks of damage or injury to persons or property growing out of or caused by fire set out by the locomotives of the said second party, or for any other damage that may arise from the movement of the trains handled by said party of the second part.

In cases of damages or injuries to persons or property occurring on the trains of either party while on the said track, the proper officer of the said first party shall adjust and settle same, and a release shall be made to both companies, providing that the said first party shall not make any settlement of a claim which the party of the second part is to pay under the provisions hereof, without consultation with the proper officers of the said second party.

The said party of the second part promises and agrees to protect and save harmless the said party of the first 1036 part against any claims or demands on account of injuries to persons or property transported by it and also against any claims or demands on account of any injuries to any employes of the party of the second part, and promises to repay the party of the first part any sums which it may be required to disburse because of such claims. It will also pay to said party of the first part full compensation for any injury to persons or property for which the said first party may be held liable by reason of the negligence or want of care or caution of the servants or employes of the party of the second part, or by reason of the use by the said second party of defective machinery or appliances. Provided, however, that any damage arising from the carelessness of the sole employes of the party of the first part, shall be paid by the said first party.

When any injury or damage to persons or property shall be caused by the operation of trains over the track hereinbefore described, and it cannot be determined which party is responsible therefor, the cause shall be regarded as concealed, and the compensation made to the party injured shall be apportioned to and paid by the parties hereto in equal parts.

Seventh. This agreement shall continue in full force and effect for a period of five (5) years from the date hereof, with the privilege to the party of the second part and renewal for five (5) years additional, provided, notice is given to the party of the first part that such renewal is desired, not less than three (3) months prior to the termination of this agreement; and the party of the first part reserves the right to can-1037 cel this agreement at any time after the expiration of said first term of five (5) years, upon giving six (6) months' written notice to the party of the second part of its intention so to do.

Eighth. That all questions arising under this agreement which cannot be amicably adjusted by the proper officers of the parties hereto, shall be finally settled by arbitration, as is customary between railroad Companies.

In Witness Whereof, the parties hereto have caused these presents to be signed by their duly authorized officers, the day and year first above written.

This Agreement made and entered into this 14th day of October, A. D. 1903, by and between the Wabash Railroad Company, party of the first part, and the Des Moines Union Railway Company, party of the second part, Witnesseth That

Whereas the second party, under a certain contract, dated the 27th day of March, 1903, is operating its cars and engines to the so-called Carbondale mines, east of the city of Des Moines; and,

Whereas, the second party desires a further use of the main track of the party of the first part, extending from the point of connection with the track of the party of the second part to the center of East Thirtieth Street in the city of Des Moines, as shown upon the blue print hereto attached, marked Exhibit "A" and made a part of this contract for the purpose of handling gravel.

Now Therefore in consideration of the covenants and stipulations herein set forth, the parties hereby agrees each with the other as follows:

First: The party of the first part hereby grants unto the party of the second part the right to use its said main tracks and passing tracks, and appurtenances, as shown in red upon said blue print, for the purpose of moving loaded and empty cars, with its own engines and crews, to and from the lines and tracks of the second party, which said second party proposes to hereafter construct and maintain.

1041 Second. The second party agrees in consideration of the rights herein given it, to pay to the party of the first part, for the use of said tracks and appurtenances, the sum of fifty cents for each loaded car (empties free) transported over said tracks by the motive power of the second party, in either direction, and whether destined to or transported from said switch tracks, herein proposed to be constructed by the second party, which payments shall be made to the party of the first part at the end of each month, during the continuance of this agreement.

Third: The party of the second part will also pay all mileage which may be charged for cars moved over said tracks by its engines and crews, and will reimburse said first party for any and all payments of money that it may be required to make on this account.

Fourth: It is further understood and agreed between the parties hereto that this agreement governs only the business which the party of the second part proposes to move to and from said switch tracks of the second party and no other.

Fifth: All trains of the party of the first part shall at all times have precedence over trains of the party of the second part in the use of said tracks, and said party of the second part shall be subject to and governed by the time schedules, rules and regulations of the party of the first part in the use of said tracks.

Sixth: All property transported by the party of the second part over the tracks of the party of the first part, shall be at the risk of the party of the second part, and re-1042 sponsibility for damage or injury to persons or property transported or owned by it, growing out of or caused by any imperfection of said tracks and appurtenances, or misplacements of switches, or for any damage to stock or injury that may occur to persons while walking on the said tracks by being struck by trains of said second party, as well as all risks of damage or injury to persons or property growing out of or caused by fire set out by the locomotives of the said second party, or for any other damage that may arise from the movement of the trains handled by said party of the second part.

In case of damage or injuries to persons or property occurring on the trains of either party while on the said tracks, the proper officer of the said first party shall adjust and settle same, and a release shall be made to both companies, providing that the said first party shall not make any settlement of a claim which the party of the second part is to pay under the provisions hereof, without consultation with the proper officers of the said second party.

The said party of the second part promises and agrees to protect and save harmless the said party of the first part against any claims or demands on account of injuries to persons or property transported by it, or to its employees, and also against any claims or demands on account of any injuries to any employees of the party of the second part, and promises to repay the party of the first part any sums which it may be required to disburse because of such claims. It will also pay to said party of the first part full compensation for any injury to persons or property for which the 1043 said first party may be held liable by reason of the negligence or want of care or caution of the servants or employees of the party of the second part, or by reason of its failure to observe the conditions and requirements of this agreement, or by reason of the use by the said second party of defective machinery or appliances. Provided, however, that any damage arising solely from the carelessness of the sole employees of the party of the first part, shall be paid by the said first party.

When any injury or damage to persons or property shall be caused by the operation of trains over the track hereinbefore described, and it cannot be determined which party is responsible therefor, the cause shall be regarded as concealed, and the compensation made to the party injured shall be apportioned to and paid by the parties hereto in equal parts.

Seventh: This agreement shall continue in full force and effect until the first day of May, 1918.

Eighth: That all questions arising under this agreement which cannot be amicably adjusted by the proper officers of the parties hereto, shall be finally settled by arbitration, as is customary between railroad companies.

Dear Sir:—

The annual meeting of the Stock-holders and Directors of the Des Moines Union will occur on January 4th. You will recall that at our last meeting in Chicago it was decided that all Directors and Stockholders should be represented at this meeting, and in view of the fact that it takes the unanimous vote of all Stock-holders and Directors to transact business, I urge that at this annual meeting a full representation be had.

The Constructing Quartermaster at the Army Post writes me nearly every day respecting our proposed track and they are doing all they can to help us with the Department in Washington.

I have been to St. Paul and talked with Mr. A. B. Stickney and he is willing to use our new bridge and give us a crossing over his main line in South Des Moines, without installing an interlocker, and will pay us twenty-four hundred dollars a year rental for the use of our bridge. While this rental is, in our opinion, inadequate, yet I would be inclined to take this amount in case we are not able to induce them to pay us a larger rental.

I believe we should increase our Capital stock at the annual meeting, as suggested by Mr. McKenna, in order that we may be able to issue bonds or other evidence of indebtedness that will be legal. With the small amount of stock now out-1048 standing we cannot legally increase our indebtedness.

I am therefore pursuing our negotiations with the several industries in South Des Moines and am assuming that affirmative action will be taken on this at our annual meeting.

Inasmuch as Mr. F. M. Hubbell desires to leave Des Moines as soon as this meeting is over, I trust that it may be had on the regular day and am writing you this long in advance in hopes that the date will be convenient for all parties. Kindly acknowledge receipt, at your early convenience, advising me.

Dear Sir:—

Referring to the matter of the proposed Army Post track:

Our people are of the opinion that if this line is built, it should be done by the Des Moines Union Railway Company, and if the tenant companies advance the funds with which to build the line, the Des Moines Union Railway Company should issue its bonds to cover the cost, and turn them over to the tenant companies to reimburse them for the amounts so advanced.

We are strongly of the opinion that the cost of the line should not be paid for from the so called "Surplus Earnings Account".

Yours truly,

Dear Sir:—

I have delayed answering your letter of February 7th, asking for renewal of the contract between the Wabash Railroad Company and the Des Moines Union Railway Company covering the use of Wabash track from Des Moines to Ross Junction and Hastie, until I could hear from President Delano.

I am today in receipt of a letter from him to the effect that we will be willing to renew the contract for a period of five years on the basis of $1.25 for each loaded car and 50 cents for each empty car.

If these terms are satisfactory, please advise me and I will have new contract prepared.

Dear Sir:

Referring to your visit at my office:

I find that there are important commercial considerations in reference to the trackage rate on Carbondale coal; and as I telegraphed you, I want to reconsider the proposition which we talked of.

The low trackage rate which we are giving you operates to enable you to make a very low commercial rate on this coal into Des Moines, and the coal comes in direct competition with coal from our mines at Tracey, Dunreath and other points, and demoralizes all the rates at Des Moines. We do not see why we should give a low trackage rate so as to enable you to demoralize our rate situation. If you will charge regular Iowa Distance Tariff rate from these mines, that will be satisfactory to us, and we will give you a trackage rate, say adjusted on a tonnage basis, which will give you a handsome profit.

1055 We would rather have a division of the rate than to have a trackage rate on a per car basis; but the thing that is important to us is getting the rate situation adjusted. It does not help us at all to make a little money out of trackage on this business, if by reason of it, we lose money on the handling of all coal going into the Des Moines market.

Yours very truly,

Mr. F. A. Delano,

Dear Sir:

Yours of the 24th with copy of Mr. J. A. Wagner's letter of the first to you, in which he states that he is at a loss to understand wherein the $5.00 switching rate which they make from the Smith Lowe Mines at Carbondale to Des Moines, can in any way affect the rate on commercial coal into Des Moines.

I think this $5.00 has a material effect on our rates on coal for the C. M. & St. P. The Wabash and Des Moines (Union) are competitors for the C. M. & St. P. tonnage, and the Wabash rate was last year 32½ cents, 40 tons to the car, or $13.00 per car. The Des Moines Union rate, 40 tons, $5.00 per car; difference in favor of the Smith Lowe Co., of $8.00 per car, this difference on tonnage from our mines to the C. M. & St. P. on 5,000 cars would amount to $40,000.00.

Our operators claim to have lost about $15,000.00 last year and have stated that we would either have to make them a lower rate or they would close the mines.

Our Operators also put in quite a lot of commercial tonnage at Des Moines on which they are obliged to make a very low price because of the low rate from the Smith Lowe Mines, and the local competition of the mines located in Des Moines.

As to the trade in Des Moines: I understand it costs about 60 cents per ton to haul from the mines to point of consumption, and we have no chance to compete against the wagon trade except to industries having side tracks, and in such cases, at distance tariff rate of, for five miles, 30 cents on lump and 25 cents on fine coal, we have an advantage over the wagon mine. I believe that the Des Moines can get the Iowa Distance Tariff rates for five miles, of 30 cents on lump and 25 cents on fine coal, on all of their trade at Des Moines, and that therefore, they can afford to pay us a much better trackage rate than they have been paying and probably, at the same time, get more money out of the business themselves.

The C. R. I. & P. also have track connection with these mines, and I am informed that they make no less than the Iowa Distance Tariff rates from the mines into Des Moines.

Yours truly,

(Signed) D. O. IVES.

Dear Sir:—

Referring to yours of April 15th: As I said to you before, we are a good deal more concerned with the maintenance of our tariff rates in Iowa than we are with any revenue out of trackage, and rather than have our rates demoralized and held down by low switching charges which you are making, we would forego the revenue we are making out of trackage altogether.

I would suggest, however, that you put in regular Iowa Distance Tariff, namely thirty cents per ton on lump coal, and twenty-five cents per ton on fine coal; that you pay us one-third of the earnings on this business at a minimum of $2.00 per loaded car, and make no charge for empty cars.

The particular objection was the Committee's failure to transfer 1/4 of the terminal property at Des Moines, free of encumbrance. If you have not obtained Gen. Hubbard's opinion, please do so at as early date and let me know what it is.

Dear Sir:—

An attachment suit was brought recently in the District Court of your city by the Des Moines Northern and Western Railway Company, and the Des Moines Union Railway Company vs. James F. Joy, O. D. Ashley, Thomas H. Hubbard and Edgar T. Welles, constituting the Wabash Purchasing Committee. The action is for breach of covenant contained in a certain contract under which the Purchasing Committee conveyed, or agreed to convey, to Polk & Hubbell, the Des Moines Northwestern Railroad and an interest in certain Des Moines terminal properties.

They claim that the committee contracted to give them a clear title, and that some of the property was incumbered. An attachment has been issued and levied on the interest of the Committee in the Des Moines & St. Louis railroad. The amount involved is between twenty-seven and twenty-eight hundred dollars. Mr. Cummins, who represents the plaintiffs, has said he would take no default for a few days, but the time will expire very soon, perhaps Monday.

I have written to New York for instructions concerning a settlement, but have received no reply, and it is neces-1061 sary to have an answer in at once. Will you please take charge of the case and file an answer on Monday, or see Mr. Cummins and get the time for answering extended by stipulation. The Committee may think the proper thing to do, will be to make the plaintiff prove their case. They are trustees and may consider it their duty to do so. What I want is to prevent a default until I hear from them with respect to their wishes in the premises.

Wire me on Monday whether you receive this and will attend to the matter.

Very truly yours,

I have been absent in the East for ten days, and only returned to my office this morning. On my table I find yours of the 8th, and in reply beg leave to say, that Mr. James F. Joy is dead, and I would think notice thereof should be given to the plaintiff. In regard to the questions involved in the litigation, I think the first one is the one you state concerning the title acquired by the plaintiffs in the contracts. Should that be held against us, then a question arises on the construction of the contracts themselves. I know that what the Purchasing Committee intended to convey free from all incumbrances, was the stock, and not the lots and real estate owned by the Company. That was certainly the understanding of every member of the Wabash Purchasing Committee throughout the negotiations and correspondence, and that is the point on which the Purchasing Committee have always relied for their defense, and that is a point in the case which they want fully presented, and on which they desire to take the opinion of the Court. I have not got the contract before me to-day, but will endeavor to examine it and write you more fully by to-morrow's mail.

In the District Court of Iowa, in and for Polk County.

#7614. vs. Law.

James F. Joy, O. D. Ashley, Thos. F. Hubbard and Edgar T. Welles.

Petition Filed Oct. 1, 1895.

The plaintiffs for cause of action state;

That they are corporations existing under the laws of the State of Iowa, having their principal places of business at Des Moines, in the County of Polk in said State. That the defendants are a Purchasing Committee associated together prior to the year 1886 for the purpose of purchasing various railroad properties to be sold under foreclosure of certain mortgages executed by the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company.

That prior to the year 1885 the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company had executed a mortgage upon its property, which consisted of a line of railway extending from Farnham street in the City of Des Moines, Iowa, to Fonda in the county of Pocahontas in said State to secure the payment of certain railway bonds issued by the said Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company, and had also executed a lease of its said property for a long term of years to the said Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company. That at the same time 1065 what is known as the "terminals" in Des Moines, consisting of the property of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, as it now is known, which had been then constructed, and which was a part of a railway known as the Des Moines & St. Louis Railway, extending from Farnham street in the said City of Des Moines to Albia in the County of Monroe and State of Iowa, had been mortgaged by the said Des Moines & St. Louis Railway Company to secure railway bonds issued by the said Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company.

The plaintiffs further state that prior to the 9th day of October 1886, suits to foreclose the mortgages which had so been executed upon the property of the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company and upon the terminal property, being a part of the property of the Des Moines & St. Louis Railway Company, and the said properties were about to be sold at said foreclosure sale, the proceedings therefor being then pending in the Circuit Court of the United States, in and for the Southern District of Iowa, Central Division. That thereupon the said defendants, acting under the name and style of the "Purchasing Committee" of the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company, entered into negotiations with a certain co-partnership then doing business in the City of Des Moines, Polk County, Iowa, known as Polk & Hubbell, and composed of F. M. Hubbell and J. S. Polk, looking to the sale by the said defendants to the said Polk & Hubbell of a one-fourth interest in said terminal property and the entire property of the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company. As a conclusion to said negotiations the said Polk & Hubbell on the 9th day of October, 1886, made to the defendants a 1066 written proposition, a copy of which is hereto attached, marked Exhibit "A" and made a part hereof; and thereafter, on the 9th day of October, 1886, three of said defendants, to-wit: O. D. Ashley, Thos. H. Hubbard and Edgar T. Welles, accepted the said proposition in and by a written communication, a copy of which is hereto attached, marked Exhibit "B" and made a part hereof. That thereafter, and on the 10th day of September, 1887, the said Polk & Hubbell and all of the defendants entered into a certain supplementary written agreement touching the same subject-matter, a copy of which is hereto attached, marked Exhibit "C" and made a part hereof.

The plaintiffs further state, that pursuant to said written agreement so entered into the said Polk & Hubbell purchased and entered into possession of the said property formerly belonging to the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company, and, as agreed upon between themselves and the said defendants, a railway corporation known as the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company was organized, to which corporation all the rights and interests acquired by the said Polk & Hubbell in and by their said contract with the defendants were transferred and set over and the said company being so organized, took possession of the said property lying between Farnham street and Fonda, issued its bonds as provided in said agreement, and for a long time operated said property. That after the said purchase was completed as aforesaid, it was mutually agreed between the said Polk & Hubbell, the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company and the 1067 defendants that what was known as the "terminal" property, that is to say, so much of the property formerly belonging to the Des Moines & St. Louis Railway Company as lay between Farnham Street in the City of Des Moines upon the west and twenty-second street in the City of Des Moines upon the east, should be held and owned by a separate corporation; and thereupon, and during the year 1887, the whole of said property was conveyed to the Des Moines Union Railway Company, a corporation which had theretofore been organized, and the said Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company received the one-fourth interest in the said terminal property mentioned in the said contract by the delivery to it of one-fourth of the mortgage bonds issued by the said Des Moines Union Railway Company, and one-fourth of its capital stock.

The plaintiffs further state, that among other properties there was conveyed and transferred to the said Des Moines Union Railway Company under the said agreement lot seven (7), block fifteen (15), in the original town of Fort Des Moines. That at the time the said conveyance and transfer was so made there was a mortgage upon said property, which mortgage had been a lien thereon prior to the time of the acquisition of the lot for railway purposes, in the sum of Four Thousand Dollars ($4,000.00,) which mortgage the Des Moines Union Railway Company on or about the first day of January, 1894, was compelled to pay. That the total amount paid by the said Des Moines Union Railway Company in payment and satisfaction of the said mortgage, which was at the time of the 1068 said agreement a lien upon the said property, was Eleven Thousand Nine Hundred Seventy-four and 84/100 dollars ($11,974.84).

The plaintiffs further show that a certain right of way being a part of said terminal property upon which the railway was then being operated, through lots fifty-three (53) and fifty-four (54), Brooks & Co's Addition to the City of Des Moines, was found not to have been acquired, and the said Des Moines Union Railway Company was compelled to acquire the same at a cost to it of Seven Hundred and sixty-six Dollars ($766.00), that being the lowest sum for which the same could be obtained.

The plaintiffs further state, that the said Des Moines Union Railway Company has been compelled to pay rent for a certain switch known as the distillery switch, with interest, amounting to Fourteen Hundred Eighty-five and 88/100 Dollars ($1485.88). That said switch was a part of the property operated by the terminal company, and should have been free of any lien or incumbrance.

The plaintiffs further state, that of the above named payments the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company or its assigns has been compelled to pay the sum of Twenty-seven Hundred Eighty-one and 68/100 Dollars ($2781.68) which, if the said terminal property had been free and clear of incumbrance, would not have been required to be paid.

The plaintiffs further state, that the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Company, one of the plaintiffs herein, is now the owner of all the rights, interest, claims and demands hereinbefore set forth arising in favor of the said Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company.

1069 Plaintiffs further state, that the defendants are non-residents and each of them is a non-resident of the State of Iowa.

Wherefore plaintiffs demand judgment against the defendants in the sum of twenty-seven Hundred Eighty-one and 68/100 Dollars ($2781.68), with interest from ..... and costs of suit.

They further pray that a writ of attachment may issue against the lands and tenements, goods and chattels, rights and credits of the defendants.

Exhibit "A"

New York, October 9, 1886.

To the Purchasing Committee of the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Ry. Co.

Gentlemen:—

We make the following proposition in regard to the Des Moines Northwestern Railway: The mortgage to be foreclosed to cover all advances made by the Wabash Company to the D. M. N. W. Ry. Co. A good and perfect title free from all liens and incumbrances (including all claims the Receivers may have against it) to be made to Polk & Hubbell for said railway (and all its property, rights, franchises, all its interest in the equipment), and a one-fourth interest in the terminal property at Des Moines and 5037 shares of stock in the D. M. N. W. Ry. Co.

Upon the delivery of the property above named in the condition as to title as above specified, Polk & Hubbell are to pay the Committee a $450,000 first mortgage 5% bond. The issue to be only $450,000, and to be secured by a first mortgage on the property conveyed, to-wit: on that part of said railway lying between Farnham street in Des Moines and the town of Fonda and equipment. To run two years from the time the title is delivered to Polk and Hubbell, and to be redeemable at their option at any time before maturity upon payment of principal and accrued interest, and if paid within one 1071 year from the time the title is delivered to Polk and Hubbell, then $450,000 cash shall discharge said mortgage and debt. Polk and Hubbell to have all the stock of the new company. As soon as the contract is completed Polk and Hubbell are to make arrangements to standard gauge the road. If accepted, the details and plan of carrying out the above is to be agreed upon and embodied in a contract to be signed by the necessary parties.

POLK & HUBBELL.

Exhibit "B"

New York, October 9, 1886.

The foregoing proposition is satisfactory to us, and we agree as a Committee acting under the contract of July 15th, 1885, between ourselves and certain bondholders, to take all measures in our power to have the same fully performed.

(Signed) O. D. ASHLEY.
THOS. H. HUBBARD,
EDGAR T. WELLES.

1673 This Memorandum of Agreement made and entered into this 10th day of September, A. D. 1887, by and between Messrs. Polk & Hubbell, parties of the first part, and James F. Joy, Ossian D. Ashley, Thomas H. Hubbard and Edgar T. Welles, as a Purchasing Committee under contract of July 15th, 1885, parties of the second part, Witnesseth:

That whereas, under date of October 9th, 1886, the parties to this agreement entered into a certain conditional contract for the foreclosure and sale of the Des Moines Northwestern Railway, as shown by copy of proposition of the first party hereto and acceptance of the second party hereto, attached to this agreement and made part hereof;

And Whereas, in pursuance of said contract said foreclosure and sale is to take place as provided in said agreement, and said parties of the first part expect and intend to become purchasers at said sale;

Now Therefore, it is further agreed between the parties above named, as follows:

1st. For the purpose of enabling Messrs. Polk & Hubbell to bid in the Des Moines Northwestern Railway at the foreclosure sale above referred to, the Committee will furnish to said Polk & Hubbell the general mortgage bonds required to make payment of said bid, so far as the same may be required and can be used in that way; the cash payment required by the decree shall be advanced by Messrs. Polk & Hubbell 1674 and credited upon the purchase price of the property above mentioned.

2nd. A decree of foreclosure and sale shall be entered as soon as possible after the first day of the next term of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District, Central Division of Iowa. Messrs. Polk & Hubbell will see that the amount of the cash payment is made as small as possible, and to that end will negotiate for a reduction of the Master's fees and other costs, so far as the same can be obtained. The day of sale shall, moreover, be made as soon as possible.

3rd. The requirement of the agreement hereto annexed, for the delivery to the Committee by Messrs. Polk & Hubbell of a bond for $450,000, shall be satisfied by the delivery of such bond secured by first mortgage as provided in proposition of October 9th, 1886, executed by a new corporation organized for that purpose, and holding the property disposed of at such sale.

4th. As soon as practicable after the signing of this stipulation the Des Moines Northwestern Railway shall be turned over to Messrs. Polk & Hubbell, and thenceforth regarded as having been transferred under the contract hereto annexed.

5th. Simultaneously with the execution and delivery of said bond the Committee will convey to Messrs. Polk & Hubbell, or their assignees, the one-fourth interest in the terminal property at Des Moines, and will transfer also 5037 shares of stock of the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company, and also all the interest of the parties of the second part in the equipment of said Des Moines Northwestern Railway. It is hereby understood that the rolling stock of the New 1075 York & Pacific Car Trust Association is not included in this agreement.

Simultaneously with the conveyance above mentioned of one-fourth interest in the terminal property at Des Moines, the same shall be mortgaged back to the Purchasing Committee for the further security of the said $450,000. In case, however, the terminal property at Des Moines shall be merged in a terminal company either before or after the transfer of one-fourth interest as above, the bonds and stock received from the Terminal Company in exchange for said one-fourth interest shall be transferred in lieu of the property to Messrs. Polk & Hubbell, or their assignees, or transferred by them to the Committee, to be held by the Committee as a further security for the payment of the $450,000. above mentioned.

6th. The transfer of the bonds mentioned in paragraph one of this agreement, to Messrs. Polk & Hubbell, and the execution and delivery of the bond and mortgage mentioned in paragraph three, shall be consummated, if possible on the same date as the delivery of the Master's deed to Messrs. Polk & Hubbell, or their assignees; said mortgage being recognized as a purchase money mortgage.

In the District Court of Iowa, in and for Polk County.

Des Moines Northern & Western R. R. Co., et al., Plaintiff, vs.

James F. Joy, et al.,

Defendants.

Amendment to Petition.

Filed Dec. 23, 1896.

Comes now the plaintiff, the Des Moines Northern & Western Railroad Company, and in response to the motion to make its petition more specific filed herein January 26th, 1896, avers that the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company acquired the interest of the said Polk & Hubbell in the said contract with the defendants in the following manner: At the time the said contract was made with the said defendants it was agreed by and between the membership of the firm of Polk & Hubbell that all the rights and property acquired by them under and by virtue of the said contract with the Purchasing Committee should be assigned and conveyed to a corporation to be organized known as the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company, and if said agreement had been carried out the one-fourth interest in the said terminal property set forth in the original petition would have been so conveyed and transferred to the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company. That before the said agreement was 1078 executed it was modified as follows, to-wit: That an independant corporation known as the Des Moines Union Railway Company should be organized, which should become the owner of the said terminal property, and that in lieu of the undivided interest in the said terminal property which was to be so conveyed by the said Polk & Hubbell to the said Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company the said Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company should have and receive one fourth of the capital stock of the said Des Moines Union Railway Company. That in pursuance of such modified agreement the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company was organized, and received a conveyance of all said property except the terminal property, and the Des Moines Union Railway Company was organized, and issued to the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company upon the verbal order of the said Polk & Hubbell one-fourth of its capital stock; and thereupon the said Polk & Hubbell verbally assigned and transferred, in addition to the said one-fourth of the capital stock of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, all the rights and interests which they had acquired in or pertaining to the said terminal property from the defendants, and under the contract set forth in the original petition; and in that manner the said Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company became the owner of the cause of action which is herein set out.

Answering the second requirement of the said motion, the said plaintiff says that in December, 1891, the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company, pursuant to the statutes of Iowa, consolidated all its rights, properties, privileges, 1079 franchises, cause of action and stock with a corporation known as the Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, and the said consolidated company issued its bonds in an amount not necessary to herein state, and secured the same by a mortgage upon all its property, including the one-fourth of the capital stock of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, and including the said cause of action against the defendants. That thereafter the said mortgage was foreclosed in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of Iowa, Central Division, and all the property embraced in the said mortgage, including the cause of action herein was sold at public sale under an execution in the said foreclosure proceedings. That at such sale the said property, including the said cause of action, was purchased by a Purchasing Committee composed of G. M. Dodge, F. M. Hubbell and F. C. Hubbell. Plaintiffs.	:

Defendants.	:

Come now defendants, O. D. Ashley, Thomas F. Hubbard and Edgar T. Welles, and for answer to the plaintiffs' petition as amended, say:

That said defendant James F. Joy, died prior to January, 1897.

That they admit that the plaintiffs are corporations organized under the laws of Iowa, and having their principal place of business at Des Moines, Iowa.

That they admit that defendants are non-residents of the state of Iowa.

That they admit that these defendants with said James F. Joy were constituted a "Purchasing Committee" under a contract dated July 15, 1885, between themselves and certain bondholders of Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company, but deny that their powers and duties are correctly or fully set forth in the petition.

That they admit that these defendants with said James F. Joy in their capacity as a "Purchasing Committee", as defined in said contract appointing them and not otherwise, did on or about the 10th day of September, 1887, enter into certain written agreements with Polk and Hubbell for the sale of certain stock and bonds of the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company, and certain stock and bonds of the Des 1082 Moines Union Railway Company. That whether the copies Exhibits "A", "B" and "C" are true copies of said written agreements, or of them, these defendants have neither knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief.

That they deny that they intended to, or did, or were, by said Polk & Hubbell, understood to agree to warrant the title of said terminal property, or to incur either personally, or as a "Purchasing Committee" or on behalf of their principals, liability whatever in respect to defects in title or incumbrances upon said terminal property.

That they deny that they are either personally or as a "Purchasing Committee", or on behalf of their principals, liable or indebted to plaintiff in the sum of $2781.68, or in any other sum or amount, whatever.

That they deny that plaintiffs are, or ever were the owners of the claims sued on.

That they deny each and every allegation in the petition not herein admitted.

Wherefore, defendants demand judgment for costs.

1083 Defendants' Exhibit 522.

In the District Court of the State of Iowa in and for Polk County.

Des Moines Northern & Western Railroad Company,
vs.
James F. Joy, O. G. Ashley, Thos. F. Hubbard and Edgar T. Wells.

Defendants are a purchasing committee of the bondholders of the old Wabash System, and as such bought in the property covered by the mortgage securing the payment of said bonds. Under date of October 9, 1886, Polk & Hubbell made to said Committee a proposition relating to one piece of the property formerly embraced in the Wabash system, and covered by the mortgage thereon. The following is a copy of so much of said proposition as is material to the present issue:

"New York, Oct. 9, 1886.

To the Purchasing Committee of the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Ry. Co.

Gentlemen:—We make the following proposition in regard to the Des Moines Northwestern Railway. The mortgage to be foreclosed to cover all advances made by the Wabash Company to the D. M. N. W. Ry. Co. A good and perfect title free from all liens and incumbrances (including all claims the Receivers may have against it) to be made to Polk & Hubbell for said Railway (and all its property, rights, franchises, all its interest in the equipment) and a one-fourth interest in the terminal property at Des Moines and 5037 shares of

This proposition was accepted by the committee and its terms were afterwards carried out in so far as the conveyance of the property and the payment therefor is concerned. Polk & Hubbell claim to have assigned and transferred all that they acquired by said transaction to the plaintiff. Since the conveyance by the committee, it has developed that upon one piece of the property included in what is in the proposition termed the "Terminal property," there was a mortgage, one-fourth of which plaintiff has paid, and it seeks to recover the money thus paid with interest.

It is insisted by defendants, that they did not undertake to convey the one-fourth interest in the terminal property free and clear of all liens, that that undertaking applied to the D. M. N. W. Ry. Why it should apply to that property, and not to the other, is not apparent on the face of the proposition. It is certain that Polk & Hubbell were contracting for some property without liens or incumbrances. The language is "A good and perfect title free from all liens and incumbrances * * * to be made to Polk & Hubbell for said railway * * * * and a one-fourth interest in the terminal property." It is argued that the use of the "interest" indicates that Polk & Hubbell were to take the property as it stood. Ordinarily the word "interest" is used to indicate less than the whole of a thing. If I say I own a half interest in a farm, it cannot be reasonably contended that I have claimed to own one-half of 1085 it, subject to incumbrances. Indeed, it seems to me, that such a construction of the word would be both unnatural and unreasonable. If, however, there can be any doubt as to the correctness of this construction of the clause of the proposition under consideration, when it is considered in connection with what follows, there can be none. The next clause of the contract, it will be noticed provides that "upon the delivery of the property above named in the condition as to title as above specified, Polk & Hubbell are to pay", etc. What was the property above named? Certainly the one-fourth interest in the terminal property was a part of it. If this be true, then beyond all question the title to that property was to be delivered as above provided, to-wit, "free and clear from all incumbrances." I conclude that the "terminal property" equally with the property designated as the D. M. N. W. Ry. "was to be free of liens and incumbrances."

II

Defendants insist, that plaintiff has not shown, that it is the owner of whatever rights Polk & Hubbell acquired in the "terminal property" under their contract with the purchasing committee, and that it has not shown a right to maintain an action thereunder.

Before proceeding to a consideration of the evidence upon this question, it may be premised that the Des Moines Union Ry. Co. is a corporation organized by the parties interested in the terminal property, for the purpose of taking, 1086 holding and operating that property.

Mr. Hubbell of the firm of Polk & Hubbell was a witness upon the hearing of this cause, and no witness controverted any statement made by him. His testimony upon this question was as follows:

Polk & Hubbell obtained from the purchasing committee a contract for the purchase of the railway, and the terminal property, and in some way they turned their rights under the contract over to the new railway company that was organized. I think that was by an oral transaction. The rights that Polk & Hubbell obtained in all the property, whether the terminal or the railroad, was assigned and transferred by Polk & Hubbell to the Des Moines & Northwestern Ry. Co. I do not remember how it was done. We did not consider it was our individual property. As soon as the company was organized everything we had obtained from the purchasing committee was passed over to the railroad company. (Q) You may state whether the one-fourth of the bonds of the Des Moines Union Ry. Co. were issued to the Des Moines & Northwestern Railroad Company at the order of Polk & Hubbell and with their consent and knowledge? (A) They were. The bonds were issued to the purchasing committee, and when the purchasing committee essayed to comply with the contract to give to Polk & Hubbell or their assignees its shares in the Des Moines Union, it was done by the purchasing committee giving to the Des Moines & Northwestern Ry. Co. 112 Des Moines Union bonds * * * and when the stock of the Des Moines 1087 Union Ry. Co. was issued one-fourth of it was issued to the Des Moines & Northwestern Ry. Co. and it has been held by that company or its successors until the present and has been voted by that company.

From the first that quarter interest in the stock of the Des Moines Union Ry. Co. has always been recognized by everybody who had any connection with the company whatever, as the property of the Des Moines & Northwestern Ry. Co. and the firm of Polk & Hubbell either in writing or otherwise transferred to the Des Moines Northwestern Ry. Co. the one-fourth interest in the terminal property. The purchasing committee and its members knew that the Des Moines & Northwestern Ry. Co. was holding one-fourth interest in the bonds of the Des Moines Union Ry. and a one-fourth interest in its stock, as the one-fourth interest in the terminal property which they agreed to sell and deliver to Polk & Hubbell. The Des Moines & Northwestern Ry. Co. paid the entire purchase price of the property by Polk & Hubbell bought of the purchasing committee."

The foregoing leaves no room to doubt that the Des Moines & Northwestern Ry. Co. acquired all the rights of Polk & Hubbell under the contract with the purchasing committee. That corporation executed a mortgage to the Metropolitan Trust

Co. to secure the payment of certain bonds issued by it, which mortgage covered among other property "a one-fourth interest in the capital stock of the Des Moines Union Ry. Co. This mortgage was foreclosed and upon sale thereunder Messrs. G. M. Dodge, F. M. Hubbell and F. C. Hubbell as a purchasing committee bought in the entire property, including said 1088 interest in the capital stock of the Des Moines Union Ry. Co. Thereafter the plaintiff company was organized and the Messrs. Dodge & Hubbell conveyed to it all the property by them purchased under the foreclosure sale.

What did it take under such conveyance? Certainly a one-fourth interest in the Capital Stock of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, and nothing more. The Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company doubtless had a right of action against the defendants under the terms of the contract entered into by them with Polk & Hubbell, but such right of action was not included in the mortgage to Metropolitan Trust Co. and did not pass under the foreclosure thereof.

A judgment must be entered against plaintiff for costs.

This cause was heretofore tried to the court without a jury, the plaintiff appearing by Cummins, Hewitt & Wright, its attorneys, and the defendants appearing by Baily, Ballerich & Preston, their attorneys. The court having heard the evidence and arguments of counsel took the case under advisement.

And now, to-wit, on this 5th day of August, 1899 this cause came on for decision and judgment. The court being fully advised in the premises finds for the defendant and against the plaintiff.

It is therefore ordered and adjudged that plaintiff's cause of action be and it is denied and this action dismissed at the merits; that the attachment be discharged and the attached property released therefrom, and that defendants have and recover from plaintiff, Des Moines Northern and Western Railroad Company, the costs of this action as taxed by the clerk, and that execution issue therefor.

1090 Defendants' Exhibit 523a.

Whereas since the execution of the terminal agreement to which this is appended as a supplement, the Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, has become the owner of the railway extending from Des Moines, Iowa, to Boone, Iowa, formerly owned by the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, and has become substituted in said contract in the stead of the said St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company,

Whereas the said Des Moines & Northern Railway Company has entered into a trackage contract with the owner of the line of railroad, extending from Des Moines, Iowa, southeasterly to Harvey, Iowa, known as the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad, and

Whereas the said Des Moines & Northern Railway Company expects to transport coal over said Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad, through Des Moines to points upon the line of the Des Moines & Northern Railway, and to points upon the connections of said last named company, using in the passage of trains through Des Moines, the tracks of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, and

Whereas it is believed that for such traffic, (which is understood to be the movement of coal trains directly through the said City of Des Moines, without switching or handling, and their operation by the engines and crews of the said Des Moines & Northern Railway Company), there should be a different method of computing wheelage, in order to ascertain the 1091 amount which should be apportioned to the said Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, of the expense of the terminal property.

It Is Therefore Now Agreed by and between all the parties to said contract, of which this is a supplement, as follows to-wit:

That in making the apportionment and division of the cost and expense provided in said contract to be made, all coal trains and cars loaded upon the line of said Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad, moved by the engines of the said Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, and passing through Des Moines Northward, and for all empty coal trains or coal cars destined to points on the line of the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad, for the purpose of taking on loads of coal wheelage shall be computed as follows:

1st. Upon all such coal cars and coal trains, whether loaded or empty, but one wheelage for each trip shall be reckoned for their passage over the said tracks of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, that is to say, one wheelage for the loaded cars or trains going northward, and one wheelage for the empty cars or trains going southward.

2nd. The wheelage of the said Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, reckoned as above, for such coal cars and trains and empty coal cars and trains, shall not share in all the costs and expense of said terminal property as provided in said contract to which this is a supplement, but such wheelage shall be limited to the following items of 1092 expense, namely:

(a) To one third of the yearly interest upon the bonds of said Des Moines Union Railway Company, and one third of the taxes; but if bonds shall be issued for the purpose of building a new passenger depot, they shall be excluded.

(b) To the entire expense of the road department, in which it is understood there is to be included the salaries of train dispatches and crossing watchmen. It is agreed that the renewal of bridges and the proposed extension of the tracks to connect with the Des Moines & Kansas City Railroad, shall not, for the purpose of this contract, be considered as falling within the meaning of the phrase "road department."

It is, however, further agreed that the cost of keeping the bridge over the Des Moines River in repair shall, as long as the same is used, be taken as a part of the expense of the "road department"; and if during the continuance of this contract a new bridge is built over said river, to take the place of the one now in use, although the traffic herein provided for is not to bear any part of the expense of the new bridge, nevertheless, there shall be thereafter, during the continuance of this contract, be added each month to the expense of the road department, for the purpose of computing wheelage on said traffic, a sum which shall be equal to the average monthly expense of keeping said bridge in repair after the execution of this contract, and before said new bridge is built.

1093 3rd. In the items of expense mentioned in the preceding paragraph, the wheelage of the said Des Moines & Northern Railway Company above described, and reckoned as above provided, shall share with the other users of said property, and the amount thus found to be due shall be billed to the Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, and paid by it as provided in said original contract.

4th. This contract shall continue and be in force for the period of eighteen months from and after its execution, and at the end of said period shall cease and determine.

1091 Defendants' Exhibit 524.

This Agreement, Made and entered into this second day of June, 1880, by and between the Des Moines Union Railway Company, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Iowa, and having its principal place of business at Des Moines, Iowa, party of the first part and the Chicago, St. Paul & Kansas City Railway Company, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Iowa, party of the second part, Witnesseth; that

Whereas, the said party of the first part is the owner of valuable terminal facilities in the City of Des Moines, Iowa, consisting of main and side tracks, freight and passenger depots, depot grounds, lands, yards, sheps, round houses, transfers, and other property connected with the operation of railways extending from the eastern boundary line of said city to Farnham Street in the western part thereof, and

Whereas the party of the second part is the owner of and operates a line of railway extending to, from and through the said City of Des Moines, and

Whereas, said second party is desirous of obtaining the right to use said terminals or a portion thereof in connection with its said line of railway, and

Whereas, it is understood that the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company and the Des Moines & Northern Railway Company have by contract acquired the right to use said terminals, 1025 Now Therefore, in consideration of the premises and the mutual covenants and agreements hereinafter contained, it is agreed by and between the parties hereto as follows, to wit;

Section One:—

That the party of the first part grants to the party of the second part the use (in common with such railway companies as heretofore have, or may hereafter enter into contract with the party of the first part) of its terminal property aforesaid, including tracks, passenger and freight depots, round houses, shops, buildings and structures and all betterments, renewals, improvements of and additions to the same for the term of three years from and after the first day of June, 1880; and thereafter until the same shall be terminated by one year's written notice by either of the parties hereto, but such notice shall not be given until after the expiration of said period of three years; but such use shall at all times be subject to the reasonable regulation and control of the party of the first part, which shall at all times manage and operate said terminal property in the interest and for the benefit of such railway companies as may acquire the right to use the same; and said first party agrees to keep and maintain its said terminal property in good condition and repair and to provide and maintain all such engines, machinery, appliances, buildings and structures, and all such servants and employes as shall be reasonably necessary for the conduct of its business and the moving and handling of cars, passenger and freight, of said second party and the housing and care of its en-

1026 gines; and said first party further agrees to switch all cars, handle all freight, house and care for all engines of said second party which may be delivered to it or which may come upon its said terminal property, in so far as said second party may request it so to do; and said first party further agrees that the use hereby granted shall be without preference or unreasonable precedence for or to itself or any of the lessees of said terminals in the manner of train time, schedules or the handling or switching of cars and trains and occupancy of depots or the occupancy of said property or any part thereof or in the service herein agreed to be performed, always however, subject to such reasonable control and direction by the party of the first part as may be necessary to avoid confusion and expedite the management of the business of the party of the first part.

Section Two:—

The party of the second part agrees to pay to the party of the first part monthly, a sum of money to be ascertained as follows to-wit:

1st:—There shall be ascertained the amount required to pay five per cent upon the mortgage bonds of the party of the first part, one twelfth of which shall be payable monthly as hereinafter specified.

2nd:—At the expiration of each month, or as soon thereafter as practicable, there shall be ascertained the expenses of maintaining the property of the party of the first part including the renewal, maintenance and repair of tracks, depots, round houses, engine houses, etc., during the preceding month, not exceeding original cost of construction, and in like man-
1897 ner there shall be ascertained the taxes, general or special, levied upon or against said property and paid during the preceding month, or to be paid during the next succeeding month, and the insurance, if any, paid during the preceding month, or to be paid during the next succeeding month.

3rd:—There shall be likewise ascertained the costs and expenses of every nature, connected with the operation of said terminal station, freight and passenger depots, depot grounds, tracks, round houses, transfers and other properties which is to include every item of expense or disbursement reasonably incurred or made by the party of the first part not hereinbefore mentioned except the expense specified in section four hereof.

Section three;—

Having so ascertained the monthly aggregate of all the items and sums mentioned in the preceding section, the party of the second part shall pay to the party of the first part, that proportion thereof that the wheelage of the party of the second part bears to the entire wheelage of all the railway companies using said terminal facilities, during such preceding month; and it is expressly agreed and understood that in computing wheelage three narrow guage cars shall be taken as the equivalent of two standard guage cars, and that the term wheelage as used in this contract means that three narrow

guage cars are to be accepted as the equivalent of two standard guage cars; and it is further expressly agreed and understood that in computing the wheelage of the party of 1098 the second part, its through passenger trains which pass from its main line east of the Des Moines River to the depot, of the party of the first part, and are returned to said main line over the same track to proceed to their destination shall for each trip be reckoned as though they had come but once upon the said terminal property.

Section Four;—

The costs and expenses of operating the engine houses and their appurtenances and each of them, including the cost of turning and housing engines, furnishing water and sand, and of wiping, washing and firing up, shall be divided, and the party of the second part shall pay such proportion thereof as the number of road engines of the party of the second part in and out of said engine house shall bear to the whole number of road engines in and out thereof during the period for which said costs and expenses are made up. All repairs to engines of the party of the second part shall be paid for on the basis of the actual cost of labor and material. And all services rendered and supplies and labor furnished to the party of the second part for its own benefit and which is not properly a portion of the joint expenses of said terminals shall be charged directly to and paid by said party of the second part on such equitable terms as may be agreed upon between the superintendent of the party of the first part and the superintendent of the party of the second part.

Section Five;—

The party of the first part shall on or before the 10th 1099 day of each month or as soon thereafter as practicable, make up and present to the party of the second part an account showing the amount due hereunder for the preceding month, and payment thereof shall be made within fifteen days thereafter.

Section Six:—

It is further agreed between the parties hereto that if the party of the second part shall, for any reason, fail or refuse for a period of sixty days after the same is due and the said account rendered as aforesaid, to pay the several sums as provided in this contract to be paid, then the party of the first part may take from any moneys in its hands or in the hands of its agents the amount so due and apply sufficient thereof to meet the demands, and if the sum so taken be insufficient to pay the amount due under this agreement and the same shall still remain unpaid, said first party shall have the right to forfeit cancel and annul this contract, but it is expressly understood and agreed that nothing herein contained shall prevent the party of the first part from enforcing its said demands against the party of the second part by any proper action at law or in equity or from recovering the amount which may be at any time due and unpaid if it shall so elect.

Section Seven:—

The management of the terminal property shall be in charge of a superintendent, appointed by the party of the first part, and it is agreed that neither his compensation nor that of other agents and employes shall be higher than is ordinarily paid by railroad companies in the vicinity for similar serv-1100 ices.

Section Eight:—

Said terminals shall be used by the party of the second part for all its regular passenger trains, destined to departing from or passing through said City of Des Moines, and shall be used by all the freight cars of said second party, carrying freight to or from said City of Des Moines, except such freight as may be destined to and from industries on the line of second party's railway.

Section Nine:—

The party of the first part shall keep accurate books of account showing in detail all the expenditures made by it on account of the various items of interest, insurance, taxes, renewals, improvements, operation, maintenance, repairs and other disbursements embraced in this agreement upon and about said premises, so that the parties hereto at all times may be enabled to make accurate settlement of their accounts as provided in this agreement, and said books may at all reasonable and proper hours be examined and inspected by the superintendent, auditor, treasurer or authorized accountant of said second party.

Section Ten:—

The said party of the first part shall also keep an accurate record of all cars and engines of each railway company using said terminals and arriving at or departing from said terminal station, grounds, transfer and yards, and the cars 1101 of foreign roads that may be switched upon or from said terminals for the benefit of any railway occupying said terminal property, and of all the engines which have been housed at said engine houses in each month and as hereinbefore provided said first party shall furnish to the second party hereto, a full, true and detailed statement of all the expenditures made of all the fuel and other supplies used, of all the cars and engines received, handled or switched, of all the work done or repairs made, and of all the engines housed and other expenses connected with the operation of said property during the month next preceding.

Section Eleven:—

All damages which may be received by engines or cars while being switched by the party of the first part at or upon any part of the said terminal property, shall be repaired by the party of the first part, and the cost of such repairs shall be borne and paid as a part of the expenses of the operation of said terminal property and divided upon a wheelage basis as herein defined.

Section Twelve:—

All damages to property caused by any engine or engines, car or cars of the railroad companies occupying said terminals while being switched, managed, controlled, or under the management and control of the party of the first part, or by any imperfection in the track or tracks laid on said premises, and all injuries which may at any time be received by any 1102 person or persons in, around, about, or upon said terminal station, depot grounds, tracks, yards, round houses, transfers &c., caused through or by the party of the first part or any of its agents, officers or servants, shall if settled at all be adjusted and settled by said first party, and the sums thus paid in settlement or settlements shall be considered as a part of the expenses of operating said terminals and shall be divided and paid upon said wheelage basis as herein defined; provided, however, that the party of the second part and each railway company using said terminal facilities, shall at its own cost and expense bear, settle and pay all damages to property belonging to the parties hereto, or to third parties, and all injuries to persons, when said damages or injuries are done to or by its own trains while said trains are being moved by its own engines and are being operated and controlled by its own crews unless such damages or injuries are occasioned by the act, neglect, or fault of the servants of said first party or by some imperfection in its track or tracks; and in case such damages or injuries are so occasioned by the act, negligence or fault of the servants of the said first party, or by any imperfection in its said tracks, then settlements and payments shall be made by said first party and shall be considered as a part of the expenses of operation of said terminals and shall be divided and paid upon the basis of wheelage as herein defined.

Section Thirteen:—

It is further expressly agreed that the party of the second part shall not be required to share in the interest upon 1103 bonds of party of first part in excess of five hundred thousand dollars, except that if party of first part builds a new passenger station or depot, party of second part will share from the time the same is ready for occupancy, in the interest of bonds issued to pay for the same, not exceeding the sum of one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars, additional to said five hundred thousand dollars; provided, further, that no bonds shall be issued or sold for purposes other than enlarging, bettering or improving said terminal property or the payment of some expense connected therewith.

Section Fourteen:—

All matters of difference between the parties hereto which may arise from time to time under the provisions of this contract shall be settled by arbitration—each party selecting one disinterested person; and in case the parties so selected fail to agree, they shall select a third party, and the decision of the majority of the arbitrators shall be final and binding on both parties hereto. And it is further agreed that the arbitrators herein provided for shall be selected within thirty days from date of written notice from one party to the other of a desire to have a matter arbitrated; and in case either party fail or refuse to select one arbitrator on its behalf within thirty days from date on which notice in writing, has been given, then the party desiring the arbitration shall select two disinterested persons, and if they can not agree, they shall select a third. The decision of the majority of the arbitrators, so selected, shall be binding; and in case the arbitrators fail to agree, or fail to choose a third party, or fail to render a decision 1104 within thirty days from the date on which the matter at issue has been submitted to them in writing there shall be a new board of arbitration selected as herein provided for; and this shall be done from time to time and as often as may be desired by either party hereto, until a decision is rendered. All matters at issue to be arbitrated shall be submitted to the arbitrators in writing.

Provided however, that such arbitration and difference shall have no effect upon or interrupt the course of business at said terminal station, grounds, yards, &c., until the final decision of said arbitrators, but such business shall continue to be transacted, settlements and payments as herein provided for shall be made as before until the matter in dispute shall be adjusted by said arbitrators, and thereupon such payments or restitutions shall be made as said arbitrators shall by their decision determine to be just and in accordance with justice and fair dealing under this contract.

In Witness Whereof the respective parties hereto have caused their corporate seals to be hereunto affixed, and these presents to be signed and attested by their secretaries respectively, the day and year first above written.

Whereas, The Des Moines Company is the owner of valuable terminal facilities in the City of Des Moines, Iowa, consisting of main and side tracks, freight and passenger depots, depot grounds, lands, yards, shops, round houses, transfers, and other property connected with the operation of railways, and

Whereas, The Chicago Company is the owner of and operates a line of railway extending from Kansas City, Kansas, through the city of Des Moines, Iowa, to St. Paul and Minneapolis in the State of Minnesota, and Chicago in the State of Illinois, and

1109 inafter set forth, a portion of said terminal property in connection with its said line of railway, and

Whereas, It is understood that the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company (being now operated by the Wabash Railroad Company) and the Des Moines Northern & Western Railroad Company have acquired the right to use said terminals, and that it is the purpose and intent of The Des Moines Company to admit other railway companies to the use of said terminals upon such terms as to it may seem just, not, however, in conflict with the provisions hereof.

Now Therefore, In consideration of the premises and the mutual covenants and agreements hereinafter contained, it is agreed by and between The Des Moines Company and The Chicago Company, parties hereto, as follows, to-wit:

§ 1. The Des Moines Company agrees to maintain its present connection with the track of the Des Moines & Kansas City Railway Company at a point a short distance north of the Raccoon River.

§ 2. The Des Moines Company grants, subject to the conditions hereinafter provided, and for the term of twenty-five years from and after the date hereof, to The Chicago Company, the use in common, with such railway companies, and in all other respects under the same terms and conditions, as heretofore have or may hereafter acquire the right to use said terminals, of a single main track from the point 1110 of connection with the Des Moines & Kansas City Railway Company hereinbefore described, through the City of Des Moines to the existing connection with the main track of The Chicago Company in East Des Moines.

It is further agreed that so much of the main track so above described as lies west of West Seventh Street in the City of Des Moines, and east of the point where the said main track diverges to the south in order to make the connection with the Des Moines & Kansas City Railway, shall be laid with its center line not farther north than seven and one-half feet from the south line of the east and west alley between Cherry and Vine Streets.

It is further agreed that whenever the business shall require it, The Des Moines Company shall lay a second main track between said connection with the track of The Chicago Company in East Des Moines and the point of connection with the Des Moines & Kansas City Railway which said second main track between West Seventh Street and the point of divergence toward the south shall be laid with its center line fifteen feet north of said first main track. When so constructed it shall be included within this lease as above provided for the first main track.

The Des Moines Company further grants, subject to the conditions herein provided, and for a like term, to The Chicago Company, the use, in common, and in all other respects under the same terms and conditions, with such railway companies as heretofore have or may hereafter acquire the right to use said terminals, of all main, spur and side tracks, bridges, turn outs, and cross-overs now owned and 1111 operated by The Des Moines Company, lying east and south of the aforesaid connection between the main line of The Des Moines Company and the main line of The Chicago Company in East Des Moines, as well as the right to reach the same from the main line of The Des Moines Company. Also the side tracks, branch and spur tracks now owned and operated by The Des Moines Company leading into the track running southward toward the Raccoon River, and which are south of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway. Provided, The Des Moines Company shall have the right to take up or change its main tracks, side tracks, branch and spur tracks, or the use thereof, if by so doing the business is not materially impeded.

The Des Moines Company further grants, under the conditions herein provided, and for a like term, to The Chicago Company, the use in common, with such other railroad companies as heretofore have or may hereafter acquire the right to use said terminals, of a proper and suitable track lying west of the connection in Block Eighteen (18), H. M. Hoxie's Addition to Des Moines, for a distance of one thousand feet; such use on the part of The Chicago Company to be for the purpose of switching into and upon the exclusive tracks of The Chicago Company hereinafter described. Also the use in common as aforesaid and in all other respects under the same terms and conditions of all tracks connecting the line of The Des Moines Company with the lines of other railway companies in Des Moines, and used for the purpose of interchanging cars.

1112 It is further provided that the said second main track shall be constructed at once from the center of Block Four (4), in the original town of Fort Des Moines, westward to the point of divergence in Block Eighteen (18), H. M. Hoxie's Addition to Des Moines, and The Chicago Company shall have the exclusive right to use the same until the business done upon the terminals demands its use as a second main line; and The Des Moines Company shall have the sole right to determine when such demand exists. Provided, that until such necessity arises, The Des Moines Company may upon days of unusual traffic exclude The Chicago Company from said second main line, and if it shall desire so to do, it shall give to the said Chicago Company twenty-four hours notice of its desire to use the same.

§ 3. The Des Moines Company further grants, under the conditions herein provided, and for a like term, and subject to the same terms and conditions except as herein expressly modified, to The Chicago Company, the use in common, with such railway companies as heretofore have or may hereafter acquire the right to use the same, of all the passenger stations on the main lines herein leased, including platforms, platform tracks, and baggage rooms, as now or hereafter constructed, upon the terminal property of The Des Moines Company. Said use shall include the right to receive and discharge passengers and baggage, the right to receive and discharge express matter, the use of the passenger station or stations by passengers, and the services of the necessary baggage
1113 men and ticket agents, but shall not extend beyond the ordinary use of a station for passenger traffic. The Des Moines Company agrees that it will, within two years from the date hereof, build a new passenger station sufficient to accommodate the needs of the companies using such terminals, the cost of which, within the above limitations, shall be determined by The Des Moines Company. It is expressly understood and agreed that the entire revenue which may be derived from the use of any such station or stations by news stands, parcel rooms, telegraph and telephone offices, dining rooms, lunch rooms, barber shops, express and transfer offices, or any other offices, and all other uses, shall belong exclusively to The Des Moines Company.

§ 4. The Des Moines Company, subject to the conditions herein provided, and for a like term of twenty-five years, grants to The Chicago Company the exclusive use of the following real property, viz: Lot Three (3) in Block Fourteen (14), except so much thereof as lies north and seven and one-half feet distant from the center line of the north team track; also so much of Lot Six (6) in Block Fourteen (14) as lies south of the line drawn from the southwest corner thereof to a point on the east line thereof forty feet north of the southeast corner of said lot, and Lots Three (3) and Six (6) in Block Nine (9), except so much from all of said lots, or parts of lots, as may be necessary for the second main track hereinbefore described; also Lots Four (4) and Five (5) in Block Nine (9) except that The Des Moines Company shall have the right whenever it may elect, to build, use and oper-1114 ate a track across the northwest corner of said Lot Five (5) connecting with the said north track at the west side of Ninth Street and running on a suitable line for the purpose of crossing Cherry Street and reaching property on the north side of said street; and the right of joint use of the lead track from said western side of Ninth Street to the main track at Tenth Street, to switch to and from above described track. All of said above described real estate being in H. M. Hoxie's Addition to Fort Des Moines; also Lots One (1), Two (2), Seven (7) and Eight (8), in Block Four (4) in the Original Town of Fort Des Moines, except so much of said Lots Two (2) and Seven (7) as may be necessary for the said second main track hereinbefore described.

The Des Moines Company hereby reserves any of the real estate now owned by it and unoccupied by tracks not herein expressly leased to The Chicago Company for the purpose of building an exclusive switching yard for its own use, or the use of its present or future railroad tenants; and also reserves the right to acquire additional real estate for that purpose.

§ 5. The Des Moines Company agrees to construct as soon as practicable, two team tracks across Lot Three (3) in Block Fourteen (14), and Lots Three (3) and Six (6) in Block Nine (9), H. M. Hoxie's Addition to Des Moines, and Lots Two (2) and Seven (7) in Block Four (4) in the Original Town of Fort Des Moines, the center line of the southerly 1115 of said tracks to be fifteen feet distant from the center line of the aforesaid second main track, and the center line of the northerly of said team tracks to be twenty-nine feet north of the center line of the other. The Des Moines Company further agrees to pave the roadway between the said team tracks either with brick or granite, and if it elects to pave with granite, The Chicago Company agrees to haul the granite necessary for the construction of said pavement from St. Paul or Minneapolis to Des Moines free of charge. The Des Moines Company further agrees to connect the said two team tracks with the said main lines.

The Des Moines Company further agrees that The Chicago Company may build, according to such plans as it may adopt, a freight house upon Lots One (1) or Eight (8), or both, in said Block Four (4), Original Town of Fort Des Moines, and that when the same is constructed it will pay to The Chicago Company twelve thousand five hundred dollars ($12,500) of the cost thereof, and The Chicago Company agrees to bear all the expense of the construction of said freight house over and above the said sum of twelve thousand five hundred dollars ($12,500). The Chicago Company agrees that it will maintain at its own expense the said freight house and keep the same in as good condition as when built, ordinary wear and tear excepted. It further agrees to keep the same fully insured in good and responsible companies, and if a loss occurs thereunder the insurance shall be used in rebuilding the said freight house. The Chicago Company further agrees that if such freight house be burned or otherwise destroyed 1116 it will rebuild the same at its own expense, and such new building shall be of at least equal cost with the one so destroyed.

The Chicago Company hereby assents to the vacation of west Sixth Street and waives all claims for damages by reason of such vacation, this assent to become effective whenever desired by The Des Moines Company.

§ 6. The Des Moines Company grants, under the conditions herein provided, to The Chicago Company, and for a like term of twenty-five years, the exclusive right to use the tracks to be constructed under the provisions of the last preceding section, save and except that it is agreed between the parties hereto that there shall be a joint use of the connection and north team track in Lots Three (3) and Six (6), Block Fourteen (14), H. M. Hoxie's Addition to the City of Des Moines, for the purpose of reaching a spur track running through the west half of Lot Five (5), Block Nine (9), H. M. Hoxie's Addition to the City of Des Moines, as provided for in Section Four hereof.

The Des Moines Company further grants under the conditions herein provided, to The Chicago Company, for a like term of years, the exclusive use of all the property now owned by it between the Des Moines River and the Chicago & Northwestern connection, and seven and one-half feet north of the present main tracks of The Des Moines Company.

§ 7. The Des Moines Company agrees that it will, upon request, switch the cars of The Chicago Company to, 1117 upon and from all its switches or side tracks, except regular team and freight house tracks situated between West Fifth St. and the aforesaid connection between the main lines of the two companies in East Des Moines, at one dollar and fifty cents ($1.50) per car, provided, that this provision shall not embrace side tracks and switches hereafter constructed by The Des Moines Company, unless the Chicago Company elects to have the benefits of the same under this agreement. The Chicago Company agrees that it will upon request switch the cars of The Des Moines Company and its present tenant companies to and from private industries located on the switches laid upon the property hereby exclusively leased to The Chicago Company, or extensions thereof, at one dollar and fifty cents ($1.50) per car, and further agrees that it will switch for The Des Moines Company and its present tenant companies, cars from the south side of the Raccoon River loaded with brick or coal at two dollars ($2.00) per car.

§ 8. The Des Moines Company covenants and agrees with The Chicago Company to maintain in proper condition for railway purposes all the tracks and appurtenances hereby leased, except the freight house to be built by The Chicago Company.

§ 9. The Chicago Company, in consideration of the grants and provisions hereof, agrees to pay to The Des Moines Company in the manner and at the times hereinafter specified, the following sums, to-wit:

1118 1st. An annual rental of twelve thousand dollars ($12,000) to be paid in monthly installments in advance upon the first day of each and every month during the said term, in gold coin of the United States of America of or equal to the present standard of weight and fineness.

2d. The sum of two thousand seven hundred and seventy-six dollars ($2,776) annually, payable monthly as hereinafter provided, which sum shall be in lieu of any and every contribution of The Chicago Company toward the general expense of The Des Moines Company, provided, however, that The Chicago Company agrees to pay The Des Moines Company whenever ascertained, one-third of the actual expense including attorneys' fees and costs, of bringing or defending any proceedings at law, or in equity before any court or other legal commission or tribunal, the decision of which would affect expenditures of The Des Moines Company.

3d. One-third of the actual cost and expense to The Des Moines Company during the term aforesaid, of all flagmen, gatemen, policemen, switch tenders, and of repairing, maintaining, renewing, changing and replacing all the existing railway tracks, bridges, and appurtenances (except buildings and general expenses of The Des Moines Company) and all tracks, bridges and appurtenances hereafter constructed and brought within the operation of this lease, and personal injuries to employes while engaged in the track department, or injuries to persons or property growing out of the conducting of the track department.

1119 4th. One-third the interest at current rates on long time loans by solvent railway companies, not exceeding as such one-third, two per centum per annum, upon the actual cost of constructing such changes in or protections or conveniences to the public or modifications of said tracks, bridges and appurtenances (except buildings) as may be required by municipal, legislative or other legal action, or which may be deemed necessary for the most economical or convenient use of said tracks and other appurtenances except buildings; such payments to be made monthly in advance in the gold coin of the United States of America of or equal to the present standard of weight and fineness.

5th. One-third of all taxes or assessments, special or otherwise, and public charges of every kind and nature that shall or may be taxed or assessed against The Des Moines Company or its property during the aforesaid term of years.

6th. One-third of the interest of five per centum per annum upon the cost of any passenger station or stations that may be hereafter constructed by The Des Moines Company, including the cost of tracks, and appurtenances constructed, or additional real estate acquired for the same, provided, that in no event shall The Chicago Company be required to pay under this item more than fifteen hundred dollars ($1,500) per annum, such payments to be made monthly in advance in the gold coin of the United States of or equal to the present standard of weight and fineness.

7th. One-third of any amounts paid by The Des Moines
1120 Company for personal injuries, loss or damage to property, including expenses incident thereto, and one-third of the actual cost and expense of The Des Moines Company during the term of this lease in operating, repairing, maintaining and renewing the passenger station or stations now existing, or hereafter constructed, except general expenses, while said station or stations are occupied by not more than three tenant railway companies, but if more than three tenant railway companies shall occupy said stations, then one-half of the total amount paid by such additional companies for the use thereof, either as rental or as a proportion of operating expenses, or both, shall be deducted each month from the total cost of the maintenance and operation of said passenger station and The Chicago Company shall pay one-third of the remainder.

§ 10. The Des Moines Company shall keep accurate books of account showing in detail all the expenditures made by it on account of the various items of interest, insurance, taxes, renewals, changes, operation, maintenance, repairs, and other disbursements embraced in this agreement upon and about said premises, so that the parties hereto may at all times be able to make accurate settlement of the accounts as provided herein, and said books may at all reasonable and proper hours be examined and inspected by the Superintendent, Auditor, Treasurer, or other authorized accountant of said Chicago Company. The Des Moines Company shall on or before the 10th day of each month, or as soon thereafter 1121 as practicable, make up and present to The Chicago Company an account showing the amount due hereunder for the preceding month, and payment thereof shall be made within fifteen days thereafter at the office of The Des Moines Company in the City of Des Moines, save and except with respect to the items numbered first, fourth and sixth of Section Nine, which payments shall be made monthly in advance as hereinbefore provided. All claimed omissions or errors in said accounts, or exceptions thereto, which may be taken by The Chicago Company, shall be subsequently adjusted between the parties, but shall not delay the prompt payment of the accounts as rendered by The Des Moines Company.

§ 11. In the event that The Des Moines Company shall hereafter construct any additional tracks for the purpose of reaching any private industry or public warehouse, other than a railway freight depot, notice shall be given to The Chicago Company in writing of such construction, and if The Chicago Company desires that such additional tracks be included under the terms of this lease, it shall have the right to so include the same by giving notice in writing of such election, addressed to the President of The Des Moines Company at Des Moines, Iowa, within ninety days after notice is so given by The Des Moines Company. The right acquired with respect to such additional tracks, if The Chicago Company elects to acquire any rights in the same, if located between West Tenth Street and the junction of the main lines in East Des Moines, shall be to have its cars switched thereon 1122 at one dollar and fifty cents ($1.50) per loaded car, but if located south and east of the junction of the main lines in East Des Moines or east of the line of The Des Moines Company and south of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway in West Des Moines, the right shall be a common use as hereinbefore described. The Chicago Company shall pay monthly in advance in the gold coin of the United States of or equal to the present standard of weight and fineness, for such additional tracks so brought within the provisions of this lease, an additional rental of two per centum per annum on the cost of the same, including the real estate which it may become necessary to acquire in order to provide for such construction.

§ 12. The Des Moines Company hereby covenants and agrees to obtain an insurance policy or policies in good responsible fire insurance companies, covering any passenger stations now existing or hereafter constructed, the premiums paid upon such insurance to be charged against the parties hereto upon the same basis as hereinbefore set forth for the operation and maintenance of said station or stations, and keep such policies renewed from time to time during the life of this indenture, and in case of partial or total loss by fire, the proceeds realized from such policy or policies shall be applied by The Des Moines Company in repairing, renewing or replacing the structure or structures so partially or wholly destroyed and in the event that the amount realized from the insurance is not sufficient to renew or replace the 1123 structure, the shortage shall be charged as an expense of said passenger station.

§ 13. The Des Moines Company hereby covenants and agrees that each and all the ticket agents from time to time employed in the passenger stations for the sale of tickets for said Des Moines Company and the tenant companies, shall before they enter upon their duties as such, give an indemnifying bond for their faithfulness in service, or shall be covered by a policy from a Guaranty Company in good standing, and such indemnifying bond or insurance policies shall be renewed from time to time as occasion may require during the life of this indenture. The premiums or expenses relating thereto borne by The Des Moines Company shall form part of the operating expenses of the passenger station, and in the event of any loss or defalcation occurring the money or moneys collected or received from such bond of indemnity or insurance policies shall be apportioned by The Des Moines Company among the several companies in proportion to the loss sustained by each. A compliance with the above provision shall relieve The Des Moines Company of all liability from any such loss or defalcation.

It is further provided that The Des Moines Company shall not continue in its employment any employe connected with the joint occupation of the property, who, for good reasons shown by The Chicago Company, is objectionable to said company, but the right of determining the fitness of 1124 any such employe to remain in his position shall be with The Des Moines Company.

§ 14. It is mutually agreed that all time cards, rules, regulations, and orders for the movement and operation of trains, cars and engines, and for the beneficial enjoyment of the property, the joint, concurrent or common use of which is embraced in this lease, shall be made and promulgated from time to time by The Des Moines Company, and the movement of trains, cars and engines, upon said property shall be under the immediate direction of the Superintendent or other proper officer or agent of The Des Moines Company, but such time cards, rules, regulations and orders shall be reasonable, just and fair to all parties using said property, without preference or discrimination in favor of or against either, but passenger trains of all kinds shall have the right of way and precedence over all other trains and kinds of business upon said property, and The Des Moines Company shall have the general control, management and supervision over the property owned and controlled by it which may be used in common with other railway companies, and the right to enforce proper discipline of employes of The Chicago Company using any of the tracks or property of The Des Moines Company, in common with any of the other railway companies now, or hereafter, using said tracks or property, and in the event The Chicago Company fails or refuses to enforce against any of its employes the penalties prescribed by The Des Moines Company, The Des Moines Company shall have absolute 1125 right to bar said employes from the tracks and property of The Des Moines Company, which are used jointly.

§ 15. The Chicago Company hereby covenants and agrees that it will not, during the term of this lease, use any part of the main track or tracks for switching purposes, further than shall be reasonably necessary to set in and take out cars to and from side tracks in the ordinary course of business, nor do such switching in a manner which shall delay or hinder the passenger or freight trains, or unnecessarily delay the switching crews, of any or either of the parties hereto, or any other companies heretofore or hereafter granted the right to use said facilities by The Des Moines Company or its assigns.

§ 16. It is understood and agreed that the use hereby granted by The Des Moines Company to The Chicago Company, is solely for the business of The Chicago Company destined to, or from or passing through Des Moines, and does not include the right on part of The Chicago Company to switch any car or cars, save in loading or unloading its own freight, and in making up its own trains. The right of switching for hire is expressly reserved to The Des Moines Company.

§ 17. It is understood and agreed that The Chicago Company shall not assign or sublet either or all the rights and privileges hereby granted, or enter into any contract
1126 with any other railroad company by which the latter is given any right whatsoever to use any part of the said terminal property. Nor shall the said Chicago Company have the right to do the business of any other railroad company over the said terminal property or any part thereof by effecting a junction between the line or lines of The Chicago Company and any such other railroad company, at or near the City of Des Moines. This section, however, shall not be construed to prevent the transfer of this lease to the successor, assignee or grantee of The Chicago Company, which shall by such succession, assignment or grant become the owner or operator of the line of railway now owned and operated by The Chicago Company, provided, that in no event shall any company owning or operating any of the railway lines now in Des Moines become entitled to any of the rights and privileges herein granted.

§ 18. The Chicago Company as lessee, hereby covenants and agrees that it will, and it does hereby assume all risk of and all liabilities for injury and damage to persons or to its own property, or to the property of third parties, caused by its trains, cars or locomotives operated by its crews over the railway tracks or bridges covered by this indenture, or caused by any officers, agents or servants employed in the management, running or operating of its trains, cars or locomotives in any manner whatever, or caused by the officers, agents or servants of the grantor and lessor in charge of any interlocking systems, bridges, gates, switches, turn tables or other appliances or devices in any manner whatsoever con-
1127 nected with the operation of the leased property, and in any manner having to do with the management, starting, moving, running or operating of the trains, cars or locomotives of said Chicago Company, or caused by the making or giving of the time cards, rules, regulations, signals and orders, in any manner having to do with the management, starting, moving, running or operating of said trains, cars or locomotives of said Chicago Company, and shall and will during the continuance of this lease save and keep harmless the grantor and lessor from all claims, demands, loss or damage on account thereof. And the Chicago Company as lessee, hereby further covenants and agrees that it will and hereby does assume all risk and all liability for injury or damage to persons, or to its own property, or to property of third parties, caused by its trains, cars or locomotives, by reason of or growing out of defects in the right of way, roadbed, track or tracks, bridges or culverts, or insufficiency of the fences or lack of fences along the right of way of the railway and tracks covered by this indenture, or the failure to erect or build sign boards or gates, or cattle guards or other protections at highway or street crossings in compliance with law, or the failure to erect interlocking systems or other safety appliances at railway crossings, connections or intersections, or the erection or construction of fences, sign boards, gates, cattle guards, interlocking systems, or other safety appliances or protections which do not fully conform to law, and it shall and will during the continuance of this lease save and keep harmless the grantor and lessor from 1128 all claims, demands, loss or damage on account thereof, but if the grantor and lessor shall fail to repair defects in the tracks or bridges within a reasonable time after notice in writing so to do, specifying such defects, or shall fail to build or erect such fences, sign boards, gates, cattle guards, interlocking systems or other safety appliances as may be required by law, or to repair the same, if needing repairs, within a reasonable time after notice in writing so to do, specifying the places where such fences, sign boards, gates, cattle guards, interlocking systems or other safety appliances should be erected or repairs thereon are needed, or the changes necessary to make the same conform to the requirements of law, the grantee and lessee may repair such defects in the track or bridges and erect such fences, sign boards, gates, cattle guards, interlocking systems or other safety appliances, or repair the same, or change the same so as to conform to law, at the cost and expense of the grantor and lessor, subject to the provisions herein contained as to the divisions of the cost and expense of maintenance, renewal and repairs.

And The Chicago Company as lessee, hereby further covenants and agrees that in case any action or actions, suit or suits shall be commenced by any party or parties against the grantor and lessor growing out of any such damage or injury as aforesaid, said grantor may give written notice of the same to the lessee and thereafter the lessee shall attend to the defense of the same and save and hold harmless said lessor from all expenses, counsel fees, costs, liabilities, disbursements, recoveries, judgments and executions in any manner 1129 growing out of, pertaining to or connected therewith.

All damages caused by either of the parties to the property of the other by the negligence of officers, agents, servants, or employes shall be borne and paid by the party whose officers, agents, servants, or employes negligently cause such damage, except as hereinbefore provided.

It is further agreed that if damage is caused to the property owned by or in the possession of either party, or to the employes of either party, or to passengers carried by either party, by the joint negligence of the officers, agents, servants or employes of both, such damage shall be borne and paid by the party whose property or employe is so damaged, or who is in the possession of the property and carrying the passenger so damaged, except as hereinbefore provided.

In the event of a recovery in any suit brought for such damage against the other, the party liable hereunder shall make reimbursement, including all costs, attorneys' fees and expenses, but the party so liable hereunder shall have the right, and it shall be his duty upon notice, to conduct the defense to any such suit, and it shall be bound by any judgment rendered therein.

§ 19. It is agreed that all the covenants and agreements herein contained shall be binding upon the respective parties hereto, their successors and assigns, and all the grants herein contained shall run to The Chicago Company, its 1130 successors and assigns, but this shall not be construed as authorizing The Chicago Company to sublet any of the privileges hereby conveyed it to another railway company except as hereinbefore provided.

§ 20. It is further agreed between the parties hereto that if The Chicago Company shall for any reason fail or refuse for a period of sixty days after the same is due and the said account rendered as aforesaid, to pay the several sums as provided in this contract to be paid, then The Des Moines Company may take from any moneys in its hands or in the hands of its agents, the amount so due, and apply sufficient thereof to meet the demands, with interest thereon at seven per centum from due date, and if the sums so taken be insufficient to pay the amount due under the agreement,and the same shall still remain unpaid, said Des Moines Company shall have the right to forfeit, cancel and annul this contract, but it is expressly understood and agreed that nothing herein contained shall prevent The Des Moines Company from enforcing its said demands against The Chicago Company by any proper action at law or in equity, or from recovering the amount, which may be at any time due and unpaid, if it shall so elect.

§ 21. It is further agreed between the parties hereto that at the expiration of this lease, or any renewal thereof by lapse of time, The Chicago Company shall have the right to renew the same three times for a further period of twenty-five years at each renewal, upon the conditions, provisions 1131 and stipulations herein contained, save and except the compensation agreed to be paid by The Chicago Company for the use of the property herein demised. The compensation for each succeeding period of twenty-five years shall be a fair, reasonable and just compensation for the use enjoyed, and if the same cannot be agreed upon by the parties it shall be determined by a Board of Arbitrators consisting of three persons, one of whom shall be chosen by The Des Moines Company, one by The Chicago Company, and the two thus chosen shall select a third, and the award of such arbitrators shall be rendered within thirty days after the expiration of this lease, and shall be final and conclusive. And it is further stipulated and agreed that the said arbitrators in determining the compensation to be paid for the ensuing period will assume that The Chicago Company shall have the rights and privileges with respect to said terminal property hereby granted and no other.

§ 22. It is further agreed that for the convenience of the parties there shall be made as soon as practicable, a map showing the terminal property of The Des Moines Company, with all its tracks and appurtenances, and also showing the tracks and appurtenances herein agreed to be constructed for the exclusive use of The Chicago Company. Said map shall be made in duplicate and be authenticated with the signatures of the Chief Engineers or Presidents of the respective companies, and when so prepared and authenticated shall be used by the parties hereto for the purpose of more 1132 fully showing the location and relation of the property herein described.

In Witness Whereof the parties have by their respective Presidents and Secretaries, thereunto duly authorized signed the names and attached the seals of the said Des Moines Union Railway Company, and the said Chicago Great Western Railway Company, the day and year first above written.

Whereas the terminal facilities of the Des Moines Company are already used by the Wabash Railroad Company, 1134 the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Company and the Chicago Great Western Railway Company, under contracts heretofore executed; and

Whereas the said Iowa Company now owns and operates certain lines of railway in the State of Iowa and proposes to extend said lines to the City of Des Moines, either by construction of new lines or lease of lines now entering Des Moines; and

Whereas the Iowa Company is desirous of acquiring the right to use the said railway of the Des Moines Company or a part thereof under the terms and conditions hereinafter set forth, and in common with such railway companies as may now use the same or to which the right may hereafter be granted, and so make the terminals of the Des Moines Company the terminals of the Iowa Company in the City of Des Moines;

Section 1. The Des Moines Company, in consideration of the payments to be made to it by the Iowa Company, as hereinafter specified, hereby grants to the Iowa Company the use in common with such other railway companies as now have or may hereafter acquire the right to use the same, of its said terminal railway, with the facilities and appurtenances thereunto belonging, except that part of said terminal property, the exclusive use of which has been heretofore granted to 1135 the Chicago Great Western Railway Company under and by virtue of an agreement entered into between the said Des Moines Company and the said Chicago Great Western Railway Company, bearing date July 2nd, 1896. The use of the new passenger station now in course of construction shall include the right to receive and discharge passengers and baggage, the right to receive and discharge express matter, the use of the passenger station by passengers, and the services of the necessary baggagemen and ticket agents, but shall not extend beyond the ordinary use of a station for passenger traffic. And the Des Moines Company agrees to keep and maintain said terminal property in good condition and repair and to provide and maintain all such engines, machinery, appliances, buildings and structures and all such servants and employees as shall be reasonably necessary for the conduct of the business and the handling and moving of cars, passenger and freight, of the said Iowa Company, and the housing and care of its engines. And the said Des Moines Company further agrees to switch all cars, handle all freight and house and care for all engines of said Iowa Company which may be delivered to it, or which may come upon its said premises in so far as the said Iowa Company may request it so to do. Provided, that the Des Moines Company may exclusively lease any hereafter acquired property to any railway which may enter said ter-
1136 minals after the date of this contract, and if any such exclusive lease or leases be made, no part of the interest upon the cost of such property, or bonds issued therefor, shall be charged to the Iowa Company.

Sec. 2. The Iowa Company, except as provided in Section 15, agrees to pay to the said Des Moines Company monthly a sum of money to be ascertained as follows, to-wit:

First. There shall be ascertained the amount required to pay five per cent. interest upon the mortgage bonds and floating debt of the Des Moines Company, one-twelfth of which, less any deduction hereinafter provided for shall be payable monthly, as hereinafter specified.

2nd. At the expiration of each month, or as soon thereafter as practicable, there shall be ascertained the expense of maintaining, repairing and renewing the terminal property of the Des Moines Company, including the maintenance, renewal and repair of tracks, depots, round houses, engine, houses, etc., during the preceding month. And in like manner there shall be ascertained the taxes general or special levied upon or against said property and paid during the preceding month or to be paid during the next succeeding month, and the insurance, if any, paid during the preceding month or to be paid during the next succeeding month.

3rd. There shall be likewise ascertained the cost and expenses of every nature connected with the operation of said terminal property, including freight and passenger de-1137 pots, depot grounds, round houses, transfers, tracks and every other property or appurtenance thereof, which is to include every item of expense or disbursement incurred or made by the Des Moines Company, not hereinbefore mentioned, except the expenses specified in Section Five (5) hereof.

Section 3. Having so ascertained the monthly aggregate of all the items and sums mentioned in the preceding section, there shall be deducted therefrom the amount if any which railway companies other than the Des Moines Northern & Western Railroad Company and the Wabash Railroad Company may be under obligation to pay by virtue of contracts for the herein demised property or parts thereof for the preceding month and the Iowa Company shall pay that part of the remainder which bears the same proportion to the whole of said remainder that the wheelage of the Iowa Company bears to the entire wheelage of said Des Moines Northern & Western Railroad Company, the Wabash Railroad Company and the Iowa Company, during such preceding month.

Section 4. If the amount or any part of the amount due from Companies other than the Des Moines Northern & Western Railroad Company, the Wabash Railroad Company and the Iowa Company is not paid when due, then its proportion of the sum so due and unpaid shall also on demand of the said Des Moines Company be paid to it by the said Iowa Company on a wheelage basis as hereinbefore defined.

1138 Section 5. The costs and expenses of operating the engine houses and their appurtenances and each of them, including the cost of turning and housing engines, furnishing water and sand, and of wiping, washing and firing up shall be divided and the Iowa Company shall pay such proportion thereof as the number of road engines of the said Iowa Company in and out of said engine house shall bear to the whole number of road engines in and out thereof, during the period for which said costs and expenses are made up. All repairs to the engines of the Iowa Company shall be paid for on the basis of actual cost labor and material and all services rendered, supplies and labor furnished to the Iowa Company for its own benefit and which are not properly a portion of the joint expenses of said terminals shall be charged directly to and be paid by the Iowa Company on such equitable terms as may be agreed upon between the superintendents of the said Companies.

Section 6. The Des Moines Company shall on or before the 10th day of each month or as soon thereafter as practicable, make up and present to the Iowa Company an account showing the amount due hereunder for the preceding month, and payment thereof shall be made within ten days thereafter.

Section 7. The management of the said terminal property, including stations, buildings, tracks, round houses, shops, etc., shall be in charge of a superintendent of the Des Moines Company, who shall in the performance of his duties be governed by such regulations as may from time to time be estab-
1139 lished by the Des Moines Company, the salary of said superintendent and the compensation of other agents and employees of the Des Moines Company shall not be higher than are paid by railway companies in the vicinity for similar services.

Section 8. It is further agreed that the use hereby granted of the said terminal property to the Iowa Company shall be without perference or unreasonable precedence for or to the Des Moines Company, the Iowa Company or any of the lessees of the said terminals in the matter of train schedules or the handling or switching of cars in trains and occupancy of depots or the occupancy of said property or any part thereof in the service herein agreed to be performed; always however to be subject to such reasonable control and discretion by the Des Moines Company as may be necessary to avoid confusion and to expedite the management of the business. And the Des Moines Company shall from time to time make, publish and enforce such rules and regulation for the use, management and operation of said terminals by all the parties using the same as may be reasonable and as it may from time to time consider necessary.

Section 9. The Des Moines Company shall keep accurate books of account showing in detail all the expenditures made by it on account of the various items of interest, insurance, taxes, operation, maintenance, renewals and repairs, and other disbursements upon and about the premises embraced in this agreement; and the said books shall show the amount 1140 of work done for and fuel or other material furnished to the said Iowa Company and such books shall give such other details as will at all times enable the parties hereto to make accurate settlement of their accounts, as provided in this agreement, and said books may at all reasonable and proper hours be examined and inspected by the superintendent, auditor or treasurer of the Iowa Company or by any competent accountant in its employ. The said Des Moines Company shall also keep an accurate record of all the engines and the engines and cars of each tenant railway using said terminals and paying therefor on a wheelage basis, coming upon or leaving said terminals, and of all the engines which have been housed at said engine houses in each month and as herein-before provided said Des Moines Company shall furnish to the Iowa Company a full, true and detailed statement of all the expenditures made and of all the fuel and supplies used, delivered and received of all the cars and engines received, handled or switched, of all work done or repairs made and of all the engines housed and other expenses connected with the operation of said property during the month next preceding.

Section 10. All damages which may be received by any engine or engines, car or cars of either party hereto while being switched by the Des Moines Company at or upon any part of the premises embraced in this agreement shall be repaired for the party to whom such rolling stock belongs, and the cost of such repair shall be borne and paid on a wheelage basis

Section 11. All damages to property other than as above described caused by any engine or engines, car or cars of any railway using said terminals or by any imperfection in the track or tracks laid upon said premises and all injuries which may at any time be received by any person or persons in, around, about or upon said terminals, shall, if settled at all, be adjusted and settled by the Des Moines Company and sums thus paid in settlement or settlements shall be borne and paid upon a wheelage basis, as herein defined. Provided, however, that the Iowa Company shall at its own sole cost and expense bear and settle and pay all damages to property belonging to itself to the Des Moines Company or to third persons, and all injuries to persons when said damages or injuries are done to or by its own trains while said trains are being moved by its own engines and operated and controlled by its own crew, unless such damages or injuries are occasioned by the act, neglect or fault of the servants of the Des Moines Company, or by some imperfection in its track or tracks, and in case such damage or injuries are occasioned by the act, negligence or fault of the servants of the Des Moines Company or by any imperfections in said track their settlements and payments shall be made by the Des Moines Co. as in this Section first provided.

Section 12. All persons employed and paid either permanently or temporarily by said Des Moines Company in the maintenance and operation of said terminals shall be deemed and taken to be the employees and servants of the Des Moines Company.

1142 Section 13. The Iowa Company agrees that if it enters Des Moines it will use the said terminals for all its passenger or freight trains destined to or departing from said City of Des Moines.

Section 14. The revenue of the Des Moines Company from depot privileges, rents of offices in the Union Station or other depots, switching, passenger business done on its own behalf and rents from real estate and miscellaneous earnings shall be used by the said Des Moines Company either as working capital or in the payment of its floating debt or the enlargement or betterment of its said terminal property.

Section 15. It is agreed that the amount paid by the Iowa Company upon the basis hereinbefore defined for the passenger station or stations shall be its share upon a wheelage basis, of the following items, to-wit:

1st. Interest at 5% per annum upon the cost of the passenger station or stations not including the real property upon which said station or stations are or may be situated.

2nd. Interest at five per cent per annum upon the cost of tracks and appurtenances constructed especially for the passenger station or stations, as distinguished from tracks used for general terminal purposes.

3rd. The maintenance, renewal and operation, including insurance, of such passenger station or stations.

Section 16. It is further agreed that the several covenants, conditions and stipulations herein contained shall be mutually binding upon the respective parties hereto their succes-1145 sor, successors and assigns for the term of twenty (20) years from the first day of May, A. D. 1898, unless this contract shall be sooner terminated by consent of the parties hereto or by reason of the provisions hereof.

Section 17. It is further agreed that inasmuch as the Iowa Company have not yet built its proposed extension it shall have until the 1st day of July, A. D. 1900, to determine whether this contract shall become binding and operative upon the parties hereto and shall on or before the date last aforesaid give notice in writing to the Des Moines Company of its action in that respect; but it is understood and agreed that if the said Iowa Company shall enter Des Moines as a railway on and using the Des Moines Company's terminals on or before the 1st day of July, A. D. 1900, it shall become bound by the terms and provisions hereof without further notice.

Section 18. In case any difference shall hereafter arise between the parties hereto concerning the management of said terminal station, depots, grounds, yards, tracks and other terminal facilities of the said Des Moines Company with respect to any matter not herein provided for or concerning any other matter or thing connected therewith, but not herein expressly provided for, such differences shall be referred to three competent men, experienced in railroad management, who shall, as soon as practicable after they are chosen, proceed to examine and determine what would be just and equitable for each of said parties to do in and about the matter in dispute. Each party shall choose one of said arbitrators and the two 1146 thus chosen shall select the third arbitrator and the decision in writing of a majority of said arbitrators with respect to the matter submitted shall be furnished to and be thereafter binding upon each of the said parties. Provided, however, that such differences shall have no effect on the course of business at said terminal station, depot, grounds, yards, etc., until the final decision of said arbitrators shall be made; but such business shall continue to be transacted, such settlements and payments as are herein provided for shall be made as before until the matter in dispute shall be adjusted by the said arbitrators, and thereupon such payments or restitutions shall be made as may be required by the decision of said arbitrators.

In Witness Whereof, the respective parties hereto have caused their corporate seals to be hereunto affixed and these presents to be signed by their respective Presidents and attested by their Secretaries, respectively the day and year first above written.

1148 the main track of the second party near the place marked "B" on said plat No. 1, said track so to be built being shown in red thereon. The second party shall, at its sole cost and expense, furnish, put in and maintain the frog and switch used in connecting said track, so to be built, with said main track of the second party. The second point of connection between the tracks of the parties hereto shall be at the point marked "C", on said plat No. 1, and the second party shall, at its sole cost and expense, maintain the frog and switch used in making said connection.

Article II.

Section 1. The first party hereby grants to the second party the right to pass over, use and enjoy, in common with the first party and the railroad companies now or hereafter admitted to such common use and enjoyment, each and all of the track or tracks of the first party shown in red on said plats for the purpose of entering, departing from or passing through said Union Passenger Station with the passenger, baggage, mail or express cars or trains of the second party, and the engines used in handling the same, including like cars of other companies when in a train of the second party. Said use shall also include the right to pass from said Union Passenger Station with said trains, cars, or engines after arrival, and to bring said trains, cars or engines to said Union Passenger Station prior to departure, with either road or switch engines. Trains doing both passenger and freight business, commonly called "mixed" trains, and the engines handling the same, shall be entitled to the rights and privileges provided for passenger trains, if all freight cars are cut out of said mixed trains before they enter upon the tracks of the first party.

Sec. 2. The first party hereby grants to the second party the right to use and enjoy, in common with the first party and the railroad companies now or hereafter admitted to such common use and enjoyment, the said Union Passenger Station, together with all side tracks, switches, cross-overs, train sheds, buildings, structures, fixtures, appliances, and other things like or unlike the foregoing enumeration, whether herein specifically enumerated or not, connected or used with or appertaining to said Union Passenger Station and all additions and improvements thereof, for the following purposes: For receiving and discharging passengers, baggage, mail, or express; for storing baggage; as a place for passengers to await the arrival and departure of trains; for the sale of tickets; and for all such uses and purposes, like or unlike the foregoing enumeration, whether herein specifically enumerated or not, as such premises are or shall be used for by other tenant companies of the first party in the transaction of the passenger business of a railroad company. It being expressly understood and agreed that the second party may use the aforesaid Union Passenger Station, with its side tracks, switches, cross-overs, train sheds, buildings, structures, fixtures, appliances, and other things like or unlike the foregoing enumeration, whether herein specifically enumerated or not, and which are connected or used with or appertaining to said Union Passenger Station and all additions and improvements thereof, for any other use or purpose that may be contemporaneously accorded or permitted any other railroad company entering the said Union Passenger Station in caring for or handling its passenger business.

Sec. 3. The premises and property, the use and enjoyment of which, in common with other railroads as hereinbefore provided, are granted by this agreement to the second party, are hereinafter designated as "Terminal Facilities."

If, however, the second party shall hereafter desire like use and enjoyment of said "terminal facilities" for its trains, cars or engines from or to any other line of railroad which it may hereafter acquire, control, or operate (hereinafter for this purpose styled "additional trains, cars, and engines," and "additional line"), it shall be entitled to and is hereby granted such like use and enjoyment for and in respect to all such additional trains, cars and engines, to the same extent, and, (except as hereinafter further provided) upon the same terms and conditions as hereinbefore provided and granted in respect to its trains, cars and engines routed as aforesaid. The said second party shall and will, in every such case, pay to said first party not only said monthly sum of $500, but shall, each month, therewith pay, in respect to every such additional car, such additional compensation and rental as shall equal the quotient of $500 divided by the whole number of cars which were during the next preceding month routed as aforesaid solely over said existing lines; for all purposes of such additional compensation and rental every engine of said second party of whatever line, entering or leaving said "Terminal Facilities," shall be reckoned as three cars.

Sec. 6. The first party hereby also grants to the second party the right to run a telegraph wire into said Union Passenger

Station, and to use the same for the dispatching of 1151 passenger and mail trains and for the handling of such passenger and mail business at the city of Des Moines. The first party shall furnish the operator to operate said wire, but the second party assumes and agrees to hold the first party harmless from all damage caused by the negligence of any such operator with respect to any order or message relating to the movement of engines or trains upon the tracks of the second party.

Article III.

The first party shall employ and pay all ticket agents, baggage men, depot masters, flagmen, switch and crossing tenders, and all other men needed to care for and operate said Terminal Facilities, and to properly serve and handle the passenger and baggage business of the second party at said Union Passenger Station, and the second party shall be entitled to the services of said employes for such purposes. The first party shall not, however, except as hereinafter expressly provided, be required to furnish train or engine crews or engines for handling or moving said cars, trains or traffic. The second party shall, except as herein otherwise expressly provided, move and handle with its own engines and crews, all trains and cars which it may bring upon the tracks of the first party hereunder.

Employes of the second party shall throw the switches for the accommodation of its engines, cars, and trains, where the said tracks of the first party join the tracks of the second party, near the places marked "B" and "C".

Employes of the first party shall flag all railroad or street crossings, if required by law or by ordinance or regulations of the City of Des Moines, and shall throw all other switches and operate all signals for the passage of the passenger trains of the second party, in or out of the Union Passenger 1152 Station, but shall not be required to do such work for engines of the second party moving cars not containing passengers, which do not belong to said passenger trains, except at places where the first party have employes regularly employed in doing such work.

The first party shall heat said Union Passenger Station and keep the same, and all walks, train sheds, platforms, and premises adjacent thereto, or used in connection therewith, clean, safe and free from all unnecessary obstructions, and properly lighted.

The first party shall cause said Union Passenger Station, together with the ticket offices and baggage rooms therein contained, and the premises adjacent thereto, to be opened and ready to serve the public such a length of time before and after the arrival and departure of the trains of the second party as may be reasonably required by the second party.

Article IV.

The first party shall keep and maintain said Terminal Facilities and all improvements and additions thereto in good condition and repair, and shall make improvements in and additions thereto whenever reasonably necessary for the prompt, convenient, and proper handling of the business of the second party.

Article V.

If by reason of increase in business or a substantial change in said Terminal System, it shall be necessary for the first party to change the tracks to be used by the second party, the first party shall have the right to change the same or 1153 substitute other or different tracks therefor, provided that such changed, other, or different tracks shall afford the same or equally as good facilities to the second party in the transaction of its business.

Article VI.

The first party shall require every employe at said Union Passenger Station, who sells tickets, before entering upon his duties, to give a good and sufficient indemnifying bond to the second party for the faithful performance of his duties; such bond to be in such an amount, so conditioned, and with such sureties as may be reasonably required by the second party. Such employes shall be required to renew said bonds from time to time as occasion may require. The second party shall pay the premium for procuring such bonds, and the first party shall not be liable for any loss or damage on account of the unfaithfulness of any such ticket agent.

Article VII.

If the baggage or express matter handled by the second party shall be in carload lots, the loading or unloading of which would unreasonably obstruct the platform at said Union Passenger Station, the first party may, if it so elects, furnish at its own cost and expense, a convenient side-track near said Union Passenger Station and easily accessible to teams, where it may require such loading or unloading to be done. The switching of said cars to and from said side-track shall be promptly done by the first party at one dollar and fifty cents per loaded car.

No charge for empty cars.

1151 Article VIII.

If said Terminal Facilities, or any part thereof, shall be destroyed or damaged, the first party shall, at its sole cost and expense, promptly rebuild or repair the same, the time for completion of such work in no event to exceed nine months from the date of such destruction or damage; and shall also furnish for the use of the second party, temporary and adequate facilities in place of those destroyed or damaged, which said temporary facilities shall during the period said premises are being rebuilt or repaired, be accepted by the second party as a full equivalent for the said original Terminal Facilities. If the first party shall fail or neglect to promptly commence and diligently prosecute such repairs or rebuilding, the second party shall have the option to cancel and forever terminate this agreement.

Article IX.

So long as the first party maintains a passenger station in the City of Des Moines east of the Des Moines River, the second party shall, without additional cost, have the right to use such station, in common with such other railroad companies as now have or may hereafter acquire the right to use the same, and to receive such service as the party of the first part may render at such station to passenger trains.

Article X.

The said second party shall and will pay to the said first party, on the fifteenth day of each month, as full compensation and rental for the uses, rights, and privileges in and by this contract granted; firstly, for the use and enjoyment of 1155 said terminal facilities, during the then next preceding month in respect to trains, cars, and engines routed as aforesaid solely over said two existing lines, the monthly sum of $500; and secondly, such further sum, if any, as shall be requisite to satisfy and discharge any and all additional compensation and rental which shall, during such preceding month, have accrued by virtue of Section 5 (five) of Article II hereof; all which payments shall be made in lawful money of the United States at the office of the Treasurer of said first party in said City of Des Moines.

Article XI.

It is agreed that all time cards, rules, regulations and orders, for the movement and operation of trains, cars and engines, and for the beneficial enjoyment of the property, the joint, concurrent or common use of which is embraced in this agreement, shall be made and promulgated from time to time by the first party. The movement of trains, cars, and engines upon said property shall be under the immediate direction of the Superintendent or other proper officers or agent of the first party, but such time cards, rules, regulations and orders shall be reasonable, just, and fair to all parties using said property, without preference or discrimination in favor of or against either; but passenger trains of all kinds shall have the right of way and precedence over all other trains and kinds of business upon said property. Changes in the rules or regulations shall not be made except upon reasonable notice to the second party. The first party shall have the general control, management, and supervision over said Terminal Facilities, and the right to enforce proper discipline of employes of the second party using any of the tracks or property of the first party in com-
1156 mon with any of the other railroad companies now or hereafter using said Terminal Facilities, and in the event that the second party shall fail or refuse to enforce against any of its employes the penalties prescribed by the first party, the first party shall have the absolute right to bar said employes from said Terminal Facilities.

All receipts at said Union Passenger Station for tickets sold for or on account of the second party, and all receipts for excess baggage carried or to be carried over roads owned or controlled by the second party, shall be remitted to the second party at such times and in such manner as said second party may direct. The employes of the first party shall keep the records and make reports concerning the business of the said second party as may be required by the second party.

Article XII.

All the employes of the first party shall be removed on good cause shown. The second party shall have the right to place a suitable clerk, at its own cost and expense and for a limited time, not exceeding thirty days in any one period, in the ticket office of said Union Passenger Station, with power to observe and make note of the course of ticket sales and the conduct of the ticket agents herein provided to be employed, with a view of determining whether said ticket agents preserve the strictest equality and impartiality in respect to the second party, as herein intended. If the second party shall request the removal of a ticket agent, and the first party shall fail or refuse to remove him, the validity of the course shown shall be determined by the Board of Reference, herein provided for, and in the event of such reference, if the first party shall fail to appoint a member within five days after notice in writing from 1157 the second party, then the first party shall remove the ticket agent of whom complaint is made.

Article XIII.

Section 1. The party of the second part hereby agrees to assume all risks of all loss, damage or injury which shall in any manner occur in or upon any track, building, or premises, any use whereof is hereinbefore granted, whether to its property, or to property in its custody, or to its passengers, or to its employes, or which third persons or the property of third persons shall there suffer by reason of the movement of any of its engines, cars, or trains as fully in all respects as if it had then been in the exclusive use and control of such track, building or premises; excepting only such loss, damage and injury as shall be caused by gross negligence of employes solely of the party of the first part; and, except only as aforesaid, the party of the second part hereby agrees to save the party of the first part harmless from all such loss, damage and injury, from all liability claimed therefor, and from all consequent cost and expenses. Provided, however, and the parties hereto expressly covenant and agree that in case of a collision between their respective engines, cars or trains, while on any of the premises aforesaid, the party, whose employes are alone in fault, shall be solely responsible for and settle and pay for the entire loss and damage caused thereby; and shall so save the other party harmless therefrom; and that in case such collision is caused by the fault of employes of both parties or by the fault of any joint employe or employes, or in case the cause of the collision is so concealed that it cannot be determined whose employe or employes were in fault, each party shall bear and pay all the loss and injury which its own property or property in 1158 its custody, or its employes or passengers may have suffered in consequence thereof.

SEC. 2. The party of the second part shall and will at all times, and it does hereby agree to indemnify the party of the first part against all claims for loss or damage growing out of the acts or neglects of the ticket sellers and baggage handlers at the Passenger Station aforesaid, so far as such acts or neglects shall be connected with or concern the business of the party of the second part transacted thereat; and from all claims for loss of or damage to any baggage or express matter which the party of the second part may bring to said station, or which may be delivered thereat for transportation by its trains, no matter how such loss or damage may occur.

Article XIV.

If either party shall fail to carry out or perform this agreement, or any part thereof, the other party shall have the option of terminating the same. Before such option accrues, the party desiring to terminate the agreement shall give notice in writing to the other party of its intention so to do, with the reasons therefor. If within sixty days, thereafter the party in default has complied with the provisions of this agreement so as to be no longer in default, the option to terminate the same shall not accrue; if otherwise, the party giving such notice may, after said sixty days, terminate this agreement by a further written notice to the other party.

If at any time, by operation of law or because of the process, order, or decree of any court, either of the parties hereto, or any receiver or trustee therefor, shall have the right or option to terminate this agreement before its expiration, then the other party shall have a like right and option.

1159 ## Article XV.

So long as this agreement shall remain in force and effect, no difference which may arise as to the construction or performance of the terms, covenants, or conditions of this agreement shall affect, while it remains undetermined, the use or enjoyment of the said Terminal Facilities, or the rights or privileges herein conferred, in the manner in which the parties have heretofore enjoyed such use. Such use shall continue and settlements and payments shall be made as before the existence of such difference. When such difference shall finally be settled, by reference or otherwise, payments and settlements shall be made by the respective parties as may be required by the award of the referees, or as provided in the agreement of adjustment, as the case may be.

Article XVI.

If any controversy shall arise as to the construction of this contract, or any violation of its provisions, or in respect to the performance of any duties which it may be claimed it imposes, or as to any amount claimed to be due under its provisions, such controversy shall be submitted to three disinterested persons experienced in railway operation, as a Board of Reference. One member of said Board shall be selected by each party. The two thus chosen shall select a third, and the finding of said Board of Reference, or a majority of them, made in writing shall be final and conclusive on the parties hereto.

Article XVII.

This agreement shall be and remain in force from 1902
1160 to May 1st, 1908, unless sooner terminated in the manner hereinbefore provided.

Article XVIII.

The first party shall warrant and defend the second party in the quiet and undisturbed use and enjoyment of said Terminal Facilities as in this agreement contemplated, and of the rights and privileges herein sought to be conferred, and shall hold the second party free from all taxes, levies, assessments or other public charges levied, assessed or charged against the said property or franchise of the first party, and free from all taxes, levies or assessments levied or assessed upon the second party because or by reason of the fact that said Terminal Facilities are used and enjoyed by the second party, or by reason of the fact that the trains of the second party are operated over the tracks or property of the first party, but not including any franchise tax which may be levied or assessed against the second party.

Article XIX.

The grants, covenants and agreements herein contained shall run to and be binding upon the parties hereto, their successors, legal representatives and assigns; but nothing herein contained shall be construed as authorizing the second party to sub-let the rights or privileges hereby granted or conferred to any other railroad company.

Contract and Lease.

Des Moines Union Railway Company.

Des Moines, Iowa

To The

Des Moines, Iowa Falls & Northern Railway Company.

1163 Lease.

This Agreement, Made this 22d day of July, 1902, by and between the Des Moines Union Railway Company, first party, and the Des Moines, Iowa Falls & Northern Railway Company, second party, each a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Iowa, Witnesseth as follows:

The first party is the owner of a Union Passenger Station between West Fifth and West Seventh Streets, in the City of Des Moines, Iowa, and of certain railroad and side tracks in said city, which, with building, structures, fixtures, appliances and other things connected or used therewith or appertaining thereto, constitute a system which the first party uses and operates for the purpose of affording terminal facilities to railroads entering said city; and

That the second party as owning and operating such a railroad, desires to participate in the common use of certain of the aforesaid terminal facilities for the purposes of its passenger business only, and in the manner hereinafter provided;

Now Therefore, In consideration of the premises and of their mutual and dependant covenants and agreements hereinafter contained, the said parties hereby agree as follows:

Article I.

1164 The second party shall and will at its sole cost and expense, acquire the right of way for and build a track from the existing tracks of the first party to a connection with the main track of the second party at or near the Great Western Junction in East Des Moines; which connecting track shall be so located and built that in connection with the existing tracks of the first party, it will furnish ingress and egress for the passenger trains of the second party to and from said Union Passenger Station. The second party shall and will, at its sole cost and expense, furnish, put in and maintain the frog and switch to be used in so connecting the said connecting track of the second party.

Article II.

The first party hereby grants to the second party the right to use and enjoy, solely for the purposes of the passenger business of the second party, and in common with the first party and other railroad companies now or hereafter admitted to such common use and enjoyment, the said Union Passenger Station and all the aforesaid terminal facilities of the first party designed or customarily used for passenger business and located upon the premises shown on the plat hereto attached and made part hereof (which plat also shows the proposed connecting track provided for in Article I hereof), together with all buildings, structures, fixtures, appliances and other things designed or customarily used for passenger business, connected therewith or pertaining thereto, and all additions and improvements thereof; together with the services of all employes engaged in the care or operation thereof; all whereof are hereinafter referred to and designated as "said Passenger Terminal Facilities." Such use and enjoyment shall be in the manner, subject to the limitations, and only for the purposes hereinafter set forth:

1165 (a) For the passage and accommodation of all passenger engines, trains and traffic of the second party, express, mail, and baggage cars in such trains included, except such thereof as shall in arriving or in departing, run over any branch or extension hereafter built by the second party and connected with the present tracks of the second party at a point less than fifteen miles from said Union Passenger Station; any mixed train of the second party (carrying passengers and freight), and the engine hauling the same shall be considered entitled to the rights and privileges hereinbefore provided for passenger engines and trains, if all freight cars shall be cut out of such mixed train before entering upon any track of the first party;

(b) For receiving and discharging passengers, baggage, mail and express matter to and from the passenger trains of the second party, for storing baggage, for use as a place for passengers to await the arrival or departure of such trains, for the sale of tickets, and for all such other and further uses and purposes as in the transaction of railway passenger business such premises and facilities are ordinarily used;

(c) For the right to run a telegraph wire or wires into said Union Passenger Station, and to use the same in dispatching passenger and mail trains and in handling passenger, baggage, mail and express business of the second party at said city. The first party shall furnish an operator to operate such wire or wires, but the second party assumes and hereby agrees to save harmless the first party from all damages, claims and demands which shall arise out of any negligence of any such operator with respect to any order or message relating to the movement of any engine or any train upon any track of the second party.

Article III.

The first party shall, at its sole cost and expense, furnish, 1166 supply and pay all ticket agents, baggage men and depot masters and all other help needed to operate said passenger terminal facilities or to properly serve and handle the passenger and baggage business of the second party at said Union Passenger Station; but the first party shall not, except as hereinafter expressly stipulated, be required to furnish any train or engine crew or any engine for handling or moving any passenger car, train or traffic of the second party. Except as hereinafter otherwise expressly provided, the second party shall and will furnish all such engines and all such engine and train crews as shall be required to haul, switch and handle its cars and trains.

The first party shall at its sole cost and expense heat said Union Passenger Station, and keep the same and all walks, train sheds, platforms and premises adjacent thereto or used in connection therewith in good repair, clean and free from unnecessary obstructions, and shall cause said Union Passenger Station, together with the ticket offices and baggage rooms therein contained, and the premises adjacent thereto, to be open and ready to serve the public, for such length of time before and after the arrival and departure of each passenger train of the second party as shall be by it reasonably required.

Article IV.

The first party shall, at its sole cost and expense, make improvements in and additions to said passenger terminal facilities, whenever the same shall, by reason of increase in business or the admission of other railroad companies to the use and enjoyment thereof, become reasonably necessary for the convenient, economical, prompt and efficient handling of the passenger business or traffic of the second party, and shall 1167 at its sole cost and expense at all times, maintain and keep said passenger terminal facilities and such improvements and additions thereto in good condition and repair.

Article V.

The first party shall require its ticket and baggage agent at said Union Passenger Station to give reasonable bonds for the performance of their duties, which bonds shall contain suitable provisions to protect the second party; in case of a deficiency in the accounts of any such ticket or baggage agent, the first party shall apportion such deficiency on the basis of the cash receipts of all railroad companies using said station from the time when the accounts of such agent were last checked in their interest, and will without delay prosecute the bond by him given and pay over any sum or sums which may be recovered thereon, less the expenses of collecting the same, in accordance with the apportionment made as aforesaid.

Article VI.

If express matter there handled by the second party shall be in carload lots, the loading or unloading of which would unreasonably obstruct the platforms at said Union Passenger Station, the first party may, if it so elects, furnish at its own cost and expense a convenient side track near said Union Passenger Station and easily accessible to teams, where it may require such loading or unloading to be done. The switching of such cars to and from such side track shall be promptly done by the first party at the rate of One Dollar and Fifty Cents ($1.50) for each loaded car, but without charge for empty cars; and for all such switching the second party will pay monthly, at such rate, upon presentation of a bill therefor.

Article VII.

If said passenger terminal facilities or any part thereof, shall be destroyed or damaged, the first party shall at its sole cost and expense, promptly rebuild or repair the same within nine months from the date of such destruction or damage, and shall also meanwhile furnish for the use of the second party, adequate temporary facilities in the place of those destroyed or damaged; which said temporary facilities shall, while the said premises are being rebuilt or repaired, be accepted by the second party as a full equivalent for the original terminal facilities so destroyed or damaged. If the first party shall neglect or fail promptly to commence and diligently to prosecute such repair or rebuilding, the second party may at its option, cancel and forever terminate this agreement.

Article VIII.

So long as the first party shall maintain a passenger station east of the Des Moines River, in said city, the second party shall, without additional cost, have the right to use such station, in common with such other railroad companies as now have or may hereafter acquire the right to use the same, and there to receive such service as the party of the first part may at such station at the same time render to passenger trains generally.

Article IX.

So long as the second party shall not run to or from said Union Passenger Station more than two trains each way per day, the second party shall and will pay to the first party, in lawful money of the United States, as full compensation, 1169 or rental for the rights and privileges hereinbefore granted, the annual sum of Four Thousand Eight Hundred Dollars ($4,800.00), in equal monthly installments payable on the first day of each month, for the next preceding month; which compensation or rental shall be computed from the date when the second party shall run its first passenger train into said Union Passenger Station; and for each train additional to two trains each way per day, which the second party shall in any given month run to or from said Union Passenger Station, the second party shall and will also pay to the first party on the first day of the next succeeding month, such further sum as will constitute the same proportion of Two Hundred Dollars ($200.00) as the number of days which such additional train shall have run into or out of said Union Passenger Station during such given month shall bear to the number of days of the same month.

Article X.

All time cards, rules, regulations and orders for the movement and operation of trains, cars and engines and for the beneficial enjoyment of the property, the common use of which is granted by this agreement shall be from time to time made and promulgated by the first party; all movements of trains, cars and engines upon said property shall be under the immediate direction of the Superintendent or other proper officer or agent of the first party; but such time cards, rules, regulations and orders shall be reasonable, just and fair to all parties using said property, without preference or discrimination in favor of or against either, except that passenger trains of all kinds shall have the right of way and preference over 1170 all other trains and kinds of business upon said property. Changes in the rules or regulations shall not be made without reasonable notice to the second party. The first party shall have the general control, management and supervision of said passenger terminal facilities and the right to enforce proper discipline against such employes of the second party as may use tracks or property of the first party which any other railroad company or companies may now or hereafter have the right to use; and if the second party shall refuse or fail to enforce against any such of its employes any penalty prescribed by the first party, the first party shall have the absolute right to debar and exclude such employes from said terminal facilities.

All receipts of said passenger station for tickets sold for or on account of the second party, and all receipts for the carriage of excess baggage over any route owned or controlled by the second party shall be remitted to the second party at such times and in such manner as said second party may direct. The employes of the first party shall keep records and make such reports concerning the business of the second party, as may be by the second party reasonably required.

Article XI.

Any employe of the first party in or about said passenger terminal facilities, shall be removed for good cause shown by the second party in writing. The second party shall have the right to place in the ticket office of said Union Passenger Station at its own sole expense, for not more than thirty consecutive days at once, a suitable clerk empowered to observe and make note of the course of ticket sales and of the conduct of the ticket agents therein employed, in order to determine whether such ticket agents practice strict equality and impar-1171 tiality in respect to the second party. If the second party shall in writing, stating the cause, request the removal of a ticket agent and the first party shall fail or refuse to remove him, the sufficiency of the cause alleged shall be determined by the Board of Reference hereinafter provided for; and, in the event of such reference, if the first party shall fail to appoint a member of such Board for five days after notice thereto in writing from the second party, the first party shall then remove the ticket agent of whom complaint shall have been so made.

Article XII.

Section 1. The party of the second part hereby agrees to assume all risks of all loss, damage or injury which shall in any manner occur in or upon any track, building or premises, any use whereof is hereinbefore granted, whether to its property, or to property in its custody, or to its passengers, or to its employes, or which third persons or the property of third persons shall there suffer, by reason of the movement of any of its engines, cars or trains, as fully, in all respects, as if it had then been in the exclusive use and control of such track, building or premises; excepting only such loss, damage and injury as shall be caused by gross negligence of employes solely of the party of the first part and, except only as aforesaid, the party of the second part hereby agrees to save the party of the first part harmless from all such loss, damage and injury, from all liability and claim therefor and from all consequent cost and expenses; provided, however, and the parties hereto expressly covenant and agree that in case of a collision between their respective engines, cars or trains, while on any of the premises aforesaid, the party, whose employes shall have been alone in fault, shall be solely responsible for and settle 1172 and pay for the entire loss and damage caused thereby, and shall so save the other party harmless therefrom; and that if such collision shall be caused by the fault of employes of both parties or if the cause of the collision shall be so concealed that it can not be determined whose employe or employes were in fault, each party shall bear and pay all the loss and injury which its own property, or property in its custody, or its employes or passengers may have suffered in consequence thereof.

Sec. 2. The party of the second part shall and will at all times indemnify the party of the first part against all claims for loss or damage growing out of the acts or neglects of the ticket sellers and baggage handlers at the said Union Passenger Station, so far as such acts or neglects shall be connected with or concern the business of the party of the second part transacted thereat, and from all claims for loss of or damage to any baggage or express matter which the party of the second part may bring to said station, or which may be delivered thereat for transportation by its trains, no matter how such loss or damage may occur.

Article XIII.

If either party shall fail to perform this agreement or any part thereof, the other party shall have the option to terminate the same, but before any such option shall become effective, the party desiring to terminate the agreement shall give notice in writing to the other party of its intention so to do, stating the reasons therefor. If within sixty (60) days thereafter the party in default shall have so complied with the provisions of this agreement as to be no longer in default, such option to terminate shall not become effective; otherwise the party who shall have given such notice may, after such sixty (60) 1173 days, terminate this agreement by a further written notice to the other party.

If by operation of law or because of any final judgment or decree, either party hereto or any Receiver or Trustee of its property shall at any time have a right or option to terminate this agreement before its expiration, the other party shall then have a like right and option.

Article XIV.

So long as this agreement shall continue in force, no difference which may arise as to the construction or performance of any terms, covenant or condition thereof, shall while it remains undetermined, affect the use or enjoyment of the said passenger terminal facilities or the rights or privileges herein conferred, or any obligation hereinbefore created, as the parties shall have previously enjoyed such use or discharged such obligations; but such use shall during the pendency of such difference, continue, and settlements and payments shall be made, in all respects as before the rise of such difference; but whenever any such difference shall be finally decided or arranged by reference or otherwise, such payments and settlements shall be made by the respective parties as may be required by the award of the said Board of Reference or be provided by the adjustment agreement, if any.

Article XV.

If any controversy shall arise as to the construction of this agreement, or as to any violation of its provisions, or in respect to the performance of any duty which it may be claimed to impose, or as to any amount claimed to be due under its 1174 provisions, such controversy shall be submitted to three disinterested persons experienced in railway operation as a Board of Reference; one member of such Board shall be selected by each party, the two so chosen shall select a third, and the finding in writing of said Board, or a majority of them, shall be final and conclusive on the parties hereto.

Article XVI.

Unless sooner terminated as hereinbefore provided, this agreement shall remain in force until the 31st day of December, 1907, inclusive.

Article XVII.

The grants, covenants and agreements herein contained shall run to and be binding upon the parties hereto, their successors and legal representatives, and to and upon any other corporation which may hereafter own or operate the property of either party; but it is nevertheless explicitly agreed that without the written consent of the first party first had and obtained, the second party shall not and will not, in whole or in part, grant or sub-let to any other railroad company any right or privilege hereinbefore granted or conferred, or under guise of doing its own proper business, render or contract to render to any other railroad company any continuous or habitual service in hauling cars or trains of such other railroad company into or out of said passenger station.

Article XVIII.

If the first party shall deem it desirable to change any track which shall have been used by the second party, the first 1175 party shall have the right to change the same or to substitute another track therefor, provided that such changed or other track shall afford to the second party the same or equally good facilities in and for the transaction of its business aforesaid.

In Witness Whereof, each party hereto hath caused these presents in duplicate to be subscribed by its President, and its corporate seal to be affixed, attested by its Secretary, the day and year first above written.

Article I.

The first party hereby grants to the second party the right to use and enjoy, solely for the purposes of the passenger business of the second party, and in common with the first party and other railroad companies now or hereafter admitted to such common use and enjoyment, the said Union Passenger Station and all the aforesaid terminal facilities of the first party designed or customarily used for passenger business and located upon the premises shown on the plat hereto attached and made part hereof (which plat also shows the connecting track,) together with all buildings, structures, fixtures, appliances and other things designed or customarily used for pas-

Such use and enjoyment shall be in the manner subject to the limitations and only for the purposes hereinafter set forth:

Nothing herein shall require the first party to add to its present station and track facilities in East Des Moines.

Article IV.

The first party shall require its ticket and baggage agent at said Union Passenger Station to give reasonable bonds for the performance of their duties, which bonds shall contain suitable provisions to protect the second party; in case of a deficiency in the accounts of any such ticket or baggage agent, the first party shall apportion such deficiency on the basis of the cash receipts of all railroad companies using said station from the time when the accounts of such agent were

Article IX.

All time cards, rules, regulations and orders for the movement and operation of trains, cars and engines, and for the beneficial enjoyment of the property, the common use of which is granted by this agreement, shall be from time to time made and promulgated by the first party; all movements of trains, cars and engines upon said property shall be under the immediate direction of the Superintendent or other proper officer or agent of the first party; but such time cards, rules,

The employes of the first party shall keep records and make such reports, concerning the business of the second party, as may be by the second party reasonably required.

Article X.

Any employe of the first party in or about said passenger terminal facilities, shall be removed for good cause shown by the second party in writing. The second party shall have the right to place in the ticket office of said Union Passenger Station, at its sole expense, for not more than thirty consecutive days at once, a suitable clerk empowered to observe and make note of the course of ticket sales and of the conduct of the ticket agents therein employed, in order to determine whether such ticket agents practice strict equality and impartiality in respect to the second party. If the second party shall in writing, stating the cause, request the removal of a ticket agent and the first party shall fail or refuse to remove him, the sufficiency of the cause alleged shall be determined by the Board of Reference, hereinafter provided for; and, in the event of such reference, if the first party shall fail to appoint a member of such Board for five days after notice thereto in writing from the second party, the first party shall then remove the ticket agent of whom complaint shall have been so made.

Article XI.

Section 1. The party of the second part hereby, as between the parties hereto, agrees to assume all risks of all loss, damage, or injury which shall in any manner occur in or upon any track, building, or premises, any use whereof is 1187 hereinbefore granted, whether to its property or to property in its custody, or to its passengers, or to its employes, or which third persons or the property of third persons shall there suffer, by reason of the movement of any of its engines, cars or trains, as full in all respects, as if it had then been in the exclusive use and control of such track, building or premises: excepting only such loss, damage and injury as shall be caused by gross negligence of employes solely of the party of the first part and, except only as aforesaid, the party of the second part hereby agrees to save the party of the first part harmless from all such loss, damage and injury, from all liability and claim therefor and from all consequent cost and expenses; provided, however, and the parties hereto expressly covenant and agree that in case of a collision between their respective engines, cars or trains, while on any of the premises aforesaid, the party, whose employes shall have been alone in fault, shall be solely responsible for and settle and pay for the entire loss and damage caused thereby, and shall so save the other party harmless therefrom; and that if such collision shall be caused by the fault of employes of both parties, or if the cause of the collision shall be so concealed that it can not be determined whose employe or employes were in fault, each party shall bear and pay all the loss and injury which its own property, or property in its custody, or its employes or passengers may have suffered in consequence thereof.

1188 Section 2. The party of the second part shall and will at all times indemnify the party of the first part against all claims for loss or damage growing out of the acts or neglects of the ticket sellers and baggage handlers at the said Union Passenger Station, so far as such acts or neglects shall be connected with or concern the business of the party of the second part transacted thereat, and from all claims for loss of or damage to any baggage or express matter which the party of the second part may bring to said station, or which may be delivered thereat for transportation by its trains, no matter how such loss or damage may occur.

Article XII.

If either party shall fail to perform this agreement or any part thereof, the other party shall have the option to terminate the same, but before any such option shall become effective, the party desiring to terminate the agreement shall give notice in writing to the other party of its intention so to do, stating the reasons therefor. If within sixty (60) days thereafter the party in default shall have so complied with the provisions of this agreement as to be no longer in default, such option to terminate shall not become effective; otherwise the party who shall have given such notice may, after such sixty (60) days, terminate this agreement by a further written notice to the other party.

1189 If by operation of law or because of any final judgment or decree, either party hereto, or any Receiver or Trustee of its property, shall at any time have a right or option to terminate this agreement before its expiration, the other party shall then have a like right and option.

Article XIII.

So long as this agreement shall continue in force, no difference which may arise as to the construction or performance of any terms, covenants, or condition thereof, shall, while it remains undetermined, affect the use or enjoyment of the said passenger terminal facilities or the rights or privileges herein conferred, or any obligation hereinbefore created, as the parties shall have previously enjoyed such use or discharged such obligations; but such use shall, during the pendency of such difference, continue and settlements and payments shall be

Mr. G. P. Ashley, Secretary,

Dear Sir:

I enclose Stock Certificate No. 9 of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, for 998 shares of stock.

Will you please have the Purchasing Committee assign to me 498 shares of this stock and send the certificate back to me for re-issue? I will issue one half, being 498 shares, to the Purchasing Committee and send it to you together with stock certificate No. 6 for one share issued to James F. How, and certificate No. 7 issued to C. M. Hayes for one share. This will give to the Purchasing Committee 500 shares of stock.

The two shares which are necessary to complete the 500 due me, are certificates No. one to G. M. Dodge for one share; No. two to F. M. Hubbell for one share, both of which were issued to these parties by mistake, and have been assigned to me as a part of the 500 shares which I bought from you.

Hoping this will be satisfactory, I am,

Yours truly,

F. M. HUBBELL.

Dear Sir:

I have yours of Aug. 11th, enclosing certificate for 998 shares of the Capital Stock of the Des Moines Union Ry Co., of which stock you asked to assign 498 shares to you. This is all right if in the sale of the $135,000 of bonds which were divided into two lots of 67 and 68, the obligations for 1/8 of the stock to each were made to you. The transfer, which you now request, covers the two lots, and my impression is that one of the lots was to go to Gen'l Dodge. I have no doubt this is all right, but, of course, I shall want the two obligations for 1/8 each of the stock to be returned to me, understanding that I am now to make the transfer which fulfills those obligations. If this is all right, please let me know, and I will return the certificate properly assigned. I suppose my signature as Secretary will be all you want. If not, it will take some time to get the individual signatures of the Committee.

I note that the authorized Capital Stock is $2,000,000. Am I to understand that $200,000 is the whole amount of stock issued?

Yours respectfully,

O. D. ASHLEY,
President.

1402 Defendants' Exhibit 639.

Des Moines, August 19, 1890.

O. D. Ashley, Prest.
195 Broadway, New York.
Dear Sir:

I have yours of August 15th, and in reply have to say that the one quarter interest in the stock of the Des Moines Union, which was sold by the Purchasing Committee to F. M. Hubbell together with the 135,000 of terminal bonds, was settled and disposed of some time ago. That you may understand this matter fully I will give you a list of the stock which has been issued and to whom.

The authorized capital is $2,000,000 but the amount issued is $400,000 and a one eighth interest represents 500 shares.

Originally your Committee was entitled to one half of the stock, and when it came to be issued, the one quarter which was first sold to me was issued in two certificates; and deducted from your half of the stock, namely,

No. 12 to F. M. Hubbell, ... 500 shares
No. 14 to G. M. Dodge, ... 500 shares

The 400,000 of stock was issued on the 8th day of April 1890, as follows:

No. 1 to Dodge, ... 1 share
No. 2 to Hubbell, ... 1 share
No. 6 to James F. How, ... 1 share
No. 7 to C. M. Hayes, ... 1 share
No. 9 to Purchasing Committ e, ... 996 shares

Total, ...1000 shares.

This being one fourth of the entire stock and belongs to the Purchasing Committee, Certificates No. 1 and 2 have been issued erroneously, No. 1 having been assigned in blank by Dodge, No. 2 is assigned in blank by me.

No. 3 to F. C. Hubbell for ..... 1 share
No. 4 to H. D. Thompson for .... 1 share
No. 11 to D. M. & N. Railway Co... 998 shares

Total, ...1000 shares.

which is the one fourth interest belonging to the D. M. & N. W. Ry. Co.

No. 5 to L. M. Martin, ... 1 share
No. 8 to A. B. Cummins, ... 1 share
No. 10 to D. M. & Northern Ry. Co.. 998 shares

Total, ...1000 shares.

being the one fourth which is owned by the Des Moines & Northern Railway.

No. 12 to F. M. Hubbell, ... 500 shares
No. 14 to G. M. Dodge, ... 500 shares

1000 Shares,

This is the 1000 shares of stock sold by your Committee to F. M. Hubbell, with the 135000 of bonds.

Certificate No. 13 has never been issued, and is cancelled in the stock book, for the reason that a mistake was made in it and it was thought better to cancel it than to change the face of the Certificate. This makes 4,000 shares which is all of the capital stock of the company.

I prefer to have all the members of the Purchasing Committee affix their signatures to the assignment of the 498 shares to me, being a part of Certificate No. 9.

Please let me hear from you now whether this is perfectly plain and satisfactory.

Yours truly,

F. M. HUBBELL.

Dear Sir,

Your letter of the 19th received, and explanation is satisfactory,—I will forward the certificate to Mr. Joy for his signature, and request him to send it to you, and then the transfer will be complete. You will then as I understand it forward to me a certificate, in the name of the Purchasing Committee, for 498 shares, which, with the two shares issued to Messrs. How and Hays, will make up the 500 shares belonging to that committee.

What becomes of the obligations I gave to you for this stock? If they have been surrendered to the Depot Co., I wish you would send me a receipt for the certificates to show that the obligations have been fulfilled.

General Hubbard is absent in Europe and will not return before October, but he left a power of attorney with me and I have, accordingly, signed for him.

1407 Defendants' Exhibit 643.

May 17, 1895.

Mr. A. D. Ashley,
195 Broadway, New York City.

Dear Sir:—
I have your dispatch of to-day and have answered it as follows, which I now confirm.

"We have only thirty-four terminal bonds. We will join you in selling these at ninety and accrued interest. I will send you printed copy of the lease, or terminal contract, and a map as soon as I can have it prepared. Have written."

We have made disposition of all of our bonds except 34, and would be glad to put these in with yours to make a large block, and have them sold at 90% and accrued interest.

I do not know how many bonds Genl. Dodge has, or at what price he would be willing to sell them. As he is in New York can't you see him in regard to his bonds.

The lease, or terminal contract, as we call it, was entered into originally between the Des Moines Union R'y. Company, party of the first part, and the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company, and the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, parties of the second part. The St. Louis, Des Moines & N. R'y. was foreclosed and the Des Moines Northern R'y. Co. succeeded it in ownership. Then the Des Moines & Northern and the Des Moines & Northwestern Railways were consolidated in 1892, under the name of the Des Moines, Northern & Western R'y. Co. This latter Company was foreclosed and re-organized in 1895, under the name of the Des Moines Northern & Western Railroad Company. From this you will 1408 see that the present Company is not a party to the terminal contract only as it is entitled to all the benefits of the lessee, as successor of the other Companies.

If desirable, I have no doubt that a new terminal contract could be made so that the Des Moines Union Company would have the benefit of the written obligation of the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Company.

There is an agreement between the Des Moines Union R'y. Company and the Chicago, St. Paul & Kansas City R'y. Co., dated January 1st, 1890 and afterward assumed by the Chicago Great Western R'y. Co. This contract terminated June 1st 1894 and was renewed by both parties, for 30 days and until canceled by notice from either party, so that the obligation of the Chicago Great Western R'y. Co. is liable to be canceled at its own option, at any time after thirty days' notice. Such a lease as that will be of no assistance in selling bonds so I do not think you need a copy of the C. G. W. R'y. contract with the Des Moines Union R'y.

Yours truly,

F. M. HUBBELL.

vs.

DES MOINES UNION RAILWAY COMPANY, FREDERICK M. HUBBELL, FREDERICK C. HUBBELL, F. M. HUBBELL & SON, Defendants.

Stipulation.

The parties to this action, by their attorneys, acknowledge lodgement of the evidence in the clerk's office for inspection of the parties as required by law, and notice of time and place when the Court will be asked to approve the same, and, being unable to agree upon the condensation and stating of the evidence in narrative form, respectfully state to the Court that they desire and request that in making up the record of the testimony for the purpose of the appeal herein, it be reproduced in the exact words of the witness as given in the questions and answers upon the trial; and they further state that all the evidence was prepared and printed prior to the time that the present Federal equity rules went into effect, and with a view of using the evidence so printed in the Court of Appeals in the event that an appeal was taken by either party; that the documentary evidence herein constitutes a very large part of the entire testimony, there being more than 750 exhibits introduced and used upon the trial, all of which seem necessary on appeal, and that the oral testimony is practically all in explanation of the negotiations leading up to and culminating in the making of such documents and in the interpretation of the same, and it is necessary, in the opinion of the respective parties, to have such testimony reproduced in the exact language of the witness in order that the said exhibits may be fully understood; and they request that the evidence attached hereto, consisting of one volume designated as Testimony For Complainants, with index, and consisting of 617 pages in addition to the index, one volume designated as Defendants' Testimony, consisting of 360 pages with index, and one volume designated as Exhibits, and Defendants' Testimony consisting of 761 pages of defendants' exhibits and index, all attached hereto, be approved and certified by this Court.

and that the Clerk be directed to file the same in his office as a part of the record for the purposes of the appeal in this cause.

(Record Entry of Hearing and Order of Submission, February 15, 1913.)

Before Judge McPherson.

This case has been duly and fully argued by counsel on the record, evidence, oral testimony and exhibits, having been argued on February 11, 12, 13, 14 and on this day the arguments were concluded. The case is now fully submitted and by the court taken under advisement.

Heretofore there was a case tried in the District Court of the State of Iowa in and for Polk County in which the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company was the plaintiff and the Des Moines Union Railway Company was the defendant, resulting in a decree for the defendant, dated March 29, 1910, in which the said plaintiff therein took an appeal to the Supreme Court of Iowa, and to which said Supreme Court of Iowa the case has been heretofore fully submitted, but not yet decided by said Supreme Court. After the said Supreme Court fully determines said case, the issues in this case are to then be completed, and the parties reserv*ing* the right to introduce testimony with reference to that issue of estoppel by judgment. Thereupon the case is to be regarded as finally submitted.

By Judge Wade.

Any attempt to review the thousands of pages of evidence, briefs and arguments in this case, would be impossible. I can only say that I have not only read the evidence, briefs and arguments, but I have studied them with care and deliberation. I have given effect to every consideration which aids the human mind in searching for the truth. I have, in an effort to determine the intention of the parties in their words and acts, throughout more than thirty years of transactions before the court, considered the motives which ordinarily actuate men in dealing with property rights. Throughout this tangled web of inconsistent, and often incomprehensible conduct, relating to the property and rights in issue, I have tried to trac*t* the purpose and the intent which men would naturally have in dealing with their fellows under such circumstances.

I have considered the relation of these men, one to another, I have asked myself, what were the probabilities as to *c*ntent and purpose, I have tried through the fog, to discern here and there a meaning of the minds of the men dealing with these important property rights. I have borne in mind, that agreements may be discovered, not alon*g* in words used, but in acts and dundu conduct. I have tried to apply the well recognized principle, that contracts may often be best construed, by considering the construction which has been placed upon them by the parties themselves, as manifest in their acts and conduct.

I have given recognition to the force of acquiescence in conduct, to delay in assertion of rights—to failure to protect—to apparently silent recognition of asserted privileges. Of course it is impossible to reconcile all that has been done, it would be utterly impossible to understand why many things were done, except that i*s* is manifest, (1), that during a large period of time involved, men representing conflicting interests, were personal friends, exhibiting great confidence in those with whom they were dealing; (2), The men whose acts are under consideration, were men of great responsibility to other varied interest, and (3) muh Much of what appears now to be valuable interest, during a large portion of the time involved, were considered of slight pecuniary value, and treated accordingly.

It is apparent, of course, that if at the time of the transactions during the first ten years, all the parties realized that the Terminal Company would eventually attain a value which it now possesses, the transactions between the parties would have been more definite and certain.

Things were permitted to "Drift" largely because it was not felt that beyond immediate benefits which the different parties were receiving, there appeared to be anything of sufficient value to justify positive assertion of rights between the parties.

But in considering all of the foregoing, I have recognized the well settle- principles that,

(a) Men must be bound by their contracts even though subsequent events proved that they were inadvisable, or absurd;

(b) That rights and titles evidenced by written contracts, records, or deeds, cannot be set aside or affected by parole evidence tending to change the terms and effect of such contracts, records or deeds.

(c) That men are presumed to intend the natural consequence of their acts.

From the record in this case, in view of the foregoing considerations, certain conclusions have been forced upon me, I will not undertake to recit- in detail, the evidence forming the basis or these conclusions; I will only indicate something of the processes leading to these conclusions.

In what follows, I will refer to the defendants as "The Terminal Company", and to the plaintiffs and their predecessors as "The Railway Companies".

The facts seem to group themselves, at least for convenient purpose, with reference to periods of time, 1880 to 1885 inclusive. During this period we find the relations of the parties established by the contract of December 8, 1880, by which Polk, Clarkson, Hubbell and Rummells, and the Wabash Railway became associated in a plan to construct certain railways from Des Moines to Albia, and Des Moines to the Northwest in connection with other already constructed lines.

Pursuant to this contract we find the organization of the necessary companies to carry out the plans of the original contract. These lines converging in Des Moines, and Des Moines being a center of population and business, the parties naturally proceeded to acquire terminal facilities in that city, purchasing property—much of it in the names of James F. Howe and G. M. Dodge, who held it as trustees; the money paid therefor, being expended by the Wabash.

On January 2nd, 1882, was executed the contract which is and has been, the bone of contention" in this whole matter; at least all inquiries in regard to rights and titles, logically go back to this contract. While uncertain and indefinite in some degree, and tentative only in many respects, did have the effect of determining as between the parties, definitely and conclusively certain rights. All of the property purchased up to that time by this contract, became by reason of the terms thereof, dedicated to the future use and enjoyment of the three companies named therein. It was as comprehensive as the conditions would at that time warrant. It clearly indicates the relative interests of the different parties—not any definite interests in any particular piece of property but an apparent definite purpose that each company should have such interest in the total property, as would serve its uses for terminal purposes, and this was the only interest any of said companies naturally desired in the properties.

For such purposes, each company was the owner of the entire property, subject only to the rights of the other companies for similar purposes. It apparently was not intended to reserve to any of the companies, a specific interest in the entire property, but considered more the rights of use which the respective parties would have in the property; but there can be no question but that the entire property was dedicated to the joint use of all. The conditions of such joint use also were specified in fixing the proportion of expenses to be borne by each of the companies. The contract specifically provided that the title to the property "should be and remain in a Trustee". It also provided "That a Depot Company may be organized, and may take permanent charge of the property upon the terms herein set forth" and it provided that bonds might be issued covering the "respective portions of the costs of said properties and improvements."

The provision that the property "shall be and remain in a Trustee", was apparently intended to be read with the provision "that a Depot Company may be organized, and may take permanent charge of the property upon the terms herein set forth, and "that said Company may issue and deliver to the Companies, parties hereto, its mortgage bonds to the amount of their respective portions of the costs". It was hardly intended that in case a depot company should be organized, that the title was to remain in a separate trustee and the management in the depot company, because it expressly provides, that the depot company should issue "its mortgage bonds", which could not well be done without holding the title; so that it may be fairly inferred that it was intended that in case a depot company would be organized, that it would take the title. In any event, the subsequent conduct of the parties construing this provision, conclusively established that the depot company was to be to all intents and purposes the "Trustee" referred to in the contract. No one can successfully contend, that when this contract was made, the details had been worked out, or that there was a meeting of the minds of the parties upon such details. Much was left to mutual cooperation in the accomplishment of the general purpose, and recognizing that there might be disagreement, provision was made in the contract for arbitration.

If the transactions stopped with the execution of this contract, there could be no question between the parties to the contract as to their rights in the property. It was property held for their joint use for terminal purposes. It is idle to talk of consideration, or lack of consideration, in this transaction. The consideration was satisfactory to the parties at that time. The mutual obligations which then existed, and the mutual advantages in anticipation, cannot of course now be fully disclosed; but a consideration which is valuable and satisfactory to the parties, cannot, as between the parties, be inquired into by the Court.

From the execution of this contract until December 9, 1884, nothing of interest in this case occurred—the parties apparently dealing in harmony under the provisions of their contract. On this date, however, it was decided to form a corporation—the purpose being expressed in the language, "Whereas it is desirable that a corporation be organized by the purpose of taking and holding such property" The words "such property" referring specifically to the property covered by the contract in 1882.

On December 10, 1884, the corporation was organized. Articles of Incorporation were adopted, which went far beyond the usual forms, in an effort to specifically describe the purpose of the corporation as being "for carrying out the objects and purposes of the agreement heretofore, to-wit, on the second day of January, 1882, made and entered into." The contract is set out in full in the Articles of Incorporation, and a construction is placed upon the contract in the following language:

"Whereas, it was provided in the contract aforesaid, that a Depot Company might be organized to take permanent charge of the property, and it was the understanding of the parties that such company might acquire, operate, and maintain said property in such manner as best to serve the interests of the parties hereto."

The nature of the business was described as "the construction, ownership, and operation of a railway in, around and about the city of Des Moines, Iowa," including the construction ownership and use of depots, freight-houses, railway shops, repair shops, stock yards, and whatever else may be useful and convenient for the operation of railways at the terminal points of Des Moines, Iowa, etc."

It will be observed that the company was not organized merely to hold the property then owned jointly by the parties under the contract in 1882, but it contemplated the purchase of new property, the construction of improvements thereon, the extension of facilities for terminal uses. In other words, it is apparent that in the organization of this corporation, the parties had a vision of a large, comprehensive Terminal Station, equipped with the necessary tracks, not only to accommodate the business of the three Companies, but looking forward to the extension of privileges to other Companies, it was to be a close corporation which carefully guarded the rights of the three Railway Companies, and gave them absolute control.

The capital stock was designated as One Million Dollars, and authority was given for the issue of such capital stock for the "property and franchises in the city of Des Moines" held by the Railway Companies.

The formation of this corporation and its plan of ownership and operation, was satisfied by Resolutions adopted January 1, 1885 by the different railway companies interested, which expressed the purpose of conveying to the corporation, the property held in behalf of the three companies under the contract of 1882, whether held by the railway, of the Trustees, Howe and Dodge. Much consideration has been given to the wording of these Resolutions, but two purposes are clearly expressed, (1) a recognition of the organization of the corporation as being the "Depot Company" which the contract of 1882 provided might be organized, and (2), that all property in which the Companies had a joint interest under the contract of 1882, whether held by the Companies or others, should be transferred to the corporation.

On January 1st, 1885, the Terminal Company also by resolution, "accepted the transfer and management and operation of said property", and expressed a purpose to assume control thereof from that date "so far as practical". The Resolution of the Terminal Company specifically refers to the contract of 1882, and gives recognition to the fact that the corporation was organized in pursuance of said contract, and specifically recognizes the desire of the Companies, "to transfer said property to this Company in accordance with the terms of said contract."

It was further provided for a committee to confer with the parties "upon the terms and prices at which they will respectively assign, transfer and convey said railroad property and franchises to this Company, and procure from them and each of them such conveyance and transfer as may be necessary To Fully Invest This Company with the Title, Control and Management of said Properties Provided for in said Contract of January 2nd, 1882."

Up to this time, the management of the property under the contract of 1882, had been in the Des Moines & St. St. Louis Railroad Company, that this management in fact continued until 1888, notwithstanding the organization of the corporation and resolutions aforesaid. In fact everything seemed to remain in statu quo from January, 1885 until 1887.

In November, 1887, appropriate resolutions were adopted by the Railway Companies, directing Howe and Dodge to transfer the property held by them as Trustee-, to the Terminal Company. These resolutions clearly gave recognition to the contract of 1882, and to the conveyance directed as being pursuant to said contract. The Resolutions provided for certain issues of stock, which were not made in accordance therewith; the issuance of stock having been deferred apparently by mutual acquiescence until 1890.

In 1887, appropriate conveyance- were made by Howe and Dodge; the deeds from Howe reciting that the title was held under the contract of 1882, and the deed from Dodge being a simple quit claim.

November 7, 1887, the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern, executed a quit claim deed to the Terminal Company. November 8, 1887, the Des Moines & St. Louis Company adopted a Resolution directing its proper officers to convey to the Terminal Company "for the purpose of carrying out the contract of date January 2nd 1882" and on February 21, 1888, said Company complied with said Resolution by the execution of a warranty deed.

Thus by February 21, 1888, the Terminal Company had become invested with the title to all the property covered by the contract of 1882, whether held by Howe, Dodge, or the Railway Companies. Much significence is attached to the expressions in these deeds, which conveyed upon their fact, an absolute title. These deeds must be con-trued with the Resolutions, authorizing their execution, even so construed, there is no question in my mind but what the Terminal Company acquired absolute title to these properties.

I have given to the claims of the plaintiff most earnest consideration, but I cannot agree that the Terminal Company acquired any of this property as "Trustee" in the ordinary sense of that term. The title of the Terminal Company was, and is, an absolute title. the rights, if any, of the plaintiffs, must be looked for, not in a reservation of any title in the property, but whatever they are, they consist of rights or equities in the corporation itself. I cannot believe that it was contemplated by any one, that the title to be acquired by the Terminal Company, was less than an absolute title.

But we must not overlook the purpose for which the corporation was created, and the use to which its property was to be put. There is nothing to indicate that this corporation was intended in any sense as a temporary agency; it has all the marks of permanency. It was not contemplated that any of the parties should ever against acquire right of title in the properties conveyed, nor was there any reservation in the conveyance. They were absolute, and their effect cannot be varied by parole evidence of a reserved intent or purpose.

So that the rights of the plaintiff must be looked for, not in a reservation of title to the property conveyed, but in they right which these parties would have in the use of the franchises of the corporation itself.

Looking at the transactions to this date, I cannot believe that it was the purpose of these railway- to grant unto the Terminal Company, the absolute interest which they had in these franchises which were necessary to the business of the Companies without reserving any right whatsoever (except at the will of the Terminal Company) to the use of its facilities. I do not believe that it was in contemplation of the parties, that the Terminal Company might, the day after these conveyances were completed, by Resolution, terminate the use of the Terminal Railways by these companies.

Much has been said about the plan for the issuance of stock as being payment in full consideration for all interest. It is apparent that at this time, and for several years afterward, the matter of the issuance of stock was regarded as of small import. No stock was issued until April 28, 1890—more than two years after the completed conveyances to the Terminal Company. During these two years, what were the rights of the Railway Companies? They continued to use the Terminals. No contract was made, were they trespassers, technically speaking. The rights of the parties during this period, as subsequently, must be ascertained in part by the test of reason and probabilities, and we must in this connection, also bear in mind the rule contended for by the plaintiffs, they except under rare conditions, can a Railway Company divest itself absolutely of a portion of its railway necessary to its successful operation.

What were the rights of these railway companies reserved out of these transactions? March 31, 1888, we find a Resolution by the Terminal Company fixing the manner in which the expenses should be paid, which was substantially the same as the plan followed when the Des Moines & St. Louis Company was handling the Terminals. Interest on bonds was provided for substantially in the same ratio as other expenses, and it was expressly resolved "that a supplemental agreement be made."

fixing the terms and conditions on which the several lines Now Interested, or which may hereafter become interested, shall enjoy the use of these terminals. "Supplemental" to what? The only thing that such an agreement could be supplemental to, would be the contract of 1882, as incorporated in the Articles of Incorporation.

In construing the effect of the contract executed under this Resolution, which defendants contend is a lease, it is important to bear in mind that transaction between the parties in this case, have now reached a point where they not only were dealing between themselves in a friendly way, but were they had to deal with the public in reference to the bonds which were issued to pay for investment. The time has come when, mutual confidence, which perhaps accounts for the uncertainty of much that was done before, will no longer serve. Forms must now be observed. Now and hereafter, proceedings must be expressed in such a way as to show that things are upon a "business basis." These consideration- may account for terms of "grant" in the contract finally executed May 10, 1889. This contract, regardless of specific terms employed, was clearly intended to merely fix the relations of the parties with reference to the enjoyment of the property during the period of the contract, and the period of the contract was clearly fixed with reference to the maturity of the bonds.

I find nothing in the acts or conduct of the parties at this time or prior thereto, which indicates upon the one hand, an intention to waive any right to the use of the property conveyed to the Terminal Company; or upon the other, an assertion by the Terminal Company, of any right to a denial of such use. Being satisfied that it was not intended to be a "grant" for the periode of thirty years, it cannot be construed as a perpetual grant. I can only construe it as a definite determination of the obligations of the Terminal Company and the Railway Companies for a fixed period of time.

This contract of 1889 being the last important fact in the transactions preceding the amendment to the Articles of Incorporation in 1890, it is well to determine the relative rights of the parties at any — prior to the date when said Articles were amended.

When I go back to the beginning of the relations of the parties originally interested in the property, I find that the dominant a*le*ment manifest is the joint use of the property. Profits were no considered, except as they might be incidental. The contract of 1882 was really a contract of joint use of certain properties. We must always bear in mind the situation of the three companies, each of which absolutely required the use of the properties for the proper performance of their corporate duties. This right to use, not only valuable, but essential, must have been in the mind of all parties at the time of organization of the Terminal Company, and after its organization, I cannot believe that these Companies had deprived themselves of the right to this use. This right is in no manner a limitation upon the ownership of the property it is merely an equity which the Companies reserved in the corporation itself—an obligation which the corporation assumed by virtue of its positive recognition of the contract of 1882, and by virtue of the numerous expressions in Resolutions and conveyances by which it acquired title to the property.

This right—this equity, was of cour*t* subject to terms and conditions which might change with the years.

Under the contract of 1882, it was contemplated that each Company should bear a fair share of the expenses, but what would be a fair share, might change with changing conditions. The right or equity which was reserved to these Companies upon the formation of the Terminal Company, was subject to the same conditions and obligations, and the contract of 1889, recognizing these mutual obligations, was merely a determination for the period there expressed (the limit being fixed by the maturing bonds), of the amounts which the Companies should pay for enjoying the equity, which I hold they had in the use of Terminal properties. I do not believe, that if a disagreement had arisen at the time of the execution of the contract of 1889, and if the Terminal Company had denied the Companies the use of the property, that any court would have sustained the right asserted by the Terminal Company. I do not believe that any court would have given recognition to a condition where three lines of railway, exercising franchises granted by the State, would terminate at the entrance to the city of Des Moines. I believe that an assertion of this kind by the Terminal Company, would have been held not only contrary to equity and good conscience, under all the circumstances, but that it would have been held contrary to public policy to permit the Terminal Company to thus "chop off" three important lines of railway so as to render them practically useless.

This conclusion has support in the reports, 1891, 1892, 1893, made by the Terminal Company to the Executive Counsel of the State, in which under oath, it was represented, that "the Des Moines Union Railway Company is simply a representative Company, acting as an agent at Des Moines for the Wabash Railway Company and the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company and the Des Moines and Northern Railway Company, performing all necessary work for them, and charging each at actual cost its due proportion for the expense thereby incurred."

Thus for four years after the contract of 1889, it appears that the general view of the Terminal Company, was at least consistent with the continuing rights of the Railway Companies.

Counsel for plaintiffs give too much significance to the term "agency" used in these reports, as indicating a mere agent or employe. I do not so construe the term. I think the word is used as meaning the "medium" through which these Companies exercised the right of use, which always up to this time was their dominant interest in the property.

Counsel for defendants have laid great stress upon the use of the term "tenants" in contracts and resolutions, and correspondence, descriptive of the Railway Companies. Equity does not consider forms or terms; it tries to look behind the words used, and to shape decrees based upon truth and justice, as the same may be manifest, not in single terms but in all the words used, and all the acts done expressive of purpose and intent; And I might as well say at this point, that the right or equity of the Railway Companies to the use of the Terminal porperties, in my judgment, is perpetual during the existence of the corporation. I find nothing in the proceedings subsequent to the contract of 1889, to signify a purpose or intent to release such equity or right, and find nothing which justifies the Terminal Company in assuming that such equity or right was forfeited or waived.

But What Of The Amendment To The Article Of Incorporation in 1890? Technically, the amendment was not valid, because at that time no stock of the corporation had been issued, and of course a valid amendment could only be adopted by the stockholders. Counsel for plaintiff insist that unless actually valid at the time the amendment was voted upon, that the amendment never could become affective by any process of ratification, estoppel, waiver, or acquiescence. I can agree with this proposition in so far as the rights of the public might be affected by such amendment, but in so far as property rights and relations are concerned as between individuals, I cannot agree that by subsequent conduct, the things attempted to be done could not become binding upon them. In so far as the right or equity of the Companies which I have found existed at that time, is concerned, I do not believe that it was in any manner affected by the amendment. It does not appear that it was intended to affect any right then existing, and even if such intention existed on the part of any one, it was not manifest, and I find nothing which would give it effect.

But this amendment to the Articles did fix the capital stock, and did provide for the issuance of "four thousand sharez" "as part of the purchase price of the terminal property" and these shares were actually issued, and are still outstanding. A large number of these shares have been sold—not to innocent purchasers without knowledge of the proceedings, but sold for a consideration. Some are still held by the Companies receiving the original issue, or their successors. For more than twenty-five years now all parties have treated with each other with full recognition of the issuance of this stock authorized by the amendment to the Articles of Incorporation, and certainly it is too late now to question the proceedings under which said stock was issued.

The only other contract between the parties is what is termed the Ratification Contract of 1897 which was adopted after a fruitless effort to agree upon terms which would modify the conditions of the contract of 1889 as to the amount which the Companies should pay.

Here again we find that the necessity for a new contract was based upon the claim that "without it we could not well dispose of our bonds," and the correspondence relating to this attempt to procure a new contract with new terms, and the final adoption of the ratification contract, must all be construed with this point in view; so construed, many of the expression there, which counsel would argue for or against, right or title, become ineffectual for such purpose.

"The Surplus Earnings."

And this brings us to the question of "surplus earnings" which consisted of charges for switching and handling cars and traffic for other Companies than the Railway Companies, and building rentals and privileges.

To whom does this accumulated "surplus" belong? Here again we are required to view things from the beginning, and to deal with conditions which at the beginning, no one anticipated. It is often true, in dealing with human affairs, that courts are compelled, so to speak, to make contracts between parties in reference, to certain property rights which would accrue to them out of conditions not contemplated by either party at the time of original transactions.

In the original transactions between all these parties, there were two things in which the Companies could possibly be interested; (a) the use of the Terminal properties, and (b), the profits which might be produced by the use of the Terminal properties by other persons. It is apparent that no one anticipated profits as a matter of any great consequence at that time. It is evident that the contract of 1882, contemplated the application of any possible profits to the reduction of the expense account, to the advantage of the Companies. When it came to executing the contract of 1889, in fixing the amounts to be paid by the Railway Companies, specific language was used which required only a deduction from the total expenses "the amount, if any, which other railway companies may be under obligation to pay by virtue of contracts for the use of said property, or parts thereof, for the preceding month."

At that time the depot facilities did not exist. It is not apparent that switching charges were by virtue of contracts for the use of said property. In other words, technically speaking, the contract limits the application of receipts to the amounts received from other Companies using the terminal properties under contracts or leases. For the first year, the Terminal Company seemed to construe the contract as requiring the application of rents collected for the use of real estate and for switching charges, and this was ordered by Resolution of February 11, 1891.

January 7, 1892, a Resolution was adopted, reciting the need of cash capital, and ordering that the rent of real estate and switching charges, "shall not be credited upon the accounts of the tenant companies," "until the further action of the board." This led to an inquiry, and on March 2nd, 1892, the Superintendent of the Terminal Company, wrote the Auditor of the Wabash, that the allowance for switching charges, rentals, etc. would not be distributed until the Company could accumulate a small sum for working capital, and while there was correspondence and some controversy, thereafter, this "surplus fund" has never since been credited upon the bills of the Railway Companies.

Did this point rest upon the contract alone [ther] would be force in the claim that it was the intention that all income from every source should be deducted from the expenses to be paid by the Railway Companies. Here we come to deal with conditions that no one anticipated. The business of the Company which at that time made the surplus fund very small, increased under careful management, until it has assumed very large proportions.

And here another factor must be considered. When the Terminal Company was organized, it provided for the issuance of shares of stock. Under the amendment to the Articles, the amount of shares actually issued, was four hundred thousand dollars. These shares nominally, were issued in part payment for the properties. They in fact, represented little, if anything in value, because bonds were issued nominally in an amount sufficient to pay for all money invested; but in [an] much as these bonds, at the time of issuance, probably could not be said to be worth par, the stock may have been considered as making up the difference between actual value and selling value at that time. In any event, the stock was issued. It will not do to say that it meant nothing. It will not do to say that it never was intended that they should have any dividends. Shares of stock are written contracts. They do not express all of the rights and obligations of the parties, but the law attaches to them specific rights, and to the corporation, specific obligations, and the legal effect of these shares of stock, cannot be changed by parole evidence.

A court is not justified in believing—certainly not in the absence of specific record evidence, that it was the intention these shares of stock should be issued and held without hope or expectation of a dividend thereon; but there was no source of dividend for the stock, if, as contended by plaintiffs, all of the rentals and switching charges were to be credited to the Railway Companies.

I feel that the only construction which the court is justified in placing upon the entire transaction is, that it was contemplated that there would be some profits, and that the profits should go to the Railway Companies in the proportion indicated by the division of the stock. In other words, if the Companies receiving the stock, had held the stock until the present time, there need be no dispute over switching charges, or rentals, or other surplus, because it would all go to these Companies as dividends upon their stock. It isn't clear that this was the actual present intent, but it is the only intent which a court can give to the acts and conduct of the parties in view of the issuance and division of the stock.

If it were possible that the Terminal Company would have an income aside from rentals, switching charges, etc., which might form the basis of a fund for paying dividents, there would be more reason for urging that the contract of 1889, should be construed as contemplating the application of this "surplus fund" to their account; but at least from everything in view at the time of these transactions, such a construction of the contract of 1889, would leave the Company without any fund whatsoever, and the stock representing nothing except the power to vote.

There is nothing in the facts which would enable a court of equity to enter a decree providing for an application of a portion of this "surplus fund" to the Railway Companies, and a portion to the stock. Either the stock must fail to receive any dividend, or the Companies must be deprived of the application of any part of the "surplus fund". The court cannot shut its eyes to the fact apparent in the record, that those who purchased the stock, and who have had the management of the Company, are, to a large extent, responsible for its wonderful development, and while it might be possible to pay for the service they have rendered, yet upon the whole record, I do not feel that the court is justified in now entering a decree which proclaims the stock from the beginning, as signifying nothing of value; such a decree would only be justifiable where the evidence was clear, convincing and satisfactory.

I will not review the criticism of the respective parties, nor the charges of bad faith. It is apparent of course, that Hubbell early anticipated the possibilities of the development of this Terminal Company, and that with greater foresight than the other interested persons, he purchased the stock for small consideration; but certainly so far as the present Companies are concerned, the stock was purchased openly—part of it, directly from the Wabash, or the purchasing committee, and part of it from the predecessor of the Milwaukee Road, and the rights of the Milwaukee Road were acquired with full knowledge of the ownership of the stock. These Companies still hold part of the stock, and under my construction, they will receive their proportionate share of the accumulated profits of the Terminal Company. While the amount paid for the stock by the present holders, was small, the railway companies should not be allowed to say that the sale by their predecessors of this stock, was a sale of something which had absolutely no value, and that never could have any value. Somewhere, and somehow, it is my judgment, that all parties believed that this stock should earn some dividend provided the Company succeeded, but there is no such possibility upon the construction now contended for by plaintiffs herein.

The contract of 1889 will terminate in 1918. Under my holding the plaintiffs are entitled to a continued use of the Terminal properties. What shall be the terms or condition of such use, cannot now be determined. There being no contract governing the amount to be paid, if the parties cannot agree, a court of equity will have to determine the matter for the parties. The contract of 1889 may be a guide, or it may not be a guide; it will depend altogether upon what the court may feel, in view of all the facts, is equitable and just.

In the foregoing I have not quoted authorities. The principles applied are fundamental and well recognized. It has been merely a process of interpretation, not alone of one contract, but different contracts and numerous acts and transactions.

In the recent case of Rushing vs. Manhattan Life Insurance Co. — Fed. Rep. — Sanborn, Judge, well says,—

"The sole purpose of the interpretation of a contract is to ascertain the intention of the parties when they made it. If possible every part of a contract must be so construed as to be consistent with every other part and to have effect. It is only when the parts of a contract are so radically repugnant that there is no rational construction that will render them effective and accordant that any part must perish. And the intention of the parties must be deducted, not from specific provisions or fragmentary parts of the agreement, but from the entire contract, because the intent is not evidenced by any part or stipulation of it, nor by the contract without any part or provision, but by every part and term so construed, if possible, as to be consistent with every other party and with the entire agreement. American Bonding

Co. vs. Pueblo Inv. Co., 150 Fed. 17, 27, 80 C. C. A. 97, 107; Jacobs vs. Spalding, 71 Wis. 177. 188, 36 N. W. 608; Boardman vs. Reed, 6 Pet. 328 Canal Co. vs. Hill, 15 Wall, 94; O'Brien vs. Miller, 168 U. S. 287; Pressed Steel Car Co. vs. Eastern Ry. Co. 57 C. C. A. 635, 637, 121 Fed. 609, 611; Uinta Tunnel, etc. Co. vs. Ajax Gold Min. Co. 141 Fed. 563, 73 C. C. A. 35; U. S. Fidelity & G. Co. vs. Board of Com'rs, 145 Fed. 144, 148, 76 C. C. A. 114, 118."

Not only is the foregoing true as to the interpretation of a contract, but it is true as to the interpretation of a series of acts and contracts.

I cannot forbear expressing my appreciation to counsel for their earnest and laborious efforts in presenting this case. In the application of the legal principles involved, I have been greatly aided by the numerous authorities cited and discussed, and by the able and eloquent arguments presented in open court.

Counsel for plaintiffs will prepare a decree consistent with this Opinion reserving proper exceptions and submit the same to counsel for defendants, who will have twenty days in which to file objections to the form thereof, and it can then be submitted for determination.

Bill of Complaint in the Nature of a Supplemental Bill of Wabash Railway Company.

The Wabash Railway Company, a railroad corporation created by and under the laws of the State of Indiana, a citizen of said State, having its principal offices in the City of St. Louis, State of Missouri, brings this its original bill of complaint in the nature of a supplemental bill against the Des Moines Union Railway Company, a corporation created by and under the laws of the State of Iowa, having its principal office in the City of Des Moines, in said last named State, and a citizen of the State of Iowa; Frederick M. Hubbell, a citizen of the State of Iowa, and a resident of the City of Des Moines, in Polk County in said District and Division, and Frederick C. Hubbell, also a citizen of the State of Iowa and a resident of said City of Des Moines, in Polk County, Iowa, which is in said District and Division, and the firm of F. M. Hubbell and Son, which is composed of said Frederick M. Hubbell and Frederick C. Hubbell, Defendants.

And thereupon your Orator complains and says:

I.

That on the — day of ——, the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company, a corporation, and The Wabash Railroad Company, a corporation, as Complainants, exhibited their original bill of complaint in this Honorable Court, against the Des Moines Union Railway Company, Frederick M. Hubbell, Frederick C. Hubbell, and F. M. Hubbell and Son, as Defendants, being Number 2449, in Equity. And thereafter by order of this Honorable Court the said Complainants filed in said cause their amended bill of complaint therein, praying as follows:

1. That it be declared that, on the terms stated in said contract of January 2nd, 1882, the complainants, their successors and assigns, are entitled, for railroad purposes, to the joint and exclusive use, in common and in perpetuity, of all the pieces and parcels of real estate, together with all buildings, tracks and improvements thereon, or appurtenant thereto, in said City of Des Moines, heretofore conveyed to the Des Moines Union Railway Company by James F. Rex, James F. How, Trustee, Grenville M. Dodge, the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company, the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, Frederick M. Hubbell and J. S. Polk, and each of them, and all additions thereunto made by exchange or by purchase for extensions of tracks or building grounds, where such purchases were made either by rents of the original property or by the proceeds of mortgage bonds issued as aforesaid; and that the said Frederick M. Hubbell and Frederick C. Hubbell, and each of them, their counsel, solicitors, officers, agents and attorneys be perpetually restrained by the order and injunction of this Honorable Court, from in any wise interfering with, or obstructing your orators, their officers, agents or servants, in the aforesaid use of said properties and appurtenances.

2. That said Des Moines Union Railway (The Terminal) Company, its officers and agents, be required to render unto your orators a full and true account of all moneys heretofore received by it or them, on account of the switching or handling of cars, or traffic, on or over said terminal properties or any part thereof, for all persons or corporations whomsoever, other than complainants; of all sums of money received from or on account of rentals of real estate, buildings and improvements, as well as the income derived from all other sources connected with the use or operation of said terminal properties, giving the dates and sources from which the same were derived; the amounts expended and the purposes and dates of all expenditures; the balance now on hand, and a full and true statement and description of all properties acquired and improvements made and paid for with or from moneys received by it or them, on account of the aforesaid operation and use of said real estate, buildings, tracks and terminals.

3. That it be declared that complainants, their successors and assigns, are entitled to have and enjoy the exclusive use, in common and in perpetuity, of all the real estate, tracks, buildings, improvements and terminal facilities in said City of Des Moines, that have been, or may be hereafter acquired, erected or made, either in the name of the Terminal Company, or in the name of any other corporation or person, with the income or earnings derived from the rental, operation or use of said terminal properties, or any part thereof, or from sale of mortgage bonds heretofore issued or hereafter issued in the name of said Terminal Company.

4. That the Terminal Company be required to pay over to complainants all sums of money now in its possession or under its control (in excess of the sum of $25,000.00, to be retained as a working fund), received by it on account of the switching or hauling of cars or traffic, on or over said terminal properties, or any part thereof, for all persons or corporations, other than complainants; and all sums of money received from, or on account of rentals of real estate or buildings, as well as income derived from all other sources connected with the use or operation of said terminal properties, or any part thereof, in the proportion that the wheelage of each complainant has borne to the total wheelage over said terminals during the months such moneys were earned or accrued.

5. That it be adjudged and decreed that the Articles of Incorporation of said Terminal Company, as the same were adopted, signed and filed on or about the 10th day of December, 1884, are now in full force and effect; that the same have never been amended, and that all alleged and pretended amendments thereof are void and of no effect.

6. That all extensions of tracks that have been constructed by said Frederick M. Hubbell or Frederick C. Hubbell, or by any person or persons for them, or by any corporation organized and controlled by them, or either of them, partly on said terminal properties and partly on real estate or right of way acquired by them, or either of them, be decreed to be a part and parcel of said terminal properties, and that complainants be permitted to have the use thereof, in common and in perpetuity on such terms and under such regulations as to the Court shall seem equitable.

7. That said defendants, Frederick M. Hubbell and Frederick C. Hubbell, and each of them, be, by the order and decree of the Court, enjoined and prohibited from hereafter asserting, claiming or publishing that said Terminal Company, is the owner in fee simple of all or any of said terminal properties, or that the only rights complainants now have therein were acquired under the said contract dated May 1st, 1889, or that after the expiration of said contracts, to-wit, after the 1st day of May, 1918, complainants will have no right to further use said terminals, excepting on such terms and for such compensation as may be agreed upon between them and said Terminal Company.

8. That the Terminal Company be required to appoint from time to time, an Executive Committee, who shall be the nominees and representatives respectfully of your Orators, their successors and assigns, which Committee shall have power to appoint a Superintendent who shall have charge of the operation, repair and management of said depot grounds and terminal facilities, including station buildings, tracks, round houses and shops, and that in default of such appointment by the Board of Directors of the Terminal Company, such Committee be, from time to time appointed by the Court.

9. That said Frederick M. Hubbell and Frederick C. Hubbell and said firm of F. M. Hubbell & Son be perpetually restrained by the order and injunction of this Court from selling, pledging or otherwise disposing of the shares of the nominal Capital Stock of said Terminal Company that have been issued in their names, and that as holders of said stock certificates they be restrained by the order and injunction of this Court from exercising any control or management of said terminals and terminal properties excepting such as shall be in accordance with the terms and spirit of the aforesaid contract dated January 2nd, 1882, and herein referred to as Exhibit "A."

10. That defendant, Frederick M. Hubbell and Frederick C. Hubbell, and said Terminal Company, and each of them, be perpetually restrained by the order and injunction of this Court, from executing any lease, or entering into any contract for the use of said terminal properties by any person or corporation, after the expiration of said contract of May 10, 1889 (herein referred to as Exhibit "P,") that will in any manner interfere with or impair the rights of your orators to use said terminals in common and in perpetuity as provided in said contract of January 2nd, 1882, herein referred to as Exhibit "A."

11. That it be adjudged and decreed that the Des Moines Union Railway Company took and now holds the title to all the real estate that has been heretofore, or may be hereafter acquired by or conveyed to it, for terminal purposes in the City of Des Moines, together with all the buildings, tracks and other improvements thereon, as trustee, for the Des Moines & St. Louis Railway Company, the Des Moines Northern Railway Company, the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, and the complainants herein, as their successors and assigns, now are and shall be hereafter entitled to the permanent use of the same as and for terminals for said railroads in the City of Des Moines, on the terms and conditions stated in said contract of January 2nd, 1882, to-wit: On condition that they pay the cost of supervising, maintaining and operating said terminals and the cost of all insurance, taxes and assessments thereon according to their proportionate use thereof, as evidenced by their wheelage upon and over said terminals.

12. And that your orators may have such other and further relief in the premises as the nature of the cause shall require and as to the Court shall seem meet.

And your orator further shows that the said defendants appeared and put their answer to said amended bill. That said amended bill and answer now remain as of record in this Honorable Court, and Complainant takes leave to make reference thereto.

II.

Your Orator further represents and shows to the Court that since the filing of the said amended bill of complaint the Equitable Trust Company of New York, as Trustee, filed its bill of complaint in the District Court of the United States, for the Eastern Division of the Eastern Judicial District of the State of Missouri, against The Wabash Railroad Company and James B. Forgan, praying therein the foreclosure of a certain mortgage theretofore executed and delivered by The Wabash Railroad Company to secure the payment of certain bonds of said Railroad Company, as described in said bill of complaint; that said mortgage conveyed to the said Equitable Trust Company, and said James B. Forgan, as Trustees, all of the Railroads and properties of The Wabash Railroad Company, including all of the right, title and intrest of the Wabash Railroad Company in and to the terminal properties, contracts, leases, easements, actions and causes of action, described and referred to in the said amended bill of complaint heretofore filed in this Honorable Court by the said Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company and The Wabash Railroad Company, against the Des Moines Union Railway Company and others, as stated in Paragraph I, hereof.

That on or about the second day of February, 1912, the said Equitable Trust Company of New York, as Trustee, filed in this Honorable Court its ancillary bill of complaint against The Wabash Railroad Company and James B. Forgan, praying the foreclosure of said mortgage of the Wabash Railroad Company. That thereafter, such proceedings were had in said foreclosure suits that a decree of foreclosure of said mortgage (to which reference is hereby made) was entered therein in the District Court of the United States, for the Eastern Division of the Eastern Judicial District of the State of Missouri, and in this Honorable Court, and all of the railroads and properties of The Wabash Railroad Company were directed to be sold to satisfy and pay the bonds of the Wabash Railroad Company secured by said mortgage. That pursuant to the terms of said decree, all of the railroads and properties of The Wabash Railroad Company were thereafter sold to, and purchased by, your Orator, including all of the right, title and interest held and owned by The Wabash Railroad Company in and to the terminal properties, contracts, leases, easements, actions and causes of action, described in the said amended bill of complaint, described in Paragraph I, hereof.

III.

Your Orator further represents and shows unto the Court that, by a certain Indenture made the 22nd day of October, 1915, between Chester H. Krum, as Special Master, party of the first part; said The Wabash Railroad Company, party of the second part; Edward B. Pryor and Edward F. Kearney as Receivers of The Wabash Railroad Company, parties of the third part; the said Equitable Trust Company of New York as Trustee, under the aforesaid mortgage of The Wabash Railroad Company, party of the fourth part; James B. Forgan, as one of the Trustees under the aforesaid mortgage, party of the fifth part; Henry Rogers Winthrop and Robert Goelet as a Purchasing Committee, parties of the sixth part, and your Orator, Wabash Railway Company, as party of the seventh part, the said parties of the first, second, third, fourth, fifth and sixth parts to said indenture, did thereby and for the considerations in said Indenture mentioned, grant, bargain, sell, alien, remise, release, convey, confirm assign transfer and set over unto your Orator, and to its successors and assigns, in fee simple and absolute, all and singular the railroads, property, rights, franchises, privileges, immunities and appurtenances to the same belonging; rolling stock, bonds, stocks or interests in stocks, debentures, contracts, choses in action, property, premises and rights of every kind and description covered by and embraced in the aforesaid mortgage of The Wabash Railroad Company as adjudged in the said decrees of foreclosure; also all terminals, terminal property and interest in terminals, union depots or stations of said The Wabash Railroad Company wheresoever situate, and all other property of every kind and description owned by said Railroad Company at the time of the execution and delivery of its said mortgage, and appurtenant to or used in connection with its lines of railroad, as well as any other property appurtenant to the lines of railroad; also any and all corporate and other rights, powers, privileges and franchises, easements, tenements, hereditaments and appurtenances, reversions and remainders, which the said Railroad Company had at the time of the execution and delivery of its said mortgage, or which it subsequently acquired for or appurtenant to the construction, maintenance, use or operation of the lines of railroad, extensions and branches, or any part thereof, covered by the said mortgage, and any and all rents, issues, profits, tolls, and other income of said lines of railroad, extensions and branches or any part thereof, and all of the estate, right, title, interest, property, possession, claim and demand whatsoever, as well at law as in equity, of the said Railroad Company, of in and to the said lines of railroad, terminals and other property, and any and every part thereof, with all the appurtenances; also all the right, title, interest, rents, issues, profits, tolls, revenues and other income of the said Railroad Company, under any and all leases, leaseholds, rights under leases or contracts, traffic agreements, trackage agreements and operating agreements for the use, or joint use with other companies, of the railroads, terminals, union stations, bridges and other property wheresoever situated, belonging to any other company or companies, or by reason of which the said Railroad Company is entitled to handle or to have its business and traffic handled by or over such lines of railroad, terminals, union stations or bridges; also five hundred shares of the par value of One Hundred Dollars each of the capital stock of the Des Moines Union Railway Company; also, generally, all property of every kind and description and of whatever nature and wheresoever located, interests, rights, claims, demands, judgments, choses in action, rights of action and causes of action adjudged by said foreclosure decrees to be covered by or included in the said mortgage, whether originally or as after acquired property thereunder.

That by the terms of the Indenture aforesaid, The Wabash Railroad Company parted with all of its rights, title, interest, claims, estate and easements, in and to the terminal properties, contracts, leases, actions, and causes of action described in the amended bill of complaint filed in this Court by the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company, and The Wabash Railroad Company against the Des Moines Union Railway Company, and others, as described in Paragraph I, hereof; and your Orator has thereby acquired and now owns and holds in its own right, all of the right, title, interest, estate, easements, claims, demands, actions and causes of action, the right and claim to which was alleged to be in The Wabash Railroad Company by the aforesaid amended bill of Complaint.

A copy of said Indenture is hereto attached marked Exhibit "A" and made a part hereof.

IV.

Your Orator hereby adopts all and singular the averments contained in the amended bill of complaint heretofore filed in this Honorable Court by the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company and The Wabash Railroad Company against the Des Moines Union Railway Company and others, as described in Paragraph I, hereof, and avers the same to be true.

V.

In consideration whereof, and forasmuch as your Orator is without remedy in the premises, under the strict rules of the common law, and cannot have any relief except in a Court of Equity, where matters of this sort are properly cognizable and relievable; to the end, therefore, that the said Des Moines Union Railway Company and said Frederick M. Hubbell and Frederick C. Hubbell and F. M. Hubbell and Son, the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company and The Wabash Railroad Company, may be required to make answer according to the best of their knowledge, information and belief, to all and singular the matters hereinabove stated, as charged, as fully and completely as if the same were repeated, and they were thereunto particularly interrogated (but not under oath, answers under oath being hereby expressly waived) your Orator prays:

1. That this bill be taken and considered as supplemental to the said amended bill of complaint heretofore exhibited in this Honorable Court by the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company, and The Wabash Railroad Company, as complainants against the Des Moines Union Railway Company, and others, as defendants, being Number 2449 in Equity.

2. That an order be entered herein directing that your Orator, Wabash Railway Company be substituted for and stand in the place of The Wabash Railroad Company, as a complainant in the said amended bill of complaint.

3. That your Orator may be granted the benefit of all of the proceedings had in the said suit.

4. That your Orator be granted the full relief prayed for in said amended bill of complaint in all respects as though the said amended bill of complaint had been brought by your Orator.

5. That your Orator may be granted such other and further relief in the premises, as the nature of the case shall require, and as to the Court shall seem meet.

May it please the Court to grant unto your Orator, writs of subpoena, to be directed to the said defendants, the Des Moines Union Railway Company, Frederick M. Hubbell and Frederick C. Hubbell, and F. M. Hubbell and Son, commanding them and each of them at a certain time, and under a certain penalty therein to be named, to appear before your Honor in this Honorable Court, and then and there severally to answer all and singular the matters aforesaid (but not under oath), and to stand to, abide, and perform such other and further orders and decrees herein as to your Honor shall seem meet.

I am entering decree in which I have tried to describe briefly the rights, duties, and obligations which I find exist between the parties. I found it impossible to make any specific finding of fact, because any finding of fact would be inadequate unless so complete as to be impractical in a decree. I have not found it possible to include in the decree, as asked by complainants, a copy of the contract of 1882 because if it should be now adjudged that the rights of the parties were such as provided for in the contract of 1882, it would then leave for the future the question as to the meaning of the contract of 1882—one of the very questions involved in this case. In truth this decree grants complainants every right it had under contract of 1882 except with relation to the management and control, and profits of the property.

So far as the right to the use of the properties is concerned; for every purpose of the complainants as public service corporations, this decree recognizes the same and protects the complainants in such rights. I feel that this disposes of the point urged by counsel that these corporations could not dispose of any of their properties so as to deprive themselves of the power or capacity to serve the public in accordance with their franchises. If complainants have made a transaction in such form that so far as their public service is concerned they have not impaired their power or capacity, this is as far as the public is interested so far as the question of retaining franchise is concerned.

As to the management, control and profits, I feel that the parties have disposed of the same in the organization of the corporation, the transfer of the properties, and the subsequent transactions in relation thereto.

As I indicated in original opinion, some of these rights have been affected more by estoppel and asequiescence, than by definite intelligible contract or agreement.

I have tried to make clear and definite in this decree, the rights and duties of the parties, so that upon review by the Court of Appeals, there can be no question as to the points determined by the court, and so that in any future controversy, if any, between the parties, certain rights will be definitely and finally fixed either by this decree, or by such decree as the Court of Appeals may order entered herein.

I have felt that the full meaning of this decree could not be expressed without adjudicating the rights of the parties in the property—in the corporation, and in the surplus earnings; and I have tried to leave it in shape so that the questions presented by counsel can be intelligently reviewed.

As to costs, I feel that under the peculiar circumstances of this case, and the purpose and effect of this [litigations], and the results, that each party should pay half the costs.

MARTIN J. WADE,
Judge.

(Decree of District Court, August 29, 1916.)

Decree.

And now to-wit, on this 29th day of August, 1916, this cause having been heretofore fully submitted, and the Wabash Railway Company having, under authority of the Court, joined as party complainant herein, and the court being now fully advised—It Is Ordered, Adjudged and Decreed—

First: That the defendant, The Des Moines Union Railway Company, is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Iowa, with the power to own, maintain and operate a terminal railway within, and in the vicinity of the city of Des Moines, Polk County, Iowa; and that it is the owner of all the real estate, railway tracks, depot buildings, bridges, and other improvements constituting the terminal property and known as the terminal of the Des Moines Union Railway Company in the city of Des Moines, Iowa, and including all the property transferred to it by or in behalf of the complainant's predecessors, the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, The St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, and the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company, and by James F. How and Grenville M. Dodge, Trustees, on or about the year 1887, and all the real estate and other property since acquired by the said Des Moines Union Railway Company, including the franchise to own, operate and maintain a terminal railway in and about and in the vicinity of the city of Des Moines, Iowa, and that the ownership of such property is absolute and unqualified, and that the complainants have no right, title, easement, or interest therein.

Second. It is further Ordered, Adjudged and Decreed, that one of the corporate obligations assumed by the defendant, the Des Moines Union Railway Company, at the time of its organization, and at the time of acquiring the terminal property hereinbefore referred to, was to use said terminal property in perpetuity for the purpose of furnishing terminal service to the complainant's predecessors so long as they might be equitable, and that such corporate obligation now exists in favor of the complainants herein, and their successors or assigns. This corporate obligation is absolute, and is paramount to any other obligation of said corporation, and the use of its property and franchises for other purposes, or by other companies, shall be without prejudice to the use by these complainants, their successors and assigns, of such property and franchises in such reasonable manner as will enable them to perform their full duty to the public; but said use by the complainants shall be subject to all reasonable regulations of the defendant corporation, and shall not interfere with the use of such property and franchises by other railway companies, or persons, except in so far as may be reasonably necesary.

Third. The court finds that under date of May 10, 1889, and under date of July 31, 1897, certain contracts were made between the Des Moines Union Railway Company and the predecessors of the complainants herein, by the terms of which contracts, the conditions under which the Des Moines Union Railway Company should perform its corporate obligation to the complainants and their predecessors, and the amounts to be paid, were fixed and determined during the existence of said contracts, which expire on May 1st, 1918.

And It Is Now Ordered, Adjudged and Decreed, that the continued use of said property and franchises after May 1, 1918, shall be upon terms reasonable under all the facts and circumstances, including the past transactions between the complainants and the Des Moines Union Railway Company and its predecessors in so far as the same may aid in determining what may be reasonable. And if the parties cannot agree upon such terms, then the same shall be fixed by a court upon aplication by any or all of the parties to this action, and any of the parties may make application to re-open this case for such purpose, or may avail themselves of any legal remedy which they may have.

Fourth. It Is Further Ordered, Adjudged and Decreed, that under the articles of incorporation and the amendments thereto, the Des Moines Union Railway Company is a legally organized corporation, and that the management and control thereof, and of its property and franchises, is in such corporation through its officers elected, or to be elected by its stockholders or directors as they may appear from the records of said corporation, and as provided in the articles of incorporation and amendments thereto; and that the complainants have no control over the management of said corporation, or interest in said corporation, except such rights as they may have as stockholders in said corporation.

Fifth. It is Further Ordered, Adjudged and Decreed, That The Des Moines Union Railway Company is the absolute owner of the "surplus earnings" held by such corporation, consisting of monies collected for rentals and privileges, and charges for switching and handling cars and traffic for companies other than the complainants and their predecessors, and that complainants have no interest therein except such as accrue- to them as stockholders of the Des Moines Union Railway Company.

Sixth. It Is Further Ordered and Adjudged, that complainants pay one half of the costs of this suit, to be taxed by the Clerk, and that the defendant—the Des Moines Union Railway Company, pay one half of the costs of this action, to be taxed by the Clerk, and that judgment is hereby rendered against said parties therefor.

To this Decree, complainants except, and the defendant, the Des Moines Union Railway Company, excepts to so much of said decree as adjudges that it is under obligation to use, or permit the use of said railway property for the purpose of furnishing to the complainants, terminal service in the city of Des Moines, Iowa.

To the failure of the court to enter decree in form presented by the different parties, they respectively except.

To the judgment against them for costs, complainants, and the Des Moines Union Railway Company, except.

Witness my hand.

MARTIN J. WADE,
Judge.

The above Petition is granted, and the appeal is allowed and shall operate as a supersedeas upon the petitioners filing bond, in the sum of Five Thousand ($5,000.00) Dollars with sufficient sureties as required by law.

MARTIN J. WADE.
Judge of the District Court for the Southern District of Iowa.

Endorsed: Filed October 18, 1916. Wm. C. McArthur, Clerk.

(Assignment of Errors on Appeal by Complainants.)

The complainants above named respectfully complain and state that the Decree entered in this cause is erroneous for the following reasons:

First. The Court erred in adjudging and decreeing that the Des Moines Union Railway Company is the absolute and unqualified owner of all the properties, railways and franchises conveyed to it by the predecessors of complainants, or acquired by it since such conveyance, the same constituting its railway terminals in Des Moines, and that the Complainants have no right, title, easement or interest therein.

Second. The court erred in adjudging and decreeing that the Des Moines Union Railway Company had right and authority to impose terms, conditions, rentals, charges and regulations upon the complainants or either of them for the use of the terminal properties in the City of Des Moines after the first day of May, 1918, and right and authority to permit other railway companies or corporations to occupy and use said depot and terminal properties after that date.

Third. The Court erred in adjudging and decreeing that the use by complainants of the railway terminal properties and franchises at Des Moines, Iowa, after May 1, 1918, shall be upon terms imposed by the Des Moines Union Railway Company, or by agreement of the parties to this action, and that if the parties cannot agree upon such terms, then the same shall be fixed by a court upon application by any or all of the parties to this action, and in adjudging and decreeing that this cause may be re-opened for such purpose.

Fourth. The Court erred in adjudging and decreeing that the amendments to the articles of incorporation of the Des Moines Union Railway Company are legal and valid, and that said corporation was legally organized under such amendments, and that the management and control of said Des Moines Union Railway Company and of the properties and franchises and railway now held in its name are now, and after May 1, 1918, will continue to be, in said corporation through its officers elected or to be elected by the stockholders as they may appear from the records of said corporation and as provided in the articles of incorporation and amendments; and that the complainants have no control over the management of said corporation, or interest in the property now held in its name, except such rights as they may have as stockholders therein.

Fifth. The Court erred in adjudging and decreeing that the Des Moines Union Railway Company is the absolute owner of the surplus earnings held by such corporation, consisting of moneys collected for rentals and privileges, charges for switching and handling cars and traffic for other companies; and that complainants' interest therein was only that of stockholders of the Des Moines Union Railway Company.

Sixth. The Court erred in failing and refusing to decree that on the terms stated in the contract of January 2, 1882, the Complainants, their successors and assigns, are entitled, for railroad purposes, to the joint and exclusive use in common and in perpetuity of all the pieces and parcels of real estate, together with all buildings, tracks, and improvements thereon, or appurtenances thereto, in the City of Des Moines, heretofore conveyed to the Des Moines Union Railway Company by James F. How, James F. How, Trustee, Grenville M. Dodge, the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, the Des Moines, Northwestern Railway Company, the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, Frederick M. Hubbell, and J. S. Polk, and each of them, and all other persons and all additions thereunto made by exchange or by purchase for extensions of tracks or building grounds, where such purchases were made either from rents of the original property, or from the proceeds of mortgage bonds.

Seventh. The Court erred in failing and refusing to adjudge and decree that complainants, their successors and assigns, are entitled to have and enjoy the exclusive use in common and in perpetuity, of all the real estate, tracks, buildings, improvements and terminal facilities in said City of Des Moines that have been, or may be hereafter acquired, erected or made, either in the name of the Terminal Company, or in the name of any other corporation or person, with the income or earnings derived from the rental, operation or use of said terminal properties, or any part thereof, or from sale of mortgage bonds heretofore issued or hereafter issued in the name of said Terminal Company.

Eighth. The Court erred in failing and refusing to adjudge and decree that the Terminal Company be required to account for and pay over to complainants all sums of money now in its possession or under its control (in excess of the sum of $25,000.00 to be retained as a working fund), received by it on account of the switching or handling of cars, or traffic, on or over said terminal properties, or any part thereof, for all persons or corporations other than complainants; and all sums of money received from, or on account of rentals of real estate, or buildings, as well as income derived from all other sources connected with the use or operation of said terminal properties, or any part thereof, in the proportion that the wheelage of each complainant has borne to the total wheelage over said terminals during the months such money were earned or accrued.

Ninth. The Court erred in failing and refusing to adjudge and decree that the articles of incorporation of said Terminal Company, as the same were adopted, signed and filed, on or about the 10th day of December, 1884, are now in full force and effect; that the same have never been amended, and that all alleged and pretended amendments thereof are void and of no effect.

Tenth. The Court erred in failing and refusing to adjudge and decree that all extensions of tracks that have been constructed by said Frederick M. Hubbell or Frederick C. Hubbell, or by any person or persons for them, or by any corporation organized and controlled by them, or either of them, partly on said terminal properties and partly on real estate or right of way acquired by them, or either of them, be decreed to be part and parcel of said terminal properties, and that complainants be permitted to have the use thereof, in common and in perpetuity on such terms and under such regulations as to the Court shall seem equitable.

Eleventh. The Court erred in failing and refusing to adjudge and decree that the Des Moines Union Railway Company took and now holds the title to all the real estate that has been heretofore, or may be hereafter, acquired by or conveyed to it, for terminal purposes in the City of Des Moines, together with all the buildings, tracks and other improvements thereon, as Trustee, for the Des Moines &

St. Louis Ry. Co., the Des Moines Northern Ry. Co., the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Ry. Co., and the complainants herein, as their successors and assigns, and that the complainants herein, and their assigns, now are and shall be hereafter entitled to the permanent use of the same as and for terminals for their said railroads in the City of Des Moines, on the terms and conditions stated in said contract of January 2, 1882.

Twelfth. The Court erred in failing and refusing to adjudge and decree that the Des Moines Union Railway Company took and now holds the title to all the real estate that has been heretofore or may be hereafter acquired or conveyed to it for terminal purposes in the City of Des Moines, together with all the buildings, tracks, facilities and other improvements thereon, subject to the joint and common use of the Des Moines and St. Louis Railway Company, the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company, the St. Louis, Des Moines and Northern Railway Company, and the complainants herein, and their successors and assigns, and that the complainants herein and their assigns now are and shall be hereafter entitled to the permanent and exclusive use and enjoyment of the same as and for terminals for their said railroads in the City of Des Moines, on the terms and conditions stated in said contract of January 2, 1882.

Thirteenth. The Court erred in failing to adjudge and decree that the defendants be enjoined from asserting any claim to the property inconsistent with the said right of the complainants, their successors and assigns, to the joint use and occupation of said property and all parts thereof.

Fourteenth. The Court erred in failing by its judgment and decree to require the Des Moines Union Railway Company to appoint an Executive Committee, the members of which to be nominated by the complainants and their assigns, and adjudging and decreeing that such committee should appoint a superintendent to operate, maintain and repair the said property and facilities; and that on default of such appointment, the court would from time to time appoint such committee.

Fifteenth. The Court erred in failing and refusing to enjoin and restrain the defendants, Frederick M. Hubbell, Frederick C. Hubbell and F. M. Hubbell and Son from selling, pledging or otherwise disposing of their shares of the capital stock of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, and from exercising, by virtue of said shares, any control or management of said properties and facilities except in accordance with the terms and spirit of the said contract entered into on January 2, 1882, being "Exhibit A," attached to the Bill of Complaint.

Sixteenth. The Court erred in failing and refusing by its decree to restrain defendants from executing any leases or entering into any contracts for the use of said properties and facilities which may interfere with, or impair, the rights of complainants, their successors and assigns, to the use and enjoyment of said property and facilities in accordance with said contract of January 2, 1882.

Seventeenth. The Court erred in failing and refusing to adjudge and decree the relief prayed for in the Amended Bill of Complaint as Amended.

Eighteenth. The Court erred in adjudging and decreeing that the complainants shall pay one-half of the costs of this action, or any part thereof.

Nineteenth. The Court erred in adjudging and decreeing that the Des Moines Union Railway Company held the railway terminal properties in controversy in this suit, in any other capacity than as trustee for the complainants.

Twentieth. The Court erred in failing and refusing to decree a right in the complainants to own, use, possess and occupy the terminal properties, franchises and railways in the City of Des Moines, Iowa, in perpetuity on the terms [States] in the contract of January 2, 1882.

Twenty-first. The Decree is contrary to equity.

Twenty-second. The Decree is contrary to law.

Twenty-third. The Court erred in adjudging and decreeing any rights to the properties in controversy in the defendants or either of them.

Twenty-fourth. The Court erred in not holding, adjudging and decreeing that after May 1, A. D. 1918, the contract of January 2nd, A. D. 1882, being Exhibit "A" to the Bill of Complaint as amended, will govern the parties in the use, maintenance and operation of the terminal property and that the Des Moines Union Railway Company is under obligation to hold, maintain and devote the same to the use by complainants and their successors in title or interest perpetually, under and according to the terms and intent of said contract of January 2, 1882.

Twenty-fifth. The Court erred in not holding and decreeing that after May 1, 1918, the only compensation required of complainants, their successors or assigns, shall be the performance of the requirements imposed by the contract of January 2, 1882, being Exhibit "A" to the Bill of Complaint or petition of plaintiff herein.

Twenty-sixth. The Court erred in not holding and decreeing that the contract of January 2, 1882, being Exhibit "A" to the Bill of Complaint, fixes the terms and conditions under which the complainants or plaintiffs and their successors may occupy and use the terminal property held by the Des Moines Union Railway Company after May 1, A. D. 1918.

Wherefore, the complainants pray that the said Decree be reversed, and that the District Court be instructed to enter such decree as is prayed for by the said Bill of Complaint.

(Assignment of Errors by Defendants.)

Filed Nov. 14, 1916.

Come now the defendants in the above entitled cause and file the following assignment of errors upon which they will rely upon their prosecution of their appeal in the above entitled cause from the decree made by this Honorable Court on the 26th day of August, 1916:

I.

The United States district court for the southern district of Iowa erred in holding, adjudging and decreeing that the defendant, the Des Moines Union Railway Company, owed to the complainants a corporate obligation to use the terminal property in perpetuity for the purpose of furnishing terminal services to complainants.

II.

The United States district court for the southern district of Iowa erred in holding, adjudging and decreeing that said corporate obligation is absolute and paramount to any other obligation of the defendant, Des Moines Union Railway Company, and that the use of the terminal property and franchises of the defendant corporation for other purposes or by other companies should be without prejudice to the use by these complainants, their successors and assigns of such [propefty] and franchises.

Wherefore, the defendants pray that said decree be reversed as to the matters above referred to, and that said district court for the southern district of Iowa be ordered to enter a decree reversing the decision of the lower court in said cause in respect to the matters complained of.

Before Hook, Smith and Stone, Circuit Judges.

STONE, Circuit Judge, delivered the opinion of the Court:

This is a bill by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company and the Wabash Railroad Company against the Des Moines Union Railway Company, Frederick M. Hubbell, Frederick C. Hubbell and F. M. Hubbell & Son. The complainants are railways passing through the city of Des Moines, requiring the use of terminal and depot facilities. Defendants are a terminal company at Des Moines and the individual owners of five-eighths of its outstanding capital stock. Complainants, except for eight qualifying shares, own the other three-eighths of such stock, the Wabash one-eighth, and the Milwaukee two-eighths. Complainants are now using the facilities of the terminal company under a thirty year contract, dated May 10, 1889, but related back to May 1, 1888, and expiring May 1, 1918. As holders of the stock control in the terminal company, the Hubbells have declared that if complainants desire to use the terminals after the above date they can do so only under such contract as may be maed therefor. Believing that they have (aside from stock holidngs) controlling interests and rights in the terminal property, complainants have brought their bill. The main object of the suit is to have determined the rights of the three companies in respect to the terminal property and operation. A subsidiary but not unimportant controversy is present regarding the right to several hundred thousand dollars accumulated from rentals, privileges and switching service by the terminal company, not arising from the use by or service to the complainants.

The complainants allege that they are the real owners of the terminal property and that defendant company simply holds the title in trust for them; or that the terminal ownership is subject to an easement in their favor which gives them the right to use the property in perpetuity for terminal purposes, upon payment of the actual cost of operation, maintenance and taxes.

The claim of the defendants is that the defendant company is the sole owner of the entire title to the terminal property, and also that complainants are estopped from questioning such title.

The decree of the court below adjudged that the defendant company had complete title to the terminal property, and that complainants had no interest therein except as stockholders of the defendant company. But the court held that, growing out of provisions in that company's articles of incorporation, it owed to complainants and their successors a corporate obligation to furnish them terminal service upon equitable terms, and that such obligation was paramount to any obligation to serve other roads. From this latter provision in the decree defendants have prosecuted a cross appeal. As to the accumulated earnings, the court below held that this fund belonged to the defendant company, and that the complainants had no interest therein, other than as shareholders in the defendant company. Complainants have appealed from the entire decree.

The determinination of the main controversy is the definition of the legal effect of certain instruments and acts of the parties or their predecessors in interest. The determination of the right to the accumualted earnings depends upon the construction of the contract (dated May 10, 1889) under which the parties are now operating.

The Main Controversy.

A brief history is essential to any proper understanding and determination of the case. As to that part of their respective railways entering Des Moines, the Milwaukee is the remote successor of the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company and the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, while the Wabash is the remote successor of the Des Moines & St. Louis Railway Company. Prior to 1881 the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company was the owner of a railway line extending from St. Louis northwesterly to Albia, Iowa, about sixty-eight miles southeasterly from Des Moines. J. S. Polk, J. S. Clarkson, F. M. Hubbell and J. S. Runnells were at the same time interested in a short narrow gauge line, the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company, extending northwesterly from Waukee, a town about fifteen miles westerly from Des Moines. Desiring to connect these lines at Des Moines, the Wabash and the above individuals entered into a contract December 8, 1880, providing for the organization by these individuals of a new company, the Des Moines & St. Louis Railway Company, and the building by it of a standard gauge line from Albia to Des Moines, with funds furnished by the Wabash Company. On the same day the Wabash Company entered into contract with the Des Moines Northwestern Railway, with the expressed object of increasing and securing the "through" traffic of that line.

This it sought to do by agreeing to furnish funds for the extension of that line northward and westward, and by agreeing to provide a connection from Waukee with the contemplated Des Moines & St. Louis Railway tracks to be laid in Des Moines. In April, 1881, yet another company, the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, was organized by the above individuals, and soon began constructing a narrow gauge line from the northwest to Des Moines. A part of this line formed a link between Waukee and Des Moines, over which the Northwestern shortly thereafter secured running rights.

During the year 1881 and thereafter, the acquirement of right of way in Des Moines and the construction work there proceeded, the land being taken in the name of James F. How; James F. How, Trustee; G. M. Dodge; St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company; or the Des Moines & St. Louis Railway Company. That taken by How, or How, Trustee, being paid for by the Wabash.

With the three lines entering or about to enter Des Moines and the land being acquired for terminals, the time and necessity for some terminal arrangement had arrived. The contract of January 2, 1882, was executed by the three railways and by the individuals (Dodge and How) in whose names part of the land had been taken. This contract is the basis of complainants' claims upon the main issue in the case. They contend that titles and rights defined therein remain unchanged in essentials. Defendants claims later departures radically affected such titles and rights as are to be found in the contract.

This contract, omitting signatures, was as follows:

"This Agreement made at the City of New York, the second day of January, 1882, by and between the Des Moines and St. Louis Railway Company, the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company, and the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, and the several individual signers hereto, Witnesseth:

"First. The Companies above named are engaged in the construction of railways converging at the City of Des Moines and have heretofore agreed upon the purchase, construction and maintenance at their joint expense for terminal facilities in the City of Des Moines to be held and used in common as hereinafter provided.

"Second. In pursuance of said agreement, various purchases have been made of real property in the City of Des Moines in the name of James F. How, individually, James F. How, Trustee, and Grenville M. Dodge, and certain additional property has been appropriated by the Des Moines and St. Louis Railway Company, and the construction of buildings and other improvements upon said premises has been begun.

"Third. It is mutually agreed by the parties above named, that the expense incurred by the purchases and improvements above mentioned and such others as may be hereafter made, shall be borne in the proportion of one-half by the Des Moines and St. Louis Railway Company and one-quarter by each of the other two companies above named. It is understood that a Depot Company may be organized and may take permanent charge of the property upon the terms herein set forth and that said Company may issue and deliver to the Companies, parties hereto, its mortgage bonds to the amount of their respective portions of the cost of the said purchases and improvements.

"Fourth. The title to said property shall be and remain in a trustee to be named by agreement by said Companies but subject to the joint use and occupation of all of said Railway Companies upon the terms herein described.

"Fifth. The individual signers hereto hereby declare said purchases to have been made in their names upon the trusts above referred to, and agree to quit claim and convey the same to said trustees upon demand and reimbursement.

"Sixth. The Des Moines and St. Louis Company, shall at all times be charged with the police control, supervision and maintenance of said property, and the expense thereof shall be apportioned between it and the said other two companies, and the apportionment to be determined by the use thereof which they shall respectively make as evidenced by the wheelage; payment of the sum required to be made monthly to the Des Moines and St. Louis Railway Company, within ten days after rendition of an account stated.

"Seventh. The control of said property by the Des Moines and St. Louis Railway Company shall not extend to a determination of the character and extent of improvements to be now or hereafter put upon the same, but differences between the parties under this head shall be settled by arbitration.

"Eighth. It is understood and agreed that spur tracks shall be built connecting the said terminal grounds with such manufactories and other sources of trade in and about the City of Des Moines, as afford sufficient opportunity for profit by so doing, and that all of said tracks shall be adapted for use for both broad and narrow gauge trucks, provided that in case either of said Companies shall deem the construction of any of said tracks as not advantageous to its business, the question of constructing said track, and which of the parties hereto shall pay therefor shall be determined by arbitration.

"Ninth. Taxes and assessments levied upon said property shall be charged to maintenance account.

"Tenth. In the event that any Company, whose railroad does not extend to Des Moines, shall effect an arrangement for running its trains into Des Moines over the railroad of either of the parties hereto, such Company shall be entitled to the use of all of said terminal facilities upon the payment of a fair sum for rental and its proportion of the maintenance account, the rental to enure to the companies hereto in the same proportion as the original outlay, and the sum due from such Company for maintenance account, to be determined in the same manner as the sums due from the other Companies, parties hereto. Railroad Companies whose roads extend to Des Moines, may be admitted to the use of said facilities by agreement of all the Companies parties hereto.

"Eleventh. All differences arising under this agreement shall be referred to arbitration; one of said arbitrators shall be chosen by the Des Moines and St. Louis Railway Company, another by the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, and the third by the two thus selected.

The judgment of any two of the said arbitrators shall be final. If the matters of difference shall be between the Des Moines and St. Louis, and the Des Moines Northwestern, then the second arbitrator shall be chosen by the Des Moines Northwestern, and not by the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern.

"Twelfth. It is mutually understood that the grounds so to be held in common by the Companies, parties hereto, are all east of Farnham Street in the City of Des Moines, and that no grounds west of Farnham Street have been acquired under this agreement."

An analysis of this contract shows a statement of the occasion and object of the contract; provisions for the title, the use and occupation; the maintenance and the improvement of the property; and for arbitration.

The occasion and object of the contract is stated to be to provide for the common holding and use by the three companies of the property and improvements then or thereafter acquired or constructed for terminal facilities.

As to title, the property was "to be held in common" (Par. Twelfth) through the medium of a trustee to be selected by the companies, in whom the title should "be and remain * * * subject to the joint use and occupation of all of said Railway Companies upon the terms herein described" (Par. Fourth). If outside railways effected arrangements to enter Des Moines over any of the three lines they should, beside a portion of the maintenance cost, pay a fair rental "to enure to the Companies hereto in the same proportion as the original outlay" (Par. Tenth). The individual "signers hereto" declared the property acquired in their names to have been "upon the trusts above referred to', and agreed "to quit claim and convey the same to said trustee upon demand and reimbursement" (Par. Fifth). Payment for the property was to be borne by the three companies in proportions of one-half by the Des Moines & St. Louis and one-fourth by each of the other companies, with a provision that if a depot company should be organized and should take permanent charge of the property, that "said company may issue and deliver to the companies, parties hereto, its mortgage bonds to the amount of their respective portions" of expenditures for the property. (Par. Third.)

The use and occupation of the property was to be "joint" (Par. Fourth) under the "police control" and "supervision" of Des Moines & St. Louis (Par. Sixth). Industrial spur tracks which might be built should be adapted to both standard and narrow gauge (Par. Eighth). There was provision for the use of these terminal facilities by outside companies. If such company did not extend to Des Moines, but should effect an entrance by a running arrangement over any of these three lines, such company should be entitled to the use of all the terminal facilities upon payment of a fair rental and its proportion of the maintenance account. Other railways might "be admitted to the use of said facilities by agreement of all the parties hereto" (Par. Tenth).

The maintenance of the property, including taxes and assessments (Par. Ninth), was to be in charge of the Des Moines & St. Louis, the expense to be divided on a wheelage basis and paid monthly to said company on rendition of accounts therefor (Par Sixth). Any other company entitled to use the terminals under Paragraph Tenth to bear its wheelage proportion (Par. Tenth).

Regarding future improvements, the contract provided they must, in character and extent, be such as agreed upon by the three companies, or if a disagreement, such as determined by arbitration (Par. Seventh and Eighth). The cost of such to be paid one-half by the Des Moines and St. Louis and one-fourth by each of the other companies (Par. Third), except that arbitration might settle which of the companies should pay for the industrial spur tracks, the construction of which had been opposed by one of the companies as not advantageous to its business (Par. Eighth).

Obviously the only purpose of including the individuals, Dodge and How, in the contract was to control the title taken in their names. They figure in the future of the plan, as outlined by the contract, only for the purpose of conveying their title "to said trustee upon demand."

Also there is mention of a "Depot Company." Under the influence of a knowledge of what was afterwards done, there is danger of exaggerating this reference. Clearly it was rather incidental. Its physical location in the contract is significant of the place it occupied in the minds of the parties at the time in connection with the contract. The contract is carefully drawn by skilled draftsmen, who set off in brief, clean-cut, numbered paragraphs the different subjects of the contract. If the "Depot Company" had bulked large in their contemplation at that time, or if it was to form any essential part of their then plan, it is strange it did not receive some separate and distinct consideration. In fact, it occurs in the paragraph which sets forth the proportions in which the companies are to bear the expense of acquiring and improving the terminal property. Its obvious connection with that idea is that it contains the only suggestion of any method of reimbursement for such outlay. In our judgment, that was the only reason for mentioning, in the contract, the matter of such a company. Even as expressed, while it shows that the subject of such a company had been considered, it also reveals that either the project had not reached the stage of completion and concurrence, or that everything regarding it was purposely left in complete abeyance, in so far as this contract is concerned. The expression is that such a company "may be organized" * * * may take permanent charge of the property * * * may issue and deliver to the companies * * * its mortgage bonds * * *."

As to the companies, the contract not only declared some existing property rights, but attempted to define for the future the rights of title and usage of the terminal property. The title contemplated was a trust. The legal title to be "in a trustee to be named by agreement of said companies." The beneficial estate to be in the three companies in proportion to the parts each contributed to the payment therefor. While this proportional interest is not set forth in so many words, it is necessarily inferred from the combined circumstances that the companies were to pay therefor and for improvements thereto in proportion of one-half, one-fourth and one-fourth (Par. Third), and that the only possible source of profit then contemplated or provided for (rental from any tenant company) was to enure to the three companies in the same proportion (Par. Tenth). But there was to be no proportional limitation of usage. There was to be a "joint use and occupation of all of said Railway companies" (Par. Fourth). Nothing in the entire contract hampers the complete independent individual occupation and use of all the terminal facilities at all times by each of the companies except the two provisions that the occupation and use shall be "joint" (Par. Fourth), and that the Des Moines & St. Louis shall be charged with the "police control and supervision" thereof (Par. Sixth). It was apparently intended that each company should do its own terminal work with its own men and equipment. The only other precedence given either of the companies was the necessary one of "maintenance", with which the Des Moines & St. Louis was also charged (Par. Fourth). In short, the three companies gave up independence of title and of action in the occupation and use of the property only in so far as was absolutely necessary to what they then considered a safe joint occupation and use.

But whatever may have been the importance of a depot company in the minds of the contracting companies at the time the contract was executed, such (defendant herein) was incorporated under the Iowa statutes on December 10, 1884. However, conveyance to this new company, and acceptance by it, affecting the existing terminal property, although first authorized by resolutions of the four companies January 1, 1885, did not begin until November 7, 1887, nor end until April 28, 1888. The actual management of the property by the terminal company did not commence until May 1, 1888, up to which time the companies occupied and used it in common under the 1882 contract.

What the effect upon the title, control, use and occupation of this terminal property had the formation of this terminal company and these conveyances of the property formerly owned, occupied and used by the railway companies under the 1882 contract? This involves consideration (in the light of attendant acts and circumstances) of the Articles of Incorporation of the terminal company, the resolutions of the four companies in reference to the conveyances, the conveyances themselves, and an attempted amendment of the articles of incorporation.

The only official action taken by any of the railway companies concerning and prior to the incorporation of the terminal company was a resolution of the Board of Directors of the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company on December 9, 1884, (the day preceding the incorporation). This resolution declared "it is desirable that a corporation be organized for the purpose of taking and holding" the property covered by the 1882 contract. It then chose its representatives "to act for this company in the organization of such corporation, and they are selected to act as two of the directors of said proposed corporation so to be organized for the purpose of carrying out the objects of said contract of January 2nd, 1882." December 10, 1884, all of the parties to the 1882 contract met for the purpose of incorporating the defendant company, General G. M. Dodge appearing both for himself and for the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern, two individuals representing the Northwestern and two the Des Moines & St. Louis. The sole business of the meeting was the passage of resolutions referring to the articles of incorporation. The resolution of adoption declared "that for the purpose of carrying out the objects and purposes of the agreement heretofore, to-wit, on the 2nd day of January, 1882, made and entered into by and between the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company and others (which is set out in full in the following Articles of Incorporation)", that the articles be adopted as follows:

"Articles of Incorporation of the Des Moines Union Railway Company.

"Whereas, The Des Moines & St. Louis, the Des Moines Northwestern and the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Companies have been engaged in the construction of railways converging at Des Moines, Iowa, and have secured certain franchises, purchased certain realty and made certain improvements thereon—which they have heretofore agreed should be secured, purchased, made and maintained upon certain agreed conditions, at their joint expense—in accordance with a contract made and entered into by and between said companies and Grenville M. "The highest amount of indebtedness to which the corporation may at any time subject itself shall be the amount authorized by law.

Article 8.

"Meetings of the Board of Directors may be called by the President, or, in case of his absence or disability, by the Vice President, and shall be called upon request preferred in writing by two members of the Board.

Article 9.

"These Articles may be amended by a vote of more than three-fourths of all the stock in favor thereof, at a meeting of the stockholders thereof, of which a notice containing the proposed amendments shall be mailed to each stockholder at his address, as disclosed by the transfer books of the Company. Notice of such proposed meeting shall also be given by publication for three successive weeks in some newspaper of general circulation—published in the City of Des Moines, Iowa.

Article 10.

"This corporation shall commence on the Fifth day of December, A. D. 1884, and continue fifty years, with the right of renewal."

That the creation and entrance of the terminal company into the arrangements of the parties had a marked influence is certain. Here was a creature of the companies, brought into being for the cardinal purpose of taking, by some sort of title, this terminal property, improving, maintaining and operating it. No title was conveyed in the articles of incorporation. Had nothing further been done the title, control and operation of the terminal property would have been unaffected. But these articles are valuable as throwing light upon the intention of the parties as to the place that company was to have in their terminal plans. These articles contain provisions in addition to such as would have been necessary in the mere creation of a terminal company—to such as would have been employed by outsiders whose only purpose was to engage in a terminal business. It is in these exceptional provisions that the particular intention of these parties is to be found. The articles include what may be called a "preamble", which, after reciting the occasion of the 1882 contract, the contract in extenso, and the expenditure of money in pursuance thereof, makes its sole reference to the terminal company as follows:

"Whereas, it was provided in the contract aforesaid that a Depot Company might be organized to take permanent charge of the property, and it was the understanding of the parties that such Company might acquire, operate and maintain said property in such manner as best to serve the interest of the parties hereto;"

declares that "for the purposes aforesaid, as well as for those hereinafter expressed, they associate themselves in a body corporate, and adopt the following:

Articles of Incorporation."

The clear statement in this preamble reference is that the parties intend the terminal company "to take permanent charge of the property" and "to acquire, operate and maintain said property" in such manner as best to serve their interests.

In what we may call the articles proper we find certain provisions which reveal the intention of the railway companies, not only to keep the stock ownership (seemingly contemplated in the authority given the Board of Directors "to receive in payment therefor the property and franchises in Des Moines, now held" by the railways and individuals, parties to the 1882 contract), but to exercise a control over the property and over the actions of the terminal company beyond such as would spring from stock ownership alone. Our immediate inquiry has no concern with the legality of these exceptional limitations if attacked in a proper way, but, taking them as they are, what light do they throw upon the intention of the parties?

Such control may be roughly classified into three kinds: (a) the requirement that the board of directors should be nominated by the three companies (treating the Wabash as identical in interest with the Des Moines & St. Louis) (A-4); (b) requirements relating to the disposition of the use of any part of its franchises to any other railway company (A-2), to the creation of any limitation upon such franchises (A-4), to the creation of any permanent charge upon the property (A-4); and (c) a broad requirement that all of the powers of the corporation shall be exercised "in accordance with the terms and spirit" of the 1882 contract (A-2).

The first of these three classes (a) shows the method of controlling the board of directors. Aside from any previous contract, the railways might want a provision perpetuating in them the choice of directors, and the only connection in thought with the 1882 contract suggested by this requirement is in the circumstance that each railway company was to choose directors in proportion to their interest in the property under that contract. If the selection of directors were to depend entirely upon the vote of the stock, there was no assurance that two of the railways might not combine their votes and exclude the third from any voice in the active management. Therefore, they sought to assure not only complete control of the board, but the same representation upon the board as each of them was to have in the property under the existing contract. The idea also doubtless being in their minds that the stock which paid for that property would be similarly divided.

The second requirement (b) shows the method intended to preserve the control of the railway companies over the property and franchises acquired by the terminal company. Without the previous approval of the three railway companies no disposition of the use of any part of its franchises could be made to any other railway company, nor could any permanent charge be placed upon its property.

Passing from these specific provisions, looking toward the control by the railway companies of the management, franchises and property of the terminal company, we approach the general requirement (c) that "all the powers" of the terminal company shall be exercised "in accordance with the terms and spirit" of the 1882 contract. What does this mean? Evidently a limitation upon the exercise of the corporate powers. Subject to the limitations above discussed, those powers were such as ordinarily belonged to a corporation organized under the Iowa Code for pecuniary profit to construct, own and operate a terminal railway, with all of its attendant depots, warehouses, shops, etc. What, then, were the further limitations carried by this reference? How was the free exercise of these powers of the terminal company in constructing, owning and operating a terminal, to be limited by the terms or spirit of the contract? The terms and intent of the contract as to construction were that there should be only such improvements and extensions as were agreed upon by all the three railways, or settled by arbitration, and to be paid for (except as to certain industrial spurs) by the three on the basis of their contemplated interests in the property of one-half, one-quarter and one-quarter. The contract terms and intent as to ownership were a trust. The contract terms and intent as to operation were that each company should do its own terminal work under the police control and supervision of the Des Moines & St. Louis. Under the contract the cost of maintenance (including taxes and assessments) was on a wheelage basis. Under the contract the use of the facilities by other roads was to require agreement of all three roads, except that any other road entering Des Moines over the tracks of any of the three railways might use them on payment of rental to the roads and a wheelage part of the maintenance.

It is clear that all of these terms and intentions neither were intended to nor could survive the introduction of the terminal company. It is also clear that some of them were to remain active. It is impossible from the two instruments alone (contract of 1882 and articles of incorporation), read in the light of their history, to draw a line in this particular which is at all points clear and definite. Some things, however, seem distinct. Touching operation, it is conceded by all parties to this suit that the plan of the contract that each of the railways should do its own terminal work over tracks in joint use was dangerous and unworkable. Doubtless this was one of the main underlying necessities for a terminal company which could, with its own engines and men, do all of this terminal work. Each of the companies was to have terminal facilities, but in a different method from that covered by the contract. The idea of a joint usage in the sense of a right in each of the three railways to make an individual usage of the same property during the same period had been found unsatisfactory and abandoned for the better plan. The contract plan of operation was to be replaced in its entirety.

As to ownership, no title or interest in the property owned or held by all or any of the parties to the contract passed or was affected by the articles of incorporation. It is quite clear, however, in the articles that the parties intended in the future to turn over that property to the terminal company. What was to be the character of the title or interest they intended to convey? There is no dispute in this case that as much as the bare legal title was to go. Was the full beneficial interest also to pass? When the parties made the 1882 contract, which provided for a trust, they also revealed therein that a terminal company had been under discussion. In an almost incidental way that matter was mentioned in connection with payment for the property covered by the contract. This mention was that such a company "may issue and deliver to the companies parties hereto its mortgage bonds, to the amount of their respective portions of the costs of said purchases and improvements." Why issue and deliver the bonds unless they carried value? Why issue and deliver them, except for some value in return? In short, the idea in the contract was compensation or reimbursement. The compensation or reimbursement was to be for money paid out for the legal title and the beneficial interest in the property. The only thing which the parties then had in view to give value to a mortgage and its bonds was this same property. Clearly the parties had considered before and at the time of the contract that the plan first to be tried might give way to that of a terminal company, and that such company might acquire the entire title to the property. Coming to the articles, we find no change in this conception. The preamble recited that "it was the understanding of the parties that such company might acquire, operate and maintain said property in such manner as best to serve the interest of the parties hereto." Nothing is said regarding the use of mortgage bonds, but Article 3, dealing with capital stock, authorized the directorate of the new company "to receive in payment therefor the property and franchises in the City of Des Moines now held by" the parties to the contract. What other than the beneficial interest in this property could have constituted in any real sense "payment" for the stock? Article 4 required the consent of all three companies before any "permanent charge" could be placed by the terminal company upon the property. Thus the plan, so far as revealed by the articles, seemed to remain as suggested in the contract, with the additional idea of a payment in stock. In short, the complete title to go to the company, with the terms of payment not definitely settled, but suggestions of the value in bonds up to the outlay (in the contract) and of the capital stock of the company (in the articles).

As to maintenance: There is but one direct statement, and that is the one from the preamble quoted above. As to where the funds are to be secured therefor, there is no suggestion, unless we can infer that the plan of the contract is to prevail, or that indebtedness may be incurred therefor.

As to the use by other railways: There is the provision that the company shall have no right, without the prior written consent of the three railways, "to lease or otherwise dispose of the use of any part of its franchises to any other Railway Company."

Summarizing, the intention of the parties as revealed by the articles of incorporation shows a development of the terminal plan, changing, but not entirely abandoning, that of the 1882 contract. The continuing influence of that contract is evident, though the limits of that influence are not in all respects clearly defined. As to operation, it is evident that the general agency thereof was to be entirely different from that contemplated by the contract, but there is lack of certainty as to the influence of the contract over the action of this new agency. As to title the intention is clear. As to improvement and maintenance there is indistinctness.

The conduct and acts of the parties during the next few following years gradually clarified, crystallized and consummated the entire plan. The intention that the entire title to the property should pass to the terminal company had been suggested in the 1882 contract and adhered to in the articles of incorporation of that company. It was to be further emphasized in resolutions of the four companies relating to the transfers of the title. It was to be consummated in those conveyances. The plan as to improvements, maintenance and operation of the property in the hands of the terminal company, which had been so dimly outlined in the charter requirement that the powers of the terminal company should be exercised "in accordance with the terms and spirit" of the contract, obviously needed further and clearer definition. The 1882 contract was most general in its provisions and it applied to a situation in which a terminal company had no place. No one could determine what the "terms and spirit" of the 1882 contract meant as applied to the management of the terminal company. Very soon after the terminal company took control of the property the parties dispelled this uncertainty by a supplemental contract explaining clearly what they meant in that regard by the "terms and spirit" of the 1882 contract. This was the contract of May 10, 1889, related back to the date the terminal company took control (May 1, 1888), and covering a term of thirty years. It completed in a workable manner the terminal plan. While all important in the other branch of this case, this last contract is no more than a side light upon the main controversy which pivots upon the character of title in the property conveyed to the terminal company.

The first step toward a transfer of title was the action by stockholders' meetings of the four companies, all held January 1, 1885. At these meetings the railway companies (each reciting that the terminal company had been "organized as contemplated and provided in the aforesaid contract, to acquire, hold, use and enjoy the real estate, property rights and franchises in the City of Des Moines * * * of the aforesaid railway companies and signatories of said contract acquired and held thereunder, and to carry out the purposes of the said contract") ratified and accepted the articles; undertook "to discharge all the obligations imposed upon it by said contract in order to make effective the purposes of" the terminal company and authorized its proper officers

"upon the issuance to it of the share of the bonds and stock of said Des Moines Union Railway Company to which it may be entitled under said contract to convey, assign and transfer to said company all its right, title and interest of whatever name and character, in and to the real estate, franchises, choses in action, and rights in possession or contingent to all the property in the City of Des Moines East of Farnham Street in said City now held, enjoyed or claimed by either or all of the signatories of said contract of January 2nd, 1882, or any agent or trustee thereof purchased, acquired, or held in pursuance of said contract."

Upon the same day the terminal company, at the first meeting of its Board of Directors, appointed a committee

"to confer with the several parties to said contract and agree with them severally upon the terms and price at which they will respectively assign, transfer and convey said railroad property and franchises to this Company, and procure from them, and each of them, such conveyance and transfers as may be necessary to fully invest this Company with the title, control and management of said properties as provided for in said contract of January 2nd, 1882."

It also directed the issue of not to exceed all of its fully paid capital stock and not to exceed 500 bonds of $1000.00 each, secured by mortgage on "all of said property so to be conveyed to this Company or thereafter to be acquired." This stock and these bonds were "to enable this Company to pay for the property and to maintain, operate and improve the same, and purchase other property necessary to carry out its objects, and remove any and all liens or incumbrances thereon, and pay off all just claims against the same." With the provision that when the above committee "shall have agreed with the said several parties to said contract as to the amount of bonds and stocks of this Company necessary to be delivered to them and each of them, in payment for said railroad property and franchises," and shall have delivered the same "on receipt of the conveyances and assignments of said property so to be made to this Company," the remainder of the bonds and stock shall be issued from time to time as needed only for the above purposes. Deeds in compliance with these resolutions were not made until beginning with November 7, 1887, and ending April 28, 1888. Nor did the terminal company take possession and operate that property until May 1, 1888, after the last of these deeds, although two of the three railway companies had at these same January 1, 1885, meetings, voted to at once "transfer the management and operation of its property in Des Moines" to the terminal company, expressly leaving the settlement as contemplated by the other resolution to be arranged later, and although the terminal company at its meeting that day assumed to take immediate charge. It is not shown in the record why there was this delay in executing the deeds, although counsel suggest it lay in the confusion attending the passage through financial difficulties of the Wabash & Pacific, the largest single force in the terminal arrangement.

November 1, 1887, the terminal company, at a stockholders' meeting called "for the purpose of considering the question of amending the Articles of Incorporation of this Company, and issuing bonds of the Company for the purpose of raising money to purchase, construct and improve its railway and property", increased its capital stock to $2,000,000.00, (without changing the authorization to receive therefor the properties in payment) and authorized the issue of not over $800,000.00 bonds, "secured by mortgage or deed of trust on the property of this Company, and the same or the proceeds thereof to be used in purchasing and paying for its property and improving the same, and building its railways, depots, round-houses and shops, and making other improvements."

Within a week later the directorates of the four companies passed practically identical resolutions in reference to the transfer of the property taken in the names of Dodge and of How. The substance of these resolutions was a request to How and to Dodge "to transfer to" the terminal company the property so held upon receipt of stipulations to deliver to each of them as soon as practicable "first mortgage bonds of that company to the amount of the money advanced for the payment of said property and improvements with interest on same and taxes paid thereon", and the capital stock of the company. The stock to go one-fourth to Dodge and three-fourths to How, the latter to transfer the stock and bonds coming to him to the purchasing committee of the Wabash "in lieu for the money advanced by said Company to make the purchase of above property and improvements, and the payment of taxes for this company."

In addition the Des Moines & St. Louis authorized its officers to execute a deed to the terminal company "conveying to it all its real estate rights of way, franchise, road-bed and other property of said company lying and being in the City of Des Moines, east of Farnham street", no matter how acquired. This being done "for the purpose of carrying out the contract of date January second, 1882."

On the same day, upon receipt of formal notices of the above resolutions passed by the railway companies, the terminal company, at a directors' meeting, accepted the above action of the railway companies, authorized the delivery of the stock and bond warrants, the execution of the mortgage and issue of bonds.

All of the above resolutions were passed at stock or directorate meetings of the companies. The entire membership of the terminal company was selected by the railway companies and undoubtedly simply registered their will. The resolutions emphasize and confirm the statements made above as to the intention of the railways (revealed in the contract and the articles) that the entire title should pass to the terminal company and be paid for by stock and bonds of that company.

In pursuance of the resolutions, How and Dodge delivered deeds. There were three from How covering different pieces of property. The first two were identical in form. Omitting legal description of the property they were as follows:

"James F. How, Trustee,

to

Deed.

"Whereas, The property herein described was from time to time purchased with the moneys and funds of the Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific Railway Company a corporation; and Whereas for its convenience the legal title to said property was conveyed to me in trust; and Whereas said property was acquired and held for the purpose and upon the terms set forth in a certain contract made and entered into on or about the 2nd day of January, 1882, between the Des Moines & St. Louis Railway Company, the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company, and the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company; G. M. Dodge, James F. How and James F. How, Trustee; and which contract was consented to by said Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific Railway Company; and Whereas I have heretofore at the request of said Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company stated and declared in writing that I held the legal title to the real estate hereinafter described in trust for said Des Moines & St. Louis Railway Company and said Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company; and Whereas the Board of Directors of said Des Moines & St. Louis Railway Company and the Board of Directors of said Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company did, on or about the 8th day of November, 1887, pass certain resolutions containing among other things the following, to-wit:

"'Whereas, James F. How, has prior to 1881, and since then purchased certain property and made expenditures on same as Trustee for this Company, the money expended for said property being furnished by the Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific Railway Company; and Whereas, under an agreement with this Company, and the Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific Railway Company and others, it was intended that said property standing in the name of James F.

How, Trustee, should be transferred to the Des Moines Union Railway Company under certain conditions. It is hereby resolved, that James F. How is requested by this Company to transfer to the Des Moines Union Railway Company the property above referred to.'

"Now, therefore, know all men by these presents:

"That I, James F. How, Trustee, as aforesaid, of the City of St. Louis, State of Missouri, in consideration of the premises, and of the sum of One Dollar, to me in hand paid by the Des Moines Union Railway Company, the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, have granted, bargained, sold and conveyed, and by these presents I do hereby grant, bargain, sell and convey unto the said Des Moines Union Railway Company, the several lots or pieces and parcels of ground situated, lying and being in the City of Des Moines, County of Polk, State of Iowa, particularly described as follows:

* * * * * * *

"To have and to hold all and singular the several pieces and parcels of real estate aforesaid, with all the appurtenances thereunto belonging unto the said Des Moines Union Railway Company, a corporation, and its assigns forever. It is expressly understood, however, that I only undertake to convey such title as I may have in said premises, and that I only undertake to warrant and defend against those claiming through and under me."

The third deed substantially differed only in that the conveyance recited it to be by How "as Trustee aforesaid." The deed from Dodge was an ordinary quit claim. A few lots which had been taken in the name of the Northern were quit-claimed by a deed which conveyed the described lots,

"Together with all and singular the tenements, hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging, or in any wise appertaining, and the reversion and reversions, remainder and remainders, rents, issues and profits thereof. And also, all the estate, right, title, interest in the above described property, possession, claim and demand whatsoever, as well in law as in equity, of the said parties of the first part, of, in or to the above described premises, and every part and parcel thereof, with the appurtenances. To have and to hold all and singular the above mentioned and described premises together with the appurtenances, unto the said parties of the second part and assigns forever."

Other property which stood in the name of the Des Moines & St. Louis was conveyed by general warranty deed. All of these deeds were recorded, so far as this record shows, on April 26, April 27, or May 1, 1888.

The mortgage authorized was dated November 1, 1887, acknowledged February 13 and 28, 1888, and recorded May 21, 1888 (three weeks after record of the last of the above deeds on May 1). There was never any deed from the Northwestern, which had no property standing in its name.

It is unprofitable to trace the different later steps connected with and leading up finally to the payment for the property by bonds covering the actual expenditures and stock totaling 4000 shares ($400,000.00).

With the passage of these deeds and consideration ends the history of the title. All of these transactions result as follows: An intention on the part of all parties that the entire title shall go to the terminal company; payment by that company of the full consideration therefor ultimately agreed upon; deeds designed to convey that full title.

But it is said that if the railways did so convey all interest in those necessary parts of their roads, such action would be void. The rule invoked is that public carriers will not be permitted to contract away their public usefulness by vitally maiming their lines. Rules of law extend no further than the basic reasons upon which they rest. The usefulness, if not the necessity, of terminal companies is established. That they must, as a general proposition, own their properties in order to raise funds to improve, maintain and operate them efficiently, is certain. The more efficiently and economically a railway can procure terminal facilities, the better and cheaper its services to the public should be. The conditions and compensation for use of such terminals by the railways is subject to public control, so that the railways cannot be denied or unreasonably restricted in such usage. The public service is protected. It should be bettered by such a terminal arrangement. Therefore, the rule invoked by plaintiffs has no application to disposition of terminal portions of a railway to a terminal company.

It is urged that the terminal company has, by its own statements, declared that it had no beneficial interest in the property. The statements intended are contained in reports made by that company to the Executive Council of Iowa for the years 1888, 1889, 1890, 1892 and 1893. In these reports the company stated that it was "simply a representative company, acting as an agency" for the railway companies, "performing all necessary work for them, and charging each at actual cost, its due proportion thereof incurred." These reports were made for purposes of taxation. During all of those years except 1892 and 1893 the entire income was applied in reduction of the bills of the railway companies, and for those two years it should have been so applied under the terms of the thirty-year contract, dated May 10, 1889. So that, in fact, it had no income which properly remained as its own. Again, if the use of the term "representative" is to be emphasized, it would be met by the terms "tenant" and "lessee," applied to the railway companies, in a contract dated July 31, 1897. This latter contract was between the terminal company and the complainants, or their predecessors. It applied to and affected the contract of 1889, under which the companies are and have been operating since very shortly after the terminal company began to control the property.

It is contended that complainants retained through the articles of the terminal company an interest in and control over the property.

As we have endeavored to show above, no interest was retained in the property through these articles of incorporation. The title was undisturbed and unaffected until the deeds transferred it. However vocal the articles of incorporation and the resolutions of the different companies may have been of the intention of the parties, these expressions passed into effective action only in the deeds. But the articles did provide for a direct control over the property by the railway companies. This was through the requirement that the prior consent of the railways was necessary before leasing or disposing of the use of any part of its franchises, or before placing any permanent charge upon the property, and the requirement that the railways, not the stock, should name the entire directorate. This control was purely contractual in its nature and neither sprang from nor gave rise to any legal estate or interest in the property itself affecting the full and complete title of the terminal company. When the deeds passed, the terminal company held the complete legal and equitable title to the property, though it had by contract restricted its freedom to lease, dispose of or incumber it.

The above control was later relinquished. April 8, 1889, there was an attempt to amend the articles. The result of the proposed amendments would have been to take from the railways, as such, all of the control given by the original articles; to substitute therefor a character of veto control by one-eighth of the stock; and to provide that, not all, as formerly, but 4000 shares of the capital stock should be paid the railway companies in addition to the bonds then already issued as the full purchase price of the property deeded by the railways. The railways contend that they were invalid because not properly adopted; and that, even if valid, they could not alter the relations between the railways and the terminal company, because such were based upon contractual rights which had become vested, and which the railways had not by formal corporate action consented to be altered.

The claim that the amendments were never properly adopted is well taken, but not open to complainants. The exact rights of anyone to any of the capital stock were not determined definitely until the contract of May 10, 1889, and no stock had been issued at all up to the date of the attempted amendments. However, the company had maintained an organization from its incorporation, December 10, 1884. This was not difficult, as the articles themselves provided for the nomination of the entire board by the railway companies; no other party had any interest in this terminal company or property; and it was not active in the control and operation of the property until May 1, 1888. But when the corporation undertook to amend its fundamental law, that could be legally done only by the stockholders. There was no stock issued; there was only a right to stock through the contract of 1889. This contract provided (Sec. 26) for the issuance of the entire authorized capital of $2,000,000.00 (20,000 shares), 10,000 shares to the St. Louis Company and 5000 shares to each of the other two companies. It appears from the same section of the contract that each company was to stock qualify its own terminal company directors. With the three companies entitled to all the stock, and with none of it issued, the eight men (in person or by proxy), who had been selected by these companies as their choice for directors, met in a stockholders' meeting, claiming to represent one share of stock each. There is a statement in the minutes of that meeting that the railway companies "were also present" in the person of three of these men, who were respectively president or vice-president of each of the railways. It is not stated or claimed that such alleged representatives were there holding the proxies of the stock to which their respective companies were entitled, or that as such representatives they participated in any way in the meeting. Nor is it claimed that any of them had any authorization from his company (unless such adhered to his official position) to so be present or to represent it. At such a meeting the amendments were duly passed. Formal requisites of the Iowa law as to publication, etc., of corporate amendments were met.

Articles of incorporation have a dual character; they are at once a grant of authority and a contract. The matter of authority is between the state and the incorporators alone. The matter of contract, while always and primarily between the state and the incorporators, may include third parties, either actual or in prospect. Hawthorne v. Calef, 2 Wall. 10; Curran v. Arkansas, 15 How. 304; Woodruff v. Trapnall, 10 How. 190. The relation between such third parties and the incorporators or their combined entity, the corporation, is purely contractual. It possesses no different or higher attributes because its terms find expression in an instrument to which the state is also a party. Such contracts are subject to the ordinary rules of law governing contracts. It is, of course, evident that such third parties and the corporation could not alter such contract in any manner that would affect the rights of the other party, the state. Although there are additional reasons why this should be so where the state is a party to this character of contract, yet neither can two or three parties to any contract so alter their contractual relations as to affect the third without its consent. No reason appears why in this, as any kind of tri-party contract, two of the parties may not at will alter or annul any of such contract rights, if such action affects them alone. With such power to change their rights, the question becomes whether or not the terminal and railway companies have altered or annulled the rights arising from the contract contained in the articles of incorporation. They took no formal corporate action accepting or ratifying these attempted changes in their contractual relations with the terminal company. But all of the individuals who acted at this purported meeting of stockholders of the terminal company were chosen by the three railway companies and certainly were merely their instruments. There can be no question that the controlling, executive officers of the railway companies were fully aware of and approved the action of the meeting; that Hubbell was encouraged to purchase the bonds and stock; that the value of the stock was solely prospective during the existent operating contract and that this value has largely increased as the worth of the terminals grew and the contract term diminished. Although the 1889 contract had provided for distribution between them of the entire capital stock of 20,000 shares they accepted, after the amendments, distribution of 4,000 shares provided therein. Before the amendments there had been no stock issued, but the corporate organization had been maintained by eight directors chosen by the three railways in accordance with and in the proportions prescribed in the original articles. After the amendments the directors were elected by the outstanding stock, and, in fact, they were not all representative of the railways; no attempt was made by the railways, as such, to exercise the very valuable right of naming, in certain proportions, the directors. The amendments provided that no stock beyond the 4,000 shares should be issued except by consent of more than seven-eighths of the stock. This provision has been observed. This was a very vital provision, bearing upon the value of the issued stock. It cannot be disputed that the virtual veto of further issue was for the benefit of Hubbell, who then owned one-eighth of the stock (bought less than two months before), and to whom the Wabash purchasing committee at that very time was endeavoring to sell another eighth (later consummated). At that time the terminal company was under contract with the railway companies to apply all of its surplus earning to a reduction of their service bills thus, during the life of that contract, depriving the stock of all chance of dividends. That contract had then twenty-eight years to run. Yet three days before this purported meeting of the terminal stockholders the Wabash purchasing committee offered Hubbell $100,000 of terminal bonds and one-eighth of the stock for $115,000.00 and accrued bond interest. This sale was consummated after the amendments had been adopted. The truth seems to be that the purchasing committee of the Wabash was desirous of realizing upon these bonds and stock by sale to Hubbell, who was the dominating influence in the other two railways; that Hubbell was willing to purchase if the control of the railways, as such, given in the articles was removed; the articles were amended, removing Hubbell's objection; the purchase was made. For seventeen years thereafter the railways acted in perfect harmony with the articles as amended. During all of that time there was no questioning of their validity. Not until this suit was filed in 1907 was there any such attack. The doctrine of laches comprehends and controls the situation. Neither as shareholders nor as parties contracting with the terminal company can the railway companies thus sleep upon their rights and then in a court of equity enforce such against others who have, to their knowledge, acted upon the belief that such rights did not exist and have acquired and hold property which has enormously increased in value in the interval. These amendments took away all control by the railway companies, as such, over the action of the terminal company. This would include the rights of approval by them of usage, transfer or permanent incumbrance of the property, nomination of directors and all influence of the 1882 contract as embodied in the articles of incorporation. All of these provisions in the articles were for the exclusive benefit of the railways, and they could and did part with them.

Finally, it is urged that it cannot be supposed that these railway companies would bring into being a creature, put into its hands such ownership and control over their property and endow it with such powers that it and not they could command the situation. Such a supposition is improbable and here unnecessary. There is nowhere any indication that the railways intended any such result, and yet such, in our judgment, is the result. This unexpected outcome was the product of several circumstances. A very short trial convinced the railways that the 1882 contract plan was not safe nor practical in the use of the terminals. Under that plan as much control as they deemed proper had been vested in that one of them (Des Moines & St. Louis Railway Company) which was most largely interested in the property. The necessity of some neutral outside agency was evident. A close corporation in which stock and representation on the directorate was assured in proportion to their ownership of the property naturally suggested itself. The opportunity for reimbursing themselves for outlay in connection with the property was attractive. This could be done through bonds of a terminal company and yet leave the free use and entire control of the terminals. Such bonds must have value behind them, and there was no other value possible except the property. Also, they must acquire the stock of such company and must make payment therefor in value. So they created this agency; they circumscribed its powers with restrictions which made their control of it as complete as legally possible; they contracted among themselves, limiting the transfer of stock by any of them. They thus took every precaution consistent with the objects they had in mind which prudent men could devise to make their control over their creature complete and permanent. They then transferred to it their property and felt secure. For years so complete was this mastery that no stock of the terminal company was issued, although it had acquired the property, issued its bonds thereon, and had sole control over the operation of the terminals. But financial difficulties enmeshed the Wabash, the then holder of the largest interest (one-half) in the stock and bonds. One avenue of relief was through disposition of a considerable portion of such stock and bonds to an individual (Hubbell), who was then influential in the two other railways. Such a sale would seem in effect a mere rearrangement of the interests of the three companies in the terminal company. But it was a vital condition of that purchase, required by the purchaser, that the complete control of the railways over the terminal company should be lessened so that the purchaser might protect his interests. This was done. It was the severance of those bonds in which lay the control of the railways, as such, over the terminal company. Thereafter, through successive acts, natural enough and, at the time, apparently harmless, this removal of control was more completely confirmed. The ultimate result being the entire emancipation of the terminal company from outside government. In course of time a majority of the outstanding stock had passed legitimately and for value to the Hubbells. Also, they had disposed of their interests in the railways (Northern and Northwestern) to the Milwaukee, retaining for themselves the terminal company holdings. These last two concurring factors inserted into the situation for the first time an unforeseen diversity of interests between the railways and the terminal company. Thus the railways themselves had, through a series of acts and circumstances extending over many years, gradually let slip from them the exclusive ownership and control which they had at the beginning so much valued and so carefully guarded. The proprietorship and mastery of the entire terminal property, rights and franchises are represented by the outstanding stock and bonds of the terminal company. All of such stock and bonds are now held by the complainants or passed through their ownership or that of their predecessors and were parted with for value. They have not lost their property. They have the stock and bonds or the value they received for them. They have parted with all control not given by the stock or bonds.

Our determination upon the main contention in this case is that complainants, except as bond and stockholders, have no interest in the property of the terminal company and no voice in the control and management of that company.

Surplus Earnings.

In connection with the management and operation of the terminal properties, sources of income arose aside from the contributions made by the three railways. These sources were switching charges and rental of parts of its property or of privileges in connection therewith. Accumulations of this character now total several hundred thousand dollars. Complainants base claim therefor upon the contract entered into between the terminal company and the railway companies, dated May 10, 1889. The terminal company replies that the contract does not include such monies. The determination turns, therefore, upon the meaning of that contract. A subsequent contract of July 31, 1897, does not affect this controversy.

Those portions of the 1889 contract pertinent to this point are as follows:

"Section Three. Each of said parties of the second part for itself and its assigns, agrees to pay to said party of the first part a sum of money to be asecrtained as follows, to-wit:

"1st. There shall be ascertained the amount required to pay five per cent interest upon the mortgage bonds of the party of the first part, one-twelfth of which, less any deduction hereinafter provided for, shall be payable monthly as hereinafter specified.

"2nd. At the expiration of each month or as soon thereafter as practicable, there shall be ascertained the expenses of maintaining and repairing the property of the party of the first part, including the maintenance and repair of tracks, depots, round-houses, engine houses, etc., during the preceding month. And in like manner there shall be ascertained the taxes, general or special, levied upon or against said property and paid during the preceding month, or to be paid during the next succeeding month, and the insurance, if any, paid during the preceding month, or to be paid during the next succeeding month.

3rd. There shall be likewise ascertained the costs and expenses of every nature connected with the operation of said terminal station, freight and passenger depots, depot grounds, round-houses, transfer and other properties, which is to include every item of expense or disbursement incurred or made by the party of the first part not hereinbefore mentioned, except the expenses specified in Section Nine hereof.

"Section Four. Having so ascertained the monthly aggregate of all the items and sums mentioned in the preceding section, there shall be deducted therefrom the amount, if any, which other railway companies may be under obligation to pay by virtue of contracts for the use of said property, or parts thereof, for the preceding month, and the remainder shall be paid to the parties of the second part in the proportion that the wheelage of each of said parties bears to the entire wheelage of all said second parties during such preceding month; and it is expressly understood and agreed that in computing wheelage, three narrow gauge cars shall be taken as the equivalent of two standard gauge cars; and that the term 'wheelage' as used in this contract means that three narrow gauge cars are to be accepted as the equivalent of two standard gauge cars.

"Section Five. If the amount, or any part of the amount, due from any other railroad company or companies for the use of said property or any part thereof, shall not be paid when due, then the sum so due and unpaid shall also, on demand of said first party, be paid to it by said second parties on a wheelage basis as hereinbefore defined."

Section Nine, referred to in the above quotation, relates to a different basis of dividing round-house expenses and does not alter the meaning of the quotation.

The plaintiffs contend that these "Surplus Earnings" are made up of items which under the above provisions should have been credited upon their monthly bills. Defendants claim that the only character of credit items intended by these provisions were such as were paid by some other railway by virtue of a contract for the use of the property, and that these items fall without that definition. This latter contention is a strict construction of the exact wording of the contract. It is not in our judgment a fair construction of the spirit of the agreement. This conclusion is based both upon the history of the transaction and upon the meaning to be given this precise language when read in connection with the entire contract.

After the railways had, in April, 1888, transferred the property to the terminal company it was in a position to proceed to carry out its purposes. All of the parties (this for practical purposes at that time meant the three railway companies) evidently realized that something more was needed to definitely define and control the relations of the four companies toward each other. One witness testifies that the moving considerations which led to this agreement were that the 1882 contract had made no provision defining how the interest upon the bonds should be paid, and that the railways thought that round-house services should not be paid for on a wheelage basis. Doubtless these two items were in the minds of the parties, but it is quite evident that there was something of greater importance. The very general statement in the articles of incorporation that the terminal company was to exercise all of its powers "in accordance with the terms and spirit of the aforesaid contract entered into on the 2nd day of January, A. D. 1882", was too vague to serve as a practical definition of the rights of the parties or as a guide to the terminal company in the conduct of the business of the railway companies. Besides it was vitally necessary to settle the terminal stock rights of the railways. Therefore the parties wisely determined, as set out in the preamble of the 1889 contract, that

"for the protection of the parties hereto and their assigns, it is important that the rights, duties and liabilities of each in regard to the whole subject matter of said terminal facilities, including their use, care, control, rental, taxes, expenses, renewals, insurance, and repairs, shall be stated and defined."

The contract of 1882 had provided a plan for financing the terminal project. This plan contemplated that the railway companies would provide the terminal properties; that the expenses of control, supervision, maintenance (including taxes) and (generally speaking) improvements should be met by them on a wheelage basis. They expected at that time to procure the service at cost and divide that cost in accordance with actual usage. This idea that the terminal service for which they were taking all these steps would be furnished them at cost passed into the 1889 contract. For several years after that contract became effective the monthly bills rendered by the terminal company and paid by the railway companies set forth specifically these items of rentals and switching charges from outside sources of credits upon the expenses, of which the balance was divided between the three railways on a wheeling basis. February 11, 1891, a director's meeting of the terminal company ordered

"that the rents collected for the use of the Company's real estate, and the switching charges paid in, be credited on the bills of the different tenant companies occupying this Company's terminals, giving to each Company its share ascertained by wheelage."

About a year later, January 7, 1892, the same body ordered a discontinuance of this practice. By its terms this discontinuance was intended to be temporary and was for the purpose of providing a fund "with which to purchase supplies and pay current bills which come in before it receives its monthly revenue from the tenant companies." When the auditor of the Wabash noticed the absence of such credits from the bill for the month preceding the above last order he inquired of the terminal company superintendent, who wrote as follows:

"Replying to yours of the 1st inst., in regard to the allowance for switching, rentals, etc., that should be made on our bills for the months of December and January, I have to say, that at a meeting of the Executive Committee, held January 7, 1892, it was decided not to distribute these collections for a period of time, until the Des Moines Union Railway Company could accumulate a small fund for working capital. I presume this will continue in effect until January, 1893. You will be furnished each month a statement showing the amount of this rental, and your proportion of the same (italics ours) os you can make a charge against the D. M. U. Railway and carry it on your books, as you see fit for future adjustment."

Also, in the annual report made by the terminal company to the Executive Council of the state of Iowa for taxation purposes for the years 1888, 1889, 1890, 1892 and 1893, was the statement that the terminal company was "simply a representative company, acting as an agency for" the railway companies, "performing all necessary work for them, and charging each at actual cost its due proportion thereof incurred." The report for 1894 differs in some other, but not in this respect, except that it includes another railway, and says that it "performs certain services for these companies and collects from them as rental and for such services, the aggregate amount of its expenses, which expenses are paid by the several railway companies in proportion to the use of the property and services rendered, as provided by contracts existing between this company," and the other companies. Thus the history of this provision of the contract, and of the view taken of it by the parties themselves before any antagonistic motives or interests had intervened, shows that all revenue of the terminal company was to be credited on the bills of the railway companies. A careful consideration of the entire contract itself leads to the same conclusion.

Therefore, the surplus earnings should be returned to the railway companies. For that purpose an accounting should be taken to determine what sum should go to each, calculated upon monthly wheelage basis.

Usage After May 1, 1918.

When the present operating contract is ended the rights of the parties respecting the use of the terminals by the railways are those which spring from their nature as carriers and their physical and business relation to each other as carriers in and entering a large terminal. These are that the terminal company must furnish its full terminal facilities in so far as reasonably necessary and required by the railways, and they will pay therefor such reasonable sum as may be agreed upon between the terminal company and each of the railways, or, in default of such agreement, as may be fixed by the proper public tribunal.

Conclusion.

The decree should be modified. It should state the complete title to this property in the terminal company, and that the only interest of the railways in the property or the management of the corporation is such as flows from stock ownership. That the surplus earnings belong to the railways, and a master should be appointed under instructions to ascertain the part due each upon a wheelage basis.

It is so ordered.

HOOK, Circuit Judge, dissenting in part:

I concur in the award to plaintiffs of what is called the surplus earnings of the terminal company, not only for the particular reason given but also for a broader one arising from the other branch of the case.

I am unable to agree to the foregoing opinion upon the main controversy and will state my reasons in a general way. The railroad companies organized the terminal company and invested it with the legal title to their property, including integral parts of railroad lines and appurtenant franchises, solely for the more convenient and better performance of their public duties. It is open to question whether the most important of the conveyances could lawfully have been made except for that specific purpose. That purpose was fundamental, not temporary or casual, and it determined the character of the terminal organization. The terminal company was not incorporated by individuals as an independent enterprise for personal profit and its stock was not put upon the market as that of a financial venture. The contract of 1882 between the railroad companies foreshadowed the terminal company in express words and when that company was chartered it took the place of the individual trustee provided for by the contract. That fact is too plain for discussion. The change to a corporate trustee was solely for reasons of convenience. It was one of method or form but not of underlying, essential substance.

As regards the legal title to the property, the terminal company became the trustee of the railroad companies that organized it and of such others as might thereafter be admitted to joint beneficial ownership. The beneficiaries present and future were what are commonly called proprietary or constituent companies. Each of them owed a duty to the others that it would not at any time so deal for itself or with its own proprietary interest as to impair or destroy the joint relation among them or the character of their common organization. Not only did the terminal company hold the legal title as trustee, but in the operation and maintenance of the property it was an agency of the proprietary companies for the performance of their railroad functions. This was accurately expressed in a sworn declaration by one of the individual defendants in 1892 when president of the terminal company. He averred that it was "simply a representative company, acting as an agency at Des Moines for the Wabash Railroad Company and the Des Moines, Northern and Western Railway Company, performing all necessary work for them, and charging each at actual cost, its due proportion for the expense thereby incurred." The Des Moines, Northern and Western was the successor of two of the original proprietary companies.

In both aspects of its position towards the proprietary companies the terminal company was in a high sense their trustee; and according to salutary principles it was bound to maintain the integrity of that relation. Being itself a corporation, its fiduciary obligations and disabilities rested equally upon its officers through whom alone it could act. The limitations upon the right of a person in such a capacity to act for his personal benefit with respect to the subject of the trust are familiar. Never are they less than that the dealing must be open, avowedly at arm's length, and without contrivance or concealment. The individual defendants, one or the other or both, were, at all the times material in this case, officers and directors of the terminal company. The conclusion of my brothers, briefly stated, is that by a series of transactions occurring in a long course of years the original character of the terminal company was gradually changed into that of an independent corporation, and that the control of it was lost by the railroad companies and was acquired by the individual defendants who were its officers. But they say: "There is nowhere any indication that the railways intended any such result, and yet such, in our judgment, is the result. This unexpected outcome was the product of several circumstances." In other words, the proprietary companies were not cognizant of the trend of the circumstances, and the result held to follow, though unexpected and not intended by them, is enforced because of a legal presumption of intention of natural consequences of acts, regardless of intention in fact. The circumstances relied on do not appear to me to have the significance attributed to them, but were it otherwise the presumption should not be so broadly applied to the case of a trust the destruction of which is claimed by those subject to the disabilities of trustees dealing for themselves. The excerpt quoted above touches the quick of this controversy. In my opinion the various transactions thought to produce a result so unexpected and unforeseen should be severally examined in the light of the surroundings at the time they occurred. If in one aspect they were then consistent, or not apparently inconsistent, with the frequent and studied declarations of the object of the terminal organization, and that view was then reasonably entertained by the railroad companies, that view should prevail in a court of equity rather than a shrewder one tending to a conclusion in favor of participants who were bound in good conscience to the contrary.

An argument is made upon the issue by the terminal company of bonds on the property and the necessity that it should have had the title to enable it to make the mortgage. Of course it had to have title as complete as the giving of the mortgage required, but there is nothing in that inconsistent in any degree with the existence of a trust relation between it and the proprietary companies. The mortgage is still afoot, and in this case no rights are asserted under it. Its effect upon the question before us is not different from that of a joint mortgage by the proprietary companies upon properties severally owned by them but committed to a comomn use, or that of an authorized mortgage by an individual trustee named under the contract of 1882. The proprietary companies were fully justified in believing that the changes and amendments in the charter etc. of the terminal company now relied on as making for its complete independence, were for the sole purpose of giving it the conventional dress of a corporation that has put forth an issue of bonds. That was why suggestions originating within the terminal company were so readily agreed to by them, and that is why the result so contrary to their vital interests, now held to follow, was unforeseen. I question whether property and rights of great value are lost in that way except in circumstances concededly not present here. The very suggestion that a great railroad system, like the Wabash for example, had unintentionally and unexpectedly lost its proprietary interest and right to use extensive terminals in a large city, to the establishment and upbuilding of which it was a party and to which it had contributed property acquired for railroad purposes by eminent domain and public grant, is so unusual as to impose upon those who make it a heavy burden of law and fact. Questions like these naturally suggest themselves: Who got the property of the railroad company and deprived it of its right of entrance into the city? How did they do it? What were their relations to the railroad company? Who represented the railroad company in such an important matter and what authority did they have?

After the conclusion is reached that the terminal company had by gradual action thrown off its trust character and had become independent, attention is directed to the transactions in its stock. The power asserted by the individual defendants to control the terminal company and thereby to exclude the plaintiffs from the use of the terminals rests upon their possession of five-eighths of the issued capital stock. There is, however, abundant proof that the stock of that company was intended only to represent the interests of railroad companies actually using the terminal facilities and as a method of apportionment among them. The stock was not intended as a source of personal or individual profit apart from railroad use. Stock ownership and terminal use were inseparable. I know of no public policy or rule of law against such a status of corporate stock or its enforcement as between the parties who established it. If it were formally expressed in the corporate charter the world would have to take notice. But as between the parties themselves, those participating and having actual knowledge, internal evidence may disclose it. It should always be in mind that in this case there are no innocent purchasers relying upon public records. The contract of 1882 specified the proportional interests of the three original railroad companies and foreshadowed the organization of the terminal company to take the place of an individual trustee. In 1884 the terminal company was organized for the expressed purpose of carrying out the contract. My brothers see in the articles of incorporation some evidence of a departure from the trust and the beneficial relations, but it seems to me that the intention to maintain them was asserted and reasserted as definitely and positively as words would permit. While, as customary, the charter made provision for a capital stock, the connection between the distribution and future ownership of such thereof as might be issued and the railroad use of the property was manifested not only in that instrument but afterwards in many ways by both the railroad companies and the terminal company. The limitations of an opinion will not admit of a recital of this evidence in detail. It is in the record and there is much of it. In 1887, three years after the terminal company was incorporated, when the parties began to convey to it the legal title, the directors of the predecessor of the Wabash Company adopted a resolution directing its president and secretary to execute a deed conveying "all its real estate rights of way, franchise, roadbed and other property of said company lying and being in the City of Des Moines, east of Farnham Street, whether the same was acquired by grant from the City of Des Moines, or by purchase or condemnation", and, it was added, "this resolution being offered for the purpose of carrying out the contract of date January second 1882" etc. One of the individual defendants, as secretary of the directors' meeting, recorded the adoption of the resolution. The Wabash Company was then the real party in interest. The conveyance executed by the officers so authorized, the individual defendant being one of them, was in form a warranty deed, but certainly the resolution of authority fixed the effect of the conveyance for the parties and those who afterwards dealt with knowledge of the facts. Mere executive officials of a railroad company cannot, upon their own initiative, convey away parts of its road and franchises. And, were it necessary to be determined here, it would be an interesting question how far its representatives in a terminal company organized and holding title like the one here, could do so by consenting to a vital change of its character, or even by a disposal of its stock, without express authority of their principal manifested in the usual corporate way. The thirty year contract of May 10, 1889, between the terminal company and the proprietary companies was authorized as supplemental to the contract of 1882, and in a preamble it was recited that in pursuance of its charter it acquired and owned a railway. The charter was that of 1884 into which the contract of 1882 was written. One other matter bearing on this phase of the case may be mentioned. The effort to purchase stock began in 1888. The property of the Wabash Company, including a half interest in the terminal stock not yet issued, was then in a transitional state in a foreclosure proceeding, being held by a purchasing committee. One of the defendants wrote Mr. Ashley, the president of the Wabash Company and also a member and the secretary of the purchasing committee, saying he had been asked whether half of that stock interest, one fourth of the whole, could be bought. Mr. Ashley replied favorably, adding:

"but I have always supposed that it would be necessary to confine the sale to such railway companies as would be interested in the station." Also: "Was there not an understanding or agreement as to the sale of the stock when the Terminal Company was formed and would it not be prejudicial to the interest of the whole to part with the stock to outsiders?" The defendant replied, agreeing with him and mentioning some railroads in whose interest inquiries had been made. The purchase was made in 1890. It was in 1892 that the other individual defendant made the sworn statement that the terminal company was "simply a representative company acting as an agency" for the railroad companies. About two months after the first sale the purchasing committee sold an additional eighth of the stock to the defendant. In a letter during the negotiations Mr. Ashley wrote him: "It must be understood of course, that a one eighth interest in the capital stock shall be sufficient to represent a proprietorship in the company according to the understanding we had when you were here." The phrase "proprietorship in the company" is not commonly used to describe the stock of an ordinary corporation. Moreover the defendants being substantially interested in the proprietary companies, other than the Wabash, had been endeavoring to induce other railroads to come into the terminal company. They were, one or both, also officers of the terminal company. It would naturally be assumed that in dealing with them they were acting in the railroad and terminal interest as distinguished from that in which they now assert control. The record shows that it was common practice in correspondence to address them personally on subjects of corporate concern. In fact the three-eighths of the stock bought from the Wabash purchasing committee was transferred to and became the property of the Des Moines Northern & Western Railway Company into which the two other companies were merged. That was in 1892. The Des Moines Northern & Western then owned seven-eights of the terminal stock and the Wabash one-eighth. As has already been observed, the terminal company was declared in that year to have been simply a representative agency. Early in 1893 a similar declaration was made on behalf of that company. The Des Moines Northern & Western was financially dominated and officially controlled by the individual defendants. In the fall of 1893 their company pledged five eighths of the terminal stock to them as collateral to some indebtedness. In January, 1894, the pledged stock was by agreement applied as part payment to a small amount, and they have since held it. The next annual sworn statement on behalf of the terminal company to the Executive Council of the State of Iowa illustrates the transforming effect upon the character of the corporation which a mere transfer of its stock is supposed to have. In February, 1894, it was declared that the terminal company was the owner of the property; that it leased it to the railroad companies, performed services for them and collected a rental. My brothers adopting that theory say that the ultimate result was the entire emancipation of the terminal company from "outside government." According to the decision, the proprietary companies became outsiders without right, after the expition of the operating contract of 1889, to use the terminals, contrary to the will of the holders of five-eighths of the stock, except upon the order of some public administrative board in Iowa, if there be one with jurisdiction. I do not think the stock in the hands of the defendants should be destroyed or its true value in the scheme or plan of the terminal organization impaired, but that it should be actively operative and profitable only when transferred to and held by railroad companies which use the terminals and contribute in that way to the object of their creation. There are four or five other important railroad systems entering Des Moines besides those of the plaintiffs.

There is little conflict in the evidence. The difference between my brothers and myself is not so much about the facts as their significance. They put emphasis upon the corporate cover of the terminal company and perceive a drift to complete self-sufficiency and independency from the very moment of incorporation. But the doctrine of a corporate entity separate and apart from the persons composing the corporation is after all a mere legal fiction established for convenience and to serve the ends of justice. It does not go beyond that. In equity the shell artificially assumed is not impermeable. The court will look through it and regard the kernel, and whenever justice requires will hold the stockholders as the corporation. That is being constantly done in equity in determining public rights as affected by the corporate association of particular individuals and the rights of the individuals among themselves and with respect to their organization.

But however the above may be, it seems to me that the less measure of relief granted by the trial court cannot be denied the plaintiffs. It is that they were entitled to a continued use of the terminal properties and that the court would determine the terms and conditions if the parties were unable to agree. That is the matter of defendants' appeal. Whenever a definite right claimed by a railroad company to use specific property of another is of contractual origin, as where it is a condition of the franchise of the owner or is founded upon conventional agreement, the question of the existence, of the right and its extent and limitations is a justiciable one; and the claimant may invoke the aid of a court of equity for its establishment and enforcement. Similarly, when the right is upon reasonable terms and conditions the court may determine them if the parties do not agree. Both phases of this subject have been so decided in the cases, familiar in this circuit, of the Union Pacific Bridge at Omaha, and the Wabash right of way and tracks at St. Louis. If the right of use exists, reasonable terms and conditions are implied in the absence of recital or stipulation about them. In view of the admitted history of the terminal company the plaintiffs, merely as minority stockholders, have a right to the use of the terminals and upon reasonable terms. The right is not of that general nature which requires an appeal to some administrative board for the enforcement of the public policy of the State applicable to all railroad companies, but is essentially contractual. It could not reasonably be said that, had the contract of 1889 not been made, two of the original companies holding a majority of the stock might have excluded the third from the use of the terminals and defeated its appeal to the courts. The individual defendants have no greater right or power.

Petition for Rehearing.

Come now the Wabash Railway Company, The Wabash Railroad Company and the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company, and petition the Court for a rehearing in the above-entitled cause, in order that the main controversy therein, viz., whether 2137 the railway companies or the terminal company owns the terminal property in controversy, may be reconsidered; and as grounds therefor state as follows:

I.

The opinion of the majority of the judges, and the decision, is in conflict with the case of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha Railway Company and Minneapolis Eastern Railway Company v. Minneapolis Civic and Commerce Association (decided June 10, 1918), in the following particulars:

(a) In this case the Supreme Court held, on facts not substantially different from the facts in the case at bar, that the terminal tracks in controversy belonged to the using railway companies.

The only features which distinguish the two cases are, in the former the railway companies owned all the stock of the subsidiary company, whereas in the instant case some of the stock of the terminal company was owned by an outsider; but in the instant case the terminal tracks and facilities were constructed as a part of the railways of the using railway companies in obedience to their charter obligations to the state, whereas in the other case the company which constructed and owned the terminal tracks was organized by local citizens with charter obligations to build an independent railroad, and its stock was afterwards purchased by the using companies.

The circumstance that some of the stock of the terminal company in the case at bar is owned by an outsider ought not be influential, because it must be conceded the using railway companies

To hold that the using railway companies, by disposing of some of the shares of the terminal company, "chopped off" their railroads at the city limits of Des Moines, and thereby conveyed the terminal tracks and facilities to the terminal company, would be contrary to common sense.

Surely no court would hold that the ownership of an important part of a line of railway, placed for convenience in the name of a terminal company, at all times depends on whether the railway company owns all the stock of the terminal company, and that if at any time it sells one or more shares of such stock it thereby dismembers its railway, i. e., today the railway owns all of the stock of the terminal company and, consequently, all the tracks in its name; tomorrow the railway sells or gives away some of the shares, and then it does not own the rails in the name of the terminal company; and the next day it acquires the shares so sold or given away, and again it owns the tracks of the terminal railway; and so on. Such flexibility pertains to legerdemain, and not to the title to property.

The circumstance that the terminals in controversy in the case at bar were constructed as a part and in completion of the railways, pursuant to the obligation of the railway companies to the state, renders the applicability of the principle applied in the above decision even more obvious than the facts in that case.

(b) The Supreme Court in the above decision held that in dealing with a corporation existing under circumstances not dissimilar in essential respects from those surrounding the terminal company in the case at bar the courts will desregard the corporate agency and give effect to the substance of the transactions involved. The Court said:

"In such a case the courts will not permit themselves to be blinded or deceived by mere forms of law, but, regardless of fictions, will deal with the substance of the transaction involved as if the corporate agency did not exist, and as the justice of the case may require."

In the case at bar it is conceded the railway companies were under the necessity of using the terminals in controversy, and prompted by that necessity acquired the ground and entered into a contract for the purpose of securing, and, in fact, secured the needed terminals, but the majority of the judges hold that the railway companies unwittingly and unintentionally permitted the needed terminals to slip from them. The majority opinion says:

"Finally, it is urged that it can not be supposed that these railway companies would bring into being a creature, put into its hands such ownership and control over their property and endow it with such powers that it and not they could command the situation. Such a supposition is improbable and here unnecessary. There is nowhere any indication that the railways intended any such result, and yet such, in our judgment, is the result. This unexpected outcome was the product of several circumstances."

Thus it is held not only that the evidence did not indicate "that the railways intended any such result", but that such result was to them an "unexpected outcome". Again, the majority opinion says:

"Thus the railways themselves had, through a series of acts and circumstances extending over many years, gradually let slip from them that exclusive ownership and control which they had at the beginning so much valued and so carefully guarded."

The majority opinion in effect holds that during the course of events the railway companies had no thought of parting with their terminals, but that the Hubbells designed to acquire an interest in them. To say the least, then, the minds of the parties did not meet and were not in accord with the forms which brought about the "unexpected outcome", and whereby the railway companies 'gradually let slip from them that exclusive ownership and control which they had at the beginning so much valued and so carefully guarded."

The majority opinion on its face deals only with the forms of the transactions:

In addition, it is obvious, from the conclusion that the railway companies unwittingly and unintentionally dispossessed themselves of facilities they were bound to use, that the majority opinion rests on the forms and not on the real transactions—the intentions of the parties—in contravention of the above decision of the Supreme Court.

The dissenting opinion takes direct issue with the majority opinion on this point. In the dissenting opinion it is said:

"The difference between my brothers and myself is not so much about the facts as their significance. They put emphasis upon the corporate cover of the terminal company and perceive a drift to complete self-sufficiency and independency from the very moment of incorporation. But the doctrine of a corporate entity separate and apart from the persons composing the corporation is after all, a mere legal fiction established for convenience and to serve the ends of justice. It does not go beyond that. In equity the shell artificially assumed is not impermeable. The Court will look though it and regard the kernel, and whenever justice requires will hold the stockholders as the corporation. That is being constantly done in equity in determining public rights as affected by the corporate association of particular individuals and the rights of the individuals among themselves and with respect to their organization."

The Court properly assumed the conceded facts that the rights of innocent purchasers are not involved, and that the Hubbells initiated or co-operated in the performance of every act, on which the majority base the conclusion that the railway companies unintentionally permitted the terminal property to slip from them. As said in the minority opinion:

"It should always be in mind that in this case there are no innocent purchasers relying upon public records * * * Moreover, the defendants being substantially interested in the proprietary companies, other than the Wabash, had been endeavoring to induce other railroads to come into the terminal company. They were, one or both, also officers of the terminal company. It would naturally be assumed that in dealing with them they were acting in the railroad and terminal interest as distinguished from that in which they now assert control."

No reason, therefore, exists why the Court may not deal with the real transactions, and give effect to the intentions of the parties.

II.

The opinion of the majority and the decision are in conflict with the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of United States v. Terminal Railroad Association of St. Louis (224 U. S. 383).

In that case the terminal property was conveyed to the terminal company, which contemporaneously "granted" a joint easement to the railway companies, whereas in the case at bar the joint easement was "reserved" by the railway companies.

The two cases are not otherwise distinguishable. The Supreme Court in the last-mentioned case held the railway companies were entitled to the joint use of the terminal property and that the rails of the terminal company were the rails of the proprietary companies, whereas in the case at bar the majority opinion entirely overlooked the clause of the contract of 1882 by which the railway companies created and reserved the joint easement. The majority opinion says of that contract:

"The contract is carefully drawn by skilled draftsmen who set off in brief, clean-cut, numbered paragraphs the different subjects of the contract." Is it not obvious that such draftsmen intended by that contract to create and reserve a joint easement in the railway companies on the terminal property when they wrote into that contract that the title to the terminal property should be held 'subject to the joint use and occupation of all said railway companies'?"

Is it possible skilled draftsmen wrote into the contract that the title to the terminal property should be held, "but subject to the joint use and occupation of all said railway companies" without intending to express any significance whatever?

Was not the only object and purpose of the contract to secure the joint use and occupation of terminals, and were not the quoted words appropriate to accomplish that object and purpose? The railway companies owned the land, which was already held in trust. Did they not agree that the land and terminals should be held "subject to the joint use and occupation of all said railway companies"?

Do not those words bear a definite meaning to the bench and bar? "Subject to" is an accustomed form of creating a reservation. Would a careful draftsman have intended nothing by the words "use and occupation of all said railway companies", which manifestly he borrowed from a decision of the Supreme Court of Iowa?

Without the quoted words is not the entire contract unintelligible and without meaning? Does not each and every one of "the clean-cut, numbered paragraphs" refer to and rest on the words "subject to the joint use and occupation of all said railway companies"?

May not the owners of land separate the use and occupation from the land itself—create an easement?

If two farmers are obliged to acquire a joint way, of necessity, and they enter into a contract covering the purchase of 40 acres of land, and agree by the contract that the 40 acres shall be held by a trustee, "but subject to a highway 40 feet wide on the south side thereof", would the quoted words have no significance? Would the trustee take the legal title to the roadway?

And in such case if the trustee afterward pays for the property held in trust would he not take the 40 acres burdened by the joint way of necessity? Would the fact that the trustee paid for what he held in trust indicate a change in the plan of the farmers, and denote an intent to part with the way of necessity—a way of necessity is, of course, what the words indicate, a way which the parties are obliged to use.

The majority opinion does not refer to, or discuss, the problems involved in these questions, or given any significance to the words in the contract, "but subject to the joint use and occupation of all said railway companies". It treats the contract of 1882 precisely as if those words have no meaning. The omission to give them the only significance they bear is the basic error on which that opinion rests.

The majority opinion is based on the reasoning that the terminal company paid for that which it took in trust, and therefore rests on the erroneous assumption that the terminal company took as trustee the title to the joint easement reserved by the railway companies.

III.

The opinion of the majority and the decision are in conflict with the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Joy et al. v. St. Louis (138 U. S. 1), wherein it was held that a covenant in a contract that all railway companies should have the right to use certain railway facilities and deeds and other instruments which were absolute on their face, and in form a contradiction of such covenant, should all be read together "as a single transaction relating to the same subject matter, and should be construed together in such a way as to carry into effect the intention of the parties in view of their situation at the time and of the subject matter of the instruments", and when so read involved a grant of an easement to all such companies.

The majority opinion fails to consider the covenant in the contract of 1882 which created and reserved the joint easement, and instead of treating that contract, the articles, the deeds and the contract of 1889 as successive steps in "a single transaction relating to the same subject matter", and instead of construing them "together in such a way as to carry into effect the intention of the parties", treated them as unrelated transactions, and so construed them as to produce an outcome "unexpected" and a result not intended by the interested parties.

Obviously the only purpose and object of the contract of 1882 was to secure to the railway companies the joint easement or joint terminals. This object and purpose must control in reading all subsequent documents relating to the same subject matter. It was essential that all subsequent steps should be clothed in forms and the forms apparently isolated the related transactions which according to the majority opinion unmistakably disclose the intention of the parties.

IV.

The opinion of the majority and the decision are in conflict with the following covenants of the articles of incorporation, which were entirely overlooked:

Article II provides, among other things, that the terminal company "shall not lease or otherwise dispose of the use of any part of its franchises to any other railway company * * * without the assent in writing" of the railway companies.

Article IV provides, among other things, "that no contract, lease or other agreement amounting to a permanent charge upon the property of the corporation shall be entered into by the board unless the same shall have been first approved by" the railway companies.

Manifestly these covenants were designed to prevent the terminal company from in any wise interfering with the full joint use and occupation of the terminal property by the railway companies.

The articles provide that no one shall be eligible to the office of director except a nominee of the railway companies. The "board" was necessarily composed of representatives of the railway companies.

Why, then, were the above covenants made unless to limit the authority of the representatives of the railway companies who might represent them on the board of the terminal company?

The importance of those covenants is illustrated by the evidence, which shows that Mr. Hubbell sometimes dealt with the local representatives of the railway companies and sometimes with the New York officers. The local representatives did not know about his transactions with the New York officers, and the New York officers did not know about his transactions with the local representatives.

The "approval of the railway companies" and the "assent in writing of the railway companies" could lawfully proceed only from the board of directors of the railway companies as a result of formal corporate action.

It is said in the majority opinion:

"No reason appears why in this, as any kind of tri-party contract, two of the parties may not at will alter or annul any of such contract rights, if such action affects them alone. With such power to change their rights, the question becomes whether or not the terminal and railway companies have altered or annulled the rights arising from the contract contained in the articles of incorporation. They took no formal action accepting or ratifying these attempted changes in their contractual relations with the terminal company. But all of the individuals who acted at this purported meeting of stockholders of the terminal company were chosen by the three railway companies and certainly were merely their instruments."

It is undoubtedly true that parties to a contract may ordinarily annul the contract, but in the present instance the parties agreed specifically that the contract should not be annulled so as to dispose of "any part of the use of the terminals", or so as to make a "permanent charge upon them", except in a specified manner, viz., with the assent in writing or approval of the railway companies.

These provisions were entirely overlooked by the majority opinion, which finds in expressed terms that the railway companies "took no formal corporate action accepting or ratifying", etc., but holds that the terminal company deprived the railway companies of all without their written consent or approval, but by the acts of negligence of the local representatives of the railway companies, who were expressly denied any authority in the premises.

Covenants in contracts prescribing the manner of altering contracts and denying authority to the agents of the parties have uniformly been given effect.

In the case of Assurance Company v. Building Association (183 U. S. 308, l. c. 361) it was held

"that provisions contained in fire insurance policies, that such a policy shall be void and of no effect if other insurance is placed on the property in other companies, without the knowledge and consent of the company, are usual and reasonable; that it is reasonable and competent for the parties to agree that such knowledge and consent shall be manifested in writing, either by endorsement upon the policy or by other writing; that it is competent and reasonable for insurance companies to make it matter of condition in their policies that their agents shall not be deemed to have authority to alter or contradict the express terms of the policies as executed and delivered."

Mr. Hubbell understood these covenants and gave them a practical construction when he demanded and received from Mr. Ashley, at the time he purchased the stock an agreement "that said purchasing committee will consent to such change in said articles of incorporation as will permit one director of said company to be nominated by any person or corporation holding one-eighth of the stock of the said Union Railway Company" (1601, 1602).

This is the only consent or approval given by the railway companies.

From the instrument last mentioned it is obvious the majority of the Judges labored under a misapprehension when they said that "Hubbell was willing to purchase if the control of the railways as suggested and as given in the articles was removed. The articles were amended removing Hubbell's objection. The purchase was made."

The only evidence of a desire of Mr. Hubbell to amend the articles is the above contract consenting to an amendment so as to permit the holder of one-eighth of the stock to elect a director.

Mr. Hubbell testified:

"Q. Did Mr. Cummins explain to you that his purpose in amending the articles of incorporation of the Terminal Company was to straighten out the title to the terminal property?

A. I understand that his reason for claiming that an amendment of the articles was necessary, was that the Des Moines Union Railway Company was not carrying on business in accordance with the contract of January 2nd, 1882, and never had done so, and that it was necessary for the Des Moines Union to amend its articles so that they would conform to the methods and manner in which the Des Moines Union Company was operating and transacting the business" (175).

Mr. Cummins testified:

"These amendments were not suggested by Mr. Hubbell. They were entirely my own suggestions and came about in a way that I have already related. With regard to Mr. Hubbell's position, my recollection is that Mr. Hubbell—conservative then as now, never disposed to move very rapidly into the future—was opposed to my proposition, as I thought, without any good reason."

V.

The majority opinion and the decision are based on the erroneous assumption that "for seventeen years" after the adoption of the alleged amended articles "the railway companies acted in perfect harmony with the articles as amended. During all of that time there was no question of their validity, not until this suit was filed in 1907 was there any such attack. The doctrine of laches comprehends and controls the situation."

This ruling overlooks the conceded fact that during those seventeen years the rights of the party were defined by the contract of 1889 and actions of the parties governed accordingly.

It would be unsound to hold that the acts of parties in one relationship under one contract, covering a considerable period, constitute an acquiescence in another arrangement and relationship which in the nature of things could not have in a practical sense influenced their action during such period.

It is conceded that during the "seventeen years" the parties did not act under the amended articles but acted under the contract of 1889, and that as soon as Mr. Hubbell indicated that he claimed the terminal company owned the terminals the dispute arose and complainants filed this suit (328 and 329).

VI.

The ruling in the majority opinion that the railway companies are estopped from claiming the joint easement is without any support in the evidence. The majority opinion says:

"Neither as shareholders nor as parties contracting with the terminal company can the railway companies thus sleep upon their rights and then in a court of equity enforce such against those who have, to their knowledge, acted upon the belief that such rights did not exist and have acquired and hold property which has enormously increased in value in the interval."

Mr. Hubbell testified:

"I don't remember of the purchasing committee making any representations as to the title which the Des Moines Union Railway Company has to the Terminal property in the City of Des Moines. * * * I don't remember that the subject was discussed or talked about at all by any member of the purchasing committee. They simply sold the bonds and the stock by a written contract and I paid the price agreed upon."

Mr. Hubbell said in his letter to Mr. Ashley of June 18th, 1888:

"I agree with you that the sale of a quarter interest in the stock of the terminal company should be made only to a railway company, who will join with the Wabash in making a contract with the Des Moines Union, guaranteeing the interest upon the bonds and operating expenses. I think it would be prejudicial to sell any of this stock to outsiders."

And Mr. Ashley said in his letter of April 5th, 1890, to Mr. Hubbell, in connection with the sale of the stock:

"It must be understood, of course, that a one-eighth interest in the capital stock shall be sufficient to represent proprietorship in the company, according to the understanding we had when you were here."

The understanding referred to by Mr. Ashley shows that Mr. Hubbell was aware of the claim of the railway companies to the joint easement. His statement that it would be prejudicial for the stock to be purchased by an outsider shows that he affirmatively represented to Mr. Ashley that he was not acquiring the stock for speculation nor to make money out of the terminal company.

We respectfully urge that not a scintilla of evidence can be found in the record tending to show that the railway companies had any knowledge or information that Mr. Hubbell understood or claimed that the terminal company owned absolutely all interest in the terminal property prior to the dispute which led to this suit, and we respectfully ask the Court to re-examine the evidence on that point.

VII.

The City of Des Moines has a population of more than 125,000 and is by far the most important commercial city and railroad center of Iowa. Under the majority opinion, the complainants are now practically excluded therefrom, the Wabash being held at the east city limits about two miles from the passenger and freight depot, and the St. Paul Company at the west part of the city, about one mile from the passenger and freight depot; and yet these three miles of railroad and these terminals were all constructed by their predecessors under franchises from the State of Iowa and as part and parcel of their roads. The majority opinion overrides the rule universally enforced by the United States Supreme Court, which forbids the alienating of this property or segregating it from the franchises under which it was constructed, or, as Judge Wade said, "chopping it off" from the lines of railway of which it was originally a part, on the ground that some public authority may compel the Des Moines Union Railway Company to permit complainants to use the property as a part of their respective lines of railway on equitable terms.

The following excerpt from the majority opinion shows that, in reaching this conclusion, which is clearly erroneous, the Des Moines Union Railway Company was treated as a terminal company, and therefore not subject to the general statutes, State and Federal, respecting railway companies:

"But it is said that if the railways did so convey all interest in these necessary parts of their roads, such action would be void. The rule invoked is that public carriers will not be permitted to contract away their public usefulness by vitally maiming their lines. Rules of law extend no further than the basic reasons upon which they rest. The usefulness, if not the necessity, of terminal companies is established. That they must, as a general proposition, own their properties in order to raise funds to improve, maintain and operate them efficiently, is certain. The more efficiently and economically a railway can procure terminal facilities, the better and cheaper its services to the public should be. The conditions and compensation for use of such terminals by the railways is subject to public control, so that the railways can not be denied or unreasonably restricted in such usage. The public service is protected. It should be bettered by such a terminal arrangement. Therefore, the rule invoked by plaintiffs has no application to disposition of terminal portions of a railway to a terminal company." (Majority Opinion, foot page 26; top page 27.)

This is a serious and fundamental error. The Des Moines Union Railway Company is a railway company organized under the general railway statutes of Iowa, and is subject to and governed by the general railroad laws of that State, and the provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act. The statutes of Iowa nowhere provide for or recognize a terminal railway company; they do provide for the organization of union railway depots (Sections 2099-2102, Code of Iowa, 1897). The powers of such depot companies are limited to acquiring, establishing, constructing and maintaining union station houses or depots with railroad tracks and other appurtenances. Such companies have no power to operate engines or cars, or to engage in the business of transportation. The Supreme Court of Iowa, in Morgan v. Des Moines Union Railway Company, 113 Iowa 561, 85 Northwestern Reporter 903, decided that this defendant corporation was not organized as a union railway depot, but was organized under and governed by the general laws of the State appertaining to the organization and operation of railroads. It was expressly held in this case that the statutes applying to union railway depots were not applicable to the Des Moines Union Railway Company. Section 2116 of the Code of Iowa, which requires railway companies upon reasonable notice to furnish suitable cars, and to provide suitable facilities for receiving and handling freight at any depot, and to receive and transport the empty or loaded cars furnished by any connecting road, to be delivered at any station, and to return them to such connecting road, does not meet the situation outlined in the majority opinion that:

"The conditions and compensation for use of such terminals by the railways is subject to public control, so that the railways cannot be denied or unreasonably restricted in such usage. The public service is protected. It should be bettered by such a terminal arrangement. Therefore, the rule invoked by plaintiffs has no application to disposition of terminal portions of a railway to a terminal company." (Majority opinion, 26, 27.)

It is apparent that section 2116 does not require one railway to haul the passenger trains or coaches of another railway company to its depots, and to furnish station facilities; nor does it require one company to break and reform the trains of another company; nor does it compel one company to give the use of its team tracks or freight houses, or furnish terminal facilities to another—the very things complainants must have, and which they cannot legally demand, if the decree herein ordered is permitted to stand.

The federal statutes—section 3 of the Interstate Commerce Act—in terms provide that any carrier subject to that act shall not be required to give the use of its tracks or terminal facilities to another carrier. The Des Moines Company is engaged in interstate commerce and is subject to that act.

That there is no federal law or rule which would compel one railway company, or even a terminal company, to thus accommodate another company, is made clear by the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the St. Louis Terminal case. Had there been such a rule the Court would have said in that case that under this rule the St. Louis Terminal Company could be forced to admit a new or outside railway company to cross either of its bridges and to use its terminals, but because of the absence of such a rule the Court entered the decree which it did, virtually dissolving the consolidated corporations.

We believe that we are so familiar with the decisions, state and federal, as to warrant us in saying that no decision can be found that would afford any relief to complainants, if this majority opinion is to stand.

Two points in the opinion stand out clear, and, in themselves, demonstrate that the final result is wrong:

First: The admission that the record shows that the railway corporations did not intend to cut themselves off from the use of the terminal property, or to change the defendant company from a mere holding company or agency to an independent owner;

Second: That under the arrangement between all parties, as shown by the contract of May 10th, 1889, the Des Moines Union was to maintain the property and do all the work of the railway companies at cost and without any profit or income to the Des Moines Union or its stockholders.

Courts of equity do not deprive parties of their property rights when they have done nothing that shows an intention to do so. It is obvious that a corporation which by its own charter undertakes to "acquire, operate and maintain certain property in such manner as to best serve the interests of" another party, and assumes to and does hold and maintain the property, and devotes it to the use and benefit of such other party, without profit to itself, is a mere holding corporation—a mere agency for such other party.

This view is strengthened by the fact that the Des Moines Union Railway Company was created by the railway companies under the apparent necessity of consolidating titles to the right-of-way held in the names of different parties, and giving the property singleness of management to the end that it would best serve the interests of the public and the railway companies, parties to the contract of January 2, 1882.

The fact that subsequent experience proved that it was impracticable for each railway company to do its own switching was a good reason for creating an agency which would do this for them, but was no reason for selling the property to such agency and surrendering all right to have beneficial use of the same, and depriving themselves of the facilities that were absolutely essential to an entrance into this large city.

VIII.

The opinion (page 17) holds that the words in the articles of association, "all the powers exercised by this company shall be in accordance with the terms and spirit of the aforesaid contract," amounts to a mere limitation upon the powers of the corporation.

This is another serious and fundamental error.

When the state clothed Hubbell and his associates with corporate existence, accompanied with a railroad franchise to be exercised for the public good, they and their successors, by accepting the charter, assumed the duty to exercise all the powers conferred upon the corporation; and this provision in the charter was a part of the law of its existence. Instead of being a mere limitation upon its powers, it declared the purpose of the state in creating and endorsing the corporation, and fixed the object which the corporation was to have in view, and prescribed what it must do affirmatively. In this clause of the charter the state did not say what the corporation should not do; nor did it even say what the Des Moines Union as a creature of the state might do; but the state said plainly what the corporation should do—viz: that "all its powers shall be exercised according to the terms and spirit of that contract which the state had placed in its charter to emphasize its command. We repeat, the charter did not say, "You shall not do so and so"—but said: "You shall exercise all your powers to carry out the contract of 1882 according to its letter and spirit." The Des Moines Union did exercise its corporate powers in the way of acquiring and taking over this property, and therefore, whether we regard this provision in its articles as a command from the state, or as a mere limitation upon its powers the controlling effect is the same.

The provision in the contract that the Depot Company might issue mortgage bonds was carried out. The provision implied that the title to the property would be placed in the Depot Company. Obviously the purpose was to enhance the security, and not to defeat the declared purposes of the contract; for how could the Depot Company execute mortgage bonds that would be of value to the parties who were to receive them, unless it held the legal title? It is plain that these two provisions must be construed together and that organizing a corporation to act both as trustee and as a Depot Company were not at all out of harmony with the 1882 contract. Moreover, even if we concede that the contract contemplated a trustee separate from a Depot Company, still, if the parties afterwards concluded to combine them in one entity, this could not be regarded as an abandonment of the declared purpose of the contract.

But it seems a work of supererogation to argue this; for if they intended to abandon the 1882 contract, then why was it ever referred to in the articles of association; and why was it set out in extenso in the articles; and why was it explicit-y stated that the purpose of organizing the corporation was to carry out that contract; and why declare that the powers of the corporation should be exercised not only in harmony with its terms, but with its spirit?

So far we have reviewed the opinion merely on the facts which it recites; but when we go to facts which the opinion does not recite or even refer to, the error is still more apparent.

Defendants in their answer say that the 1882 contract "was tentative only", and that " it was not the purpose or the effect of said contract to evidence any such definite or completed plan" and the majority seem to have adopted this view to the extent of holding that in organizing the Des Moines Union Railway Company, and in turning the property over to its management, the three railway companies abandoned the contract of 1882, and that each abandoned or lost its rights acquired or held under the contract.

Neither of the respondents were parties to this contract, and their understanding of it and its effect, as well as their intent, can not be inquired into; and as to each of the three railway companies, the facts are that from the day of its execution, all three acted under it, and the property was maintained and used by them in full and strict accord with its terms for seven years and four months, and up to the making of the contract of May 10, 1889, which latter contract merely supplemented that of 1882, and was for a definite period only. Moreover, this supplemental contract as construed by the parties and by this Court, is in full harmony with the general plan and purpose of that of 1882.

As the 1882 contract provided for placing the title in a trustee for perpetual holding, and Howe and Dodge agreed to convey to such trustee all parcels of real estate to which they held title on reimbursement of their outlay upon the property, and as the trustee who was to hold the title was to be thereafter named, might not the railway companies create a corporation and have the property conveyed to it to hold as trustee? A corporation would live forever, but a natural person would die; and as the title was to be held in perpetuity, a corporation was necessary. A corporation could be controlled through its stock; but a natural person would be governed by law, and might become troublesome. The railway companies therefore had the strongest reason for creating a corporation and using it as trustee, without thereby abandoning the original contract.

The contract also provided that the railway companies might create a depot company to take permanent charge of the property "upon the terms herein set forth"; and such corporation might issue its mortgage bonds to reimburse the parties to the contract in the amount of their respective portions of the cost of the said purchase and improvements.

How could this "depot company" issue its mortgage bonds with-at being invested with the apparent title to the property which it ca to mortgage? Here, then, was the strongest reason for the railway companies, agreeing on the depot company as the trustee. Surely this was not an abandonment of the 1882 contract, for that contract explicitly provided for a future agreement in respect of a election of a trustee. And well they might agree to make the "depot company" such trustee. But aside from all this, surely it s not meant to hold that when A and B make a written contract, a ubsequent agreement modifying it abrogates the original contract, specially when the parties refer to it in the next contract or arrangement without showing a plain intent to rescind the former contract.

Moreover, the 1882 contract as to who should be trustee to hold the title, and as to a depot company, was general, and contemplated that details should and would be settled and arranged by the parties thereafter. The creating of the Des Moines Union Railway Company and conveying the titles to it and putting it in charge of the property were all in line with the general purpose and terms of the 1882 contract.

IX.

There is another serious and fundamental error in the majority opinion, in holding that the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company and the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, or their successors in title and interest, parted with, or conveyed to, the Des Moines Union Railway Company the rights acquired and held by them under the contract of January 2, 1882.

While the St. Paul Company and the Wabash Company were properly joined in the suit because seeking the same equitable relief, yet, as to the first or main branch of the case they do not derive title, or acquire their rights, from the same source, nor through the same channel. The St. Paul Company is the successor in title and interest of the Des Moines Northwestern Company and the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Company; and the St. Paul Company can not be affected or prejudiced in its rights by anything done by the Des Moines & St. Louis Company subsequent to the January 2, 1882, contract. By that contract, any and all rights or interest of either of the three railway companies were merged in one common interest, and the three companies became tenants in common of the property, subject only to the following conditions: (a) The parties who had advanced money were to be reimbursed, and such reimbursement might be made in bonds secured by mortgage on the property; (b) the title was to go to and be held by a trustee, who was to be agreed upon by all three; (c) each corporation was to contribute to the future cost of maintenance, taxes, and betterments in proportion to wheelage use by each. Subject to these conditions definitely fixed and determined, the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company by that contract became a full and equal co-tenant of the property and any additions, and could not be affected or prejudiced by any act of either or both of its co-tenants thereafter. By that contract, each corporation granted to each of the other two a full use in common with itself of all that it owned or had a right to. It is a universal rule of law that a grant of the fullest use that property is capable of, is the equal of a grant of the property itself; and the grant to the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company of the full right in perpetuity to use in common with the other two, was in fact a grant of a one-third interest in the property. Being thus invested with a one-third interest, what did the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company subsequently do to divest itself of that interest, and transfer it to the Des Moines Union Railway Company? The opinion fails to point to any act or any combination of acts showing such transfer, or a grant to the defendant company. This is because no such act or acts can be found in the evidence, or anywhere in the entire record. All of its acts and those of its successors in title, on this point, are the following:

The Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company went into possession and, together with the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company from the execution of the contract, used the road from Fourth street west, and as soon as the road was also completed to Fourth street from the east in the fall of 1882 it used the entire property to the east city limits and performed its part of the contract. After using it thus for three years, its directors adopted a resolution which recited the making of the 1882 contract and declared a desire to have a corporation organized "for the purpose of taking and holding the property," and appointed defendant Hubbell and another to act for it in organizing "such corporation * * * so to be organized for the purpose of carrying out the objects of said contract of January 2, 1882" (see plaintiff's evidence, original paging 187). Was there in this anything indicating an intent to abandon the contract, or to part with its rights thereunder? On the contrary, it was to carry out that contract.

The articles of association were filed for record December 10, 1884; and on January 1, 1885, the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company stockholders, at their regular annual meeting, on motion of F. M. Hubbell, adopted a resolution which recited the contract of 1882, and that "on the 10th day of December, A. D. 1884, a corporation under the name and style of the Des Moines Union Railway Company was organized as contemplated and provided for in the aforesaid contract * * * and to carry out the purposes of said contract of January 2nd, 1882 * * * Now, therefore, Resolved, that this company accepts and ratifies so far as its interests are affected thereby the articles of incorporation of the Des Moines Union Railway Company as in substantial accord and compliance with the terms and conditions of said contract of January 2, 1882, and undertakes to discharge all the obligations imposed upon it by said contract in order to make effective the purposes of said Des Moines Union Railway Company."

By way of resume, we insist in behalf of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company that in so far as the rights originally held by the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company are now involved, this complainant can not be prejudiced by any conveyance made by any of the other railway companies to the Des Moines Union Company further than were authorized by the contract of 1882.

Looking into the record for the acts of the other remote grantor of the St. Paul Company, we find that it built and was the owner of the road from Fourth street westward; but a portion of the right-of-way had been acquired in the name of G. M. Dodge, who financed the corporation in the building of its entire railway in and outside of Des Moines; and the remainder of the right-of-way from Fourth street westward to Farnham street stood in the name of the corporation. A compliance with the 1882 contract therefore required a conveyance to the trustee of the parcels so held east of Farnham street. By the 1882 contract the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company agreed that this right of way should be conveyed to the trustee, and by its subsequent acts it agreed that the Des Moines Union Railway Company was to be such trustee, for in a resolution of its board of directors it requested Howe and Dodge to transfer to the Des Moines Union Railway Company the property which stood in their names. Now, it must be noted that nothing stood in the name of Howe or Dodge but certain lots of land used for right-of-way. Neither Dodge nor Howe had little to or ownership in the railroad, or in the franchises; so that Howe and Dodge could not transfer or convey any part of or interest in these. True it is, the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company made a quitclaim deed to certain lots; but this did not serve to convey the railroad, nor any franchise; nor did it convey the right to use the railroad under the contract of January 2, 1882. A conveyance of ground used for railroad right-of-way does not carry the railroad nor the right to operate and use the road (see printed argument of J. C. Cook for the C., M. & St. P. Ry. Co., beginning at foot of page 44).

Here was an explicit declaration of its understanding that the Des Moines Union was to act in accordance with the terms of, and was to carry out, that contract; and it is also a declaration of the understanding that was to accompany its future acts or dealings with this new corporation.

But this is not all; for, by a resolution of the Des Moines Union board of directors, that corporation declared its readiness and purpose to act under and according to the terms of the 1882 contract. Moreover, by this resolution, knowledge and notice of this corporate action of the Des Moines & Northwestern was acknowledged by the Des Moines Union Railway Company, and its aforesaid resolution was a reply to it, and this constituted an agreement in writing to act under and according to the 1882 contract.

The records of the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company and those of its successors in interest show no further corporate action. Neither it nor any of its successors in title or in interest ever made any conveyance of anything real or personal; nor did it or any of them ever relinquish or convey to the Des Moines Union the rights acquired by it, or held under the 1882 contract. This remarkable and controlling fact is entirely overlooked by this Court, although distinctly urged in brief and printed argument of Mr. Cook. (See argument of J. C. Cook for Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company, beginning at foot of page 44), and was also urged by Mr. Hanson in his oral argument.

Although all conveyances by others to the Des Moines Union were made before May 1, 1888, yet the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company continued to use the property according to the terms of the 1882 contract, and precisely as it had done before, until the operating contract of May 10, 1889. There was no change except that under that contract the Des Moines Union did the work for all the roads at cost, and acted for the Des Moines & St. Louis Company in maintaining the property at cost, the Des Moines & Northwestern or its successors contributing to such operating and maintenance just as was required by the 1882 contract. It is a travesty upon law and justice to say that the Des Moines Northwestern and its successors in title and interest in some manner and at some time lost all rights under the 1882 contract, except as for a time they were modified by the contract of May 10, 1889; and this Court unanimously and, we think, correctly holds that during that time the Des Moines Union merely acted as an agency for the three railway companies to serve their interests at cost and without profit to itself.

By the 1882 contract the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company acquired a substantial right and interest in perpetuity, and surely it required affirmative corporate action by it or a successor to divest itself of that right and interest, and a Court should not declare such a divestment unless it can point to the very act which shows an intent to alienate.

It must be remembered always that we have here no intervening rights; no innocent third party misled by ignorance of the true facts. Mr. Hubbell testified that he had not changed his position or been induced to purchase stock by anything that occurred after May, 1888, and it goes without saying that as he was an active participator in every act of each of the corporations, he had full knowledge of the true facts

In conclusion we desire to again bring to the attention of this Court the important circumstance that this terminal property was created for the the express purpose of securing to the three companies and their successors the right to use the same in perpetuity without cost to them other than interest upon the actual cost thereof plus the cost of maintenance and operation. The mortgage bonds issued for the acquisition of this property still remain unpaid, and so far these three companies and their successors have had the use of this terminal property without profit to the terminal company. If, now, there is to be a revaluation of this entire property, and the complainants, by grace of the Hubbells, who own five-eighths of its capital stock, are permitted to use it on such terms as they may exact, it is quite apparent that one of their exactions will be the payment of a full rate of interest on such revaluation. This will not only operate injuriously to complainants, but will impose a substantial additional charge upon the public and result in an immense annual income to the Hubbells on a comparatively small investment. In fact, the record warrants the inference that the stock which they now hold was acquired by the manipulation of records and accounts of the Des Moines Northern & Western Railway Company and without the expenditure of a single dollar, and with the admission by Hubbell that "It would be prejudicial to sell any of this stock to outsiders," which was an assurance that he did not purchase the stock as an investment or speculation. The situation which will be brought about if this opinion is to stand will be exceptional in respect of the relation which will exist between this terminal property and complainants' railway systems, for it is a matter of common knowledge that practically all terminals are owned by and operated in the interest of the railway companies using them and that no additional charge is made to the public on account of the use of terminal facilities.

We submit that in view of the public interests involved in this case, the large and cumbersome record, and the many points relied upon and involved in the dispute, and the division of opinion among the Judges, for the reasons heretofore indicated, a reargument and a reconsideration of the main point of the case would be in the interest of justice.

CHICAGO, MILWAUKEE & ST. PAUL RAILWAY COMPANY et al., Appellees.

Petition for Rehearing by Appellees in No. 4885 and Appellants in No. 4886.

Come now the Des Moines Union Railway Company, F. M. Hubbell and Son, F. M. Hubbell and F. C. Hubbell and petition the Court for a rehearing of this cause so far as relates to the "surplus earnings" in controversy between the parties hereto and in support of such petition submit:

I.

The Court erred in holding that the Des Moines Union Railway Company was not entitled to the "surplus earnings" in controversy between the parties, when the contract in relation thereto was clear and unambiguous as to such "surplus earnings" and the contract therefore was not subject to variation from its terms by any conduct of the parties thereunder.

II.

The Court erred in holding that although the "surplus earnings" were not credit items in favor of the Railroad Companies within "a strict construction of the exact wording of the contract" of May 10th, 1889, that none the less they should be allowed as such in view of the history of the transaction and upon the meaning to be given to the contract in its entirety.

The construction given to the contract by the parties from January 1892 until just before this suit was brought was in entire accord with the exact wording of the contract and the paragraph of the contract relative to the credit items to be allowed the railroad companies was not qualified in any way by any other provision of the contract.

III.

The Court erred in holding that the "subsequent contract of July 31st, 1897, does not affect this controversy."

When the contract of July 31st, 1897, was entered into by the parties, they had, pursuant to the express terms of the contract of May 10th, 1889, for more than five years continuously and consecutively withheld such "surplus earnings" from the credits to which the railroad companies were entitled in determining the payments to be made by them for the services rendered to them by the Des Moines Union Railway Company and the contract of July 31st, 1897, was designed to and did affirm the express terms of the contract of May 10th, 1889, as stating the true intent and meaning of the parties thereto.

IV.

The statement in the annual reports of the Des Moines Union Railway Company from 1888 to 1894, that it was simply a representative company acting as an agency for the railway companies, performing all necessary work for them, and charging each at actual cost its due proportion thereof incurred, is not repugnant to the said contract of May 10th, 1889, nor to the construction of the same by the conduct of the parties under it subsequent to January 1892.

V.

The contract of May 10th, 1889, was not and could not be changed by anything contained in said annual statements.

VI.

It was competent for the parties to the contract of May 10th, 1889, to determine how the costs and expenses of the services rendered by the Des Moines Union Railway Company to the railroad companies should be ascertained and what credit items should be allowed therein, and this was done in express terms by paragraphs one to five, both inclusive of section three of said contract and paragraph four of section three provided as to credit items to be deducted from the ascertained costs and expenses of rendering the services only that "there shall be deducted therefrom the amount, if any, which other railway companies may be under obligation to pay by virtue of contracts for the use of said property, or parts thereof, for the preceding month, and the remainder shall be paid by the parties of the second part (the railroad companies) on a wheelage basis, and from January 1892 until a short time before this suit was brought settlements between the parties were made monthly on this basis. And on this basis settlements had been made for more than five years when the contract of July 31st, 1897, was made by which the contract of May 10th, 1889, was affirmed in its very terms, a copy being attached for complete identification.

VII.

The Court erred in finding that the contract of May 10, 1889 was not affected by the contract of July 31st, 1897, with respect to the disposition of said surplus earnings, for the reason that the issue with respect to the disposition of said surplus earnings was, as shown by the evidence, a subject of negotiation between the parties to said contract and as a result of said negotiations the contract of July 31st, 1897, was executed, and by its terms the parties agreed that the subject matter of said surplus earnings should be disposed of as provided by the terms of the written contract of May 10th, 1889.

Appeal from the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of Iowa.

Motion by Appellees in No. 4885 and Appellants in 4886 to Modify Decree.

Come now the Des Moines Union Railway Company, F. M. Hubbell and Son, F. M. Hubbell and F. C. Hubbell and subject to their petition for rehearing herein, move the Court to modify the decree entered herein so as to provide that an accounting be had as to the amount of the surplus earnings which complainants shall be entitled to receive and in support thereof show the Court:

That the opinion and the decree herein provide that this case shall be remanded with directions, among other things, to appoint a master to ascertain the part of the surplus earnings due each of the complainants upon a wheelage basis.

That the contract of May 10, 1889, in Section 3 thereof (Vol 2, p. 481) provides the basis for ascertaining the amounts which shall be paid by complainants for terminal facilities and services rendered by the Des Moines Union Railway Company. By Section 4 of said contract (p. 481) it is provided that the earnings of the Des Moines Union Railway Company to which the complainants shall be entitled to credit shall be deducted from the indebtedness due from the complainants ascertained as provided for in Section three. The bill in this case, after making appropriate allegations with respect to said surplus: (Vol. 1, p. 33)

"First: That said defendant, the Des Moines Union Railway Company be required to render to your orators a full and true account of all moneys earned and received by it for switching services, real estate rentals, and from other sources hereinabove mentioned, giving the dates, sources from which derived, amounts, portions of said receipts expended, the purposes and dates of such expenditures, and the balance now on hand, together with a full and true statement and description of all properties acquired, and improvements made and paid for from such earnings.

Second: That all the said earnings or receipts in the hands of said defendant be paid over to your orators on the basis of their respective wheelage, or credited on said basis upon the monthly bills of said defendant against your orators, for the maintenance, repair and operation and other charges pertaining to the maintenance and operation of said properties."

The petitioner further shows the Court that in the trial of this case in the Court below, no accounting was had and no testimony was introduced upon the issue as to the amount or extent of said surplus earnings or as to whether or not there was indebtedness due from the complainants accruing under Section 3 of the contract of May 10th, 1889, upon which said surplus earnings or a portion thereof, should be credited.

That to carry out and comply with the decree of this Court and to comply with the contract of May 10, 1889, as construed by this Court, it is necessary to include in the accounting, the issue as to the extent and amount of said surplus earnings as to whether or not there is indebtedness due your Petitioner under Section 3 of the contract, upon which said surplus earnings should be credited.

Your petitioner further shows the Court that at the time of the trial of this case in the Court below, it was impossible to have a full and complete accounting either as to the amount of said surplus earnings or as to any indebtedness due Petitioner under Section 3 of said contract upon which said surplus earnings should be credited for the reason that the said contract then had several years to run; said contract expiring by limitation upon the first day of May, 1918.

That in fact the claims of Petitioner against complainants for terminal facilities and services rendered to them under the terms of said contract, and for which it is entitled to compensation ascertained in the manner provided for in Section 3 thereof, amounts to many thousands of dollars; some of which claims are disputed by complainants.

It seems to us unnecessary to say much in the way of arguing the merits of this motion. Clearly the contract of May 10th, 1889, does not primarily require the terminal company to pay to complainants these surplus earnings. The theory of the contract is that the complainants shall pay to the terminal company an amount to be ascertained as provided in Section 3. Under the provisions of Section 4 as construed by the Court, the surplus earnings are to be credited upon the amounts ascertained to be due the terminal company under Section 3, so that complainants are not entitled to these surplus earnings so long as there is anything due under the terms of Section 3. In other words, the primary obligation contained in Section 4 is to credit and not to pay.

In construing Section 3 it is conceivable that a controversy might arise between the parties and indeed such a controversy has arisen. It necessarily follows that preliminary to a determination as to how the surplus earnings shall be divided between complainants and the formulation of a decree requiring said distribution, the amount of these surplus earnings must be ascertained and this involves the question of what is due the terminal company under the provisions of Section 3.

Of course, it may be that our rights with respect to this controversy are preserved by the decree in its present form, because it may be said that the earnings in question cannot be properly described as surplus earnings except to the extent to which they exceed the amounts which should be credited upon the indebtedness due the terminal company, ascertained in the manner provided for in Section 3, although the term "surplus earnings" has so far been used in this litigation to mean earnings of the terminal company other than those "which other railroad companies may be under obligation to pay by virtue of contracts for the use of said property."

However this may be, it seems to us for the purpose of avoiding any controversy over this subject in the future process of this litigation, the decree ought to be amended so as to make it clear that the terminal company should not be required to pay complainants any sums which may properly be used in satisfaction of any claims arising under Section 3 of the contract.

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES.

OCTOBER TERM, A. D. 1918.

CHICAGO, MILWAUKEE & ST. PAUL RAILWAY COMPANY and WABASH RAILWAY COMPANY, Petitioners,

vs.

DES MOINES UNION RAILWAY COMPANY, F. M. HUBBELL, F. C. HUBBELL and F. M. HUBBELL & SON,
Respondents.

PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI.

Now come the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company, hereinafter called the "St. Paul Company", and the Wabash Railway Company, hereinafter called the "Wabash Company", and respectfully petition this Court to grant a writ of certiorari under Section 240 of the Judicial Code to the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Judicial Circuit, to remove therefrom, for review here, the record in the cause therein pending numbered 4885 in equity, wherein your petitioners are appellants, and the Des Moines Union Railway Company, F. M. Hubbell, F. C. Hubbell and F. M. Hubbell & Son are appellees, also the record in the cause therein pending numbered 4886, wherein your petitioners are appellees, and said Des Moines Union Railway Company (hereafter called the Des Moines Company), F. M. Hubbell, F. C. Hubbell and F. M. Hubbell & Son are appellants (a copy of the records being presented herewith), and state:

This is a bill in equity filed in the District Court for the Southern District of Iowa to enjoin the respondents, F. M. Hubbell and F. C. Hubbell, from causing the Des Moines Company (which they dominate), to exclude petitioners from the use and occupation of the parts of their railroads and all their terminal facilities located in Des Moines, Iowa, which petitioners and their predecessors acquired and developed and have operated in the name and under the management of that company as their agent, and to recover income derived from the use thereof now in its treasury (55; 119).*

The railroads and terminal facilities in controversy include a double track railroad extending from a connection with the railroad of the Wabash Company at its terminus at the east limits of the City of Des Moines through the business center of Des Moines over a bridge across the Des Moines River to a connection with the tracks of the railroad of the St. Paul Company at its terminus at Sixteenth street near the western limits of Des Moines, a distance of about three miles; passenger depot, freight depot, sidetracks, switches, roundhouses, turntables and industrial tracks connecting with all industries of importance in Des Moines, together with switch engines and other incidental facilities (1047) (183) (402). The original outlay for the ground and right-of-way was $461,257.00 (478-479) and F. M. Hubbell estimated the value of the property at $2,000,000 (1054).

All of the judges of the Court of Appeals were of opinion that petitioners are entitled to the income in the treasury of the Des Moines Company and that they and their predecessors acquired and owned the joint railroad and terminal facilities, but two of the judges were of opinion (2086-2119) that the petitioners and their predecessors had "gradually let slip from them" the joint railroads and terminal facilities (2115) notwithstanding "there is nowhere any indication that the railways intended any such result and yet such, in our judgment, is the result. This unexpected outcome was the product of several circumstances". The other Judge was of a contrary opinion (2120-2126), but the Court ordered and adjudged that petitioners are entitled to recover the income, and that the Des Moines Company is the owner absolutely of the joint railroads and terminal facilities and that petitioners are not entitled to use and occupy them (2126).

The bill is based on:

(1) A contract dated January 2, 1882, between the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, predecessor in title of the Wabash Company, the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company and the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, predecessors in title of the St. Paul Company, and How and Dodge, their trustees, which stated that said predecessor companies (hereinafter sometimes called the railway companies) "are engaged in the construction of railways converging at the City of Des Moines", and had agreed to extend their railroads into and through Des Moines by constructing joint railroads, and to develop joint terminal facilities therein on ground they had purchased for that purpose and that such joint railroads and terminal facilities should be held in perpetuity "subject to the joint use and occupation of all said railway companies" at actual cost to be shared in accordance with use (120-122).

(2) Articles of incorporation of the Des Moines Company made by F. M. Hubbell and other authorized representatives of the railway companies, on December 10, 1884, which after setting out the above contract verbatim provided among other things (Art. II) that, "all the powers exercised by this company shall be in accordance with the terms and spirit of the aforesaid contract entered into on the 2nd day of January, 1882" (123-129).

(3) Resolutions of the railway companies directing that their joint railroads and terminal facilities be conveyed to the Des Moines Company "to carry out the purposes of said contract of January 2nd, 1882" (Ex. D, 131-132; Ex. F., 134-135; Ex. G., 135, 136, 137), and the resolution of the Des Moines Company "that this Company accepts the transfer and management and operation of said property and assumes control thereof from this date * * * and that it hereby instructs its president to make such order as may be necessary to render such control and management effective as provided in said contract" (Ex. C, 130-131).

(4) A supplemental agreement dated May 10, 1889, between the railway companies and the Des Moines Company, which covered in detail the operation of the joint railroads and terminal facilities until May 1, 1918 (150-159).

Deeds were made to the Des Moines Company (143-150, 455-459), which made its mortgage (459-472) and issued its bonds to reimburse the railway companies and their trustees for the outlays as provided in the contract of January 2nd, 1882 (478-479). F. M. Hubbell, the attorney and agent of the railway companies, at the inception of the terminal enterprise (396-400), purchased the joint right-of-way and terminal ground (1045-1046), became interested in and dominated the companies, predecessors of the St. Paul Company (1096-1097, 1100-1101); was at all times a director and secretary of the Des Moines Company (998) and an officer and director of each of the railway companies (1041, 1042, 1043, 1044). The officers and agents of the company predecessor of the Wabash relied on F. M. Hubbell to promote its interests as well as the interests of the companies he dominated (234, 361-365), but instead he acted adversely and in his individual interest by acquiring alleged assignments of the alleged rights of the company predecessor of the Wabash to three-eighths of the unissued stock of the Des Moines Company under an agreement that it would be sold "only to a railway company who will join with the Wabash in making a contract with the Des Moines Union guaranteeing interest on the bonds, operating expenses, etc." (1059-1060, 1061-1063, 1070, 1602-1603), and that the articles would not be amended otherwise than to permit the holder of one-eighth of stock to elect a director (1601-1602), which stock was finally transferred to the company he dominated (1064-1065, 1069-1070, 1089). He caused the records of the Des Moines Company, without knowledge or consent of the railway companies (231-235, 364-365, 1090-1094, 1601-1602) to purport to show that at a meeting of its stockholders, when in fact no stock had been issued (1068, 1087) or subscribed (1065, 1087, 1090) its articles of incorporation had been amended so as to eliminate all the rights and interests of the railway companies in their joint railroads and terminal facilities and create a colorable claim that the Des Moines Company had acquired them (488, 494), and caused 4,000 shares of its stock to be issued under article III of the alleged amended articles (1068-1069), which falsely stated the stock would be issued in payment for the property, bonds having been previously issued for that purpose (478-479); the stock was therefore issued without consideration (348-349); by mesne assignments F. M. Hubbell and his son, F. C. Hubbell, acquired individually five-eighths thereof or 2,500 shares from the company they dominated in a trade at the alleged price of ten cents on the dollar (1016, 1042, 1064, 1065, 1482, 1483, 1484, 1096, 1097, 1150, 1151) in violation of the agreement that the stock would be sold "only to a railroad company who would join with the Wabash in making a contract with the Des Moines Company, guaranteeing interest upon the bonds, operating expenses, etc." (1059, 1060, 1061, 1070), and by means of said stock they controlled the majority of the directors (themselves and their dummies) of the Des Moines Company (190), and caused it to set up said claim adverse to petitioners.

One-fourth, or 1,000 shares, of the stock is now held by the St. Paul Company, five-eighths, or 2,500 shares, by F. M. Hubbell and son (190), and one-eighth, or 500 shares, by the Wabash Company (169).

Before the Hubbells acquired five-eighths of the stock affidavits were made by Howe in 1889 (501); by Seely, general superintendent in 1890 (502); by Cummins, vice-president, in 1891 (503); by respondent F. C. Hubbell, president, in 1892 (504), and by Cummins (attorney for the Des Moines Company and the railway companies and the personal attorney of F. M. Hubbell) (1059), as vice-president of the Des Moines Company, February 28th, 1893, to the Council of the State of Iowa (505), that the Des Moines Company "is simply a representative company acting as an agency at Des Moines for the" railway companies, "performing all the necessary work for them and charging each road its due proportion of the expense thereby incurred, etc., at actual cost".

The Hubbells acquired five-eighths of the stock of the Des Moines Company January 29th, 1894 (1482-1483-1484) and on February 16th, 1894, Cummins, as vice-president of the Des Moines Company, made affidavit to the Council of State of Iowa that "the Des Moines Company is the owner of the property hereinbefore described, etc." (506). The first knowledge either of the railway companies or their successors had of the claim of respondents Hubbell that the Des Moines Company had acquired the joint railroads and terminal facilities was in October, 1905, when they threatened to cause the Des Moines Company to exclude petitioners from the use and occupation thereof at the expiration of the supplemental or operating agreement, to wit, on May 1, 1918, and to withhold such income (328-329), whereupon in due time petitioners brought this suit (3).

As above stated the Judges of the Court of Appeals concurred in holding (see majority opinion 2086-2119, and dissenting opinion 2120-2126) that the petitioners are entitled to the income in the treasury of the Des Moines Company and that the predecessors of the petitioners acquired and owned the joint railroads and terminal facilities.

But Judge Stone (Judge Smith concurring, and Judge Hook dissenting), held:

First. That the deeds to the Des Moines Company vested in it the absolute title to all interest in the joint railroads and terminal facilities (2094-2110), contrary to (a) the contract of 1882 that they should be held subject "to the joint use and occupation of all said railway companies" (120); (b) the articles of incorporation that "all the powers exercised by this company shall be in accordance with the terms of the aforesaid contract" (127); (c) the resolutions of the railway companies that their joint railroads and terminal facilities should be conveyed to the Des Moines Company "to carry out the purposes of the said contract" (131-139); (d) the resolutions of the Des Moines Company "that this company accepts the transfer and management and operation of said property * * * and assumes control thereof * * * and it hereby instructs its president to make such order as may be necessary to render such control and management effective as provided in said contract" (130-131); (e) the understanding of the persons who actively participated in the transactions as shown by the affidavits made to the Council of State (501-505); (f) the decision of this court in Joy et al v. St. Louis (138 U. S.

l. c. 38). (g) public policy as announced in Central Transportation Company v. Pullman Company (139 U. S. 28-49) and confirmed by all subsequent cases, that a railway corporation can not alienate or convey its right to use its railway in whole or in part without the express consent of the state under whose franchise it was created and acquired and the laws of Iowa do not permit by sale, lease or otherwise, the dismemberment of a railroad or a separation of a railroad or any part from the franchise under which it was created or acquired (Section 2066 of the Iowa Code, 1897—same as Section 1300 of the Code of 1873; O'Connor v. Tennessee Central Railway, 109 Fed. Rep. 935); (h) the contract with the state of Iowa which arose from public taxes voted to the companies' predecessors to the St. Paul Company "for the purpose of aiding" them in constructing a railroad "to a connection with the line owned or operated by the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company (788-827); (i) and the condition on which they were accepted in writing (796-799) pursuant to which the railroad was constructed to Fourth street to a connection with the Wabash road (823), whereby the predecessors of the St. Paul Company and their successors became obligated to the state to perpetually maintain and continuously operate the same (State against Central Iowa Railway Company, 71 Iowa 410); and (j) contrary to the public policy of the State of Iowa announced in said section 2066, which reads as follows:

> "Sale or Lease of Railroad Property—Joint Arrangement. Any railroad corporation may sell or lease its property and franchises to, or make joint running arrangements not in conflict with law, with any corporation owning or operating any connecting railway, and any corporation operating the railway of another shall be liable in the same manner and extent as though such railway belonged to it."

This statute prohibits by implication the dismemberment or breaking up of a railroad or the franchises under which it was constructed and permits a railroad and franchises to be disposed of only as a unit or entirety.

Second. That the articles of incorporation of the Des Moines Company made it a mere agency for the railway companies and gave them complete control and domination over its affairs, which enabled them to enjoy the use and occupation of the joint railroads and terminal facilities at cost, in accordance with their respective use (2110); but that this control and all the rights growing out of it were "later relinquished" to the Des Moines Company (2110) by the alleged amendments to the articles which "took away all control by the railway companies as such over the action of the terminal company * * * and all influence of the 1882 contract as embodied in the articles of incorporation" (2113), and that while "the amendments were never properly adopted" that question was "not open to complainants" (2110) because they were guilty of laches (2113-2114-2115) on the grounds:

(1) That "Hubbell was willing to purchase" the stock of the Des Moines Company "if the control of the railways as such given in the articles was removed; the articles were amended, removing Hubbell's objection; the purchase was made" (2113);

contrary to (a) the 16th paragraph of the answer wherein "these respondents aver that said stock was acquired long after the amendments to the articles of incorporation of the Des Moines Union Railway Company referred to in the amended bill had been adopted and that the two transactions were wholly and entirely independent of each other" (185); (b) to the testimony of F. M. Hubbell who made no "objection" to the articles and did not suggest the alleged amendments or rely on them (1075; 1098-1099-1100). "I do not think I attached any particular importance to those amendments as having any effect at all upon the value of the stock or upon the title held by the terminal company in the terminal property" (1081). "The purchasing committee made no representations to me concerning the title to the property. I never heard the title of the Des Moines Union Railway Company to the terminal property questioned until this suit was brought and I was made one of the defendants" (1078); (c) to the testimony of Cummins that he initiated the amendments (1206, 1210-1211) and his letter of January 27th, 1890, to Dodge that "while Mr. Hubbell was at first disposed to oppose the amendments which I had prepared after full explanation with him I believe that he will support them" and that "they are directed to two purposes, first, to clear up the ambiguity and uncertainty with respect to the amount of stock to be issued on account of the original purchase of the property, and, second, to enable the Des Moines Union Railway Company to act in all matters without the previous authority of three corporations" (1211-1212); (d) the implied agreement between Hubbell and the Wabash purchasing committee arising from the contract between them that the committee "will consent to such change in said articles of incorporation as will permit one director of said company to be nominated by any person or corporation holding one-eighth of the stock of the said Union Railway Company" (1601-1602). This instrument was obtained by Hubbell in connection with the purchase of stock, and amounts to an agreement between the parties that the articles would not be otherwise amended; (c) the undisputed documentary evidence that Hubbell acquired the stock of the Wabash purchasing committee with the express understanding that the sale of the stock "should be made only to a railway company who will join with the Wabash in making a contract with the Des Moines Union guaranteeing interest upon the bonds, operating expenses, etc.," and "that it would be prejudicial to sell any of this stock to outsiders (see Hubbell's letter of June 18, 1888, to Ashley [1060] and Ashley's letter of June 16, 1888 [1059]), and that the "one-eighth interest in the capital stock" retained by the Wabash purchasing committee "shall be sufficient to represent a proprietorship in the company, according to the understanding we had when you were here" (see Ashley's letter of April 5, 1890, in reply to Hubbell's letter of April 1st, 1890 [1061]).

(2) That "for seventeen years thereafter (adoption of the alleged amendments) the railways acted in perfect harmony with the articles as amended. During that time there was no question of their validity and not until this suit was filed in 1907 was there any such attack. The doctrine of laches comprehends and controls the situation," contrary to the conceded fact that the railway companies during the seventeen years operated their joint railroads and terminal facilities under and pursuant to and in compliance with the supplemental or operating agreement (150-159). Hubbell testified "the contract of May 10, 1889," had been executed before he "ever heard of any suggestion from any one respecting the amendment of the articles"; that the method of doing business "was not changed after the amendments"; that "the business was transacted and has been transacted ever since * * * under the contract of 1889" (1099). Hubbell did not claim the alleged amendments would affect in any way the railway companies or the operations of the joint railroads and terminal facilities until after the expiration of the supplemental operating agreement (see paragraph 25, Respondent's answer) (191), and the first time he advised any officer or agent of the petitioners or their predecessors that he claimed adversely to them was in 1905, and this suit was brought shortly thereafter (328-329), and contrary to the elemental rule that mere unwariness of a principal or the beneficiary of a trust can not be set up by an agent or trustee in support of an adverse claim against his principal or beneficiary.

(3) That the railway companies "through successive acts, natural enough, and at the time, apparently harmless (2115) * * * gradually let slip from them that exclusive ownership and control which they had at the beginning so much valued and so carefully guarded (2115)," but that "there is nowhere any indication that the railways intended any such a result, and yet such, in our judgment, is the result. This unexpected outcome was the product of several circumstances" (2113). The railway companies expressly contracted against adverse claims that they had relinquished their use and occupation of their joint railroads and terminal facilities, based either on the express acts or acquiescence or laches of their officers and agents, by the provisions of article 2 (127) of the articles of incorporation which prohibited the Des Moines Company from disposing "of the use of any part of its franchises" without "the assent in writing" of the railway companies, and by article 4 (128), which provides that "no contract, lease or other agreement amounting to a permanent charge upon the property * * * shall be entered into * * * by the board unless the same shall have been first approved by" the railway companies. The "board" could be composed only of nominees of the railway companies (128), and therefore these provisions directly limited the authority of the officers and agents of the railway companies who acted as their representatives on the board of the Des Moines Company and reserved to the respective boards of directors of the railway companies all authority relating to their rights to the joint use and occupation of their joint railroads and terminal facilities. Besides, no assertion or exercise of the corporate power of the Des Moines Company could destroy or affect in any way the property rights of the railway companies in their joint railroads and terminal facilities.

Third. That the Des Moines Company "must furnish its full terminal facilities in so far as reasonably necessary and required by the railways and they will pay therefor such reasonable sum as may be agreed upon between the terminal company and each of the railways, or in default of such agreement, as may be fixed by the proper public tribunal" (2119); but the Court of Appeals did not so decree (2127). The learned Judge had previously stated, "that when the present operating contract is ended the rights of the parties respecting the use of the terminals by the railways are those which spring from their nature as carriers and their physical and business relation to each other as carriers in and entering a large terminal" (2119). The holding, "that the terminal company must furnish its full terminal facilities, etc.," is based on the assumption that the laws of Iowa require it to do so, contrary to the decision of the Supreme Court of that state in the case of Morgan v. Des Moines Union Railway Company, 113 Iowa 55-61, that the Des Moines Company was organized under the general railroad act of that state, which does not obligate corporations formed thereunder to afford their facilities to other companies except pursuant to their agreements.

The District Court held that the income in the treasury of the Des Moines Company and the joint railroads and terminal facilities belong absolutely to the Des Moines Company, but that the railway companies were entitled to use the joint railroads and terminal facilities on the payment of reasonable compensation to be fixed by the court in default of agreement of the parties (2036-2052; 2064-2065) and adjudged and decreed accordingly (2065). Both parties being dissatisfied prosecuted appeals (2068-2084).

The Court of Appeals entered an order and judgment (2127) requiring the District Court to modify its decree so as to "state the complete title to the property in controversy in the" Des Moines Company, and "that the only interest of the railway companies in the property or the management of the corporation is such as flows from stock ownership", and that "the income in the treasury of the company belongs to the railway companies".

On the ground that the decision that the title to the property in controversy is in the Des Moines Company and that petitioners have no right to use and occupy same, adversely affects the public interest (St. L., K. C. & C. R. R. Co. v. Wabash R. R. Co., 217 U. S., l. c. 251), is contrary to public policy (Central Transportation Co. v. Pullman Co., 139 U. S. 28, l. c. 29) (State v. Iowa Central Railway Co., 71 Iowa 410) (Section 2066 Statutes of Iowa) and violates the quasi-public and important private rights involved, petitioners submit that, in view of the division of the judges and the facts to which reference has been made as well as those referred to in the opposing opinions, the matter "is of sufficient importance and is sufficiently open to controversy to make it the duty of this court to issue the writ applied for" (LAU OW BEW, 141 U. S. 583, l. c. 587), review that decision and determine the claim of petitioners that the Des Moines Company holds their joint railroads and terminal facilities under and pursuant to the contract of January 2nd, 1882, and its articles of incorporation, subject to the joint use and occupation of the petitioners at cost, to be shared between them in accordance with their respective use.

THE DES MOINES UNION RAILWAY COMPANY, FREDERICK M. HUBBELL, FREDERICK C. HUBBELL and F. M. HUBBELL & SON, Petitioners,

vs.

THE CHICAGO, MILWAUKEE & ST. PAUL RAILWAY COMPANY and THE WABASH RAILROAD COMPANY,

Respondents.

REPLY TO CROSS-PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI.

The objection to the issuance of a writ of certiorari on the cross-petition herein may be briefly stated as follows: That the question involved is not of sufficient gravity and importance, nor sufficiently open to controversy, to call for the interposition of this court in granting the writ.

Two causes of action are involved in this litigation:

The first cause of action (Rec., 55-106 and 117) involves the right of the St. Paul Company, which owns and operates more than 10,000 miles of railway, and of the Wabash Company, which owns and operates about 2,500 miles of railway, to continue to occupy and use in connection with their systems of railway, as they have for many years last past, about three miles of main line double track, including a bridge over the Des Moines River, and about 27 miles of side and switch tracks, team and warehouse and industry tracks, and a modern passenger depot and freight houses, all located in the center of business and population in the City of Des Moines, the commercial center of Iowa, having a population of about 125,000. This cause of action is called in the opinions of the court below The Main Controversy. (Rec., 2088.) That this cause of action or controversy involves questions of large public interest—and, therefore, questions of gravity and importance, and is sufficiently open to controversy—is clearly shown by the opinion of Judges Stone and Smith and the dissenting opinion of Judge Hook in the court below. (Rec., 2086-2120.)

The second cause of action (Rec., 106-113) relates wholly to the matter of accounting during the life of the operating agreement, which expired May 1, 1918, and involves merely the question of the ownership of certain funds in the treasury of the Des Moines Company. This cause of action in the opinions of the court below is called Surplus Earnings. (Res., 2115.) The court below—all judges concurring—held that these funds belong to the St. Paul and Wabash Companies. (Rec., 2115-2119 and 2120.) No public interest is involved in this cause of action, nor is there involved any rule or principle of law which the interest of the public requires this court to determine, and the cross-petition herein makes no such claim. The only reason assigned for the writ is that if the first cause of action, or main controversy, is to be reviewed here, then the second cause of action should also be reviewed, regardless of the difference in the subject matter and the questions involved. It seems too plain for argument that each cause of action must be dealt with on its own merits, and that as the second cause of action or branch of the suit involves private interests only, and the decision of the court below in respect thereof being unanimous, and no rule of law on which there are conflicting decisions in the different circuits being involved, a writ of certiorari should not be granted for the purpose of reviewing that decision. If the controversy in this litigation had been confined to this single cause of action, and had been decided by the Circuit Court of Appeals as it was decided, there would be no grounds for granting the writ. Aside from this objection, this cause of action, as will be seen by reading the opinions of Judges Stone and Hook, was correctly decided by the court below and the question involved therein—whether the so-called "surplus earnings" belong to the St. Paul and Wabash Companies, as the court below held they do or to the Des Moines Company—is not sufficiently open to controversy to call for a review thereof by this court.

In addition to the facts stated in the opinions of the court below, we call attention to the following: In Section One of the operating agreement (Rec., 480), the Des Moines Company agreed "to erect and furnish for the use of the parties of the second part (the railways), in said City of Des Moines, a union passenger depot, and such additional switches, sidings, freight depots and roundhouses, shops, water tanks and yard appurtenances." A considerable portion of the so-called "surplus earnings" arose from the renting of rooms and space in this passenger depot, the use of which belonged to the railways, and on the full cost of which the railways paid interest, taxes, insurance and the cost of repairs and maintenance. Other portions of such surplus earnings were received from switching that was done with engines acquired at the cost of the railways. Every dollar expended in maintaining and operating these engines and in doing this switching service was borne by the railways and charged to them each month. The receipts from such rentals and switching, when collected, were credited on the monthly bills of the Des Moines Company against the railways "from the time there were any such earnings." (Rec., 327.) The first appearance of any such earnings was a small amount in the month of December, 1889. (Rec., 273.) This was nearly a year after the operating agreement had been executed, and nearly two years after the Des Moines Company took charge of the terminal property. These rentals and earnings arising subsequent to the making of the operating agreement, had there been any dispute concerning their ownership or disposition, might well have called into play the provisions relative to arbitration between the parties found in Section 28 of that agreement. (Rec., 487.) But no dispute arose over them, as it was conceded by all concerned that they should go into the monthly accounts between the Des Moines Company and the railways as a credit on operating expenses in favor of the railways. This was in line with the action of the executive and accounting officers of the Des Moines Company (Rec., 272-313), the formal resolution of the board of directors of that company (Rec., 497), and, as the court below decided, was in full accord with the spirit of the operating agreement. It is significant that the resolution of the board of directors of the Des Moines Company was adopted long after the executive and accounting officers had given the railway companies credit for these receipts on their monthly expense bills. (Rec., 497.)

It is respectfully submitted that no grounds exist for granting the cross-petition herein for a writ of certiorari.

WRITS OF CERTIORARI TO CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE EIGHTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT.

BRIEF AND ARGUMENT OF CHICAGO, MILWAUKEE & ST. PAUL RAILWAY COMPANY AND WABASH RAILWAY COMPANY.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE.

The petitioners, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company, called the "St. Paul Company," and

The Wabash Railroad Company, called the "Wabash Company" and also referred to in the brief and argument herein as complainants filed their bill in the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of Iowa, against Des Moines Union Railway Company, called the "Des Moines Company," Frederick M. Hubbell, Frederick C. Hubbell and F. M. Hubbell & Son, called "the Hubbells," and also referred to in the brief and argument herein as the defendants, to establish their right as equitable tenants in common to the joint and exclusive use in perpetuity of the terminal facilities and property in the City of Des Moines, Iowa, held in the name of the Des Moines Company, and for an accounting of large sums of money, called "surplus earnings," collected from time to time by the Des Moines Company and the Hubbells for the use of such terminal facilities and property. (Rec., 53, 119.)

The railroads and terminal facilities in controversy include a double track railroad extending from a connection with the railroad of the Wabash Company at its terminus at the east limits of the City of Des Moines through the business center of the city over a bridge across the Des Moines River to a connection with the tracks of the railroad of the St. Paul Company at its terminus at Sixteenth street near the western limits of the city, a distance of about three miles; modern passenger depot, freight depot, sidetracks, switches, roundhouses, turntables and industry tracks connecting with all industries of importance in Des Moines, together with switch engines and other incidental facilities. (Rec., 183, 480, 1047.) The original outlay for the ground and rights of way was $461,257 and F. M. Hubbell estimated the value of the property at $2,000,000. (Rec., 478; 1094.) The surplus earnings at the time of the filing of the bill amounted to approximately $500,000. (Rec., 109, 194.)

The Hubbells claim that the complete title to and ownership of the terminal property and surplus earnings is in the Des Moines Company, and as holders of 2,500 shares out of the total of 4,000 shares of the capital stock of that company—1,000 shares of the remainder thereof being owned by the St. Paul Company and 500 shares by the Wabash Company—they have asserted the right to exclude the petitioners from the use of such terminal facilities at the expiration of a supplemental operating agreement, namely, on May 1, 1918, and to distribute such surplus earnings among the holders of such capital stock pro rata. (Rec., 329, 333.)

The Bill.

The bill of complaint as amended avers, among other things, that three railway companies—Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, called "St. Louis Company," Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company, called "Northwestern Company," and St. Louis, Des Moines and Northern Railway Company, called "Northern Company"—predecessors in title to the St. Paul Company and the Wabash Company, acquired terminal property in the City of Des Moines and constructed thereon railroad tracks, switches, sidetracks, turnouts, depots and other terminal facilities for their joint use and occupancy; that pursuant to a contract dated January 2, 1882, said Railway Companies created the Des Moines Company and conveyed to it the terminal property so acquired subject to the joint use and occupation thereof in perpetuity, which use and occupation they reserved to themselves, their successors and assigns; that thereafter additional property was from time to time conveyed to the Des Moines Company, subject to such joint use and occupation; that the articles of incorporation of the Des Moines

Company provided, among other things, that all powers exercised by that company should be in accordance with the terms and spirit of the contract of January 2, 1882; that the affairs of that company should be managed by a board of directors to be nominated by the three Railway Companies, their grantees or assigns, and that the Des Moines Company should act as the agent of the three Railway Companies in operating, financing and developing such terminal property and facilities for their use and benefit; that on May 10, 1889, the Des Moines Company and the three Railway Companies entered into an agreement supplemental to the contract of January 2, 1882, defining in detail the relations and duties of the Railway Companies to each other and to the Des Moines Company in the enjoyment of such joint use and occupation of the terminal facilities and property for a period expiring May 1, 1918; that the Des Moines Company collected and received from time to time, for the use of such terminal facilities and property by others, income aggregating approximately $500,000, called surplus earnings; that the Hubbells unlawfully obtained control of the Des Moines Company by usurping its offices, and just prior to the commencement of this suit had set up the claim that they owned a large majority of its capital stock, were entitled to elect its directors and officers, and that the Des Moines Company owned such termined facilities and property in its own right, free from such joint use and occupation thereof by the St. Paul Company and Wabash Company, successors in interest of said three Railway Companies, except the rights conferred upon them by such supplemental agreement of May 10, 1889, and that it, said Des Moines Company, was entitled to receive and retain in its own right such surplus earnings so as aforesaid collected from others for the use of such terminal facilities and property.

The bill, besides praying for general relief, prays, among other things, that after May 1, 1918, it be declared that the St. Paul Company and the Wabash Company as successors and assigns of the three Railway Companies, are entitled to the joint and exclusive use in common and in perpetuity of such terminal facilities and property, on the terms stated in the contract of January 2, 1882; that the Hubbells be restrained from interfering with, or obstructing, such use; that the amount of such surplus earnings so collected and received from the use of such terminal facilities and property by others be ascertained and that the Des Moines Company be required to pay the same to the St. Paul Company and the Wabash Company. (Rec., 53, 119.)

The Answer.

The answer to the bill admits in substance the making and execution of the January 2, 1882, contract, the incorporation of that contract in the articles of incorporation of the Des Moines Company, that the various persons who had held title to property under that contract had conveyed the same to the Des Moines Company, but denies that such conveyances were made to that company as trustee, and avers that that company owned said property in its own right.

The answer also admits that the Hubbells have asserted the claim that upon the expiration of the supplemental agreement, May 1, 1918, the right of the St. Paul Company and the Wabash Company to use such terminal facilities and property will cease, and that if they should desire to use such terminal facilities and property thereafter, they could do so only under such contract as might be made therefor.

The answer also admits that the Des Moines Company had received for the use of such terminal facilities and property by others income aggregating a large sum.

The answer denies that the St. Paul Company and Wabash Company, or either of them, have any right in such terminal facilities and property except such rights as were acquired under the supplemental agreement of May 10, 1889, or that said companies, or either of them, have any interest in, or right to, the surplus earnings so as aforesaid received by the Des Moines Company for the use of said terminal property and facilities by others. (Rec., 174-196.)

SUCCESSION OF ST. PAUL COMPANY AND WABASH COMPANY.

Wabash Railway Company, herein called the "Wabash Company," on July 1, 1916, succeeded to the title of the railway, property and franchises theretofore belonging to The Wabash Railroad Company, the original complainant in this bill, and was by order duly entered herein substituted in place of The Wabash Railroad Company as party complainant in this bill. (Rec., 2053.) The Wabash Railroad Company succeeded to the title of the railway, property and franchises of the Wabash Western Railroad Company, which latter company succeeded to the title of the railway, property and franchises of the St. Louis Company and of the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company. (Rec., 530-534.)

The St. Paul Company is the remote successor of the Northwestern Company and the Northern Company, the two companies last named having in 1891 consolidated under the laws of Iowa under the name of Des Moines Northern & Western Railway Company. (Rec., 694.) Thereafter, by foreclosure and sale, the railway, property and franchises of the last named company were acquired by the Des Moines Northern & Western Railroad Company, and this last named company in February, 1899, conveyed all its railway, property, franchises, rights and interests to the St. Paul Company. (Rec., 673.)

The St. Paul Company having succeeded to all the property, rights, interests and privileges of the Northwestern Company and the Northern Company, and the Wabash Company having succeeded to all the property, rights, interests and privileges of the St. Louis Company, they likewise succeeded to all the property, rights, interests and privileges of the parties to the January 2, 1882 contract and to all the property, rights, interests and privileges of the St. Louis Company, the Northwestern Company and the Northern Company in the supplemental agreement of May 10, 1889. Ever since such succession by the St. Paul Company and Wabash Company, they have used the terminal properties in Des Moines under said contract of January 2, 1882, and said supplemental agreement of May 10, 1889, and such succession and use of the terminal properties in Des Moines have been recognized by the Des Moines Company and the Hubbells. Neither of said railway companies nor any of their predecessors ever had or now has access or entrance to the City of Des Moines except over the terminal properties in controversy.

Decree of the District Court.

The decree of the District Court adjudged

(a) That the Des Moines Company was organized for the purpose of furnishing terminal services to the St. Paul Company and the Wabash Company and their predecessor Railway Companies, and acquired the terminal property and facilities for that purpose; that such corporate obligation still exists in their favor and is absolute and paramount to any obligation of the Des Moines Company to serve other railway companies, and that after May 1. 1918—the termination of the supplemental agreement of May 10, 1889—if the parties in interest are unable to agree upon the terms under which the St. Paul Company and the Wabash Company might continue to use such terminal property and facilities, the court, upon application, would fix the same.

(b) That the Des Moines Company is the absolute owner of the so-called surplus earnings, and that the St. Paul Company and the Wabash Company have no interest therein except such as accrued to them as stockholders of the Des Moines Company. (Rec., 2065.)

The St. Paul Company and the Wabash Company appealed from the entire decree to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit. (Rec., 2068.) The Des Moines Company and the Hubbells appealed from that part of the decree set out in paragraph "(a)" above. (Rec., 2077.)

DECREE OF THE UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS

The decree of the Court of Appeals adjudged

(a) That the decree of the District Court should be modified so as to state that the complete title of the terminal property and facilities was in the Des Moines Company; that the only interest of the St. Paul Company and the Wabash Company in such property and facilities, or in the management of the Des Moines Company, is such as flows from their ownership of stock of the Des Moines Company. (Rec., 2127.) Hook, Circuit Judge, dissented as to this portion of the decree. (Rec., 2021.)

(b) That the so-called surplus earnings belong to the St. Paul Company and the Wabash Company, and that a master should be appointed under instructions to ascertain the part due to each company upon a wheelage basis. (Rec., 2127.) Hook, Circuit Judge, concurred in this portion of the decree. (Rec., 2021.)

Writs of Certiorari.

The St. Paul Company and the Wabash Company petitioned this Court for a writ of certiorari to review the record in respect of that part of the decree of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals which adjudged that the complete title to the property and terminal facilities is in the Des Moines Company, and that the only interest of the St. Paul Company and the Wabash Company in such property and facilities or in the management of the Des Moines Company is such as flows from their stock ownership in the Des Moines Company. The Des Moines Company and the Hubbells petitioned this Court for a writ of certiorari to review the record in respect of that part of the decree of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals which adjudged that the so-called surplus earnings belong to the St. Paul Company and the Wabash Company. Both petitions were granted by this Court, and this case is here in response to these writs of certiorari. As the so-called surplus earnings branch of this case involves no public interest and no rule or principle of law which public interest requires this Court to determine, and as the decision of the Court of Appeals thereon was unanimous, presumably this branch of the case is here because the other branch, or the main controversy in the case, was brought here. Indeed, this was the ground of the Hubbells' petition.

Questions Involved.

The underlying questions are:

(a) Whether the Des Moines Company holds the title to the terminal property in trust for the St. Paul and Wabash Companies as equitable tenants in common therein and subject to their joint use and occupation upon the terms described in the contract of January 2, 1882, with the result that following the expiration of the Supplemental Agreement on May 1, 1918, the St. Paul and Wabash Companies were, and are, remitted to the rights and obligations of that contract, as held by Judge Hook in his dissenting opinion, or whether the title to the terminal property is absolute and complete in the Des Moines Company, and the St. Paul and Wabash Companies' only interest therein is such as flows from stock ownership, as held by the majority opinion; and

(b) Whether the St. Paul and Wabash Companies are entitled to the so-called Surplus Earnings, as adjudged by the Circuit Court of Appeals—all the judges concurring.

The questions in paragraph (a) are raised by the following specification of error:

SPECIFICATION OF ERROR RELIED UPON.

The court below—Circuit Court of Appeals—erred in holding that the Railway Companies have parted with the exclusive ownership and control of the terminal property which they had reserved to themselves under the January 2, 1882 contract, and that the complete title to this property is in the Des Moines Company, and that the only interest of the St. Paul Company and the Wabash Company in such property, or in the control and management thereof or of the Des Moines Company, is such as flows from stock ownership. (Rec., 2114, 2118.)

STATEMENT OF FACTS.

It is not questioned by any of the parties in interest to this proceeding that the transactions and events out of which has grown the present controversy began with the existence of a trust under which the predecessor Railway Companies of the complainants were the beneficial owners in the property held by the Des Moines Company.

The majority opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals assumes as the premise upon which its conclusions are founded the existence of this trust, and the result reached by it is based upon the theory that through inadvertent developments this trust has disappeared. (Rec., 2096, 2102.) This factor of inadvertence in the alleged dissolution of the trust is stated by that Court in the following language:

> "There is nowhere any indication that the railways intended any such result and yet such in our judgment is the result. This unexpected outcome was the product of several circumstances." (Rec., 2113.)

The dissenting judge in the Court of Appeals states that

> "The excerpt quoted above touches the quick of this controversy." (Rec., 2119.)

And in commenting upon it, he says that the conclusions of the majority are of this significance:

> "In other words the proprietary companies were not cognizant of the trend of the circumstances and the result held to follow though unexpected and not intended by them, is enforced because of legal presumption of intention of natural consequences of acts, regardless of intention in fact. The circum> stances relied on do not appear to me to have the significance attributed to them, but were it otherwise, the presumption should not be so broadly applied to the case of a trust, the destruction of which is claimed by those subject to the disabilities of trustees dealing for themselves." (Rec., 2119.)

The several tests of the rights of the parties must all eventually come to the issue disclosed by the above quotations from the majority and minority opinions of the Circuit Court of Appeals.

In such a situation it is believed that the facts of the case can be presented most significantly by classifying them in the following three groups:

I. A statement of those facts which were preliminary to the establishment of the trust and were the inducement for the same.

II. A statement of the terms of the trust and of its development in the corporate form which it eventually took, and in this respect the relation of the defendants Hubbell as the administrators and fiduciaries of the trust.

III. The independent transactions of the Hubbells in respect of the trust property and the several aliquot interests evidenced and measured by shares of stock of the corporate trustee.

I.

A STATEMENT OF THOSE FACTS WHICH WERE PRELIMINARY TO THE ESTABLISHMENT OF THE TRUST AND WERE THE INDUCEMENT FOR THE SAME.

The defendant F. M. Hubbell.

In 1880 the defendant F. M. Hubbell and Jefferson S. Polk were copartners, practicing law, trading in real estate and promoting railroad enterprises in and about the City of Des Moines, Iowa, under the firm name of Polk and Hubbell. (Rec., 998.) The defendant Hubbell was president of and he and his partner Polk and two associates, J. S. Clarkson and J. S. Runnells, were the stockholders of the Narrow Gauge Railway Construction Company, a contracting company which had constructed certain railroad mileage in the vicinity of Des Moines. (Rec., 407, 408; 998.)

The railroad situation at Des Moines in 1880.

At this period the Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific Railway Company, referred to in the pleadings as the original Wabash Company, owned and operated a system of railways lying east and west of the Mississippi River, including a line extending from St. Louis to Albia, a point in the State of Iowa about 67 miles southeast of the City of Des Moines. (Rec., 998.) Polk and Hubbell being interested in a narrow gauge railroad partly constructed to the northwest of Des Moines from Waukee to Adel, a distance of about 7 miles, sought to interest the Wabash Company in the construction of new railroad mileage in and about the City of Des Moines, including the completion and development of the partially constructed road, of which they were the owners. (Rec., 998, 1001.)

The projected railroad construction in which Polk and Hubbell sought to interest the Wabash Company, may be roughly indicated by the letter Y. The stem of the Y represents a proposed extension of the road of the Wabash Company from Albia to Des Moines; the left arm of the Y a line extending northwesterly from Des Moines to Fonda, of which 7 miles of railroad between Waukee and Adel had already been constructed under the charter of a corporation controlled by Polk and Hubbell and known as the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company, hereafter referred to as the "Northwestern Company." The right arm of the Y represents a further projected line to extend in a general northerly direction from Des Moines to the Town of Boone.

A blue print of these roads as subsequently constructed appears in the record at page 197.

As the three projected roads converged at Des Moines, it was also proposed that proper terminals and terminal facilities in Des Moines be acquired for their joint and common use. (Rec., 412, 1001.)

The contracts with the defendant Hubbell and his associated interests.

On December 8, 1880, the defendant F. M. Hubbell, his partner Jefferson S. Polk and J. S. Clarkson and J. S. Runnells, being the same parties who owned and controlled the capital stock of the Narrow Gauge Railway Construction Company, entered into a contract with the Wabash Company providing for the construction of a line in extension of the line of that company along the stem of the Y from Albia to Des Moines, this line to be constructed at the cost of the Wabash Company in the name of the St. Louis Company, a corporation which the defendant Hubbell and his associates contracted to organize. This contract provided in substance that the defendant Hubbell and his associates would incorporate the St. Louis Company with a capital stock of two million dollars and authorized to construct a railroad from Des Moines, Iowa, to Albia in said state. They were to give their time, personal attention to and act as directors and officers of this enterprise, so far as necessary to locate and economically construct the railroad, but subject to the approval of the Wabash Company. They were personally to exert themselves to procure subsidies in aid of the line and donations of lands, stations, right of way and other benefits in aid of its construction. They were to receive as compensation for their services, in all of the above respects from the time of the execution of the contract made by them to the completion of the railroad, the sum of $10,000 in money and a further sum of five per cent of the amount of all subsidies which should be actually paid, and five per cent of the value of donations in lands for right of way or station purposes and five per cent of the value of all other aid to the construction of the railroad accepted by the Wabash Company. (Rec., 396.)

The contract also provided that the defendant Hubbell and his three associates should each subscribe for one share of the stock, and that the balance of the stock should be subscribed for by a nominee of the Wabash Company, who should undertake to make payment of his subscription by constructing the proposed railroad. (Rec., 398.) James F. How became the nominee of the Wabash Company, and so subscribed for the balance of the stock, and the road was constructed by the Wabash Company in his name as contractor. (Rec., 999.)

On the same date with that of the above contract, namely, December 8, 1880, the line hereinbefore mentioned as controlled by Hubbell and his associates, namely, the Northwestern Company and a corporation named the Narrow Gauge Railway Construction Company, also owned and controlled by the same parties, entered into a contract with the Wabash Company, providing for the completion of the line of the Northwestern Company along the left arm of the Y from Des Moines to Fonda. This contract provided that the line should be constructed by the Construction Company in consideration of $7,000 per mile of bonds of the Wabash

Company, to be secured in part by a mortgage given by the Northwestern Company upon the proposed road, the stock of the Northwestern Company to be equally divided between the Construction Company representing Hubbell and his associates, and the Wabash Company. (Rec., 400.)

The contract also provided that, in order to supply the Construction Company with funds, the Wabash Company would purchase the mortgage bonds deliverable to the Construction Company on the basis of 95 per cent of their par value. (Rec., 406.) This formality was not followed, but the Wabash Company, instead of actually delivering the bonds to the Construction Company, provided it with funds direct by selling the bonds in the market. (Rec., 1001.)

No contract covering the construction of the line northwardly from Des Moines to Boone, along the right arm of the Y, appears in the record, the financing of this road having been undertaken by Gen. Grenville M. Dodge, as an independent enterprise. However, the actual construction work was performed by the Narrow Gauge Construction Company, which company operated from the office of Polk and Hubbell in the City of Des Moines. (Rec., 1170, 1180.)

The corporate organization of the three railway companies mentioned above.

On December 15, 1880, Polk, Clarkson, Runnells and Hubbell, in pursuance of the contract first mentioned above, incorporated the St. Louis Company under the laws of Iowa, for the purpose of constructing the proposed line along the stem of the Y from Albia to Des Moines. (Rec., 408.) Hubbell was made secretary of the company and also a director, and held both positions until 1891. (Rec., 1297.)

On December 23, 1880, the same four individuals, pursuant to the contract last above mentioned, reincorporated said Northwestern Company for the purpose of completing the line along the left arm of the Y from Des Moines to Fonda (Rec., 725.) Hubbell was made treasurer of the company and also a director of the same, and served continuously in both capacities until the reorganization of said company in 1886, except in 1880, when he served as its assistant treasurer. (Rec., 1279.)

On April 4, 1881, the same four individuals, pursuant to an arrangement with said Dodge, incorporated the St. Louis, Des Moines and Northern Railway Company, hereinafter referred to as the "Northern Company," for the purpose of constructing the third line along the right arm of the Y from Des Moines to Boone. (Rec., 728.) Hubbell was made a director of the company and served in this capacity until 1890; he also served as treasurer of the company until 1883. (Rec., 1297.)

The construction work.

The actual construction work of the three lines, as well as the assembling the necessary terminal railways and facilities at Des Moines, proceeded actively during the year 1881.

The work on the line of the St. Louis Company was under the direction of James F. How, the subcontractor above referred to, designated by and representing the Wabash Company. (Rec., 419, 1001.)

The work on the lines of the Northwestern Company and of the Northern Company was under the direction of the Narrow Gauge Construction Company, and the operations were conducted from the office of Polk and Hubbell. (Rec., 1170.)

The assembling of the terminal railways and facilities in Des Moines was also conducted from the office of Polk and Hubbell and was under the personal direction of Hubbell himself. (Rec., 981, 1181.) Hubbell also negotiated the purchase of all the real estate, and where condemnation proceedings were necessary these were conducted by Parsons and Runnells, attorneys for the Wabash Company at Des Moines. (Rec., 1001, 1002.)

The funds for the purchase and acquisition of real estate and other property were advanced by the Wabash Company and Gen. Grenville M. Dodge.

Such of the real estate acquired as was charged to the St. Louis Company, or to the Northwestern Company, was paid for by the Wabash Company and title to the same was taken in the name of James F. How individually or of James F. How, trustee, or was taken in the name of other individuals in the first instance and subsequently transferred to How in one of the above capacities.

Such of the real estate as was charged to the Northern Company was paid for by Dodge and the titles were taken in his name.

Certain property being largely property acquired as the result of condemnation proceedings, was taken in the names of either the St. Louis Company or the Northern Company. (Rec., 1045, 1181.)

At the close of the year 1881, the road of the Northwestern Company was opened for operation, and its trains were running into the Des Moines terminals, and the two other roads were well advanced. (Rec., 1053.) But no formal contract had yet been made for the permanent ownership and operation of the terminals, that is to say, the terminal development was still proceeding under the parol understanding dating back to the inception of the enterprise.

Thus, at this point, the following situation had developed:

The legal title to certain of the properties was in the Northern Company, which it had acquired by condemnation proceedings; the legal title to certain other property was in the St. Louis Company, which it had also acquired by condemnation proceedings; the remaining property was in the title of certain individuals, namely, Dodge and How, without specification of the terms of the trust, but the beneficiaries of the trust were the three railway companies, by or on whose behalf all of the above referred to properties had been acquired and which had provided the money for the acquisition thereof.

It therefore appears that operation had already begun on the terminal properties before any permanent plan for the proper holding of such properties for railroad purposes had been determined upon by the beneficiaries of the trust enterprise.

II.

A STATEMENT OF THE TERMS OF THE TRUST AND OF ITS DEVELOPMENT IN THE CORPORATE FORM WHICH IT EVENTUALLY TOOK, AND IN THIS RESPECT THE RELATION OF THE DEFENDANTS HUBBELL AS THE ADMINISTRATORS AND FIDUCIARIES OF THE TRUST.

As a result of the situation summarized at the conclusion of the foregoing subdivision, the parties to the enterprise entered into a certain contract which created the express trust lying at the foundation of this suit.

The contract of January 2, 1882 (Rec., 411).

This contract was made between the St. Louis Company, the Northwestern Company and the Northern Company as the beneficial owners of the terminal properties and G. M. Dodge, James F. How and James F. How, trustee, as the holders in trust of the legal titles to certain of the terminal properties. The Wabash Company also subjoined its consent to the execution of the agreement by the St. Louis and Northwestern Companies.

This contract states:

(1) That the three companies—St. Louis Company, Northwestern Company and Northern Company—are engaged in the construction of railways converging at Des Moines, and had theretofore agreed upon the purchase, construction and maintenance of terminal facilities at Des Moines, at their joint expense, and that such terminal facilities should be held and used in common as provided in said contract. (Rec., 412.)

(2) That in pursuance of the agreement theretofore made various purchases had been made of property in Des Moines in the name of the St. Louis Company, James F. How individually and as trustee, and Grenville M. Dodge, and the construction of buildings and other improvements upon the property so purchased had been commenced. (Rec., 412.)

(3) That the expense incurred by such purchases and improvements, and such others as might thereafter be made, should be borne one-half by the St. Louis Company, one-quarter by the Northwestern Company, and one-quarter by the Northern Company. (Rec., 412.)

(4) That it was understood that a "Depot Company" might be organized to take permanent charge of the terminal property upon the terms set forth in the contract, and that said "Depot Company" might issue and deliver to the three railway companies its mortgage bonds to the amount of their respective portions of the cost of said purchases and improvements. (Rec., 412.)

(5) That the title to said terminal property should be and remain in a trustee to be named by the three railway companies "but subject to the joint use and occupation of all of said Railway Companies upon the terms herein described." (Rec., 412.)

(6) That How and Dodge declare that their purchases of property were "made in their names upon the trusts above referred to, and agree to quitclaim and convey the same to said TRUSTEE upon demand and reimbursement." (Rec., 413.)

(7) That the St. Louis Company shall be charged with the police control, supervision and maintenance of the terminal property, and the expense thereof to be apportioned between it and the Northwestern and Northern Companies upon a wheelage basis. (Rec., 413.)

(8) That spur tracks shall be built connecting the terminal property or grounds with factories and other sources of trade in Des Moines, which tracks shall be adapted for use for both broad and narrow-gauge tracks. (Rec., 413.)

(9) That in the event that any company whose railroad does not extend to Des Moines shall effect an arrangement for running its trains into Des Moines over the railroad of the St. Louis Company, the Northwestern Company or the Northern Company, such company shall be entitled to the use of all of the terminal facilities upon the payment of a fair sum for rental and its proportion of maintenance, and that railroad companies whose roads extend to Des Moines may be admitted to the use of such terminal facilities by agreement of all said companies. (Rec., 413-414.)

(10) That the grounds or terminal property to be held in common by the St. Louis Company, Northwestern Company and Northern Company under such contract are all east of Farnum street in the City of Des Moines. (Rec., 414.)

Speaking of this contract, Judge Stone, who wrote the majority opinion in the Court of Appeals, says:

(a) "An analysis of this contract shows a statement of the occasion and object of the contract, provisions for the title, the use and occupation, the maintenance and improvement of the property." (Rec., 2091.)

(b) "As to the companies (Railways), the contract not only declared some existing property rights, but attempted to define for the future the rights of title and usage of the terminal property. The title contemplated was a trust. The legal title to be 'in a trustee to be named by agreement of said companies.' The beneficial estate to be in the three companies in proportion to the parts each contributed to the payment therefor. While this proportional interest is not set forth in so many words, it is necessarily inferred from the combined circumstances that the companies were to pay therefor and for improvements thereto in proportion of one-half, one-fourth and one-fourth." (Rec., 2096.)

(c) "The contract terms and intent as to ownership were a trust." (Rec., 2102.)

In connection with the foregoing, particular attention is directed to the third article of the agreement, providing that a "Depot Company" might be organized to take charge of the terminals, the same to be transferred to the Depot Company in such form of title as would permit it to mortgage the property as security for its bonds, and also to the second and fourth articles of the agreement providing that the title to the terminal properties shall be and remain in a trustee to be designated by the parties, but subject to the use and occupation of the terminals by the three beneficiary railway companies.

Following the execution of this contract, the parties in interest continued the work of completeing the three railway lines, the making of improvements of the terminal property at Des Moines by the construction of necessary buildings and facilities, the purchase of additional property, obtaining franchises, and connecting the tracks of the St. Louis Company, which were broad gauge, with the tracks of the Northwestern and Northern Companies, which were narrow gauge, by laying a third rail alongside of the rails of each of the three companies through the terminal property.

It is to be further noted that the enterprise was subsidized by aid voted by various counties through which the lines of the St. Louis, the Northern and the Northwestern Companies extended, and that it received further valuable subsidies in the form of donations of rights of way, among these being a right of way granted by ordinance of the City of Des Moines covering the main line of the terminal railway in the City of Des Moines. (Rec., 443, 788-816, 1049.)

The completion of the railroads.

During the years 1882 and 1883, the construction of the two remaining roads was completed. The line of the Northern Company was put into operation in August, 1882, and on January 4, 1883, stockholders of the St. Louis Company adopted a resolution formally accepting its road as completed between Albia and Des Moines. (Rec., 882, 1427.)

The incorporation of the Des Moines Union Railway Company.

On December 9, 1884, the board of directors of the Northwestern Company adopted a resolution reciting that, it having been agreed by the parties to the contract of January 2, 1882 that the property and franchises theretofore acquired, should be used for terminal facilities at Des Moines, it was desirable that a corporation be organized for the purpose of taking and holding such property and "carrying out the objects of said contract of January 2, 1882," and that F. M. Hubbell and others act for this company in the organization of such corporation. (Rec., 415.)

Accordingly on December 10, 1884, representatives of the Northwestern Company, of the St. Louis Company and of the Northern Company met in the City of Des Moines for the purpose of organizing the Depot Company, which the parties had agreed "might be organized to take permanent charge of the terminal property upon the terms set forth in the contract."

Present at the meeting were:

G. M. Dodge, representing himself and the Northern Company.

J. S. Polk and F. M. Hubbell, representing the Northwestern Company.

John S. Runnells and C. F. Meek, representing the St. Louis Company, and James F. How, both as trustee and in his individual capacity.

The first action of this meeting was the adoption of the following resolution:

"Resolved, That for the purpose of carrying out the objects and purposes of the agreement heretofore, to wit, on the second day of January, 1882, made and entered into by and between the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company and others (which is set out in full in the following Articles of Incorporation), the following be adopted as the Articles of Incorporation of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, to wit:" (Rec., 416.)

Following this resolution, articles of incorporation of the Des Moines Company were adopted which were preceded by the following:

"WHEREAS, The Des Moines & St. Louis, the Des Moines Northwestern and the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Companies have been engaged in the construction of railways converging at Des Moines, Ia., and have secured certain franchises, purchased certain realty and made certain improvements thereon—which they have heretofore agreed should be secured, purchased, made and maintained upon certain agreed conditions, at their joint expense—in accordance with a contract made and entered into by and between said companies and Grenville M. Dodge and James F. How, trustee, bearing date January 2nd, A. D. 1882, and which contract is in words and figures as follows, to wit:

"WHEREAS, each of said railway companies and said parties has expended large sums of money in purchasing and improving the property aforesaid, and in the construction of suitable buildings for the use of said companies, and

WHEREAS, it was provided in the contract aforesaid that a depot company might be organized to take permanent charge of the property, and it was the understanding of the parties that such company might acquire, operate and maintain said property in such manner as best to serve the interest of the parties hereto.

Now, THEREFORE, for the purposes aforesaid, as well as for those hereinafter expressed, the undersigned hereby associate themselves in a body corporate, and adopt the following:

Articles of Incorporation." (Rec., 416-419.)

These articles, besides stating the name of the corporation, its principal place of business, the names of the officers and the first board of directors, the manner of calling meetings of the board of directors, the method by which the articles might be amended, and the term of the corporation, provided:

(1) That the nature of the business to be transacted by the "Depot Company" shall be the construction, ownership and operation of a railway in, around and about the City of Des Moines, including the construction, ownership and use of depots, freight houses, railway shops, and whatever else may be useful and convenient for the operation of the railways at the terminal point in Des Moines, as well as the transfer of cars from one railway to another, or from factories, warehouses and elevators to each other or to any of the railways in or around Des Moines; the "Depot Company" to possess all the powers conferred upon corporations for pecuniary profit under Chapter 1 of Title IX of the Iowa Code and the amendments thereto. (Rec., 420.)

(2) That all the powers exercised by the "Depot Company" shall be in accordance with the terms and spirit of the January 2, 1882, contract. (Rec., 420.)

(3) That the "Depot Company" shall have the right to lease or otherwise dispose of the use of any part of its franchises to any other railway company, provided the assent in writing of the St. Louis Company, the Northwestern Company and the Northern Company shall be necessary before such lease or disposition can be made to any other than the three companies last named. (Rec., 420.)

(4) That the affairs of the "Depot Company" shall be managed by a board of eight directors, four of whom shall be nominated by the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company, two of whom by the Northwestern Company, and two by the Northern Company. This provision applies to any grantee or assignee of either of these companies. (Rec., 421.)

(5) That no contract, lease or other agreement amounting to a permanent charge on the property of the "Depot Company" shall be entered into unless the same shall have been first approved by the St. Louis Company, the Northwestern Company and the Northern Company, or their assignees, and shall have been submitted to a meeting of the stockholders and approved by more than three-fourths of all the stockholders, and that no limitation whatsoever upon any of the franchises of the "Depot Company" shall be made by its board of directors except the same shall have been submitted to and approved by the stockholders. (Rec., 421.)

(6) That the capital stock of the "Depot Company" shall be $1,000,000, divided into shares of $100 each, to be paid at such times and in such manner as the board of directors may determine, and the board is authorized to receive in payment of such stock the property and franchises in Des Moines now held by the St. Louis Company, the Northwestern Company, the Northern Company, How and Dodge individually and How as trustee. (Rec., 420.)

The articles bear the signature of F. M. Hubbell, J. S. Polk and J. S. Runnels. (Rec., 422.)

F. M. Hubbell acted as secretary of the meeting which adopted these articles. (Rec., 423.)

Particular note should be given to that provision of the articles of incorporation above quoted, which reads that:

> "All the powers exercised by this company (The Depot Company), shall be in accordance with the terms and spirit of the aforesaid contract entered into on the 2nd day of January, A. D. 1882." (Rec., 420.)

Particular attention is also called to the article giving a veto power in the management of the affairs of the "Depot Company" to each of the beneficiaries of the trust in the following terms:

> "No contract, lease or other agreement amounting to a permanent charge upon the property of the corporation, shall be entered into by the board, unless the same shall have been first approved by the Des Moines and St. Louis Railroad Company, the Des Moines, Northwestern Railway Company and the St. Louis, Des Moines and Northern Railway Company, or their assignees * * *." (Rec., 421.)

The resolutions of January 1, 1885.

Following the incorporation of the Des Moines Company, the stockholders of the St. Louis Company, the Northwestern Company and the Northern Company, at meetings held January 1, 1885, adopted resolutions reciting the execution of the January 2, 1882, contract, and the incorporation of the Des Moines Company December 10, 1884, and declaring:

(a) That each company accepted and ratified, so far as its interests were affected thereby, the articles of incorporation of the Des Moines Company as in substantial accord and compliance with the terms and conditions of the January 2, 1882, contract, and undertook to discharge all the obligations imposed upon it by said contract in order to make effective the purposes of the Des Moines Company. (Rec., 424.)

(b) That the proper officers of each company be authorized, upon the issuance to it of the share of bonds and stock of the Des Moines Company to which it might be entitled under the contract, to convey, assign and transfer to the Des Moines Company all its right, title, and interest, of whatever name and nature, in and to the real estate, franchises, choses in action and right in possession or contingent, to all the property in the City of Des Moines east of Farnum street then held, enjoyed or claimed by either or all the signatories of said January 2, 1882, contract, or any agent or trustee thereof, purchased, acquired or held in pursuance of that contract. (Rec., 424.)

F. M. Hubbell presented the resolution adopted by the stockholders of the St. Louis Company and the Northwestern Company, and voted for their adoption. (Rec., 423, 426.)

On the same day, January 1, 1885, the first meeting of the board of directors of the Des Moines Company after its incorporation, was held. At this meeting, resolutions were adopted the preambles to which stated that the St. Louis Company, the Northwestern Company, the Northern Company, How both in his individual right and as trustee, and Dodge, had by their officers and by themselves personally notified the Des Moines Company that they had each approved of the organization of the Des Moines Company and had directed their officers and trustees to surrender and deliver to the Des Moines Company the railroad property and franchises mentioned in the contract of January 2, 1882, and had requested the Des Moines Company to take possession of, and maintain and operate the same for the purposes and on the terms mentioned in the January 2, 1882 contract, and that said railway companies and individual signatories to that contract had indicated their desire and purpose to transfer the property to the Des Moines Company in accordance with the terms of that contract, and that it was desirable that the Des Moines Company at once should take possession of such property and maintain, control and operate it and procure all necessary conveyances and transfers of the same and make provisions for, and pay for said property so proposed to be conveyed to it. The resolutions declared:

(a) That the Des Moines Company accepted the transfer and management and operation of such property theretofore owned by the St. Louis Company, the Northwestern Company, the Northern Company and others, parties to the January 2, 1882 contract, and assumed control thereof, and instructed its president to make such order as might be necessary to render such control and management effective as provided in that contract. (Rec., 433.)

(b) That the officers of the Des Moines Company be appointed a committee to confer with the parties to the January 2, 1882 contract, and agree with them severally upon the terms and price at which they would, respectively, assign, transfer and convey such property and franchises to the Des Moines Company, and to procure from them, and each of them, such conveyances and transfers as might be necessary to fully invest the Des Moines Company "with the TITLE, control and management of said properties provided for in said contract of January 2nd, 1882." (Rec., 433.)

(c) That to enable the Des Moines Company to pay for the property and to maintain, operate and improve the same, and purchase other property necessary to carry out its objects, the president and secretary of the company were authorized and directed to issue fully paid capital stock not to exceed $1,000,000, and bonds not to exceed $500,000, and to secure said bonds were authorized and directed to execute in the name of the Des Moines Company a first mortgage or deed of trust covering all the property of the Des Moines Company, and that when the committee had agreed with the parties to the January 2, 1882 contract as to the amount of bonds and stock of the Des Moines Company necessary to be delivered to them, the president and secretary of the Des Moines Company should deliver said stock and bonds to the several parties on receipt of the conveyances and assignments of the property to be made to the Des Moines Company. (Rec., 434.)

Frederick M. Hubbell as a member of the board of the Des Moines Company voted in favor of these resolutions, and as secretary of that company acted as secretary of the meeting. (Rec., 435.)

In considering the significance of the foregoing resolutions it should be noted that the authority and direction given by them to the officers of the Des Moines Company to issue its bonds and stock is to be identified with the terms of the trust declared by the January 2, 1882, contract.

Respecting the issue of bonds authorized by the resolutions, the trust contemplated that the expenses incurred by the purchases and improvements representing the trust property should be borne by the beneficiaries in the proportion of one-half by the St. Louis Company and one-quarter by each of the other two companies and that, through a Depot Company, such beneficiaries might reimburse themselves for this expense by the acceptance of mortgage bonds to be issued to them by such Depot Company to the amount of their respective portions of the cost of said purchases and improvements.

Respecting the issue of stock, the trust authorized the Depot Company to take charge of the property upon the terms of the January 2, 1882 contract and the resolutions in harmony with this idea appointed a committee to confer with the parties to such contract for the purpose of procuring from them such conveyances and transfers as would be necessary to fully invest the Depot Company "with the title, control and management of said properties provided for in said contract of January 2, 1882"; thus, the stock to be issued by such Depot Company became an indicia of ownership of the several proprietors in the trust title to be conveyed to the Depot Company as contemplated by the resolutions.

Supplementary resolutions of November 5 and 8, 1887, of the Des Moines Company and the proprietary companies, providing for the transfer of titles of the trust properties held by the individual trustees to the Des Moines Company.

It is to be noted that more than two years intervened between the passage of the resolutions of January 1, 1885, and the date of the above resolutions. This delay, in providing for the transfer of the trust property, arose by reason of the following circumstances:

On May 29, 1884, receivers were appointed of the railroads and property of the Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific Railway Company. (Rec., 229.)

On July 15, 1885, James F. Joy, O. D. Ashley, Thomas H. Hubbard and Edgar T. Wells, representing the holders of the defaulted bonds of the Wabash Company, associated themselves together as a purchasing committee for the purpose of acquiring at foreclosure sale the properties of the company. (Rec., 540, 1864.)

As already stated, the Wabash Company had advanced to the Northwestern Company the funds necessary to enable it to build the extension of its line from Des Moines northwesterly, and it had received from the Northwestern Company as security for these advances a mortgage upon all the property of the Northwestern Company. This mortgage secured an issue of bonds at the rate of $7,000 a mile, which were in default and had been acquired by the purchasing committee. It further appears that, although under the contract of 1882 the Northwestern Company should have contributed a quarter of the expense of acquiring the terminals held in trust for the proprietary companies and was to receive a quarter share in the trust enterprise, the Northwestern Company had in fact advanced only the sum of $3,000, and was insolvent. (Rec., 478.) This discrepancy, between its obligations under the contract of 1882 and the value of the one-quarter share with which it was to be vested in the trust enterprise, proved an obstacle in the consummation of the conveyance of the trust properties to the Des Moines Company as corporate trustee and the distribution of the trust interest in the several amounts provided for in the contract of 1882. There developed therefrom a negotiation between Polk and Hubbell, representing a half stock interest in the Northwestern Company, with the purchasing committee, above described, of the Wabash Company, which resulted in an agreement dated the 10th day of September, 1887, by the terms of which the purchasing committee of the Wabash Company, which latter Company had advanced the moneys which should have been advanced by the Northwestern Company and had succeeded temporarily to the equitable interest of the Northwestern Company, agreed to furnish to Polk and Hubbell the general mortgage bonds of the Wabash Company held by it, secured by mortgage upon the properties of the Northwestern Company, to enable Polk and Hubbell to bid in the properties of the Northwestern Company at foreclosure sale. (Rec., 1573.)

In consideration of the foregoing, the Northwestern Company was to be reorganized by Polk and Hubbell and the reorganized company was to execute and deliver to the purchasing committee its bond for $450,000, endorsed by Polk and Hubbell, in satisfaction of the Wabash bonds to be delivered, as above described, to Polk and Hubbell and also for the one-quarter interest in the trust properties assigned to the Northwestern Company under the contract of January 2, 1882. (Rec., 1574.)

Simultaneously with the conveyance above mentioned of such one-quarter interest to the reorganized Northwestern Company, the same was to be mortgaged back to the purchasing committee as further security of the bond for $450,000; and, if in the meantime the terminal property should be merged into a terminal company, the bonds and stock received from the terminal company in exchange for this one-quarter interest were to be transferred, in lieu of the property, to Messrs. Polk and Hubbell and retransferred by them to the purchasing committee, to be held by such committee as further security for the payments of the $450,000 above mentioned. (Rec., 1575-1576.)

It thus appears that the above transaction was designed merely to re-establish the Northwestern Company to its original status under the terms of the trust.

When the above arrangement had been agreed upon, the proprietary companies were for the first time in a position to cause conveyance of their trust properties from the individual trustees to the Depot Company under the directions contained in the resolution of January 1, 1885. The resolutions of November 5 and 8, 1887, were addressed to the same objects as the resolution of January 1, 1885, namely, the transfer of the trust properties to the Des Moines Company as corporate trustee, but were more specific and comprehensive in their terms by further providing, in detail, for the distribution of the bonds and stock of the Des Moines Company.

At a board meeting of the Northern Company held November 5, 1887, a resolution was passed requesting How to transfer to the Des Moines Company certain property, which resolution was preceded by a recital that How had purchased such property with funds of the Wabash Company, but had taken the title in his name with the understanding that it should be transferred to the Des Moines Company "under certain conditions." (Rec., 435.) At the same meeting, another resolution was passed requesting Dodge to transfer to the Des Moines Company certain property, which resolution was preceded by a recital that such property was acquired by him under an agreement with the Wabash Company that it should be transferred to the Des Moines Company "under certain conditions." (Rec., 436.)

At a board meeting of the St. Louis Company held November 8, 1887, a resolution was passed requesting How to transfer to the Des Moines Company certain property, which resolution was preceded by a recital that he had purchased such property with funds furnished by the Wabash Company, taking the title in his name with the understanding that he should transfer such property to the Des Moines Company "under certain conditions." (Rec., 437.) At the same meeting, another resolution was passed requesting Dodge to transfer to the Des Moines Company certain property, which resolution was preceded by a recital that such property was acquired by him under an agreement with the Wabash Company that it should be transferred to the Des Moines Company "under certain conditions." (Rec., 438.)

At the same board meeting of the St. Louis Company November 8, 1887, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

> "Resolved, that the president and secretary of this company be and they are hereby authorized and directed to execute to the Des Moines Union Railway Company, a deed conveying to it all its real estate, rights of way, franchise, roadbed and other property of said company lying and being in the City of Des Moines, east of Farnum street, whether the same was acquired by grant from City of Des Moines or by purchase or condemnation, this resolution being offered for the purpose of carrying out the contract of date January second, 1882, entered into by and between this company, the Des Moines North Western Railway Company, the St. Louis, Des Moines and Northern Railway Company and others." (Rec., 439.)

At a board meeting of the Northwestern Company held November 8, 1887, a resolution was passed requesting How to transfer to the Des Moines Company certain property, which resolution was preceded by a recital that he had purchased such property with funds furnished by the Wabash Company, taking the title in his name with the understanding that he should transfer such property to the Des Moines Company "under certain conditions." (Rec., 442.) At the same meeting another resolution was passed requesting Dodge to transfer to the Des Moines Company certain property, which resolution was preceded by a recital that such property was acquired by him under an agreement with the Wabash Company that it should be transferred to the Des Moines Company "under certain conditions." (Rec., 443.)

November 8, 1887, the St. Louis Company notified the Des Moines Company of the passage of the resolutions of its board of November 8, 1887, requesting How and Dodge to convey the property standing in their names to the Des Moines Company, which notice contained a copy of the resolutions as adopted. The St. Louis Company also on the same date, November 8, 1887, notified the Des Moines Company of the resolution adopted by its board November 8, 1887, directing its president and secretary to execute a deed of conveyance to the Des Moines Company, conveying all its rights of way, franchises, roadbed and other property in the City of Des Moines for the purpose of carrying out the contract of January 2, 1882, which notice contained an exact copy of the resolutions as adopted. (Rec., 439.)

November 8, 1887, the Northern Company notified the Des Moines Company of the resolutions adopted by its board November 5, 1887, requesting How and Dodge to convey to the Terminal Company the property purchased by them and standing in their names. This notice contains a copy of the resolutions as adopted. (Rec., 441.)

November 8, 1887, the Northwestern Company notified the Des Moines Company of the resolutions adopted by its board November 5, 1887, requesting How and Dodge to convey to the Des Moines Company the property purchased by them and standing in their names. This notice contains a copy of the resolutions as adopted. (Rec., 442.)

On the same day, to wit, November 8, 1887, a meeting of the directors of the Des Moines Company was held, there being present How, Runnells, Hubbell, Polk and Hays. (Rec., 1299.)

At this meeting a preamble and resolution was adopted which recited the previous action of the St. Louis Company, the Northern Company and the Northwestern Company, as above, and directed > "That on receipt from the Des Moines and Northwestern Railway Company and the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company and the Des Moines & St. Louis Railway Company and from James F. How, trustee, and G. M. Dodge of deeds to this company of the property standing in their name in the City of Des Moines, that the officers of this company be authorized to issue to said James F. How and G. M. Dodge, respectively, an agreement to deliver to them as soon as prepared, bonds for the amount of money, with interest and taxes added, which will be shown by them at that time to have been expended by or through them for or on the property referred to.

> The agreement for the delivery of bonds to be turned over to James F. How, trustee, to state that the same are for the benefit of the purchasing committee of the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company; also that the agreement issued by the officers of this company shall state that certificates can be prepared and the officers of this company will issue to the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company certificates for one-fourth of the stock of the company and to James F. How, trustee, to be delivered to the purchasing committee of the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company certificates for three-fourths of the stock of the company." (Rec., 1300.)

It will be noted that the one-fourth stock interest deliverable under the above resolutions to the Northern Company was the interest originally assigned to it by the contract of January 2, 1882.

It will be further noted that the three-fourths stock interest assigned by the above resolutions to the purchasing committee of the Wabash Company represented its predecessors one-half interest under the contract of January 2, 1882, and, in addition thereto, the one-fourth interest originally assigned to the Northwestern Company and which the purchasing committee had contracted to redeliver to the Northwestern Company as soon as Polk and Hubbell had carried out their undertaking to reorganize the Northwestern Company, as hereinbefore set forth.

Conveyances to the Des Moines Company, pursuant to the resolutions of January 1, 1885, and November 5 and 8, 1887.

The St. Louis Company, pursuant to resolutions of its stockholders of January 1, 1885, the resolutions of its board of directors of November 8, 1887, and the resolutions of the board of the Des Moines Company of January 1, 1885, on February 21, 1888, conveyed by warranty deed all its real estate, rights of way, railroad and franchises in Des Moines to the Des Moines Company. (Rec., 457.) Frederick M. Hubbell signed this deed of conveyance as secretary of the St. Louis Company, and testified that it was made pursuant to the resolution that such conveyance should be made to the Des Moines Company "for the purpose of carrying out the contract of January 2, 1882." (Rec., 1115.)

The Northern Company, pursuant to resolutions of its stockholders of January 1, 1885, and the resolutions of the board of the Des Moines Company of January 1, 1885, by quitclaim deed dated November 7, 1887, conveyed certain lots in the City of Des Moines to the Des Moines Company. (Rec., 455.)

The Northwestern Company made no conveyance to the Des Moines Company, as it had no property standing in its name, the property charged to the Northwestern Company having been paid for by the Wabash Company, and the title taken in the name of How. By the January 2, 1882, contract, the Northwestern Company, in common with the other railway companies, had an interest in the terminal property and the right to use the same in perpetuity.

James F. How as trustee made two deeds of conveyance to the Des Moines Company, one dated November 19, 1887, the other dated April 28, 1888, and one deed individually to the Des Moines Company, dated December 10, 1887. (Rec., 446, 448, 451.) These conveyances were made in pursuance of the resolutions adopted by stockholders of each the St. Louis Company, the Northern Company, and the Northwestern Company, January 1, 1885, the resolutions of the board of the Des Moines Company of January 1, 1885, and the resolutions of the board of directors of the Northern Company November 5, 1887, and of the St. Louis Company and Northwestern Company November 8, 1887. Each of the deeds recited that the property was acquired and held by him in trust and was conveyed for the purpose and upon the terms set forth in the contract of January 2, 1882.

Grenville M. Dodge made his deed of conveyance to the Des Moines Company November 7, 1887. (Rec., 453.) This conveyance was made pursuant to the resolution adopted by the stockholders of the Northern Company January 1, 1885, the resolutions of the board of the Des Moines Company of January 1, 1885, and of resolutions adopted by the board of directors of the Northern Company November 5, 1887, and of the St. Louis Company and Northwestern Company November 8, 1887.

All properties conveyed to the Des Moines Company subsequent to those above enumerated, and all the improvements made upon the terminal properties, were paid for either out of the revenue of the Des Moines

Company hereinafter referred to as "Surplus Earnings" or out of the proceeds derived from the sale of its bonds under its mortgage of November 1, 1887. F. M. Hubbell so testified. (Rec., 1095.)

Des Moines Company's Mortgage.

For the purpose of mortgaging the trust properties to reimburse the proprietary companies for the expense incurred by them in acquiring the terminal properties, as provided by Article Third of the contract of January 2, 1882, the Des Moines Company made its certain mortgage dated November 1, 1887. This mortgage recites, among other things, that for the purpose of paying for the property acquired by the foregoing conveyances, and to aid in the construction of the railway of the company, and to complete the necessary and desirable improvements thereon, the Des Moines Company proposed to issue its bonds in the amount of $800,000, to be dated November 1, 1887, payable thirty years after date, to be secured by mortgage covering all of its property, including the property conveyed by the deeds of conveyance from the St. Louis Company, Northern Company, How and Dodge. (Rec., 460, 461.) The execution of this mortgage was ratified by the stockholders of the Northwestern Company and the St. Louis Company at meetings held, respectively, January 2 and 3, 1890. (Rec., 474, 475.)

Meeting of Stockholders of the Des Moines Company of March 31, 1888. (Rec., 476.)

On March 31, 1888, a meeting of the stockholders of the Des Moines Company was held, at which meeting a board of directors was elected. How, on behalf of the St. Louis Company, nominated four persons to be voted for as directors to represent the interests of that company; F. M. Hubbell, on behalf of the Northwestern Company, nominated himself and one other to be voted for as directors to represent the interests of that company; G. M. Dodge, on behalf of the Northern Company, nominated himself and one other to be voted for as directors to represent the interests of that company. The eight persons so nominated were elected as the board of directors. (Rec., 476.) At this meeting a resolution was adopted that the St. Louis Company, the Northwestern Company and the Northern Company, their successors or assigns, pay the operating expenses, taxes and interest on the bonds that may be issued under the aforesaid Des Moines Company's mortgage. (Rec., 477.) A resolution was also adopted reciting that the Wabash Company had expended $382,110.80, G. M. Dodge $74,088.01, Polk and Hubbell $2,000 and the Northwestern Company $3,058.40, for the property acquired for the Des Moines Company, and it was thereupon resolved that a corresponding amount in the bonds of the company be delivered to these parties respectively, in settlement of such expenditures. (Rec., 478.) This settlement was made and bonds were issued accordingly, pursuant to paragraphs third and fifth of the January 2, 1882 contract, which provided that "said company (the Depot Company) may issue and deliver to the companies parties hereto its mortgage bonds to the amount of their respective portions of the cost of said purchases and improvements. (Rec., 412.)

It is to be noted, in the above connection, that, when the issue of shares of stock of the Des Moines Company was authorized by the resolutions of November 8, 1887, above quoted, the distribution of stock to the proprietary companies therein provided for bore no relation to the several sums of money recited above as being advanced by each in purchasing the trust properties, but that such distribution was to be on the basis of the terms of the contract of January 2, 1882, and as also provided for in the hereinafter mentioned agreement supplemental thereto of May 10, 1889, namely one-half to the St. Louis Company and one-quarter to each the Northern Company and the Northwestern Company. (Rec., 483, 711.)

At the meeting of the stockholders held November 1, 1887, of the Des Moines Company a resolution was adopted providing for an amendment to Article 3 of the Articles of Incorporation of the company so as to increase the authorized capital stock of the company from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000. (Rec., 1298.)

Supplemental agreement of May 10, 1889. (Rec., 479.)

This agreement made between the Des Moines Company of the first part and the St. Louis Company, the reorganized Northwestern Company and the Northern Company of the second part, was entered into for the purpose of regulating the user among the proprietary companies of the jointly owned premises, and providing for the distribution of operating expenses, taxes, interest on bonds and so forth.

Col. Wells H. Blodgett, the general solicitor of the Wabash Company, who was present at the stockholders' meeting of the Des Moines Company, held on March 31, 1888, which authorized this agreement and who prepared the same, gives the following testimony as to why this supplemental agreement was suggested:

> "A. It was considered necessary to have something in addition to the agreement of January 2, 1882, for these reasons: In the first place the agreement of January 2, 1882, made no provision for the payment of interest and did not provide how the interest charge should be distributed among the railroad companies using the property. That was one reason. Another reason was, that the contract of January 2, 1882, did not obligate the railroad companies who were parties to it or their assigns to use the terminal.

Q. Or pay interest?

A. Nor pay the interest. Let me see—there was the interest charge and the matter of using the property, and then the contract of January 2, 1882, put everything, all the expenses of maintenance and operation of all the property on a wheelage basis, and Mr. Hays and General Dodge and all the parties interested thought that the cost of operating the roundhouses should not be on a wheelage basis, but should be distributed among the railroad companies according to the number of engines that were housed and taken care of for each company; and those were the three things wherein, I think, the contract of May 10, 1889, differed from the contract of January 2, 1882.

Q. It was to cover those points?

A. It was for those reasons that all parties agreed it would be advisable to have a supplemental agreement." (Rec., 366.)

As above stated, the agreement had its inception in resolutions passed by the stockholders of the Des Moines Company at a meeting held March 31, 1888. There were present at this meeting Dodge, Polk, Hays, Hubbell, How, Blodgett and Martin. Among other things it was resolved that the Northwestern Company, the Northern Company and the St. Louis Company should pay operating expenses, taxes and interest on bonds after deducting any amount received from other sources for rental, prorated on a wheelage basis. (Rec., 477.)

Col. Blodgett was requested to prepare an agreement for thirty years from May 1, 1888, based on the above resolution and covering in detail the conduct and operation of the Des Moines Company, "said agreement to be approved and executed by all lines now holding an interest in the property." (Rec., 478.)

Said agreement was to provide that if, at the end of six months from the date of the same, either party to the contract should feel that the terms of the same were unjust to them, and gave notice to that effect, it was to be a matter of readjusment.

And it was further resolved

> "that the terms and conditions on which the several lines now interested, or which may hereafter become interested, shall enjoy the use of these terminals, be fully set forth in a supplemental agreement to be made and executed between the Des Moines Union Railway Company and each of the lines using the said terminals." (Rec., 478.)

Pursuant to the resolutions above recited, the supplemental agreement of May 10, 1889, was made and executed. (Rec., 479.)

After reciting, among other things, that the first party was the owner of valuable terminal facilities;

that the second parties have railroads in the State of Iowa which terminate at or run into and through the City of Des Moines and in order to prevent expense and facilitate public convenience, it had become important that the second parties should have the use of such terminal facilities; and that for the protection of the parties thereto and their assigns, "it is important that the rights, duties and liabilities of each in regard to the whole subject matter of said terminal facilities, including their use, care, control, rental, taxes, expenses, renewals, insurance and repairs, shall be stated and defined";

It was agreed:

Section One: That the Des Moines Company was to provide, when its board of directors should deem expedient, a union passenger station and appurtenances for the use of the proprietary companies and shall acquire the additional real estate necessary therefor. (Rec., 480.)

Section Two: This relates to determining the amount of property required for the passenger depot. (Rec., 480.)

Section Three: The second parties agree to pay to the first party certain sums of money to be ascertained as follows. (Rec., 481.)

First: Five per cent interest upon the first party's mortgage bonds, "less any deduction hereinafter provided for."

Second: The cost of maintenance, repairs, taxes and insurance shall be ascertained monthly.

Third: The cost of operation, except the expenses specified in Section Nine (relating to engines), shall be ascertained monthly.

Section Four: This reads:

> "Having so ascertained the monthly aggregate of all the items and sums mentioned in the preceding section, there shall be deducted therefrom the amount, if any, which other railway companies may be under obligation to pay by virtue of contracts for the use of said property, or parts thereof, for the preceding month, and the remainder shall be paid by the parties of the second part in the proportion that the wheelage of each of said parties bears to the entire wheelage of all said second parties during such preceding month." (Rec., 481.)

Section Five: The second parties are to pay on a wheelage basis any sums in default due from other railroad companies for the use of the property. (Rec., 481.)

Section Six: The Des Moines Company is to maintain the premises, provide engines, employees, the moving and handling of cars of the second parties, and to switch cars and handle all freight, and house and care for all engines of the second parties. (Rec., 482.)

Section Seven: The accounts are to be presented monthly. (Rec., 482.)

Section Eight: The contract is made retroactive from May 1, 1888, as relating to rental necessary to pay interest upon mortgage bonds. (Rec., 482.)

Section Nine: This provides for the distribution of expense for caring for and repairing engines and operating engine houses. (Rec., 482.)

Section Ten: This provides that upon default in payment by one of the parties, the first party may, "with the consent of the remaining parties of the second part," assign the rights of such defaulting party to any other party for such sum as the board of directors of the first party may determine. (Rec., 483.)

Section Eleven: "The directors of the party of the first part hereto shall appoint an executive committee, of which each party of the second part shall have one member as its representative." (Rec., 483.)

Section Twelve: The executive committee is to appoint the managing superintendent of the terminal properties, subject to the approval of the board of directors. (Rec., 483.)

Section Thirteen: The executive committee is to fix the superintendent's salary. (Rec., 483.)

Section Fourteen: This relates to use of terminal properties by passenger trains. (Rec., 483.)

Section Fifteen: The executive committee, subject to the board, shall make and enforce rules and regulations for the operations of the terminals. (Rec., 484.)

Section Sixteen: This relates to insurance. (Rec., 484.)

Section Seventeen: This provides for the keeping of books and accounts relating to such matters of agreement to be open to inspection. (Rec., 484.)

Section Eighteen: This provides for keeping records of car movements and of all expenditures relating to cars and engines and the handling and switching of the same. (Rec., 484.)

Section Nineteen: This relates to distribution of cost of damages to rolling stock. (Rec., 484.)

Sections Twenty and Twenty-one: These are personal injury and property injury clauses. (Rec., 485.)

Section Twenty-two: This provides that the covenants, conditions and stipulations contained in the contract shall be binding for the term of thirty years from May 1, 1888. (Rec., 485.)

Section Twenty-three: The covenants and agreements of the second parties are several and not joint. (Rec., 485.)

Section Twenty-four: This should be especially noted. It provides that the St. Louis Company, as the owner of one-half of the capital stock of the Des Moines Company, "may sell and transfer one-half of said stock or one-quarter of the whole, to such railway company as may be acceptable to a majority of the parties of the second part, in which case it is agreed that said railway company which may become the purchaser of said stock, may be admitted as one of the parties hereto of the second part upon the same terms and conditions as those stipulated for the other parties of the second part."

It is then provided that only as aforesaid may other railroad companies be admitted to the use of the first party's property without the consent of all the parties of the second part. (Rec., 485-486.)

Section Twenty-five: This authorized the assignment or mortgage by any of the second parties to another railroad company, of all its rights under the agreement, but prohibited a mortgage or assignment of a portion of its rights and privileges therein. (Rec., 486.)

Section Twenty-six: This should also be especially noted. It recites that the second parties are entitled to share in the stock of the first party in the following proportions, to wit: The St. Louis Company, one-half; the Northwestern Company, one-quarter; and the Northern Company, one-quarter. It recites further that no shares have been issued, and provides that as the authorized capital of the Des Moines Company is two millions of dollars, or twenty thousand shares, one certificate of ten thousand shares shall be issued to the St. Louis Company, one certificate of five thousand shares shall be issued to the Northern Company and one certificate of five thousand shares shall be issued to the Northwestern Company, "and all of said certificates shall express upon their face that they are not transferable in whole or in part, without the consent in writing of all the parties of the second part to this agreement," except qualifying shares issued to a member of the board of directors, which shall be retransferable to the company on whose request such shares shall be issued without the consent of the other companies. (Rec., 486-487.)

Section Twenty-seven: This recites that the second parties having obligated themselves to pay as part compensation for the use of the premises, a sum sufficient to pay interest on bonds of the first party, issued or thereafter issued, and provides that the first party will not dispose of such bonds except for the purpose of purchasing with them, or their proceeds, additional terminal property. (Rec., 487.)

Section Twenty-eight: This is an arbitration clause. (Rec., 487.)

The following features of the supplemental agreement should be noted to show its significant relationship as a supplement to the contract of January 2, 1382, creating the trust interests, and as further identifying the proprietary companies with the trust properties.

First (Section 4): The Des Moines Company was not intended to acquire revenue over and above its cost of operation, as amounts derived from other railroad companies were to be deducted from expenses apportionable among the proprietary companies.

Second (Sections 11, 12, 13, 15): The proprietary companies were to control the management and operation of the Des Moines Company through an executive committee of three, each of the three proprietors to have one representative. The executive committee was to appoint the superintendent of the properties and make and enforce the rules and regulations for the use, management and operation of the terminals.

Third (Section 26): (A provision wholly foreign to the ordinary operating agreement made between railroads occupying co-ordinate positions.) The respective interests of the proprietary companies in the trust properties, as provided for in the contract of January 2, 1882, are recited and it is then provided that the authorized capital stock of two million dollars, shall be distributed in the relative amounts so originally assigned, namely:

One-half to the St. Louis Company and one-quarter each to the Northwestern and the Northern Companies, in single certificates, nontransferable except by unanimous consent of the second parties to the agreement.

Fourth (Section 24): The one exception to the above rule was that the St. Louis Company might transfer one-half of its interest, or one-quarter of the whole stock of the Des Moines Company, to such railroad company as might be acceptable to a majority of the parties of the second part. Only as aforesaid were other railroad com-parties to be admitted to the use of the terminals without unanimous consent of the parties of the second part.

Fifth: That with the transfer of an aliquot portion of stock to another railroad company within the limitations of Section 24, went always a concomitant of user on a parity with the original proprietors. Thus the prerogatives of a tenant in common would be vested in each successive railroad stockholder acquiring its stock with unanimous consent (except in the one instant noted) of the other stockholders.

Sixth (Section 5): If any outsider so admitted defaulted in its obligations, the second parties were to reimburse the first party on a wheelage basis for the amount of such default, thus showing the responsibility of proprietors to protect their own interests.

Seventh (Sections 3 and 27): The second parties were to pay the interest on the mortgage bonds and the Des Moines Company had no right to dispose of bonds, except for the purpose of purchasing with them, or their proceeds, additional terminal property or for improving or equipping that now owned by the Des Moines Company. (Rec., 479-488.)

There was no provision for the payment by the proprietary companies of any rental or compensation for the use of the terminal properties, or for the service that the Des Moines Company obligated itself to render to the proprietary companies.

Finally it should be noted that it is the stockholders of the Des Moines Company, in their resolution of March 31, 1888, who are resolving alone that the Northwestern, the Northern and the St. Louis Companies shall assume the expenses, taxes and interest on bonds of the Des Moines Company, as subsequently set out in the agreement of May 10, 1889, and who are providing that said agreement shall "be approved and executed by all the lines now holding an interest in the property." (Rec., 476.) This resolution was unanimously adopted by the stockholders, including F. M. Hubbell. (Rec., 479.)

From the foregoing it seems proper to assert, as an ultimate fact, that the supplemental agreement is, in a court of equity, nothing more than a written agreement between the equitable owners of the terminal property and their own trustee in possession settling the details of operation and accounting until May 1, 1918.

On May 18, 1889, the directors of the Northwestern Company approved and authorized the execution of the same, and on May 25, 1889, a similar resolution was adopted by the directors of the St. Louis Company. (Rec., 1454, 1433.) The agreement was duly executed by the parties thereto on May 25, 1889. (Rec., 1597.)

The amended articles of the Des Moines Company. (Rec., 488.)

In 1886 John S. Runnells, who for many years had been the local attorney of the Wabash Company at Des Moines, resigned to take up work at Chicago. (Rec., 359.) He was succeeded by A. B. Cummins, who was the personal counsel of the defendant Hubbell, and of all the Hubbell interests. At the same time Mr. Cummins was appointed general counsel of the Des Moines Company. (Rec., 1204, 1211, 1233, 1236.) Although General Dodge was at this time nominally the president of the Des Moines Company, he resided at New York and the whole management of the Des Moines Company was left to the defendant F. M. Hubbell, who, in addition to being an officer and a director of the same, was regarded as a confidential agent of the Wabash Company at Des Moines. (Rec., 132-136, 233.)

In January, 1890, Mr. Cummins, acting ostensibly on his own initiative and independently of the defendant Hubbell, set about to procure amendments to the articles of incorporation of the Des Moines Company.

At a meeting of the stockholders of the Des Moines Company held January 3, 1890, at the suggestion of Mr. Cummins

> "James F. How moved that the question of amending the articles of incorporation of this company, as well as the question concerning the issue of stock for the purchase price of the property, be referred to Attorneys W. H. Blodgett and A. B. Cummins for their investigation and recommendation." (Rec., 1307.)

No report was ever made by this committee, and it appears from the correspondence that no conference took place between Blodgett and Cummins, but that Cummins alone redrafted the proposed amendments to the articles of incorporation. In a letter by Cummins to Dodge, dated January 27, 1890, Cummins explains that the amendments were directed to two purposes.

First, to clear up the ambiguity and uncertainty with respect to the amount of stock to be issued on account of the original purchase of the property.

Second, to enable the Des Moines Company to act in all matters, without the previous authority of three corporations. (Rec., 1212.)

In respect to this latter subject matter, he explained in the letter to Dodge:

> "I have endeavored to protect the interest of the minority as fully as it is protected in the present articles, that is to say, under the amendments as now proposed the company cannot do anything of importance without the affirmative vote of the one quarter of the stock which your road will represent or the vote of one of the directors which you will always be able to control. By this arrangement, you will have as effective a negative upon the conduct of the company exerted directly by your stock, as you now have by requiring the previous formal action of the Des Moines & Northern Railway Company. I have given the matter the most careful attention, and while Mr. Hubbell was at first disposed to oppose the amendments which I have prepared, after a full explanation with him, I believe that he will support them. If this reaches you before he leaves New York, it will be well to talk the matter over with him. In any event give me your ideas as fully as you can, and particularly if you do not expect to be here." (Rec., 1212.)

At the time this letter was written, the defendant Hubbell was in New York, endeavoring to purchase an interest in the Des Moines Company. (Rec., 1013.)

On February 5, 1890, as will be set forth more in detail in the next subdivision of facts, Hubbell acquired from the purchasing committee of the Wabash Company one-half of its interest in the capital stock of the Des Moines Company, being one-quarter of the total interest in such stock. (Rec., 1599.)

On February 11th, the purchasing committee made a memorandum of agreement between it and Hubbell, wherein it was provided that the ownership of one-eighth of the stock in the Des Moines Company would permit one director to be nominated by any person or corporation holding one-eighth of the stock in such company. (Rec., 1601.)

The amendments to the articles of the Des Moines Company were passed at a so-called stockholders' meeting held at Des Moines, April 8, 1890. (Rec., 488.) No stock certificates of interest in the company had been issued at this time. (Rec., 711.) The record of the meeting shows as present in person: How, Hays, F. M. Hubbell, Martin, F. C. Hubbell and Cummins, representing each one share, and present by proxy: Dodge and Blodgett, each representing one share. It is then recited that the Northwestern Company was present by Hubbell, its president, the Northern Company by Cummins, its vice president, and the St. Louis Company by How, its president.

It is, however, conceded that no one of these individuals held a proxy authorizing him to represent the interest of the company and that the directors of none of the three companies authorized any action to be taken amending the articles of the Des Moines Company. (Rec., 1165-1169.)

At this meeting the following amendments were adopted upon the vote of the eight individuals above named recorded as owning one share each of the Des Moines Company's stock (Rec., 489):

Article 1: This was not substantially changed. (For original articles see Record, 416.)

Article 2: The principal change in this article was the elimination of the provision that all powers exercised by the company should be in accordance with the terms and spirit of the January 2, 1882, contract, and the right of the company to lease or dispose of the use of any part of its franchise to any other railway company with the assent of the three Railway Companies.

Article 3: This was changed so as to provide, (a) for the increase formerly made by resolutions of March 31, 1888, of the authorized capital stock from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000; (b) the amount of stock to be paid for and actually issued; and (c) that all previous resolutions and issue of such capital stock be set aside.

Article 4: This was changed so as to provide that at all future elections of directors, more than seven-eighths of the votes of all the stock theretofore issued should be required to elect any director, and that as to all matters except the ordinary operation of the property of the company the board of directors could act only upon the unanimous vote of the eight members of the board.

Article 5: There was no substantial change made in this article excepting to provide for the annual election of the officers of the company, and that such officers might exercise such powers and be charged with such duties as usually pertain to their respective offices.

Articles 6, 7 and 8 were not changed.

Article 9: This was changed so that the articles could be amended only by a vote of more than seven-eighths of all the stock instead of by three-fourths.

Article 10: This was not changed.

There were added to the articles five new articles, to wit: Article 11, Article 12, Article 13, Article 14 and Article 15.

Article 11 related to the calling of special meetings of the stockholders.

Article 12 provided that each stockholder should have one vote for each share of stock owned, such vote to be cast either in person or by proxy.

Article 13 provided that it was not necessary in order to enable the company to carry on its business that all its authorized stock be issued.

Article 14 approves, ratifies and confirms the purchase of the property theretofore conveyed to the Des Moines Company, and the conveyances made in pursuance thereof to that company, as well as the execution of the trust mortgage of that company.

Article 15 purports to repeal, strike out and expunge the proceedings of the first meeting of the incorporators of the company held December 10, 1884, with certain preambles, which include the January 2, 1882, contract. (Rec., 416.)

Briefly stated, the effect of these amendments, if valid, was:

(a) To expunge from Article 2 of the original articles the provision that all powers exercised by the company should be in accordance with the terms and spirit of the January 2, 1882 contract, and that the right of that company to lease or otherwise dispose of the use of any part of its franchise to any other railway company could be exercised only on the assent of the three Railway Companies. With these exceptions, there remains no substantial difference between Article 2 of the original articles and Article 2 of the amended articles.

(b) To provide that 4,000 shares, aggregating $400,000, of capital stock together with the first mortgage bonds theretofore issued for that purpose constitute the fair value of the terminal properties acquired by the Des Moines Company. That of such total number of shares 2,000 be issued to the purchasing committee, 1,000 to the Northwestern Company and 1,000 to the Northern Company, and that the remaining capital stock, to wit, 16,000 shares or any part thereof, shall be issued only by authority of a resolution of the stockholders adopted by vote of more than seven-eighths of all the stock theretofore issued.

(c) To provide that more than seven-eighths of the votes of all the stock issued should be required to elect any director of the company, and that the board of directors could act only upon the unanimous vote of the eight members thereof.

(d) To require the vote of more than seven-eighths of all the stock to amend the articles of the company.

(e) To approve, ratify and confirm all purchases of property theretofore conveyed to the Des Moines Company and the conveyances made in pursuance thereof to such company, as well as the execution of the mortgage of that company.

(f) To attempt to repeal, strike out and expunge from the company's records the proceedings of the first meeting of the incorporators of the company, held December 10, 1884.

Particular attention is called to the limitations in the foregoing amendments that more than seven-eighths of the votes of all the stock issued shall be required to elect any director and to amend the articles of the company, and that the board of directors could act only upon the unanimous vote of the eight members thereof. These limitations should be read in the light of the transactions and correspondence hereafter set forth in the third subdivision of facts which establish a definite agreement among the representatives of the three proprietary companies that a one-eighth stock interest in the Des Moines Company shall be sufficient to represent "a proprietorship" in the Des Moines Company.

Annual Reports made by the Des Moines Company to the Executive Council of the State of Iowa for the purpose of the assessment of its properties for taxation by said Council. (Rec., 721.)

On December 31, 1888, 1889, and 1890, and on January 1, 1892 and 1893, the Des Moines Company made an annual report to the executive council of the State of Iowa for the purpose of taxation. In each of these reports appears the following:

> "The Des Moines Union Railway Company is simply a 'Representative Company' acting as an agency at Des Moines for the Wabash Railroad Company, the Des Moines and Northwestern Ry. Company, and the Des Moines and Northern Railway Company, performing all the necessary work for them and charging each road at actual cost, its due proportion of the expense, thereby incurred. (Rec., 721.)"

These reports were under oath and the report for the year 1888 was verified by James F. How, vice president of the Des Moines Company and J. B. Van Dyne, general superintendent.

The report for 1889 was verified by Horace Seeley, general superintendent of the Des Moines Company.

The report for 1890 was verified by A. B. Cummins, vice president of the Des Moines Company, and Horace Seeley, general superintendent.

The report for 1891 was verified by F. C. Hubbell, president of the Des Moines Company, and Horace Seeley, general superintendent.

The report for 1892 was verified by A. B. Cummins, vice president of the Des Moines Company, and J. A. Wagner, superintendent. (Rec., 721-723.)

The fiduciary relations of F. M. Hubbell to the constituent companies in the trust and to the Des Moines Company.

F. M. Hubbell held in such companies positions as follows:

1. The St. Louis Company.
   Director—1880-1891.
   Secretary—1880-1891. (Rec., 1296.)

2. The Northwestern Company:
   Director—1881-1886.
   Treasurer—1881-1883, 1885-1886.
   Asst. Treasurer—1884.

3. Reorganized Northwestern Company:
   Director—1887-1892.
   President—1887-1892.

4. The Northern Company:
   Director—1881-1890.
   Treasurer—1881-1883.
   Secretary and Asst. Treasurer—1884.
   Vice President—1885-1888.
   Asst. Secretary and Treasurer—1889.
   Secretary—1890.

5. The consolidated corporation formed by the merger of the reorganized Northwestern and Northern Companies:
   Director—1891-1895.
   President—1891-1895.

6. The Reorganized Consolidated Company:
   Director—1895-1899.
   President—1895-1899.

7. The Des Moines Company:
   Director—1884, to the time of the institution of the suit.
   Secretary—1884, to the time of the institution of the suit. (Rec., 1296.)

At the date of the reorganization of the Northwestern Company, the firm of Polk and Hubbell, through their ownership of the Narrow Gage Railway Construction Company, had acquired and held one-half of the stock of the Northwestern Company. (Rec., 400, 1104.) Under the reorganization of the Northwestern Company as hereinbefore set forth, Polk and Hubbell acquired a majority of the capital stock of the reorganized company and held the same up to the time of the merger of that company with the reorganized Northern Company. (Rec., 621.)

The controlling interest in the Northern Company at all times was held by General Dodge, although the firm of Polk and Hubbell had acquired a minority interest in the stock through the Narrow Gage Railway Construction Company. (Rec., 1163.)

Upon the merger and consolidation of the reorganized Northern and Northwestern Companies, a majority of the capital stock was acquired by the firm of Polk and Hubbell and was held continuously by the Hubbell interests until the same was sold to the St. Paul Company in 1898.

It thus appears that, at the time of the important transactions involved in this litigation, the defendant F. M. Hubbell was an officer and director of the Des Moines Company and of its three proprietary companies and was the dominating stockholder of the Northwestern Company and of its successor the Consolidated Company.

F. M. Hubbell presented the resolutions adopted by the stockholders of the St. Louis Company and the Northwestern Company and voted for their adoption at the meeting held January 1, 1885, authorizing, among other things, the conveyance to the Des Moines Company of the real estate and franchises of said two Railway Companies in the City of Des Moines. (Rec., 424, 428.)

F. M. Hubbell, as a member of the board of directors of the Des Moines Company, voted in favor of the resolutions adopted by that company at a meeting held January 1, 1885, accepting the transfer, management and operation of the property theretofore held by the several parties acquiring the same in the interests of the three Railway Companies and instructing its president to take such action as should be necessary to render such transfer, management and operation effective as provided in the January 2, 1882 contract. (Rec., 432.)

F. M. Hubbell signed the deed of the St. Louis Company, conveying its title to the properties to be held in the common interest, to the Des Moines Company, as secretary, and testified that such deed was made for the purpose of carrying out the January 2, 1882, contract. (Rec., 457.)

F. M. Hubbell executed the Des Moines Company mortgage, dated November 1, 1887, as secretary of that company. (Rec., 459.)

F. M. Hubbell was present at the stockholders' meeting of the Des Moines Company held March 31, 1888, and acted as secretary of that meeting, which adopted the resolution requesting that the supplemental agreement of May 10, 1889, be made and voted for the same. (Rec., 476.)

F. M. Hubbell signed the supplemental agreement as secretary of the Des Moines Company, as secretary of the St. Louis Company and as president of the Northwestern Company. (Rec., 479.)

Following the execution of the supplemental agreement of 1889, F. C. Hubbell, a son of F. M. Hubbell, and a member of the firm of Hubbell and Son, became the president of and a director in the Des Moines Company and held these offices continuously up to the time of the insituation of the present suit. (Rec., 1183.)

III.

THE INDEPENDENT TRANSACTIONS OF THE HUBBELLS IN RESPECT TO THE TRUST PROPERTY AND THE SEVERAL ALIQUOT INTERESTS EVIDENCED AND MEASURED BY SHARES OF STOCK OF THE CORPORATE TRUSTEE.

On June 12, 1888, Hubbell wrote to O. D. Ashley, president of the Wabash Company, saying:

> "I have been asked several times whether a quarter interest in the Des Moines Union Railway stock could be bought, and, if so, at what price. I, of course, am unable to give any satisfactory answer. If you have a price at which you would be willing to part with a quarter interest in the Des Moines Union Railways Company stock and are willing that I should offer it, I would like to do so. If you do not wish me to offer it for sale, shall I refer the parties to you?" (Rec., 1059.)

On June 16, 1888, Mr. Ashley replied as follows (italics ours):

> "Yours of June 12th received. My impression is that the purchasing committee will be glad to sell a one-quarter interest in the Des Moines Union Railway stocks if they could obtain a fair price for it, but I have always supposed that it would be necessary to confine the sale to such railway companies as would be interested in the station. It seemed to be desirable to offer the stock to the Chicago and Northwestern, if we could get that company to come into the station.
>
> Was there not an understanding or agreement as to the sale of the stock when the Terminal Company was formed and would it not be prejudicial to the interest of the whole to part with the stock to outsiders?
> I should like to hear from you on this point, after which I will bring the subject before the purchasing committee, as soon as possible." (Rec., 1059.)

On June 18, 1888, Hubbell replied to Ashley in part as follows (italics ours):

"Yours of June 16th at hand. I agree with you that the sale of a quarter interest in the stock of the Terminal Company should be made only to a railway company, who will join with the Wabash in making a contract with the Des Moines Union, guaranteeing the interest upon the bonds and operating expenses, etc.

I think it would be prejudicial to sell any of this stock to outsiders, and I understand it, as you do, that the stock cannot be sold without the consent of the different railroad companies who now form the Terminal Company." (Rec., 1060.)

Following the exchange of the above letters, the defendant Hubbell suggested that the purchasing committee surrender to the Des Moines Company a portion of the stock issuable to the St. Louis Company under the resolutions of 1887. This proposal was made in connection with the consideration of a preliminary draft of the supplemental agreement of May 10, 1889, prepared pursuant to the resolutions of March 31, 1888. The proposal was rejected on September 17, 1888, in a letter from James F. How to Polk and Hubbell, reading in part as follows:

"Mr. Ashley is in town and I have just had a talk with him concerning the amendments to the proposed contract for the use of the Des Moines Union Depot that you desire, viz.: that the purchasing committee should surrender one-fourth of their stock for the benefit of the Depot Company. Mr. Ashley says that this is an arrangement which he could not agree to on behalf of the purchasing committee being satisfied that they would not approve the surrender of any of their stock without a consideration." (Rec., 1594.)

In the above connection, attention is called to Section twenty-four as embodied in the final draft of the agreement of May 10, 1889 (hereinbefore summarized), providing that the St. Louis Company, as the owner of one-half of the capital stock of the Des Moines

Company, may sell and transfer one-half of said stock or one-quarter of the whole to such railway company as may be suitable to a majority of the parties of the second part, in which case it is agreed that such railway company may be admitted as one of the parties to the agreement of May 10, 1889, upon the same terms and conditions as those stipulated for the other parties to such agreement; and the further proviso that, except as aforesaid, other railroad companies shall be admitted to the use of the terminal property, only upon the unanimous consent of the constituent companies.

Attention is also called in this respect to Section twenty-six which in providing for the issue of shares to the constituent companies, in the proportions allotted under the contract of January 2, 1882, requires that the certificates therefor shall express on their face that they are not transferable in whole or in part, without the consent in writing of all of the constituent companies.

In the early part of February, 1890, Hubbell went to New York to persuade Ashley to give him an option on one-half of the purchasing committee's interest in the Des Moines Company, that is a one-quarter interest in the Des Moines Company. As a result of this, on February 5, 1890, Ashley, as secretary of the purchasing committee, gave the following option in writing:

> "I will give you for the purchasing committee the option of buying of them $135,000 of the bonds of the Des Moines Union Railway Company and one-quarter interest in the capital stock of that company for $135,000 and accrued interest from November 1, 1889, at any time within ten days from this date. Payment to be made in cash if the option is availed of by you." (Rec., 1599.)

Thereupon Hubbell explained the situation to Dodge, who asked to participate in the purchase, by taking one-half of the optioned stock and bonds. Hubbell consented to this and thereupon closed his option by the following letter addressed to Ashley, dated February 5, 1890 (Rec. 1599):

> "I hereby accept the proposition made by you, for the purchasing committee to me, for the sale to me of $135,000 of Des Moines Union Railway Company bonds, and a one-quarter interest in the capital stock of that company, and hand you now $10,000 and will pay the balance as soon as you deliver the property."

On this letter is endorsed a receipt, dated February 5, 1890, reading:

> "Received of F. M. Hubbell his check for ten thousand dollars on account of $135,000 Des M. U. R. Co. bonds and one-quarter of the stock of said company as per letter written to him by me in behalf of the purchasing committee. O. D. Ashley."

On February 11, 1890, a bill of sale covering one-half of the bonds and one-half of the stock, included in the above option, was executed by Mr. Ashley and delivered to Mr. Hubbell. (Rec., 1601.)

This memorandum of agreement, made between the purchasing committee and Hubbell, recites that in the articles of incorporation of the Des Moines Company it is provided that the Wabash Company shall nominate four directors of the Des Moines Company; that the stock of the Des Moines Company is now held by different parties and in different proportions from what it was when said articles were adopted and that it was agreed therefore between the purchasing committee and Hubbell, who had acquired a one-eighth ownership of the stock of the Des Moines Company, that the purchasing committee would consent to such change in the articles of the Des Moines Company as would permit one director to be nominated by any person or corporation holding one-eighth of the stock of the Des Moines Company. (Rec., 1031.)

The recital above made that Hubbell had acquired a one-eighth ownership was due to the fact that, by virtue of his understanding with Dodge, the one-quarter interest in the Des Moines Company, although optioned by him, was divided between him and Dodge; and at the same time and as part of the same transaction, a similar agreement covering the other eighth was executed by the purchasing committee and delivered to Dodge. (Rec., 1002.)

At the time of the above transaction, Hubbell began negotiating with the purchasing committee of the Wabash for the purchase of an additional one-eighth share of its interest in the Des Moines Company.

On April 1, 1890, he wrote Ashley as follows:

> "In our last interview at your office it was understood that you would talk with Mr. Joy and Mr. Wells of the purchasing committee and write me upon what terms you would sell a one-eighth interest in the capital stock of the Des Moines Union Railway Company. Thinking that this matter might have escaped your memory I beg to say that I would like to hear from you in regard to it." (Rec., 1061.)

Ashley replied on April 5, 1890, as follows (our italics):

> "I have yours of April 1st this morning. The result of my conversation with Messrs. Joy and Wells is a rather vague idea that we ought not to sell $100,000 of the Des Moines Union Railway Terminal bonds and one-eighth interest in the capital stock at less than $115,000 and accrued interest on the bonds, and I do not feel authorized to offer it at any less price. If, however, you will make me a definite bid of the best price you can, I will communicate it to the other members of the committee and will give you an early and definite reply. It must be understood, of course, that a one-eighth interest in the capital stock shall be sufficient to represent a pro- prietorship in the company according to the understandings we had when you were here.'' (Rec., 1602.)

Hubbell accepted the terms proposed and consummated the purchase of the additional bonds and an additional one-eighth interest in the Des Moines Company, on June 5, 1890. (Rec., 1080.)

On June 5, 1890, a bill of sale was made by the purchasing committee to Hubbell, selling him fifty bonds of one thousand dollars each of the Des Moines Company and one-eighth of its capital stock for the sum of $57,763. The bill of sale also provided that, upon payment of the above sum, the purchasing committee would deliver said five hundred shares to Hubbell by a certificate transferred by endorsement; and it further agreed to have the same transferred on the books of the Des Moines Company, so far as the vote of the directors of the Des Moines Company representing the St. Louis Company will secure said transfer. (Rec., 1613.)

Pursuant to the above, in due course, the certificate above provided for was issued to Hubbell.

At a stockholders' meeting of the Northwestern Company held on October 12, 1891, at which meeting it appeared that F. M. Hubbell and F. M. Hubbell and Son held sixty-five hundred shares and G. M. Dodge thirty-five hundred out of a total of ten thousand and four shares, it was resolved to consolidate the Northwestern Company with the Northern Company, pursuant to the terms of a certain agreement, set out in full in the resolution, made between Dodge and Humphreys as first parties and Hubbell as second party. In this agreement Dodge agreed to convey to the consolidated company, among other things, one-eighth of the capital stock of the Des Moines, being the stock acquired by him from the purchasing committee of the Wabash Company, and

Hubbell agreed to convey to the consolidated company one-quarter of the capital stock of the Des Moines Company, being the two-eighths of the stock acquired by him in February and in June, 1890, from the purchasing committee of the Wabash Company, and to receive as consideration for his two-eighths share $60,000 in first mortgage bonds of the consolidated company. (Rec., 1461.)

At the time of the consolidation of the Northern and Northwestern Companies each of the companies held a one-fourth interest in the capital stock of the Des Moines Company, these shares being the shares originally assigned to each of said companies under the contract of January 2, 1882.

In addition to these shares Dodge and Hubbell undertook to transfer to the consolidated company their aggregate three-eighths interest mentioned above, so that it was contemplated that the consolidated company upon its formation would become the owner of seven-eighths of the stock of the Des Moines Company, the other eighth remaining in the hands of the purchasing committee of the Wabash Company.

The parties also agreed that contemporaneously with the consolidation of the Northern and Northwestern Companies, the consolidated company should execute and deliver to the Metropolitan Trust Company of New York a trust mortgage upon all of the properties so acquired by it, except stock of a certain coal company and five-eighths of the capital stock of the Des Moines Company. (Rec., 1462.)

Pursuant to the above arrangement, Dodge and Hubbell transferred their respective interests in the Des Moines Company to the consolidated company and the certificates were issued on January 15, 1892. (Rec., 711.)

Thereafter, pursuant to a resolution passed by the board of directors of the consolidated company on October 4, 1893, said five-eighths ($250,000 par value) of the stock of the Des Moines Company was pledged with nineteen one thousand-dollar bonds of the Des Moines Company to F. M. Hubbell & Son, to secure an indebtedness owing Hubbell & Son by the consolidated company of $122,000. (Rec., 1480-1481.)

On January 29, 1894, at a meeting of the board of directors of the consolidated company, at which were present: Hubbell, Martin, Cummins, Denman and Thompson, a resolution was passed reciting that the company was indebted to F. M. Hubbell & Son in the amount of $128,833.33, which indebtedness was long past due; that the company had in its treasury certain of its first mortgage bonds, amounting to $225,000, which it has been unable to dispose of at 55 per cent of their par value, although in its said efforts said bonds were offered to each of the stockholders of the company, as well as in the markets at said price; that the company was also the owner of 2,500 shares of the capital stock of the Des Moines Company, "which shares of stock have no market value"; that Hubbell and Son have offered to accept said $225,000 first mortgage bonds at 55 cents on the dollar of their face value and have offered to purchase said capital stock of the Des Moines Company at 10 per cent of the par value thereof, and to cancel therefor the debt of the consolidated company to Hubbell and Son, and to assume and pay a certain indebtedness of the consolidated company, amounting to $20,000, to the Metropolitan Trust Company; and which thereupon resolved that the treasurer of the company be authorized and directed to transfer to Hubbell and Son said bonds and said shares of stock, upon surrender of the notes of the consolidated company, evidencing the $128,000 of debt, and upon receiving an agreement from Hubbell and Son to pay the debt due the Metropolitan Trust Company. The records show that this resolution unanimously passed with F. M. Hubbell not voting. (Rec., 1482-1484.)

Although F. M. Hubbell abstained from voting at the meeting, it is undisputed that he was in complete control of the company. Of the seven members of the board of the company, three (F. M. Hubbell, F. C. Hubbell and H. D. Thompson) were members of Mr. Hubbell's family, and a fourth (A. B. Cummins) was the personal attorney for the Hubbell interests. (Rec., 1096.)

Following the pledge of the above shares to Hubbell and prior to the actual purchase of the shares, a meeting of the board of directors of the Des Moines Company was held, to wit: On October 4, 1893, at which the following minute was adopted:

> "The Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company, by its president, F. M. Hubbell, stated that they had found it necessary to transfer 2,500 shares of their stock in the Des Moines Union Railway Company to F. M. Hubbell and Son, by Certificate No. 26, dated October 4, 1893, and asked that the directors of this company consent to the transfer above mentioned."

Thereupon it was resolved that the consent to such transfer be given. (Rec., 1333.)

On the same date these shares were transferred in the name of F. M. Hubbell and Son on the books of the Des Moines Company and continued under that same registered number up to the institution of this suit. (Rec., 711.)

An examination of the records will disclose that no approval of the above transaction was given by Wabash Company or the St. Louis Company, as required pursuant to Sections twenty-four and twenty-six of the Supplemental Agreement of May 10, 1889.

Following the above transaction whereby Hubbell & Son obtained possession of five-eighths of the stock of the Des Moines Company a report was made to the executive counsel of the State of Iowa differing materially from the reports made for the years 1888, 1889, 1890, 1891 and 1892 hereinbefore set out. These earlier reports all stated that the Des Moines Company was merely a representative company acting as an agency at Des Moines for the three proprietary companies. The report for 1893 which was verified by A. B. Cummins, vice president of the Des Moines Company, and J. A. Wagoner, superintendent, the first named being the personal attorney of the Hubbell interests, contained the following statement:

> "The Des Moines Union Railway Company is the owner of the property hereinbefore described and in addition to leasing the same to the Wabash Railroad Company the Des Moines, Northern and Western Railway Company and the Chicago Great Western Railway Company perform certain services for these companies and collect from them as rental for such services the aggregate amount of its expenses, which expenses are paid by the several railway companies in proportion to the use of the property and services rendered, as provided by contracts existing between this company and the said Wabash Railroad Company, the Des Moines, Northern and Western Railway Company and the Chicago Great Western Railway Company." (Rec., 724.)

Agreement of July 31, 1897. (Rec., 506.)

On July 31, 1897, a so-called agreement of ratification and confirmation was entered into between the Wabash Company, the Des Moines Company and the Consolidated Company, F. C. Hubbell signing as president for the last two companies. This agreement recites the existence of the supplemental agreement of May 10, 1889, the parties thereto; that the Wabash Company now operates the St. Louis Company; that the Northwestern Company and Northern Company have ceased to own and operate their respective railroads, and that the consolidated company is now the owner of the same; that the Wabash Company and the consolidated company had been using the terminal properties for a long time past and that it is doubted whether said contract is legally binding upon the Wabash Company and the consolidated company. It is thereupon agreed that the contract shall become binding upon these two last named companies, as successors to their respective predecessors, and it concludes with the statement:

> "that so much of said contract, a copy of which is hereto attached, as relates to the issuance and distribution of the capital stock of the said Des Moines Company, is no longer binding and that the capital stock of the said Des Moines Company is held as follows:
> 500 by the purchasing committee of the Wabash Company.
>
> 1,000 by the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company.
> 2,500 by F. M. Hubbell and Son.
> A list is also given of shares issued qualified directors." (Rec., 506.)

The evidence introduced by the Hubbells in support of their plea of estoppel and laches.

The Hubbells have set up in their answer, among other things, the following:

> "That the facts with reference to the ownership of the terminal property and stock in controversy have been known to the complainants and to their predecessors in interest ever since the dates of the transactions complained of and were so known to the complainants and their predecessors in interest for many years prior to the commencement of this suit and that the complainants have been guilty of laches and their claims are stale and are barred and are not cognizable in equity." (Rec., 193.)

As supporting this plea of estoppel and laches, the Hubbells introduced certain evidence of negotiations occurring in the ten-year period between 1897 and the date of the institution of this suit, between the operating officials of the Wabash and St. Paul Companies and themselves, for an operating contract in substitution for, or in extension of, the supplemental contract of May 10, 1889, all of which negotiations failed.

In so far as these negotiations are concerned, as well as the "series of acts and circumstances" referred to in the majority opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals we ask the Court to keep constantly in mind in connection with the defense of estoppel, namely, that the Hubbells themselves were the officers and directors of the Des Moines Company upon whom the proprietary companies and their respective operating and other officials were accustomed to rely for all information respecting the trust enterprise. Mr. How, who represented the Wabash Company during the development of the enterprise, retired as a director of the Des Moines Company in 1892 and died prior to 1897. (Rec., 1677.) The late Chas. M. Hays, who later was the active representative of the Wabash Company, resigned in 1895 and was succeeded by Joseph Ramsey, Jr. (Rec., 1659.) For all information respecting the terminals Ramsey was dependent on the Hubbells. (Rec., 1666.)

The St. Paul Company was a stranger to the terminal enterprise until 1898, when it purchased the property of the reorganized Consolidated Company and the officials of the St. Paul Company were dependent upon the Hubbells for all information respecting not only the terminal enterprise but also the Consolidated Company.

A careful analysis of certain of the documents offered by the Hubbells in support of their plea of estoppel will develop a studied abuse of this relation of confidence.

It is sufficient in this connection to refer two letters which they themselves have offered in evidence.

On December 2, 1898, following the purchase of the consolidated company by the St. Paul Company, Mr. Roswell Miller, president of the last named company, wrote F. M. Hubbell as follows:

> "I observe that the contract between the Des Moines Union Railway Company and the Des Moines Northern and Western Railroad Company is only for twenty years. I think it should be for fifty years. Have you any objection to extending it for so long?" (Rec., 1765.)

And on the same date Mr. Miller wrote asking Hubbell to send copies of any trackage contracts that were in existence. (Rec., 1766.)

On the following day F. M. Hubbell replied stating that there was no trackage contract except the lease (our italics) with the Des Moines Union Railway Company, a copy of which he had previously given to the St. Paul Company, which was of course the supplemental contract of May 10, 1889. It thus appears that at the very outset of his dealings with the St. Paul Company F. M. Hubbell deliberately suppressed the contract of January 2, 1882. (Rec., 1767.)

The Hubbells' claim that the properties of the Des Moines Company were not held in trust for the use and occupation of the complainants thereby presenting the controversy as to the so-called Surplus Earnings.

No question as to the equitable ownership of the terminal properties by the proprietary companies was ever made until October, 1905, when at a meeting in Chicago between the officers of the St. Paul and Wabash Companies and F. M. Hubbell the disposition of the so-called surplus earnings of the Des Moines Company, which had recently become a subject of controversy, was under consideration.

The history of the controversy as to the so-called surplus earnings is briefly as follows:

At the time of the execution of the supplemental agreement of May 10, 1889, it was contemplated that the only source of revenue of the Des Moines Company, independent of the contributions made by the proprietary companies, would be rentals paid by other railway companies admitted by contract to the use of the terminal properties.

Shortly afterwards, however, other sources of revenue developed. These were the switching of cars to and from industries adjacent to the terminal properties and rentals for unused office space in the Union passenger station.

The question then arose as to the proper disposition of these unexpected revenues.

Under the supplemental agreement of May 10, 1889, all expense incident to the ownership and operation of the terminal properties was charged against the proprietary companies on a wheelage basis and bills therefor were rendered monthly. In determining the amount payable by each proprietary company there was, however, deducted from the bill its proportionate share on a wheelage basis of > "The amount, if any, which other railroad companies may be under obligation to pay by virtue of contracts for the use of said property, or parts thereof, for the preceding month." (Rec., 481.)

It is reasonably clear that switching charges and rentals from the station property are within the purview of the language above quoted, and the subsequent conduct of the parties confirms such construction.

The board of directors of the Des Moines Company at a meeting held February 11, 1891, adopted a resolution ordering:

> "That the rents collected for the use of the company's real estate and the switching charges paid in be credited on the bills of the different tenant companies occupying this company's terminals, giving to each company its share ascertained by wheelage." (Rec., 497.)

This resolution was adopted by the unanimous vote of the eight directors of the Des Moines Company, including the defendant F. M. Hubbell, and particular attention is called to it as it is in line with the provisions of the supplemental agreement that the proprietary companies should have the full use and benefit of the terminal property including the proposed union depot building to be erected for their "use." (Rec., 480.)

Pursuant to the above resolution of the board of directors of the Des Moines Company all revenues from outside sources were credited to the proprietary companies on their monthly bills until January 7, 1892, when the board of directors adopted the following minute:

> "Whereas this company is in need of a cash capital with which to purchase supplies and pay current bills which come in before it receives its monthly revenue from the tenant companies, therefore be it resolved: That until the further action of the board the sums received as rents of real estate and all switching charges shall not be credited upon the accounts of the tenant companies but shall be used for the aforesaid purposes." (Rec., 499.)

On March 1, 1892, the auditor of the Wabash Company wrote to the superintendent of the Des Moines Company inquiring why no credit for switching revenues and rentals of real estate had been made on the bills for the preceding two months.

To this letter the superintendent of the Des Moines Company replied as follows:

"DES MOINES, IOWA, March 2, 1892.

D. B. Howard, Auditor,
Wabash Railway,
St. Louis, Mo.

DEAR SIR:

Replying to yours of the 1st inst. in regard to the allowance of switching, rentals, etc., that should be made on our bills for the months of December and January, I have to say that at a meeting of the executive committee held January 7, 1892, it was decided not to distribute these collections for a period of time until the Des Moines Union Railway Company could accumulate a small fund for working capital. I presume this will continue in effect until January, 1893. You will be furnished each month a statement showing the amount of this rental and your proportion of the same so you can make a charge against the D. M. U. Railway Company and carry it on your books as you see fit for future adjustment.

Yours very truly,
HORACE SEELEY,
Superintendent."

This is written on the letterhead of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, general offices, G. M. Dodge, president, F. M. Hubbell, secretary, H. Seeley, superintendent. (Rec., 338.)

Following the above action of the board of the Des Moines Company the outside revenues derived from switching and real estate rental were accumulated in a separate cash fund to be used as working capital. In the earlier period of the enterprise these earnings were relatively small and a number of years elapsed before a substantial fund had been accumulated. In the meanwhile the Hubbells had caused the consolidated company to transfer to the firm of F. M. Hubbell & Son 2,500 shares of the stock of the Des Moines Company, and when the St. Paul Company and the Wabash Company, having ascertained that the fund had accumulated in an amount greatly in excess of the requirements of the Des Moines Company for working capital, suggested that the excess be distributed among the proprietary companies in accordance with the practice and understanding of the parties, as evidenced by the resolution of February 11, 1891, the Hubbells failed to comply with the request. The subject became a matter of controversy which culminated in a meeting at Chicago in October, 1905, when the defendant F. M. Hubbell stated that he would not consent to the distribution of any part of the surplus earnings and that, moreover, upon the expiration of the supplemental agreement on May 1, 1918, the St. Paul Company and the Wabash Company could not have the right to use the terminals except upon such terms and conditions as he might make. (Rec., 329, 333.)

At the next meeting of the directors of the Des Moines Company representatives of the St. Paul Company and of the Wabash Company each filed a written protest against the refusal of the Des Moines Company to credit the surplus earnings in reduction of the monthly bills rendered against the proprietary companies and made formal demand that without further delay all monies arising from rents of real estate, switching charges, etc., theretofore and thereafter collected, be credited on the bills rendered against the proprietary companies on a wheelage basis. (Rec., 334.)

Within a year thereafter the complainants commenced the present suit. (Rec., 3.)

BRIEF OF ARGUMENT.

I.

BY THE TERMS OF THE CONTRACT OF JANUARY 2, 1882, THE ST. LOUIS COMPANY, THE NORTHWESTERN COMPANY AND THE NORTHERN COMPANY, PREDECESSORS OF THE COMPLAINANTS, ESTABLISHED FOR THEIR JOINT AND SEVERAL BENEFIT AN EXPRESS TRUST IN CERTAIN RAILROAD PROPERTIES THERETOFORE ACQUIRED IN THEIR COMMON INTEREST.

(1) The terms of the trust so created by this instrument were as follows:

It is recited:

(a) That "the companies above named are engaged in the construction of railways converging at the City of Des Moines and have heretofore agreed upon the purchase, construction and maintenance at their joint expense for (of) terminal facilities in the City of Des Moines to be held and used in common as hereinafter provided." (Rec., 412.)

(b) That in pursuance of said agreement various purchases have been made of real property in the City of Des Moines by a number of parties, individual and corporate. (Rec., 412.)

It is then agreed:

(a) That the expense of such purchases shall be borne in the proportion of one-half by the St. Louis Company and one-quarter by each of the other two companies and "that a Depot Company may be organized and may take permanent charge of the property upon the terms herein set forth and that said company may issue and deliver to the companies, parties hereto, its mortgage bonds to the amount of their respective portions of the cost of the said purchases and improvements." (Rec., 412.)

(b) That "the title to said property is to be and remain in a trustee to be named by agreement of said companies but subject to the joint use and occupation of all of said railway companies upon the terms herein described." (Rec., 412.)

(c) That the individual signers to the agreement "hereby declare said purchases to have been made in their names upon the trusts above referred to, and agree to quitclaim and convey the same to said trustee upon demand and reimbursement." (Rec., 412.)

(2) Under the terms of the trust the status of the proprietary companies was as follows:

(a) With respect to the premises subject to the trust the equitable interest of each was that of proprietorship, equivalent to an estate in fee in real property.

(b) With respect to each other they held equitable estates in a tenancy in common.

II.

THE DES MOINES COMPANY WAS ORGANIZED PURSUANT TO THE EXPRESS PROVISIONS OF ARTICLE THIRD OF THE TRUST INSTRUMENT TO MAKE EFFECTIVE THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE TRUST IN CORPORATE FORM AS THEREIN AUTHORIZED, AND THE TERMINAL PROPERTIES OWNED BY THE PROPRIETARY COMPANIES WERE CONVEYED TO AND ACCEPTED BY IT FOR THIS PURPOSE.

This is established by the following facts:

(a) At the meeting of the incorporators of the Des Moines Company it was resolved:

"That for the purposes of carrying out the objects and purposes of the agreement heretofore, to wit, on the 2nd day of January, 1882, made and entered into between the Des Moines and St. Louis Railway Company and others (which is set out in full in the following Articles of Incorporation), that the following be adopted as the Articles of Incorporation of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, to wit:"

Thereafter follow the Articles of Incorporation of the Des Moines Company, including within them the contract of January 2, 1882. (Rec., 416.)

(b) The Articles of Incorporation provide that "all the powers exercised by this company shall be in accordance with the terms and spirit of the aforesaid contract entered into on the 2nd day of January, A. D. 1882." (Rec., 420.)

(c) At meetings of stockholders held January 1, 1885, of each of the Railroad Companies, party to the contract of January 2, 1882, it was duly resolved that such company accept and ratify the Articles of Incorporation of the Des Moines Company "as in substantial accord and compliance with the terms and conditions of the contract of January 2, 1882," and "undertake to discharge all the obligations imposed upon it by said contract in order to make effective the purposes of said Des Moines Union Railway Company," and that, in pursuance thereof, upon the issuance to it of the bonds and stock of said company to which it may be entitled under said contract, its proper officers be authorized to "convey, assign and transfer" to said Des Moines Company the properties "held, enjoyed or claimed by either or all of the signatories of said contract of January 2, 1882, or any agent or trustee thereof, purchased, acquired or held in pursuance of said contract." (Rec., 423-428.)

At meetings of stockholders held November 5 and 8, 1887, of each of said companies, it was further resolved that, whereas, under said contract of January 2, 1882, it was intended that the properties standing in the name of trustees should be transferred to the Des Moines Company under certain conditions, said trustees be requested to transfer to the Des Moines Company said properties upon receiving from it, in mortgage bonds of the Des Moines Company, the amount of money advanced for the payment of its aliquot share of the capital stock thereof, said bonds and stock to be transferred to the proprietary company in lieu for the money advanced by said company to make the purchases, etc. (Rec., 435-442.)

(d) The Des Moines Company, by resolution of its board of directors, adopted January 1, 1885, reciting that, whereas, the Railroad Companies, parties to the contract of January 2, 1882, have notified the Des Moines Company that they severally approve of the organization of the Des Moines Company and have directed their officers, agents and trustees to surrender and deliver to such company the "railroad properties and franchises mentioned in said contract, and have requested it to take possession of, and maintain and operate the same for the purposes and on the terms mentioned in said contract and that said railway companies and individual signatories have indicated their desire and purpose to transfer said property to this company, in accordance with the terms of said contract," duly resolved that said Des Moines Company "accepts the transfer and management and operation of said properties • • • and assumes control thereof from this date, so far as practicable, and it hereby instructs its president to make such order as may be necessary to render such control and management effective as provided in said contract." (Rec., 432.)

It further resolved that its officers be appointed a committee to confer with the several parties to said contract and "agree with them severally upon the terms and price at which they will respectively assign, transfer and convey said railroad property and franchises to this company and procure from them, and each of them, such conveyance and transfers as may be necessary to fully invest this company with the TITLE, control and management of said properties provided for in said contract of January 2, 1882." (Rec., 433.)

fore acquired subject to the terms of the contract of January 2, 1882; and the individual holders of said property thereupon made deeds of conveyance to the Des Moines Company reciting that for "convenience the legal title to said property was conveyed to me in trust" and that "said property was acquired and held for the purpose and upon the terms set forth in a certain contract made and entered into on or about the 2nd day of January, 1882," and that by the resolutions above set forth "it was intended that said property * * * should be transferred to the Des Moines Union Railway Company under certain conditions," and the Railroad holders of certain of said properties executed and delivered their several quit-claim deeds for a like purpose. (Rec., 432-442, 446, 455-457.)

III.

THE PROPRIETARY COMPANIES HAD NO CORPORATE POWER TO ALIENATE THEIR EQUITABLE ESTATES IN THE TERMINAL PROPERTIES IN THE CITY OF DES MOINES, ACQUIRED TO BE HELD AND USED BY THEM IN COMMON.

(1) The transfer of terminals to the Des Moines Company except as trustee of the proprietary companies would dismember the railway lines of the latter and cut them off from their entrance to the City of Des Moines. It is settled law that such alienation of property and franchises is ultra vires.

IV.

THE ALLOTMENT OF SHARES OF CAPITAL STOCK OF THE DES MOINES COMPANY TO THE SEVERAL PROPRIETARY COMPANIES IN THE RELATIVE PROPORTIONS OF THEIR SEVERAL PROPRIETARY INTERESTS IN THE TRUST PROPERTIES AS FIXED BY THE CONTRACT OF JANUARY 2, 1882, WAS INTENDED TO EVIDENCE AND MEASURE THEIR SEVERAL UNDIVIDED ESTATES IN THE PROPERTY SO HELD BY SUCH CORPORATE TRUSTEE.

Under the contract of January 2, 1882, it was contemplated that a corporation might act as trustee to hold title to the terminal properties for the benefit of the proprietary companies. (Rec., 412.) The proprietary companies incorporated the Des Moines Company to act as such trustee. (Rec., 416.) Its capital stock was issued to them in the several proportions of their respective estates in the trust properties and was intended to represent the same:

(1) The Articles of Incorporation provide:

The Board of Directors of the Des Moines Company was to be designated by the proprietary companies and not by the stockholders, and representation in this respect was to be based upon relative proprietary interests. (Rec., 421.)

The Board of Directors of the Des Moines Company had no power to take any corporate action, except upon consent of the three proprietary companies. (Rec., 421.)

(2) Under the agreement of May 10, 1889, it was provided that

Shares should be issued to the proprietary companies in proportions relative to their several proprietary interests, as fixed by the contract of January 2, 1882, and in the instance of each proprietary company the shares so allotted to it should be evidenced by a single certificate expressing upon its face that the same should not be transferable in whole or in part without the consent in writing of all the proprietary companies. (Section twenty-six, Rec., 486.)

The St. Louis Company as the owner of one-half of the capital stock of the Des Moines Company might sell and transfer one-half (no more and no less) or one-quarter of the whole to such railway company as may be acceptable to a majority of the proprietary companies, in which case it was agreed that such railway company may become the purchaser of said stock and may be admitted as one of the proprietors. Only as aforesaid should other railroad companies be admitted to the use of the property of the Des Moines Company without the consent of all the proprietors. (Section twenty-four, Rec., 485.)

Thus an ownership by a railroad company of an aliquot share of capital stock acquired pursuant to the terms of Sections twenty-four and twenty-six carried with it a right of user equivalent to a tenancy in common.

(3) Under the Amended Articles of Incorporation of the Des Moines Company, it was provided that its shares should be allotted to the proprietary companies in the relative amounts of their respective proprietary interests as fixed by the contract of January 2, 1882. (Rec., 491.)

In contemplation of the segregation of proprietary interests into eighths instead of quarters, it was further provided therein that "at all future elections it shall require the votes of more than seven-eighths of all the stock theretofore issued to elect any director," and that in all matters except the ordinary operation of the property "the Board of Directors can act only upon the unanimous vote of the eight members thereof." (Rec., 491, 492.)

(4) The transactions between Hubbell and the purchasing committee of the Wabash Company, whereby Hubbell and Dodge acquired certain stock interests in the Des Moines Company subsequently transferred by them to a proprietary company were had with the express understanding that an ownership in a railroad company of an aliquot amount of the capital stock of the Des Moines Company would represent a proprietorship in such company. (Rec., 1603.)

V.

"THE SERIES OF ACTS AND CIRCUMSTANCES" THROUGH WHICH, IN THE MAJORITY OPINION OF THE COURT OF APPEALS, THE PROPRIETARY COMPANIES ARE SUPPOSED TO HAVE "GRADUALLY LET SLIP FROM THEM THE EXCLUSIVE OWNERSHIP AND CONTROL WHICH THEY HAD AT THE BEGINNING SO MUCH VALUED AND SO CAREFULLY GUARDED" WERE ALL IN HARMONY AND CONSISTENT WITH THE CONTINUED EXISTENCE OF THEIR RESPECTIVE PROPRIETARY INTERESTS.

THESE ACTS AND CIRCUMSTANCES ARE TO BE INTERPRETED IN THE LIGHT OF THE FOLLOWING PRINCIPLE, NAMELY, THE EQUITABLE INTEREST THAT EACH OF THE RAILWAY COMPANIES, PARTY TO THE CONTRACT OF JANUARY 2, 1882, ACQUIRED IN THE TERMINAL PROPERTIES OF THE DES MOINES COMPANY WAS MORE THAN A RIGHT IN PERSONAM OR CHOSE IN ACTION—IT WAS A RIGHT IN REM, NAMELY, AN ESTATE IN PROPERTY VESTED IN THIS RESPECT TO THE SAME EXTENT AS THOUGH THE LEGAL TITLE THERETO HAD BEEN CONVEYED TO SUCH COMPANY.

Brown v. Fletcher, 235 U. S., 589.

Pomeroy's Equity Jurisprudence, Fourth Edition, Section 975.

(1) The Articles of Incorporation of the Des Moines Company, adopted December 10, 1884, are based upon the premise that the Des Moines Company was organized for the sole purpose of making effective the trust created by the contract of January 2, 1882.

The resolution of the incorporators of the Des Moines Company, adopting its articles, recites that such company is organized for the purpose of making effective the trust created by the contract of January 2, 1882, and said contract is embodied in said articles as part of the organic law of the Des Moines Company. (Rec., 416.)

(2) In respect of the terminal properties, it was provided by the contract of January 2, 1882, that "the title to said property shall be and remain in a trustee to be named by agreement of said Companies but subject to the joint use and occupation of all of said Railway Companies upon the terms herein described," and that "said trustee," upon receiving quitclaim and conveyance to it

of the trust properties should issue bonds secured by a mortgage upon the same to "reimburse" the temporary trustees for advances made by them or their beneficiaries in acquiring such properties. (Rec., 412.)

The conveyances made by the temporary trustees to the Des Moines Company, the making of its mortgage of November 1, 1887, and the delivery by it of its bonds secured thereby to the temporary trustees and their beneficiaries, as "reimbursement" for advances made in acquiring the trust properties, were transactions all had in compliance with the trust instrument of January 2, 1882.

(3) After the concentration of the trust properties in the Des Moines Company, no equitable tenant in common in such trust properties ever conveyed, released or otherwise relinquished to the Des Moines Company, its equitable estate therein.

(4) The resolution of the stockholders of the Des Moines Company of March 31, 1888, providing for the making of a supplemental agreement fixing the terms and conditions upon which the proprietary companies should enjoy the use of the terminal properties, and the agreement of May 10, 1889, made pursuant to such resolution between the Des Moines Company and the three proprietary companies are based upon and presuppose the continuing existence of the contract of January 2, 1882, and of the trusts created thereby. (Rec., 476, 479.)

Said supplemental agreement of May 10, 1889, provided in substance for (a) a regulation in detail among the proprietary companies of the use of their common tenancy, (b) a defining of terms for distributing among the proprietors the cost of maintenance, operation thereof and interest on bonds, and (c) a fixing of the manner in which the several equitable estates in the trust property should be represented and regulated through the issue of the shares of the corporate trustee. (Rec., 479.)

(5) The amendments to the articles of the Des Moines Company were illegally adopted, but, without respect to their legality, they did not purport to and could not alter or destroy the equitable estates in common of the proprietary companies in the terminal properties.

VI.

TO GIVE THE ACTS AND CIRCUMSTANCES HEREINBEFORE ENUMERATED A CONSTRUCTION OR ASPECT IN DEROGATION OF THE EQUITABLE ESTATES IN COMMON OF THE PROPRIETARY COMPANIES PURSUANT TO THE CHARACTERIZATION THEREOF OF THE MAJORITY OPINION OF THE CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS WOULD BE TO PERMIT TRUSTEES OR FIDUCIARIES NOT ONLY TO REPUDIATE THE RIGHTS OF THEIR CESTUIS QUE TRUSTENT, BUT TO ACQUIRE FOR THEMSELVES THE BENEFICIAL INTERESTS IN THE TRUST ESTATES.

(1) The Circuit Court of Appeals in its majority opinion holds that a trust was created under the terms of the contract of January 2, 1882; that the beneficiaries thereunder, the proprietary companies, at all times intended the continuance of such trust, but that the same through acts of inadvertence of the beneficiaries "apparently harmless" was destroyed, and that the Des Moines Company became an independent corporation holding the trust properties free from the terms of the trust and under the control of the Hubbells.

A trustee is not permitted to assert in his own behalf any right or interest in trust properties resulting from the inadvertence of his beneficiaries.

Bigelow on Estoppel, 6th Ed., page 589.

(2) As an officer, director and agent of the Des Moines Company, Hubbell was bound by the terms of the trust.

(3) The consolidated company, a successor in interest to the properties acquired to be held and used in common, of which Hubbell was also an officer and director, and the controlling stockholder, was subject to the disabilities of a fiduciary; for cotenants occupy to each other the position of express trustees in respect of the property held in common.

Rothwell v. Dewees, 2 Black, 613, at 618.
Bissell v. Foss, 114 U. S., 252, at 259.
Turner v. Sawyer, 150 U. S., 578, at 586.
Starkweather v. Jenner, 216 U. S., 524, at 528.

Therefore, Hubbell, as a successor to the consolidated company in ownership of a portion of the stock in the Des Moines Company, by a transaction in which he was virtually both seller and buyer, was a fiduciary in respect of the trust properties, for he could have rights no greater than those of his controlled vendor.

VII.

THE FIVE-EIGHTHS STOCK INTEREST IN THE DES MOINES COMPANY HAVING BEEN ACQUIRED BY THE HUBBELLS FROM THE CONSOLIDATED COMPANY OF WHICH THEY WERE DOMINATING STOCKHOLDERS AND DIRECTORS IN VIOLATION OF THEIR FIDUCIARY OBLIGATIONS TO THE PROPRIETARY COMPANIES, THE DECREE HEREIN, IN ADDITION TO THE PRIMARY RELIEF ASKED, QUIETING THE EQUITABLE TITLES OF THE COMPLAINANTS IN THE TRUST PROPERTIES SHOULD ALSO PROVIDE FOR A RESCISSION OF THE STOCK TRANSACTION AND FOR A REDEMPTION OF THE SHARES BY THE COMPLAINANTS ON EQUITABLE TERMS.

(1) The transaction was intrinsically a fraud.

(2) The stock having been acquired by the Hubbells for the purpose of destroying the trust, the transaction is voidable by the beneficiaries thereof.

Rothwell v. Dewees, 2 Black, 613, at 618.

VIII.

NO FACTS APPEAR IN THE RECORD CONSTITUTING AN ESTOPPEL OR LACHES DEFEATING THE EQUITY OF THE COMPLAINANTS.

(1) It is essential to the application of the doctrine of estoppel that a party asserting it must have been misled to his prejudice.

(2) Laches can never be asserted, upon an equivocal state of facts.

Speidel v. Henrici, 120 U. S., 377.

IX.

THE SURPLUS EARNINGS WERE PROPERLY AWARDED TO THE COMPLAINANTS BY THE UNANIMOUS DECISION OF THE CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS.

(1) The surplus earnings are apportionable to the proprietary companies under Section Four of the supplemental agreement of May 10, 1889, as construed by the parties themselves.

Topliff v. Topliff, 122 U. S., 121, 131.

(2) The surplus earnings were determined to belong to the proprietary companies by formal action of the directors of the Des Moines Company, including the Hubbells, and such adjustment is binding upon the Des Moines Company.

ARGUMENT.

I.

BY THE TERMS OF THE CONTRACT OF JANUARY 2, 1882, THE ST. LOUIS COMPANY, THE NORTHWESTERN COMPANY AND THE NORTHERN COMPANY, PREDECESSORS OF THE COMPLAINANTS, ESTABLISHED FOR THEIR JOINT AND SEVERAL BENEFIT AN EXPRESS TRUST IN CERTAIN RAILROAD PROPERTIES THERETOFORE ACQUIRED IN THEIR COMMON INTEREST.

It is the claim of the complainants in this case that the Des Moines Company holds title to the terminal railway properties at Des Moines in trust for their joint use and occupation. This claim has its foundation in the contract of January 2, 1882, made between the "St. Louis Company," the "Northwestern Company" and the "Northern Company," James F. How, James F. How, trustee, and Grenville M. Dodge.

To appreciate fully what was then done and what was intended to be secured thereby, this contract should be read in the light of those events and transactions which are set forth in Subdivision I of the statement of facts, which were preliminary to the establishment of the trust, and were the inducements for the same. From these facts it appears that Hubbell and his partner Polk, were the promoters, and that the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company, predecessor of the Wabash Company, was the financial sponsor of the enterprise, having as its object the construction and ownership of terminals at Des Moines to the end that the railroads which eventually became the Northwestern and the Northern Companies, lying as the arms of a Y, to the northwest and north of Des Moines, should be connected with the railroad which eventually became the St. Louis

Company, the stem of the Y, lying to the south of Des Moines through the terminal properties to be owned in common interest at Des Moines.

At the inception of this enterprise none of these three companies extended into the City of Des Moines, and the Wabash Company undertook also to finance the construction work to extend the respective lines for this purpose. Polk and Hubbell were the local people at Des Moines promoting all these activities. They, with others, incorporated the St. Louis Company for the purpose of constructing the extension from Albia to Des Moines on the south. They also reincorporated the Northwestern Company for the purpose of completing the left arm of the Y from Des Moines northwest to Fonda, to connect with and become a part of the railroad theretofore promoted by Hubbell. They also incorporated the Northern Company for constructing the third line along the right arm of the Y from Des Moines to Boone.

All this was done pursuant to written agreements, among these an agreement made December 8, 1880, between Hubbell, Polk, Clarkson and Runnells of the one part, owning and controlling the capital stock of the Narrow Gauge Railway Construction Company, and the Wabash Company on the other part. The first parties were to give their time, personal attention to and act as directors and officers of the enterprise. They were personally to exert themselves to procure subsidies in aid of the line and donations of lands, rights of way and other benefits in aid of construction.

The construction work of the three lines, as well as the assembling of the necessary terminal railways and facilities at Des Moines proceeded actively in 1881, and the operations were conducted from the office of Polk and Hubbell. Hubbell negotiated the purchase of real estate for the terminal properties at Des Moines, and the funds therefor were advanced by the Wabash Company and by Gen. Grenville M. Dodge. Four parties acquired this real estate to be used for the common purpose. The St. Louis Company and the Northern Company acquired certain property largely obtained through condemnation proceedings. James F. How and Grenville M. Dodge took title to the remainder of the properties, Dodge paying for certain of the properties that were credited to the Northern Company.

At the close of the year 1881, the road of the Northwestern Company was open for operation, and its trains were running into the Des Moines terminals, and the two other roads were well advanced.

Thus, at this point, the following situation had developed:

The legal title to certain of the properties was in the Northern Company, which it had acquired by condemnation proceedings; the legal title to the certain other property was in the St. Louis Company, which it had also acquired by condemnation proceedings; the remaining property was in the title of certain individuals, namely, Dodge and How, without specification of the terms of the trust, but the beneficiaries of the trust were the three railway companies, by or on whose behalf all of the above referred to properties had been acquired, and which had provided the money for the acquisition thereof. It therefore appeared that operation had already begun on the terminal properties before any definite plan for the permanent holding of the properties for railroad purposes had been determined upon by the beneficiaries of the trust.

The above situation prompted the making of the contract of January 2, 1882 (Rec., 411), which lies at the foundation of the rights of the parties to this suit.

The three railroad companies and the two individuals above named joined in making it, and the Wabash Company subjoined a consent to the execution of the contract by the St. Louis and Northwestern Companies. The first five paragraphs of the contract are the substructure of this controversy. They are very simple and very clear in their terms. We quote them here in full:

"First.

The Companies above named are engaged in the construction of railways converging at the City of Des Moines and have heretofore agreed upon the purchase, construction and maintenance, at their joint expense for terminal facilities in the City of Des Moines to be held and used in common as hereinafter provided.

Second.

In pursuance of said agreement, various purchases have been made of real property in the City of Des Moines in the name of James F. How, individually, James F. How, Trustee, and Grenville M. Dodge, and certain additional property has been appropriated by the Des Moines and St. Louis Railway Company, and the construction of buildings and other improvements upon said premises has been begun.

Third.

It is mutually agreed by the parties above named, that the expense incurred by the purchases and improvements above mentioned and such others as may be hereafter made, shall be borne in the proportion of one-half by the Des Moines and St. Louis Railway Company and one-quarter by each of the other two Companies above named. It is understood that a Depot Company may be organized and may take permanent charge of the property upon the terms herein set forth and that said Company may issue and deliver to the Companies, parties hereto, its mortgage bonds to the amount of their respective portions of the cost of the said purchases and improvements.

Fourth.

The title to said property shall be and remain in a trustee to be named by agreement of said Companies but subject to the joint use and occupation of all of said Railway Companies upon the terms herein described.

Fifth.

The individual signers hereto hereby declare said purchases to have been made in their names upon the trusts above referred to, and agree to quit claim and convey the same to said trustee upon demand and reimbursement." (Rec., 412, 413.)

From the above certain things are obvious.

(a) The Railroad Companies, parties to the agreement, had theretofore agreed that the terminal facilities, being then acquired at Des Moines, should be held and used in common by them, and that this contract of January 2, 1882, should provide the basis for this common tenancy.

(b) The common properties were held in severalty by four parties: two corporate and two individual. It was apparent that tenure for railroad purposes could not continue in this form and that, therefore, these several trustees must convey to a common trustee.

(c) It was therefore agreed that title was to be and remain in a trustee, but subject to the joint use and occupation of all of said Railroad Companies upon the terms defined in the agreement.

(d) The individual signers declared that the purchases made in their names were taken in trust and they agreed to quitclaim and convey the same to this single trustee upon demand and reimbursement.

(e) It was agreed that the contemplated trustee might be a Depot Company, to be organized to take permanent charge of the property upon the terms set forth in the contract, and that said company might issue and deliver its mortgage bonds to the three constituent companies to the amount of their respective portions of the cost of said purchases and improvements.

It is very clear from the foregoing that the parties intended to vest in the three Railroad Companies a common proprietorship in the terminal properties acquired in their common interest, and it is also very clear that the parties intended to finance the properties so to be owned by them by an issue of bonds secured upon their common title.

Note particularly in this respect, that the temporary holders in trust of the properties are to convey and quit claim to a trustee (not to a vendee), only upon demand and reimbursement.

Note further in this respect that the expenses incurred by purchases and improvements are to be borne in the proportion of one-half by the St. Louis Company and one-quarter by each of the other two companies, and that the Depot Company, to be organized for the purpose of taking charge of the property, is to issue and deliver its mortgage bonds to the above companies to the amount of their respective portions of cost of the said purchases and improvements.

It follows beyond question that the title of the Depot Company in the terminal properties was to be of the character that would permit it to mortgage them to secure such bond issue, and that in this respect it must necessarily have been intended to act as a trustee agent, mortgaging the beneficial interests or the equitable estates of the three proprietary companies in their common tenancy; for the individual title holders were to convey the properties, for which they were to be reimbursed through these bonds, only to a trustee and not to a vendee.

The scheme of reimbursement thus contemplated was identical with that in common use among railroad companies, namely, the mortgaging of properties bought with current funds for the purpose of reimbursing the railroad treasury to the end that the railroad investment might be transferred to a permanent capital obligation. If the three proprietary companies had taken legal title as tenants in common, instead of equitable titles in this respect, they would have reimbursed themselves with a bond issue in identically the same manner.

The majority opinion of the Court of Appeals, has properly described the effect of the above contract as follows:

> "As to the Companies, the contract not only declared some existing property rights, but attempted to define for the future the rights of title and usage of the terminal property. The title contemplated was a trust. The legal title to be 'in a trustee to be named by agreement of said companies.' The beneficial estate (italics ours) to be in the three companies in proportion to the parts each contributed to the payment therefor." (Rec., 2096.)

This Court has stated in the case of Brown v. Fletcher, 235 U. S., 589, that the equitable interest of a cestui que trust is more than a chose in action or a right in personam. It says that > "the modern cases do not treat the relation between trustee and cestui que trust as contractual."

The interest of the cestui is in rem. It is an estate in property to the same extent as if the property was in his possession and it passes by deed. In such case an instrument of alienation is not an assignment of a chose in action. It is a deed, or if not called a deed, "an evidence of the assignee's right, title and estate in and to property."

As stated in Pomeroy's Equity Jurisprudence, Fourth Edition, Section 975:

> "In fact, the entire dealing of equity with the subject of equitable estates, and the fundamental distinctions between equitable and legal conceptions and modes are based upon the notion that equitable estates are in the truest sense property, and not mere rights to obtain certain equitable remedies."

In analyzing the subsequent transactions of the parties, this principle is important in determining their significance and effect.

It is to be noted that the ownership and control of property rights of this character, is that which the majority opinion of the Court of Appeals states was never intended to be released by the proprietary companies, and yet that Court says that through their acts of inadvertence, they have "gradually let slip from them that exclusive ownership and control which they had at the beginning so much valued and so carefully guarded." It is also to be noted, that the title to such property has thus gradually faded away to the advantage and interest of their own creature, the trustee, created by them with the sole object of conserving in each of them its equitable estate in common therein.

When an estate in trust is once solemnly created, transactions thereafter had between the trustee and his beneficiary will be presumed to be in harmony with and in furtherance of the trust estate so set up, for as is said in Brown v. Fletcher, above referred to, "the relation between the trustee and the cestui que trust is not contractual."

They are indeed one > "and a proceeding by the beneficiary or his assignee for the enforcement of rights in and to the property, held—not in opposition to but—for the benefit of the beneficiary, could not be treated as a suit on a contract, or as a suit for the recovery of the contents of a chose in action, or as a suit on a chose in action." (p. 599.)

It follows that if, after making the trust instrument of January 2, 1882, the record had shown merely the organization of a railroad corporation by the three proprietary companies, warranty deeds of conveyance by the temporary trustees of the terminal properties to such corporation, and the issuing of mortgage bonds by such corporation in amounts sufficient to reimburse the grantors for such warranties of conveyance, all these acts would be presumed to have been done in furtherance of the trusts established by the contract of January 2, 1882.

It will appear, however, that in the corporate and intercorporate procedure had subsequent to the making of this contract, the parties to the same, with painstaking repetition of expression, contained in resolution, articles of incorporation and deed, took every step possible to continue the existence of the equitable tenancy in common set up among them in the terminal properties at Des Moines.

II.

THE DES MOINES COMPANY WAS ORGANIZED PURSUANT TO THE EXPRESS PROVISIONS OF ARTICLE THIRD OF THE TRUST INSTRUMENT, TO MAKE EFFECTIVE THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE TRUST IN CORPORATE FORM, AS THEREIN AUTHORIZED, AND THE TERMINAL PROPERTIES OWNED BY THE PROPRIETARY COMPANIES WERE CONVEYED TO AND ACCEPTED BY IT FOR THIS PURPOSE.

At the first meeting of incorporators of the Des Moines Company, held at Des Moines, December 10, 1884, the proceedings state that the meeting was held for the purpose of organizing a Union Depot and Railroad Company, to be run and operated in and around the City of Des Moines, Iowa, in pursuance of the contract of January 2, 1882. (Rec., 416.)

There were present at this meeting, Grenville M. Dodge, who appeared for himself and in the interest of the Northern Company; Polk and Hubbell, who appeared for the Northwestern Company; Runnells and Meek, who appeared for the St. Louis Company, and How, appearing as trustee and in his individual capacity. It was resolved:

> "That for the purpose of carrying out the objects and purposes of the agreement heretofore, to wit, on the 2nd day of January, 1882, made and entered into between the Des Moines and St. Louis Railroad Company and others, (which is set out in full in the following articles of corporation) that the following be adopted as the Articles of Incorporation of the Des Moines Union Railway Company."

The articles begin with a recital that the St. Louis Company, the Northwestern Company and the Northern Company and Dodge and How have purchased properties upon certain agreed conditions at their joint expense in accordance with the contract of January 2, 1882.

Thereafter said contract is set out in full in said articles.

It is then recited that it was provided in said contract that a Depot Company might be organized to take permanent charge of the property, and that it was understood that the Company might acquire, operate and maintain said property in such manner as best to serve the interest of the parties.

In Article 2, it is stated that the object of the Company shall be to construct, own and operate a railway in and about the City of Des Moines, and that "all the powers exercised by this company shall be in accord- ance with the terms and spirit of the aforesaid contract entered into on the 2nd day of January, A. D. 1882." (Rec., 420.)

It is to be noted that the articles provide that the affairs of the company shall be managed by a board of eight directors, four of whom shall be nominated by the Wabash Company and two by the Northwestern Company and two by the Northern Company; that no contract, lease or agreement, amounting to a permanent charge upon the properties of the Depot Company, shall be entered into by the board without having the approval of the three proprietary companies. (Rec., 421.)

Thereafter, on January 1, 1885, the three proprietary companies passed identical resolutions, accepting and ratifying the articles as in substantial accord and compliance with the terms and conditions of the January 2, 1882 contract, and requesting the temporary individual trustees to convey the properties held by them under the terms of the January 2, 1882, contract, to the Des Moines Company. (Rec., 423, 424, 429.)

On the same day the Des Moines Company adopted a resolution reciting that it had been notified by the proprietary companies that each had approved its organization and had directed its officers and trustees to deliver to the Des Moines Company the railroad properties and franchises mentioned in the contract of January 2, 1882, and had requested the Des Moines Company to take possession of and maintain and operate the same for the purposes and on the terms mentioned in the January 2, 1882 contract. It was therefore resolved that the Des Moines Company accept the transfer and management and operation and assume control thereof, so far as practicable, and instruct its officers to make such order as may be necessary to render such control and management effective as provided in said contract, and its officers were appointed as a committee to confer with the parties to the January 2, 1882, contract, to agree upon the terms and price at which they would respectively convey such property and franchise to the Des Moines Company and to procure from them and each of them such conveyances and transfers as might be necessary to fully invest the Des Moines Company with THE TITLE, control and management of such properties provided for in the January 2, 1882 contract. (Rec., 432, 433.)

Hubbell, as a member of the board of the Des Moines Company, voted in favor of these resolutions, and as secretary of that company acted as secretary of the meeting. (Rec., 435.)

Owing to the receivership of the Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific Railway Company and the consequent insolvency of the Northwestern Company, for whose benefit the Wabash Company had advanced funds, and the consequent inability of the parties to the terminal enterprise to arrange for the assignment to the Northwestern Company of its one-quarter estate in the trust properties, no further action was taken to vest in the Des Moines Company title to the properties that it was to hold in trust, until November 5 and 8, 1887, when each of the proprietary companies passed resolutions reciting that the temporary trustees had taken title to certain properties, which were to be transferred to the Des Moines Company under certain conditions, and requesting that these temporary trustees convey the properties held by them to the Des Moines Company, for the purpose of carrying out the contract of January 2, 1882. (Rec., 435, 437, 442.)

In the instance of the St. Louis Company and the Northwestern Company, with respect to the properties to which each took title for the common enterprise, they directed their own officers to make conveyance of the same to the Des Moines Company for the purpose of carrying out the contract dated January 2, 1882. (Rec., 436, 438, 439, 442, 443.)

On November 8, 1887, the three companies served notice upon the Des Moines Company that they had passed these resolutions. (Rec., 439, 441, 442.) On the same day the board of directors of the Des Moines Company adopted a resolution directing its officers, upon receiving conveyance of the properties in question, to deliver bonds to How and Dodge for the amount of money which will be shown by them to have been expended for, or on the property referred to, and that certificates for one-quarter of the stock be issued to the St. Louis Company and three-quarters of the stock be issued to the purchasing committee of the Wabash Company. (Rec., 1300.)

Pursuant to the foregoing, the St. Louis Company conveyed the properties held by it for the enterprise to the Des Moines Company (Rec., 457), and Frederick M. Hubbell, who signed this deed of conveyance as secretary, testified that it was made pursuant to the resolution that such conveyance should be made to the Des Moines Company for the purpose of carrying out the contract of January 2, 1882. (Rec., 1115.) The Northern Company conveyed its interest by quitclaim deed. How and Dodge made two deeds of conveyance. The How deeds recited that the property was acquired and held by him in trust and was conveyed for the purpose and upon the terms set forth in the contract of January 2, 1882. (Rec., 446, 448, 451.)

For the purpose of mortgaging the trust properties, to reimburse the proprietary companies for the expenses incurred by them in acquiring the terminal properties as provided by Article Third of the contract of January 2, 1882, the Des Moines Company made its certain mortgage dated November 1, 1887, to secure an issue of bonds amounting to $800,000. (Rec., 474, 475.)

The conveyances above recited, the execution of the mortgage of the Des Moines Company and the issuance of its bonds thereunder were all "approved, ratified and confirmed" in their original significance by virtue of Article 14 of the amended articles of the Des Moines Company, adopted at a meeting of its stockholders on April 8, 1890. (Rec., 494.)

The foregoing facts speak for themselves.

They show that with painstaking effort in corporate action, all the parties in interest strove to make an effective conveyance of the legal titles acquired in their common interest to the Des Moines Company to the end that their equitable and common estates therein should continue, to be availed of thereafter, for the purposes of their joint use and occupation of the terminal properties.

The status thus reached in the affairs of the proprietary companies was never thereafter altered by any act which resulted in the defeasance or alienation of the estates thus created.

In this respect, the following is to be noted:

(1) That a right of possession adverse to the user incident to the equitable estates of the proprietary companies never arose in favor of the Des Moines Company, even if it could be assumed that the Des Moines Company, in its capacity as trustee, could acquire a right by adverse user; for from the inception of the enterprise and during the period in which the four temporary trustees held title to the terminal property; during also the period after the conveyance of the same to the Des Moines Company, the permanent trustee, namely, from 1888, up to the making of the supplemental agreement of May 10, 1889; and since the making of said last named agreement to the present time, the three proprietary companies have been in constant use and possession of the premises operated by the Des Moines Company, thus asserting through several distinct periods and varieties of legal tenure, a continuing proprietorship therein.

(2) No instrument of any kind or character was ever executed by any proprietary company, or by any of its successors, releasing or conveying to the Des Moines Company its estate in the common property.

(3) Estates in property do not pass by acts of inadvertence to parties who are not innocent purchasers for value, and particularly in this respect to those holding a fiduciary relationship to the alleged grantors.

(4) The privity of relationship in respect of the controversy here involved is between the proprietary companies and their trustee. Therefore the transactions by which Hubbell acquired his stock in the first instance from the purchasing committee of the Wabash Company, even if admitted to be anomalous (an admission denied) could not alienate or release the trust estates set up by the proprietary companies, or relieve the Des Moines Company from its duties as a trustee or create an estoppel in its favor in this respect. They could not create an estoppel in favor of Hubbell, for the nature of interest, which an individual holding stock in the Des Moines Company (assuming his title in the same) could have in the trust properties, is not on trial here.

III.

THE PROPRIETARY COMPANIES HAD NO CORPORATE POWER TO ALIENATE THEIR EQUITABLE ESTATES IN THE TERMINAL PROPERTIES IN THE CITY OF DES MOINES ACQUIRED TO BE HELD AND USED BY THEM IN COMMON.

One of the necessary objects of the proprietary companies in acquiring properties at Des Moines, upon which to construct and operate terminals, was to serve the public. The Railway Companies could exercise their powers of condemnation, by which a portion of the properties were acquired, only upon this theory. Moreover, with this same idea in view, three townships of Boone County, Iowa, voted and paid over to the Northern Company $61,337.72, for the purpose of aiding the Northern Company in constructing its railway from Boone to a connection with the line of the Wabash Company, and each township by ordinance provided that the tax for raising this money be due and payable when the railroad connection to be so required shall have been completed and cars running thereon. These conditions were accepted in writing. (Rec., 789-797.) Green County voted taxes amounting to $27,732.49 and Calhoun County likewise voted $19,587.28 to the Northwestern Company for a similar purpose. (Rec., 797-820.)

On March 22, 1881, the City of Des Moines passed an ordinance granting a right of way to the St. Louis Company over, across and along certain streets in said city, upon which eventually became located the main lines of railroad of the Des Moines Company. This grant was made upon the condition that the Railroad Company locate and build passenger stations in East and West Des Moines, and that cars should be running into the city by the first day of January, 1882. By express provision, the ordinance was to operate as a contract between the City of Des Moines and the St. Louis Company, upon acceptance of the same by the latter. (Rec., 443-445.)

Thus the proprietary companies having accepted public funds for the purpose of uniting their properties through the ownership of a common terminal, having exercised the sovereign right of condemning private property for this purpose, and having received a charter from the state to enable them to operate as an entity the terminal properties so acquired by them, it was beyond their power to put themselves in a position with respect to this railroad company and to the properties to which it took title in trust for their use and occupation, whereby they would be unable to serve the public.

In view of this principle, not only every presumption will be indulged to interpret their acts as intending to keep intact the joint control acquired over the terminal properties by virtue of their ownership in the same, but it should also be held that if attempt were made by them to part with this control their acts for such purpose should be regarded as ineffectual.

The contentions of the defendants in this case run counter to the above principle.

It is asserted by them that the proprietary companies deliberately abandoned their trust estates by selling properties, acquired by them for the purpose of making connections between their respective railroads, to an independent railroad company and deliberately became minority stockholders in such company, thus making imminent a situation now claimed by the defendants to have arisen, namely, a status of being strangers to properties which they had appropriated and otherwise obtained by sovereign prerogative for a public trust.

That it was not within their power to abandon title to railroad properties so acquired is the settled law of the land.

This Court has repeatedly decided that a railway corporation cannot alienate or turn over to another railroad corporation its railroad in whole or in part without the express consent of the state, under whose franchise the railroad was constructed or acquired.

Central Transportation Company v. Pullman Company, 139 U. S., 28.

Mr. Justice Gray, who wrote the opinion in this case, reviewed the law on this subject and stated the above principle as the "clear result" of the decided cases.

This Court by subsequent decisions has reaffirmed and followed the opinion of Mr. Justice Gray, and in applying the principle asserted therein, it has repeatedly held that railway properties dedicated to public use cannot be lost by adverse possession.

Northern Pacific Railway Company v. Ely, 197 U. S., 1.

Northern Pacific Railway Company v. Townsend, 190 U. S., 267.

Section 1300 of the Iowa Code of 1873, which is the same as Section 2066 of the Iowa Code of 1897, is as follows:

"SALE OR LEASE OF RAILROAD PROPERTY—JOINT ARRANGEMENT. Any railway corporation may sell or lease its property and franchises to, or make joint running arrangements not in conflict with law, with any corporation owning or operating any connecting railway, and any corporation operating the railway of another shall be liable in the same manner and extent as though such railway belonged to it."

It will be seen from the provisions of this statute that if it be desired to sell or transfer railroad property, the entire railroad together with its franchises—and not a part—must be sold or transferred. The Iowa statute does not permit a railroad to be dismembered, or the franchises under which it was constructed to be disrupted. The railroad and franchises are a unit, and are required to be held and used as a unit, and when transferred must be transferred as a unit. State v. Central Iowa Ry. Co., 71 Iowa, 410. That a part of a railway system cannot be separated from its franchises is clearly shown in the opinion of Mr. Justice Lurton in Connor v. Tennessee Central Railway Co., 109 Fed. Rep., 931.

The fact that the proprietary companies held their terminal properties at Des Moines in a common proprietorship makes but a distinction without a difference in the application of the above principle; since one owning a tenancy in a common estate has rights of user in all the properties of such estate (subject to like rights in its other tenants) equivalent to an exclusive proprietorship therein, and thus unity of ownership in terminals makes permanent for each carrier the means of interchange of through traffic with its associates.

If, then, it was beyond the power of the proprietary companies to convey away, or, as the District Court put it, "chop off," the most essential parts of their railways terminating in the City of Des Moines they, of course, could not by acquiescence or by a "series of acts or circumstances," as the majority opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals states, indirectly or unintentionally, "gradually let slip from them the exclusive ownership and control which they had at the beginning so much valued and so carefully guarded." (Rec., 2114.)

Iowa, 410, the rule is announced that, where a line of railroad has been built by aid of taxes levied for that purpose, the line in aid of which the tax was voted must be operated as a whole, and a portion thereof cannot be leased or operated separately to the injury of any locality on that line. A railroad company which avails itself of such aid assumes relations to the public different from those resulting from a mere private contract.

The majority opinion seeks to avoid the application of the above principle by yielding to an adroit but insidious "concession" of the Hubbells that the Des Moines Company must furnish reasonable and necessary terminal facilities to the St. Paul and Wabash Companies upon payment therefor of such reasonable sum as may be agreed upon, or in default of such agreement "as may be fixed by the proper public tribunal." This conclusion rests upon the erroneous assumption that the Des Moines Company is a union railway depot company or terminal company, and as such is under legal obligation to permit the use of its tracks and terminal facilities by any railway company entering the City of Des Moines upon reasonable terms, which if not agreed upon between the parties may be fixed by some proper public tribunal.

The Des Moines Company, however, was not organized under the Statutes of Iowa as a union railway depot company, or as a terminal company, with the obligations usually charged upon such companies to serve other railroads. The statutes of the state provide for only two kinds of railroad companies, namely:

(a) Corporations for the construction and operation of railways. (Title IX, Chap. 1, page 587 et seq., Code of Iowa 1897.)

(b) Corporations for the construction and maintenance of union railway depot companies. (Title X, Chap. 5, page 748 et seq., Code of Iowa 1897.)

In the case of Morgan v. Des Moines Union Railway Company, 113 Iowa, 561, the Supreme Court of Iowa held that the Des Moines Company was organized under the former of the above statutes, namely, the general railroad incorporation law of the state, and that it therefore had rights and duties measured by this statute and not by the union railway depot act. This decision, being the construction by the highest Court of the state of a state law as applied to the status of the Des Moines Company, is conclusive here.

There is no statute of the State of Iowa which requires one railway company to give the use of its railroad tracks or terminal facilities to another railway company. The sole statute bearing on the subject is Section 2116 of the Code of Iowa, 1897, page 751, which in substance requires connecting carriers to interchange and transport empty and loaded cars. The statute was so construed in Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Ry. Co. v. Iowa, 233 U. S., 334, sustaining the construction given to it by the Supreme Court of Iowa in the same case, 152 Iowa, 317, 321. Such an obligation is, of course, wholly distinct from a duty to permit one railway company to use the tracks or terminals of another.

Section 3 of the Interstate Commerce Act, in providing for the interchange of traffic between connecting carriers, makes by express provision the same distinction in the clause reading:

> "But this shall not be construed as requiring any common carrier to give the use of its tracks or terminal facilities to another carrier engaged in like business."

From the foregoing it follows that, if the proprietary companies have lost the equitable estates once existing in them in the Des Moines terminals, they have no power by common law or statute to compel the Des Moines Company to give to them upon any terms the use of these terminals.

With such consequence resulting from any termination of the ownership in the Des Moines terminals originally existing in the proprietary companies, not only should their unintentional and "apparently harmless" acts never be interpreted as effecting a separation of such ownership from their other railway properties, but it should also be held that, even with design, they could not bring about such a result.

Hobbs v. McLean, 117 U. S., 567, 576.

IV.

THE ALLOTMENT OF SHARES OF CAPITAL STOCK OF THE DES MOINES COMPANY TO THE SEVERAL PROPRIETARY COMPANIES IN THE RELATIVE PROPORTIONS OF THEIR SEVERAL PROPRIETARY INTERESTS IN THE TRUST PROPERTIES AS FIXED BY THE CONTRACT OF JANUARY 2, 1882, WAS INTENDED TO EVIDENCE AND MEASURE THEIR SEVERAL UNDIVIDED ESTATES IN THE PROPERTY SO HELD BY SUCH CORPORATE TRUSTEE.

It is asserted by the Hubbells that the issuing of capital stock of the Des Moines Company to the proprietary companies was intended to represent in part the purchase price paid by the Des Moines Company for the conveyance to it of the beneficial interest of the proprietary companies in the Des Moines terminals, and is therefore inconsistent with the continuance of these equitable estates in the proprietary companies.

An analysis of the circumstances under which this capital stock was issued, the basis of its distribution and the limitations in its attributes and transferability will show quite a contrary intent.

To protect rights or conserve interests, a court of equity will always ignore form for substance. It is admittedly a legal fiction that regards the stockholders of a corporation as not in fact the owners of its corporate property, and when an instance arises in which it appears that shares of stock are not intended to evidence a thing of value separate and distinct from an aliquot interest or estate in the properties themselves of a corporation, a court of equity to protect such interests in corporate properties otherwise created and intended to be preserved will not hesitate to ignore the conventional status of such shares.

Judge Hook of the Court of Appeals has stated the principle clearly in his dissenting opinion in this case. He says:

> "But the doctrine of a corporate entity separate and apart from the persons composing the corporation is after all a mere legal fiction established for convenience and to serve the ends of justice. (Our italics.) It does not go beyond that. In equity the shell artificially assumed is not impermeable. The court will look through it and regard the kernel, and whenever justice requires will hold the stockholders as the corporation. That is being constantly done in equity in determining public rights as affected by the corporate association of particular individuals and the rights of the individuals among themselves and with respect to their organization." (Rec., 2123.)

That in this case the stock of the Des Moines Company was not intended to be issued as a substitute thing of value for the equitable estates of the proprietary companies in the terminal properties, but was intended to measure their respective aliquot shares in their equitable estate in common is evidenced by all the facts. Of this Judge Hook says:

> "After the conclusion is reached that the terminal company had by gradual action thrown off its trust character and had become independent, attention is directed to the transactions in its stock. The power asserted by the individual defendants to control the terminal company and thereby to exclude the plaintiffs from the use of the terminals rests upon their possession of five-eighths of the issued capital stock. There is, however, abundant proof that the stock of that company was intended only to represent the interests of railroad companies actually using the terminal facilities and as a method of apportionment among them. The stock was not intended as a source of personal or individual profit apart from railroad use. Stock ownership and terminal use were inseparable. I know of no public policy or rule of law against such a status of corporate stock or its enforcement as between the parties who established it. If it were formally expressed in the corporate charter the world would have to take notice. But as between the parties themselves, those participating and having actual knowledge, internal evidence may disclose it. It should always be in mind that in this case there are no innocent purchasers relying upon public records. The contract of 1882 specified the proportional interests of the three original railroad companies and foreshadowed the organization of the terminal company to take the place of an individual trustee. In 1884 the terminal company was organized for the expressed purpose of carrying out the contract. My brothers see in the articles of incorporation some evidence of a departure from the trust and the beneficial relations, but it seems to me that the intention to maintain them was asserted and reasserted as definitely and positively as words would permit. (Our italics.) While, as customary, the charter made provision for a capital stock, the connection between the distribution and future ownership of such thereof as might be issued and the railroad use of the property was manifested not only in that instrument but afterwards in many ways by both the railroad companies and the terminal company." (Rec., 2120.)

The Des Moines Company was incorporated December 10, 1884 (Rec., 416), but no certificates of stock were issued until after the attempted amendments to its articles of incorporation made at the alleged stockholders' meeting of April 8, 1890. (Rec., 488.) It is a fact, however, that the legal issuing of stock took place under the agreement of May 10, 1889 (Rec., 479), which, as will hereafter appear, was intended to regulate in detail the user and distribute the cost of operation and other expenses of the terminal properties among the proprietary companies; and which also allotted the stock of the Des Moines Company to the proprietary companies in specific amounts and defined its attributes and the limitations on its transferability. It is well settled that the issuing of certificates is not essential to make stock outstanding.

Hawley v. Upton, 102 U. S., 316.

Farmers Mutual Telephone Co. v. Howell, 122 Iowa, 22.

Article 3 of the original articles of incorporation of the Des Moines Company provided that the capital stock of the corporation should be one million dollars to be divided into shares of $100 each to be paid in at such time as the board of directors may determine, and the board was authorized to receive in payment therefor the properties and franchises held by the St. Louis Company, the Northwestern Company, the Northern Company, James F. How and Grenville M. Dodge. (Rec., 420.)

At a meeting of the stockholders of the Des Moines Company, held on November 1, 1887, Article 3 was amended by making the capital stock two million dollars and again providing that the board of directors be authorized to receive in payment therefor the properties and franchises in the City of Des Moines, held by the above mentioned parties. (Rec., 1297-8.) At this meeting the board also adopted a resolution, offered by F. M. Hubbell, authorizing the issue of $800,000 of mortgage bonds of the company, and it is to be noted that the execution of this mortgage was ratified by the stockholders of the Northwestern Company and of the St. Louis Company at meetings held respectively on January 2 and 3, 1890. (Rec., 474, 475.)

As a matter of fact stock of the Des Moines Company was never issued, to the proprietary companies, either in form or amount, or under circumstances, which could identify its issue in any way as a substituted consideration for the supposed conveyance to the Des Moines Company of the equitable estates of the proprietary companies in the terminal properties.

Stockholders' Meeting of the Des Moines Company Held March 31, 1888.

At a stockholders' meeting of the Des Moines Company, held March 31, 1888 (Rec., 476), it was recited that, for the cost of acquiring the terminal properties, the parties are entitled to the following amounts:

Wabash Company	$382,110.80
Grenville M. Dodge	74,088.01
Polk and Hubbell	2,000.00
Northwestern Company	3,058.40

It was therefore resolved that in settlement of said amounts:

382 bonds be issued to the purchasing committee of the Wabash Company
74 bonds to Grenville M. Dodge
2 bonds to Polk and Hubbell
3 bonds to the Northwestern Company.

These bonds were to be those to be issued under the mortgage of the Des Moines Company, dated November 1, 1887, and authorized by the resolution of the stockholders of the same date above referred to, and in due course the bonds above authorized were delivered to the several parties entitled to receive the same in reimbursement of their advances. (Rec., 459.)

These proceedings were all had in exact accord with the contract of January 2, 1882, which it will be remembered provided that the terminal properties should be permanently financed by the issue of mortgage bonds which were to be used to reimburse the several parties to the trust instrument in the "amount of their respective portions of the cost of said purchases and improvements." The temporary trustees, namely, the two railroad companies and the two individuals, were to severally convey the trust properties acquired by them to the new "trustee upon demand and reimbursement."

The capital stock of the Des Moines Company, under the resolutions adopted at the respective stockholders' meetings of the proprietary companies, held on November 5 and 8, 1887, was to be delivered with the bonds above provided for to the proprietary companies "in lieu for the money advanced" to purchase the terminal properties. From this it is quite evident that the parties intended such stock to represent their several equitable estates in the terminal properties, for, as above shown, the bonds of the Des Moines Company were made the means of completely reimbursing the temporary trustees for their advances, and the capital stock to be issued with them, pursuant to the above resolutions, could thus have office only as identifying the estates of the proprietors.

The agreement of May 10, 1889, making provision for the issue of this stock, gives it attributes to make effective the above intent. This agreement, the detail purposes of which are to be hereafter discussed in a further subdivision of this brief, had its inception in another resolution adopted at the stockholders' meeting of March 31, 1888, above referred to.

It was resolved that the three proprietary companies should "pay the operating expenses, taxes and interest on bonds that are, or may be issued, after deducting an amount received from any other sources for rental, prorated on a wheelage basis," and it was further resolved that "Col. Blodgett be requested to prepare an agreement for thirty years from May 1, 1888, based upon the above resolution and covering in detail the conduct and operation of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, said agreement to be approved and executed by all the lines now holding an interest in the property." (Rec., 477-8.)

As the result of this resolution and further provisions of the same, to be hereafter commented upon, the agreement of May 10, 1889 (Rec., 479), was drafted and executed. Sections twenty-four and twenty-six of this agreement defined the characteristics of the shares of stock to be issued by the Des Moines Company, and by virtue of their provisions, such shares became in fact then legally outstanding. This is important to remember in considering the effect of the resolution relating to the issue of stock subsequently attempted to be adopted by the stockholders of the Des Moines Company at the illegal meeting held by them on April 8, 1890 (Rec., 494), at which an attempt was also made to amend the articles of incorporation.

Sections twenty-four and twenty-six of the agreement of May 10, 1889, carried out the understanding of the trust instrument, that the tenancy in common should be divided into aliquot estates, each of which should be at least one-quarter of the entire common estate. It will be remembered that, by the provisions of this trust instrument, the St. Louis Company was to have a one-half interest and the Northwestern and Northern Companies a one-quarter interest each in the trust properties. (Rec., 412.)

In Article 4 of the original articles of incorporation this understanding was recognized and given force by the proviso that four members of the board of directors were to be nominated by the Wabash Company (controlling the St. Louis Company), and two members by each the Northwestern Company and the Northern Company. (Rec., 421.)

Section twenty-six of the agreement of May 10, 1889, again protects the aliquot interests of the proprietary companies on the above basis in the common estate. It recites that the second parties "are entitled to the shares of stock of said first party in the following amounts, or proportions, to wit:

The St. Louis Company to one-half said shares.

The Northwestern Company to one-quarter said shares, and the Northern Company to one-quarter said shares."

It then provides, "that as the authorized capital stock of said company is two million dollars, or twenty thousand shares of $100 each, the same shall be issued and held as follows, to wit:

One certificate of ten thousand shares shall be issued and delivered to the 'St. Louis Company.'

One certificate for five thousand shares shall be issued and delivered to the 'Northern Company,' and

One certificate of five thousand shares shall be issued and delivered to the 'Northwestern Company,' and all of said certificates shall express upon their face that they are not transferable in whole or in part without the consent in writing of all the parties of the second part to this agreement." * * * (Rec., 487.)

Here was obviously shown the intent to evidence the ownership of the several estates of the respective parties by the capital stock of the Des Moines Company and not, as contended by counsel for the defendants, to artificially substitute rights in personam identified with shares in a corporation as the sole prerogatives of the stockholders from the rights in rem, which theretofore were vested in them, and which, the Court of Appeals has held, they never intended to abrogate or surrender.

The issuing of shares or certificates has no magic in and of itself to alter the status of the proprietors of a corporation in their relation to its properties. Intent, as determined by what the parties in fact did in such a transaction, will be the controlling factor in an analysis of their interests. The distribution then of stock in single blocks among the parties in the proportions of their several estates, with attributes of alienation limited to unanimous consent to the end that the common estate should continue in the proprietors as an entity, was but the means of evidencing, through the conventions of a corporation, the titles of the several parties in the trust properties. Judge Hook says of this:

> "There is, however, abundant proof that the stock of that Company (Des Moines Company) was intended only to represent the interests of the Railroad Companies actually using the terminal properties, and as a method of apportionment among them. The stock was not intended as a source of personal or individual profit apart from railroad use. Stock ownership and terminal use were inseparable." (Rec., 2120.)

The above idea is emphasized by the provisions of Section twenty-four of this agreement of May 10, 1889. It provides:

> "That the 'St. Louis Company' as the owner of one-half of the capital stock of the 'Des Moines Company' may sell and transfer one-half of said stock, or one-quarter of the whole to such railway company as may be acceptable to a majority of the parties of the second part; in which case it is agreed that said railway company which may become the purchaser of said stock, may be admitted as one of the parties hereto, of the second part, upon the same terms and conditions as those stipulated for the other parties of the second part. Only as aforesaid shall other railroad companies be admitted to the use of the property of the first party, without the consent of all of the parties of the second part, and the compensation to be paid by any other railroad company, or person not a party hereto (or provided for as aforesaid), for the use of said depot or terminal facilities, or any part thereof, shall be determined by the Board of Directors of said first party." (Rec., 487.)

Note that here the St. Louis Company may sell a one-quarter interest (no more and no less), that is one of the aliquot estates in the common tenancy with the consent of the majority of the parties, and that with the transfer, under such circumstances, of the stock representing such aliquot estate, is to pass as a concomitant, a right of user on a parity with the original proprietors who, as it will hereafter appear in an analysis of the agreement of May 10, 1889, paid no rent for the use of their own premises, and received in the reduction of the cost of operation of the terminal properties, revenue derived from outside companies who were not stockholders and were thus not proprietors in the enterprise. Thus, the prerogatives of a tenant in common would be vested in each successive railroad stockholder acquiring its stock as provided in Section twenty-four.

From the foregoing it appears that as the result of the action taken at the meeting of the stockholders of the Des Moines Company held March 31, 1888, and the delivery pursuant thereto of bonds of the Des Moines Company to reimburse those who had advanced the moneys to acquire the terminal properties, and of the execution of the agreement of May 10, 1889, between the

Des Moines Company and the three proprietary companies, they and their corporate trustee had consummated the plan contained in the contract of January 2, 1882, to organize a corporate trustee whose bonds should be used to reimburse them for advances made on account of the terminal properties and whose stock was to be issued as evidencing their respective equitable estates in the common property to which such trustee was to take title.

Stockholders' meeting of the Des Moines Company of April 8, 1890.

In the latter part of 1888, or in 1889—in any event, sometime after the passing of the resolution of March 31, 1888, A. B. Cummins became the personal counsel of the Hubbells and the Hubbells' interests, and also the General Counsel of the Des Moines Company. (Rec., 1204, 1211, 1233, 1236.) Although General Dodge was at the time nominally the president of the Des Moines Company, he resided at New York, and the whole management of the Des Moines Company was left to Hubbell, who, in addition to being an officer and an agent of the same, was regarded as the confidential agent of the Wabash Company at Des Moines. (Rec., 132-136, 233.)

In January, 1890, Mr. Cummins, acting ostensibly on his own initiative and independently of Hubbell, conceived the idea that certain amendments should be made to the articles of the Des Moines Company. He had had nothing to do with the drafting of the contract of January 2, 1882, or with the drafting or adoption in 1884 of the articles of the Des Moines Company, and he testified that, while he was familiar with the contract of May 10, 1889, he had had nothing to do with the negotiations and formulation of this agreement. (Rec., 1205.)

At a meeting of the stockholders of the Des Moines Company held January 3, 1890, at the instance of Cummins the question of amending its articles and of issuing stock for the purchase price of the properties was referred to Attorneys Blodgett and Cummins. (Rec., 1307.) No conference, however, took place between Blodgett and Cummins, and Cummins alone redrafted the proposed amendments to the articles. In a letter to Blodgett dated January 22, 1890, he urges the necessity of a redraft of the articles (Rec., 1210), and in a letter to Dodge dated January 22, 1890, he writes that

> "you will observe that these amendments are directed to two purposes: First, to clear up the ambiguity and uncertainty with respect to the amount of stock to be issued on account of the original purchase of the property. Second, to enable the Des Moines Union Railway Company to act in all matters without the previous authority of three corporations." (Rec., 1212.)

In addition to preparing the drafts of amendments to the articles, Cummins also drafted all resolutions, planned the procedure for the stockholders' meeting of April 8, 1890, and as he said parcelled out the resolutions among the members who were present to be offered from time to time. (Rec., 1217.)

The record of the meeting shows that among others he attempted to accomplish three things:

> First. To distribute among the proprietary companies, instead of two million dollars of capital stock to represent their respective interests in the terminal properties, as provided by the agreement of May 10, 1889, four hundred thousand dollars of stock for this purpose, to be divided in exactly the same proportions as provided by said agreement.
> In this respect he still left intact the characteristics and the limitations relating to the issue of the capital stock, as provided in Sections twenty-six and twenty-four of the agreement of May 10, 1889. The remainder of the stock in excess of the four hundred thousand dollars was to be issued only by authority of a resolution of the stockholders adopted by the vote of more than seven-eighths of all of the stock theretofore issued.

Second. To alter aliquot interests in the common properties from quarters to eighths. In this respect it required the votes of more than seven-eighths of all the stock theretofore issued to elect a director; but "to authorize the execution of mortgages, to issue bonds, to enter into contracts, to construct buildings, to make leases, to authorize the institution of condemnation proceedings, and to do all such other things that may be proper or necessary for the corporation to do * * * except the ordinary operation of the property, the board of directors can act only upon the unanimous vote of the eight members thereof." Moreover, a vote of more than seven-eighths of all the stock was required to amend the articles. (Rec., 492-3.)

Third. To repeal, strike out and expunge the proceedings of the meeting of the incorporators held December 10, 1884 (being the meeting at which the original articles were adopted), "with certain preambles including a contract executed on the 2nd day of January, 1882." (Rec., 494.)

Before discussing the significance of the above amendments, attention should be called to the fact that the so-called stockholders' meeting, at which they were supposed to have been adopted, was for the reasons hereafter shown, undoubtedly illegal. Of this the majority opinion of the Court of Appeals says that "the claim that the amendments were never properly adopted is well taken, but not open to the complainants," and the reason assigned for the latter conclusion is that the proprietary companies were present at this meeting by authorized agents, and that under such circumstances the legally ineffectual attempts to amend articles and pass resolutions amounted in fact to a contractual understanding between them, creating a situation inconsistent with the contentions now advanced by the complainants.

In weighing the reasoning by which such conclusion was reached, it is to be remembered that the interests at issue and supposed to have been disposed of at this meeting, in the manner above stated, were equitable estates in real property vested in the proprietary companies to the same extent from the standpoint of being actually owned and possessed property, as if the legal title to such real estate, as well as the beneficial interest therein, had stood in their respective names. It is beyond question that property rights of such character can be transferred, released or surrendered in the instance of corporations only by corporate action, evidenced by some form of instrument of assignment. In the case of Brown v. Fletcher (supra) this Court has said that they passed by deed.

In the light of the above principle, the legality of the stockholders' meeting of April 8, 1890, is important for the purpose of determining what in fact could have legally taken place there affecting the property rights of the proprietary companies.

The majority opinion of the Court of Appeals says:

> "When the corporation undertook to amend its fundamental law, that could be legally done only by the stockholders. There was no stock issued; there was only a right to stock through the contract of 1889." (Rec., 2110.)

The minutes of the meeting show as present in person How, Hayes, F. M. Hubbell, Martin, F. C. Hubbell and Cummins as representing one share each and by proxy, G. M. Dodge by L. M. Martin, representing one share and W. H. Blodgett by J. F. How, representing one share. It is then recited that:

> "There was also present the 'Northwestern Company' by F. M. Hubbell, president.
> The 'Northern Company' by A. B. Cummins, president.

The 'St. Louis Company' by J. F. How, president."

It was then "determined that all the stockholders of said company were present either in person or by proxy duly filed with the secretary of the company." (Rec., 489.)

F. M. Hubbell testified that neither the stockholders nor directors of any proprietary company had adopted any resolution or had issued any proxy authorizing anyone to be present at such stockholders' meeting of April 8, 1890, or to vote thereat any share or shares of stock of such company. (Rec., 1165-1169.) It is thus apparent that, so far as corporate action of the Des Moines Company is concerned, the resolutions offered at such stockholders' meeting of April 8, 1890, purporting to amend its articles and providing for the issue of its capital stock, were not legally adopted.

But the factors that made the corporate action of the Des Moines Company illegal, also show want of corporate action on the part of the proprietary companies, sufficient to surrender or release to their corporate trustee, their respective estates in common in the terminal properties; for without yet considering what the parties intended to accomplish at the stockholders' meeting of April 8, 1890, it is very clear that Hubbell, Cummins and How could not, either individually or by concerted action, convey away the several estates of their principals. These principals could alone do this through execution of their own deeds of assignment. Furthermore, in the sense of severally representing their own companies in the making of a supposed contract at this meeting, these parties could have acted only in an oral manner, for the record in writing there made, even if signed by the parties present, could only purport to represent the sole corporate action of the Des Moines Company.

The intent of the parties in amending the articles of incorporation of the Des Moines Company and the result thereby accomplished, irrespective of the legality of the stockholders' meeting.

(1) The status of the parties.

There were no innocent purchasers for value in the transactions had at the so-called stockholders' meeting of April 8, 1890. The relations of the proprietary companies with the Des Moines Company, was not contractual, for the Des Moines Company was an active trustee created by the proprietary companies to conserve their several equitable estates. Likewise, in respect of protecting their common title to and the common use of the terminal properties, each cotenant stood in its relations with its other cotenants in a noncontractual status, for as to their common vested interests, the proprietary companies were made by law reciprocal trustees.

Rothwell v. Dewees, 2 Black, 613, at 618.
Bissell v. Foss, 114 U. S., 252, at 259.
Turner v. Sawyer, 150 U. S., 578, at 586.
Starkweather v. Jenner, 216 U. S., 524, at 528.

Thus, as a result of this trust relationship, no cotenant could take advantage of inadvertent or legally insufficient acts of another cotenant to the derogation of its ownership or right of use in the common properties.

It follows therefore that, if the proprietary companies came to the above stockholders' meeting with their rights in the above respect intact, these rights could have been parted with in favor of the Des Moines Company, or of one cotenant as against another only by an act of clear intent and some form of separate or concerted assignment in writing, based upon due corporate action and an actual consideration.

In the absence of the above facts, no estoppel could arise in favor of one as against the others, and if these facts existed the doctrine of estoppel to protect an altered status of interests need not be invoked.

That all of the above essentials of intent and action were wanting in the transactions of the parties will appear upon analysis thereof.

(2) The reasons assigned by Cummins for the making of the amendments.

These reasons were threefold:

(1) He thought it "very wise to have it so arranged that every railroad that might come into the depot in the future might become the owner of one-eighth of the capital stock." (Rec., 1208.)

(It is to be remembered in this respect that the agreement of May 10, 1889, authorized the sale of proprietary interests only in quarters.)

(2) He thought that two millions of capital stock should not be distributed among the stockholders. (Rec., 1208.)

(3) He thought that the articles of incorporation were inconsistent with the contract of January 2, 1882. In this respect he had told the parties "that the contract provided for a title of the property in trust for the three companies which had signed it and for the joint use and occupation" of the terminal properties. (Rec., 1209.) He was therefore of the opinion that in view of the conveyances which had been made to the Des Moines Company and the reimbursement in bonds, and the provision in its articles "for the issuance of capital stock for the remainder of the purchase price, if any, that it was imperative to clear up the title and get rid of any question of doubt respecting the ownership of the Des Moines Union Railway Company and its right to manage its own property. These were the reasons which led up to my suggestion that there ought to be an amendment to the articles of incorporation that would put this company, beyond any question, in the ownership and control of its property. * * *" (Rec., 1210.)

In other words, the situation may be summed up as follows:

The personal counsel for the Hubbell interests, at a time when Hubbell had already purchased from the Wabash purchasing committee a two-eighths interest in the stock of the Des Moines Company and was engaged in negotiating for the purchase of a further one-eighth interest in the same, having reached the conclusion that trust estates were undoubtedly provided for by the proprietary companies under the contract of January 2, 1882, and having the belief that the Des Moines Company might have taken title to the terminal properties for the purpose of carrying out these trusts, decided that it would be advisable to alter the articles of the trustee by a "nunc pro tunc" declaration of intent for the purpose of causing it to repudiate retroactively these very obligations, which were the sole excuse for its existence.

That is to say, having speculated upon the possible existence of trust estates in the proprietary companies, he intended to remove the cloud in this respect upon the titles of the trustee, the Des Moines Company, by destroying these estates without a penny of consideration to the beneficiaries thereof, without any authority from them, without the execution by them of any instrument of assignment and alone through this form of corporate action of the trustee.

The evidence of Mr. Cummins, relating to the above subject matters is equivocal. He admits on cross-examination that the trust had never been abrogated, except (as he puts it), "as in the original articles themselves, or the amendment" later made, "increasing the capital stock to two million dollars." (Rec., 1241.) Yet he repeatedly states that the amendments to the articles attempted to be made at the meeting of April 8, 1890, were not intended to affect titles. "That," he said, "had been effected before." (Rec., 1247.) While the trust was not entirely abrogated (whatever this may mean), the original articles, the conveyances made to the Des Moines Company, and the conduct of the parties, in his view, had partially brought this about. (Rec., 1248.) He was clearing up uncertainties in this respect as he would "in a bill to quiet title to property upon which I might think there was a cloud." (Rec., 1258.) The trust created by the contract of 1882 was destroyed in part, in his opinion, by the articles of incorporation. (Rec., 1244.)

He never stated what part of the trust estate was left or what was the value of this remainder which he proposed to destroy without consideration to the beneficiaries through a repudiation of the same by the corporate action of the trustee.

If the foregoing was his intent, was not his letter of January 7, 1890 (Rec., 1211), to Dodge somewhat disingenuous in stating that the amendments were intended "to clear up the ambiguity and uncertainty with respect to the amount of stock to be issued on account of the original purchase of the company, and to enable the Des Moines Union Railway Company to act in all matters without previous authority of three corporations."

There is no evidence in the record that the proprietary companies or their authorized agents had the slightest idea that the proceedings of April 8, 1890, were intended to terminate a trust or to effect a surrender of trust estates.

Indeed to suggest such an intent is to insult intelligence, for if Hubbell, Cummins and How intended and tried to surrender at the stockholders' meeting of April 8, 1890, the equitable estates of their principals they were engaged in perpetrating a fraud upon them; since, if this was the nature of the transaction, the proprietary companies not only did not receive a dollar of consideration in exchange for their interests, but they also gave up the distribution among themselves of the entire capital stock of their trustee, namely $2,000,000, and accepted in lieu thereof, only one-fifth of such stock, namely $400,000, leaving the remainder to be sold to other railroad companies, thus reducing their stockholding interests in the property, if this was all they were to have, to a relatively small proportion of what was originally intended.

The result of the amendments, assuming their validity.

(1) The amendment dividing aliquot interests into eighths instead of quarters.

This amendment continues that attribute of the stock of the Des Moines Company consonant with the intent of the parties that stock should represent proprietorship in the terminal properties, for it is to be remembered that under the agreement of May 10, 1869, provision was made for the admission of railroad companies as outsiders to the use of the terminals without the ownership of stock, with the proviso that they should pay rental, which was to be used in reducing the cost of operation among the proprietary companies. If a railroad company, holding an eighth interest in the capital stock of the Des Moines Company, was to acquire thereby no rights of user or proprietorship in the terminal properties, because thereof, why the comment of Mr. Cummins that it would be wise to permit railroads to come in upon the ownership of eighths, instead of quarters?

Unanimous consent of the proprietors was required before stock could be purchased by another railroad company, and likewise this unanimous consent was required before a railroad company, without capital stock, could be permitted to use the terminals. If stock holding as such brought no prerogatives of ownership, why should it be sold to newcomers only in eighths, instead of in single shares.

(2) Amendment authorizing the issue of four hundred thousand dollars of capital stock, instead of two million dollars, in proportions identical with those provided for in the agreement of May 10, 1889.

This amendment left intact, both as to apportionment and characteristics, all the attributes of the capital stock of the Des Moines Company contemplated in the contract of January 2, 1882, in the original articles adopted December 10, 1884, and provided for in detail in the agreement of May 10, 1889, with one significant difference, namely, if the allotment of stock to every proprietary company was not to represent its equitable estate in the terminal properties, the stockholders were voluntarily or unwittingly, and without consideration, surrendering the right to have distributed among them the entire capital stock of the Des Moines Company, and were accepting in lieu thereof, an aggregate distribution among them of only one-fifth of its capital stock, with the proviso that the remaining four-fifths might eventually be sold, presumably to other railroad companies. Thus, if they were only stockholders, and not tenants entitled to a common use of the properties, their proportionate interest in the terminals was reduced from one-quarters to possibly one-twentieths.

(3) Article 15 expunging the proceedings of the meeting of December 10, 1884. (Rec., 494.)

It is difficult to understand what was expected to be accomplished by the so-called expunging of the proceedings of the meeting of incorporators held six years earlier. Assuming that it is possible to wipe resolutions from records, corporate actions had as a result thereof, will not thereby be given an altered significance.

Intent cannot be made retroactive.

But irrespective of intent, the rule is elementary that existing rights are not affected by changes in the charter or articles of a corporation.

Woodruff v. Trapnall, 10 How. (U. S.), 190.
Curran v. State Bank of Arkansas, 15 How. (U. S.), 304.
Hawthorne v. California, 2 Wall. (U. S.), 10.

If the proprietary companies did not intend to and did not in fact convey their equitable estates to the Des Moines Company by the deeds of the temporary trustees, executed and delivered to it in 1887 and 1888, the action had at the meeting of the Des Moines Company on April 8, 1890, surely did not effect such conveyances. If, on the other hand, Article 15 was intended to be prospective in effect, for the purpose of removing a cloud on titles, it was equally ineffectual. Moreover, it is inconceivable that, if such was the intent of the parties at the time it was adopted, they did not pursue the obviously effective course of executing mutual quitclaim deeds of their equitable estates to the Des Moines Company. To be sure, one cannot understand what would prompt them to do so under an arrangement which would not give them a dollar of consideration for the assignment of their property rights.

In contrast with any such possible corporate action, by amended Article 14, they "approved, ratified and confirmed" in their full and original significance, the conveyances made by the temporary trustees to the permanent trustee, and the issuance of the mortgage bonds in reimbursement therefor, thus reiterating all that they intended to do by virtue of the resolutions of January 1, 1885, and of November 5 and 8, 1887, and the deeds of conveyance made pursuant thereto.

(4) The resolution adopted fixing the value of the terminal properties at $861,257.21, as of the date of the conveyance thereof, instead of $461,257.21, being the actual cost thereof as recited at the meeting of stockholders of March 31, 1888, and the issuing of $400,000.00 of capital stock upon the basis of the above value. (Rec., 494.)

After the amendments to the articles of incorporation were adopted, Mr. Cummins offered a resolution which was unanimously adopted, reciting in substance that there was some uncertainty in the records of the company respecting the purchase price of the terminal property; that it was agreed that the same should be purchased at its fair value, payable partly in mortgage bonds and partly in capital stock; that it was agreed that said property was fairly worth the sum of $861,257.21 (that is $400,000 more than the aggregate amount recited in the resolution of March 31, 1888 (Rec., 476), above referred to, to be due the several parties therein named "for money expended for the property acquired for this company," and for which bonds had been delivered in reimbursement), of which purchase price the purchasing committee of the Wabash Company, as the real owner of the St. Louis Company, is entitled to $470,110.80, the Northwestern Company $215,058.40, the Northern Company to $100,000, G. M. Dodge to $74,088.01 and Polk and Hubbell to $2,000; that by a settlement theretofore made, the purchasing committee has received 270 bonds of $1,000 each, G. M. Dodge 74 bonds, Polk and Hubbell 2 bonds and the Northwestern Company 115 bonds, making in all 461 bonds; that as a further part of said purchase price, the Des Moines Company has paid to the purchasing committee, G. M. Dodge and the Northwestern Company $257.21; that there still remains $400,000 of the purchase price yet unpaid to be paid in capital stock; that by agreement between the several persons and corporations owning the property prior to the transfer so much of the purchase price as was to be paid in capital stock was to be divided one-half to the St. Louis Company, one-quarter to the Northern Company and one-quarter to the Northwestern Company; that the articles have been amended to conform to the true intent of the several parties.

It was thereupon resolved:

First. That the purchase price of the property originally acquired, be fixed at $861,257.21.

Second. That the payment of a portion of said purchase price, as above set forth, be confirmed and approved.

Third. That, to complete the payment of such purchase price, one-half of the stock be issued to the purchasing committee, one-quarter to the Northern Company and one-quarter to the Northwestern Company.

Fourth. That proceedings heretofore had, respecting the issuance of capital stock so far as said proceedings are inconsistent with the amendments to the articles of incorporation or with this resolution, are hereby modified.

Certain things are obvious from the foregoing resolution. It is a colorable recital of facts, made in conventional form, to give the stock interests of the several proprietary companies theretofore issued under the agreement of May 10, 1889, an appearance of being fully paid and of being issued as a substitute for the properties conveyed to the Des Moines Company.

The arbitrary fixing of the purchase price of the property "as of the date of the conveyance thereof," at $861,257.21, instead of $461,257.21, flies in the face of the settlement made between the proprietary companies and the Des Moines Company, pursuant to the resolution of March 31, 1888 (Rec., 476), in which it appeared that the cost of the properties aggregated $461,257.21, and wherein it was resolved, as provided for by the contract of January 2, 1882, that the temporary trustees should be reimbursed for this amount in the proportion of their several advances by the mortgage bonds of the Des Moines Company. The reimbursement thus provided for had taken place, and the transactions identified with the transfer of title to the trustee company were a concluded subject matter.

The fixing of such purchase price at four hundred thousand dollars in excess of the amount for which the temporary trustees were reimbursed in the bonds of the Des Moines Company, and the identification of the capital stock of such company as a consideration paid to the proprietary companies to represent the values of such excess, is also directly contrary to the resolutions adopted on November 5th and on November 8, 1887, by the proprietary companies, providing that the stock of the Des Moines Company should be transferred together with its bonds "in lieu for the money advanced," to purchase the terminal properties and the consummation of this proviso by the issuing of stock pursuant thereto under the agreement of May 10, 1889.

The recitals therefore, above summarized from the resolution adopted April 8, 1890, are disingenuous and contrary to fact. Whatever their intent be, they must have been ineffectual, for they could not recall a concluded transaction and manufacture corporate assets for stock where none had theretofore existed.

Moreover, that the scheme was disingenuous, and that the purchase price of the property was artificially fixed for the purpose of giving the capital stock to be issued, an appearance of being fully paid, Mr. Cummins himself expressly states. He found that there were 461 bonds outstanding and he added $400,000 to the actual cost of the terminal properties as of the date of the conveyance thereof, because he "thought it would stand $400,000 without creating any liability upon the part of those who held it to make good for unpaid stock, if the company should get into trouble and fall into the hands of a receiver." (Rec., 1241.) Referring to the equity above actual cost, he said:

> "Of course I understand it couldn't have sold for $400,000 at that time." (Rec., 1240-1.)

The ineffectuality of the resolution, however, upon the theory upon which it was based, is exposed in the distribution of stock in the original proportions contemplated by the trust instrument, namely, in one-half and one-quarters and not on what could have been the only theory of adding stock to bonds to make up an increased purchase price, namely, by prorating stock in the same ratio that bonds were distributed on the assumption that each party, conveying property to the Des Moines Company, should receive his pro rata share of the increased value, representing the purchase price to the Des Moines Company, of such property over and above the actual cost of the same, paid for by the bonds already delivered to him for purposes of reimbursement.

The foregoing amendments could not affect the conveyance to the Des Moines Company of the equitable estates of the proprietary companies, which had theretofore continued to be vested in them, for the Des Moines Company as a trustee could not by its own corporate process repudiate or destroy the trust estates. Independent corporate action on the part of the proprietary companies could alone produce such a result. And as hitherto stated, after the conveyances made by the temporary trustees to the Des Moines Company as the permanent trustee of the trust properties, in the fall of 1887 and the winter of 1888, no deeds, conveyances or assignments of any character were ever made by the proprietary companies, or any of them, to the Des Moines Company of any of their interests in the trust properties and no corporate action for this purpose was ever thereafter had by any of them.

It is difficult to appreciate how these several companies could be legally present at a stockholders' meeting through the agencies of the above individuals, but, without respect to this query, it is beyond question that any action taken by these persons at such stockholders' meeting of the Des Moines Company must be regarded as identified alone with its corporate activities.

Whatever their intent and in whatever capacity each of them may have appeared at such stockholders' meeting, it was not within their power, either by individual or concurrent action, to convey away, release or alter the status of the respective equitable estates in the terminal properties then existing in the proprietary companies.

It is fitting to conclude this subdivision with the statement that Hubbell testified repeatedly to the fact that he never regarded the amendments, supposed to have been made at the stockholders' meeting of April 8, 1890, as having any effect on the title to property or on the value of the stock. (Rec., 1081.) He relied upon the deeds made by the temporary trustees to the Des Moines Company, the original articles of incorporation, and the agreement of May 10, 1889, which he construed as a lease, as establishing in the Des Moines Company the beneficial interests which gave his stock holdings value. (Rec., 1075, 1083.)

(5) The amendments to the articles were not published so as effectively to eliminate the contract of January 2, 1882, from the original articles of incorporation.

Finally and wholly apart from all other infirmities in the alleged proceedings for the amendment of the articles of incorporation, we insist that the proceedings taken were wholly ineffectual to discharge the Des Moines Company from its charter obligations to observe the trust created by the contract of January 2, 1882, by virtue of the incorporation of said contract in its articles as a part of its organic law.

By Chapter 88 of the acts of assembly of Iowa of 1888, in force April 8, 1890, it is provided:

> "That any of the provisions of the Articles of Incorporation may be changed at any annual meeting of the stockholders or special meeting called for that purpose; but said changes shall not be valid unless recorded and published as the original articles are required to be; and said changes in the articles need only be signed and acknowledged by the officers of said corporation."

Pursuant to the above provision, the Des Moines Company published notice of the amendments to its articles, and this published notice, which appears in the record as Exhibit 614 (Rec., 2010), contains no reference whatever to the new article 2, supposed to be substituted in place of the original article 2, which contained the provision that

"All the powers exercised by this company shall be in accordance with the terms and spirit of the aforesaid contract (recited in the preamble of the articles), entered into on the 2nd day of January, A. D. 1882."

We submit, therefore, that the above provision of the original articles is in full force and effect, and has been in no manner or to no extent impaired by the supposed amendments of April 8, 1890.

The above conclusion is fortified by what the Supreme Court of Iowa has said respecting the effect of these amended articles. In Morgan v. Des Moines Union Railway Company (the Des Moines Company here), 113 Ia., 561, the question of the powers of that company was in issue. The court, after quoting article 2 of the original articles, states:

"These articles were afterwards amended, but in no way was the language set out qualified in the amendment."

It is also to be noted that Judge Wade of the District Court, in referring to the amendment to the articles of incorporation, says:

"It does not appear that it was intended to affect any right then existing, and even if such intention existed on the part of anyone, it was not manifest, and I find nothing which would give it effect." (Rec., 2047.)

The independent transactions of F. M. Hubbell in respect of the trust properties.

That it was farthest from the intent of the purchasing committee or of the defendants to repudiate or destroy the trust estates, is demonstrated by the contemporaneous transactions taking place between Hubbell and the purchasing committee, set out in full in the third subdivision of the statement of facts, and now to be commented upon.

The above transactions resulted in two successive purchases by Hubbell from the purchasing committee of the Wabash Company of first, a quarter interest in the stock of the Des Moines Company, of which General Dodge took one-half, thus vesting in each of these parties an eighth interest in such stock, and second, a further purchase by Hubbell from the purchasing committee of an eighth of the total amount of stock of the Des Moines Company, thus leaving the purchasing committee of the Wabash Company with only an eighth interest in the Des Moines Company, instead of its original one-half.

In considering the significance of these transactions, which thus resulted in the transfer of stock ownership, it is very important to note that Dodge and Hubbell became but the channel by which the one-eighth interest, acquired by Dodge, and the two-eighths interest acquired by Hubbell, were transferred at the inception of its existence, to the consolidated corporation composed of the union of the Northern and Northwestern Companies and controlled by Hubbell and Dodge, Hubbell owning approximately six thousand out of ten thousand shares of this company. Thus, these transactions were not the source of the five-eighths stock holding interest which Hubbell now has in the Des Moines Company and upon which he bases his claim to control the corporation.

The foregoing is important in a determination of what both Hubbell and Ashley, in their negotiations, understood to be the nature of the property interests evidenced by the capital stock of the Des Moines Company. The correspondence and transactions of the parties, relating to these stock transfers, is set out in full in subdivision III of the statement of facts and particular attention is called to the same.

On June 12, 1888, Hubbell wrote Ashley, asking permission to offer for sale a quarter interest in the Des Moines Company to parties making inquiry of him. (Rec., 1059.) On June 16, 1888, Ashley replied stating that he thought the purchasing committee would be glad to sell a one-quarter interest, but that he had always supposed "that it would be necessary to confine the sale to such railway companies as could be interested in the station." He mentioned the Chicago and North Western Ry. Company and further said:

> "was there not an understanding or agreement as to the sale of the stock when the terminal company was formed and would it not be prejudicial to the interest of the whole to part with the stock to outsiders." (Rec., 1059.)

On June 18, 1888, Hubbell replied:

> "I agree with you that the sale of a quarter interest in the stock of the terminal company should be made only to a railway company, who will join with the Wabash in making a contract with the Des Moines Union, guaranteeing the interest upon the bonds and operating expenses, etc. * * * I understand it, as you do, that the stock cannot be sold without consent of the different railroad companies who now form the Terminal Company." (Rec., 1060.)

At this juncture it is at least clear that Hubbell was working in harmony with the conception that stock could only be sold in one-quarter interests and must eventually be held by railroad companies who would thereby enter the terminal enterprise on a parity with the original proprietors. This idea was in exact harmony with the intention constant with the proprietary companies, that stock should be identified with ownership and therefore should represent an aliquot estate in the tenancy in common.

Later in the year 1888, Hubbell unsuccessfully attempted to persuade the purchasing committee to surrender a one-quarter interest of the stock to the Des Moines Company, presumably to enable that company to sell the aliquot portion of the estate represented by it to another railroad company. In February, 1890, Hubbell obtained from Ashley an option to buy $135,000 of the bonds and a one-quarter interest in the capital stock of the Des Moines Company for $135,000 (Rec., 1339), and as a result of this option, Dodge and he acquired from the purchasing committee each an eighth interest in the stock of the Des Moines Company. (Rec., 1601.)

Memoranda of agreement in identical form, made between the purchasing committee and Hubbell and Dodge respectively, relating to these one-eighth stock transfers, are very important. This memorandum recites that in the articles of incorporation of the Des Moines Company, it is provided that the Wabash Company shall nominate four directors; that the stock of the Des Moines Company is now held by different parties and in different proportions from what it was when said articles were adopted, and that it was agreed therefore, between the purchasing committee and Hubbell (and Dodge) who had acquired a one-eighth ownership of the stock of the Des Moines Company that the purchasing committee would consent to such change in the articles of the Des Moines Company as would permit one director to be nominated by any person or corporation holding one-eighth of the stock of the Des Moines Company. (Rec., 1601.)

In other words, the parties controlling the three proprietary companies had agreed that thereafter aliquot estates in the common tenancy might be transferred in eighths, instead of quarters. This is what was cared for as before shown in the amendments made in the articles of the Des Moines Company.

In the last transaction had between Hubbell and the purchasing committee, it conclusively appears that both parties always understood ownership of stock to be identical with ownership of property, and that in this respect, an eighth interest would be sufficient to represent a proprietorship, for they expressly said so.

At the time of the foregoing transactions Hubbell began negotiating with the purchasing committee of the Wabash for the purchase of an additional one-eighth share of its interest in the Des Moines Company. On April 1, 1890, he wrote Ashley, asking the terms upon which such one-eighth interest could be purchased. (Rec., 1061.) On April 5, 1890, Ashley replied, giving his price with this statement contained in his letter:

> "IT MUST BE UNDERSTOOD, OF COURSE, THAT A ONE-EIGHTH INTEREST IN THE CAPITAL STOCK SHALL BE SUFFICIENT TO REPRESENT A PROPRIETORSHIP IN THE COMPANY ACCORDING TO THE UNDERSTANDING WE HAD WHEN YOU WERE HERE." (Rec., 1063.)

On these terms Hubbell consummated the purchase of the additional one-eighth interest in the Des Moines Company. When certificates of stock were eventually issued by the Des Moines Company a one-eighth interest was issued to Hubbell, a one-eighth to Dodge, and a few months later an additional one-eighth was transferred to Hubbell; and as before stated, on the consolidation of the Northern and Northwestern Companies on October 12, 1891, these two parties transferred their interest in the Des Moines Company to the consolidated company, thereby giving that company with the original two one-quarter interests, derived from its constituent companies, a seven-eighths interest in the estate in common. (Rec., 1461.)

It is contended by counsel for the defendants that the sale by the purchasing committee of an aliquot portion of its stock in the Des Moines Company to individuals, represents an anomaly in the contention that stock was intended to evidence proprietorship in the trust properties, and that, therefore, the purchasing committee perpetrated a disingenuous transaction upon Hubbell. The answer to this proposition is very clear. It is true that the scheme contemplated, that railroads alone could be proprietors in the common enterprise, as is shown by Section twenty-four of the agreement of May 10, 1889, and could only become such upon unanimous consent. Still this is not to say that, with all parties agreeing and having full knowledge of the situation, Hubbell could not have been made a proprietor to the extent to which persons, as distinguished from railroads, might be able to benefit thereby. It is to be remembered that the character of the beneficial interest that Hubbell and Dodge acquired in the stock transferred to them, is not on trial and should have no bearing or influence in this case. Hubbell presumably wished to acquire such stock for a sale at a profit to other railroad companies who might seek to use the terminals, and he and Dodge in fact became merely the channel by which they did transfer at a profit their respective interests to the proprietary company controlled by them; but whether or no the transfers of stock to Hubbell and Dodge were anomalous in the sense that there could not be vested in them as individuals that character of beneficial interest in the common estate which could only be enjoyed by railroad companies, it is beyond question that this anomaly had no equivocation of a character that could possibly destroy the proprietary estate of the purchasing committee as the successor of the St. Louis Company, as long as it was expressly agreed between the parties "that a one-eighth interest in the capital stock shall be sufficient to represent a proprietorship in the company." (Rec., 1603.)

It is appropriate to conclude this subdivision by calling attention to the annual reports that were made by the Des Moines Company for purposes of taxation to the executive council of the State of Iowa, on December 31, 1888, 1889 and 1890, and on January 1, 1892, and 1893. In each of these reports appears the following:

> "The Des Moines Union Railway Company is simply a 'Representative Company' acting as an agency at Des Moines for the Wabash Railroad Company, the Des Moines and Northwestern Ry. Co., and the Des Moines and Northern Railway Company, performing all the necessary work for them and charging each road at actual cost, its due proportion of the expense, thereby incurred." (Rec., 731.)

The officers of the company verified these reports, and in the instance of 1891, F. C. Hubbell was the verifying president. (Rec., 721, 723.) It is significant that the report signed and verified on February 16, 1894, immediately succeeding the transaction of January 29, 1894, by which Hubbell acquired his five-eighths interest in the Des Moines Company, states that the Des Moines Company "is the owner of the property hereinbefore described." (Rec., 724.)

V.

"THE SERIES OF ACTS AND CIRCUMSTANCES" THROUGH WHICH, IN THE MAJORITY OPINION OF THE COURT OF APPEALS, THE PROPRIETARY COMPANIES ARE SUPPOSED TO HAVE "GRADUALLY LET SLIP FROM THEM THE EXCLUSIVE OWNERSHIP AND CONTROL WHICH THEY HAD AT THE BEGINNING SO MUCH VALUED AND SO CAREFULLY GUARDED" WERE ALL IN HARMONY AND CONSISTENT WITH THE CONTINUED EXISTENCE OF THEIR RESPECTIVE PROPRIETARY INTERESTS.

THESE ACTS AND CIRCUMSTANCES ARE TO BE INTERPRETED IN THE LIGHT OF THE FOLLOWING PRINCIPLE, NAMELY, THE EQUITABLE INTEREST THAT EACH OF THE RAILWAY COMPANIES, PARTY TO THE CONTRACT OF JANUARY 2, 1882, ACQUIRED IN THE TERMINAL PROPERTIES OF THE DES MOINES COMPANY WAS MORE THAN A RIGHT IN PERSONAM OR CHOSE IN ACTION—IT WAS A RIGHT IN REM, NAMELY, AN ESTATE IN PROPERTY VESTED IN THIS RESPECT TO THE SAME EXTENT AS THOUGH THE LEGAL TITLE THERETO HAD BEEN CONVEYED TO SUCH COMPANY.

The conclusions reached in the majority opinion of the Court of Appeals are based upon the premise of the existence of a trust and the loss by the beneficiaries of this trust, without their design or intention, of all their rights under the same through successive acts on their part "natural," "harmless" and inadvertent. In the above respect the Court said:

> "(a) The title contemplated was a trust. The legal title to be 'in a trustee to be named by agreement of said companies.' The beneficial estate to be in the three companies in proportion to the parts each contributed to the payment therefor." (Rec., 2096.)
> "(b) Thus the railways themselves had, through a series of acts and circumstances extending over many years, gradually let slip from them the exclusive ownership and control which they had at the beginning so much valued and so carefully guarded." (Rec., 2114.)

"(c) There is nowhere any indication that the railways intended any such result, and yet such, in our judgment, is the result. This unexpected outcome was the product of several circumstances." (Rec., 2113.)

Judge Hook in his dissenting opinion has the following to say of the position of the majority:

"In both aspects of its position towards the proprietary companies the terminal company was in a high sense their trustee; and according to salutary principles it was bound to maintain the integrity of that relation. Being itself a corporation, its fiduciary obligations and disabilities rested equally upon its officers through whom alone it could act. The limitations upon the right of a person in such a capacity to act for his personal benefit with respect to the subject of the trust are familiar. Never are they less than that the dealing must be open, avowedly at arm's length, and without contrivance or concealment. The individual defendants, one or the other or both, were, at all the times material in this case, officers and directors of the terminal company. The conclusion of my brothers, briefly stated, is that by a series of transactions occurring in a long course of years the original character of the terminal company was gradually changed into that of an independent corporation, and that the control of it was lost by the railroad companies and was acquired by the individual defendants who were its officers. But they say: 'There is nowhere any indication that the railways intended any such result, and yet such, in our judgment, is the result. This unexpected outcome was the product of several circumstances.' In other words, the proprietary companies were not cognizant of the trend of the circumstances, and the result held to follow, though unexpected and not intended by them, is enforced because of a legal presumption of intention of natural consequences of acts, regardless of intention in fact. The circumstances relied on do not appear to me to have the significance attributed to them, but were it otherwise the presumption should not be so broadly applied to the case of a trust the destruction of which is claimed by those subject to the disabilities of trustees dealing for themselves. The excerpt quoted above touches the quick of this controversy. In my opinion the various transactions thought to produce a result so unexpected and unforeseen should be severally examined in the light of the surroundings at the time they occurred. If in one aspect they were then consistent, or not apparently inconsistent, with the frequent and studied declarations of the object of the terminal organization and that view was then reasonably entertained by the railroad companies, that view should prevail in a court of equity rather than a shrewder one tending to a conclusion in favor of participants who were bound in good conscience to the contrary." (Italics ours.) (Rec., 2119.)

A sufficient answer to the theory upon which the conclusions in the majority opinion are reached ought to be that it is based upon a fundamentally erroneous conception of the principle of law, applicable to the status of the parties. It is assumed that, upon the creation of the Des Moines Company designed as the corporate entity to hold legal title to the terminal property owned by the proprietary companies, the future relations between that company and the proprietary companies would be contractual. Such was not in any respect the essence of this relationship, for properties charged with a trust are "held—not in opposition to but—for the benefit of the beneficiary." (Brown v. Fletcher, 235 U. S., 589.) Thus, in equity the parties were, in respect of the trust proprietors, one and the same. (Pomeroy's Equity Jurisprudence, Fourth Edition, Section 975.) Beneficial estates, established and reserved upon such a principle of law, cannot be lost by inadvertence to the very party created to hold them intact, for a conveyance to it, the trustee, is in fact a conveyance to the cestui. This principle is the true guide to a proper interpretation of the "series of acts and circumstances" relating to the trust properties.

This series of acts and circumstances upon which the majority opinion of the Court of Appeals relies for its conclusions is as follows:

(1) The Articles of Incorporation of the Des Moines Company adopted December 10, 1884. (Rec., 416.)

These articles are based upon the premise that the Des Moines Company was organized for the sole purpose of making effective the trust created by the contract of January 2, 1882; for the resolution of the incorporators adopting them so recites, the contract of January 2, 1882, is set forth in them as a preamble to their provisions, and article 2 thereof provides that all the powers exercised by the company shall be in accordance with the terms and spirit of said contract.

After the concentration of the trust properties in the company organized for the above purpose, no equitable tenant in common in such trust properties ever conveyed, released or otherwise relinquished to it its equitable estate therein.

(2) Deeds of Conveyance.

By article fifth of the contract of January 2, 1882, the temporary trustees declared that the purchases made by them were made in their names upon the trusts set up in said instrument, and they agreed to quitclaim and convey the same to the permanent trustee, provided for by such instrument, upon demand and reimbursement. Their several deeds of conveyance of the properties so acquired by them were premised upon resolutions of the respective proprietary companies and of the Des Moines Company, adopted for the purpose of vesting the terminal properties in the Des Moines Company as the permanent trustee thereof under the provisions of the contract of January 2, 1882.

(3) The Mortgage of the Des Moines Company.

It is stated that, since the Des Moines Company was required to make a mortgage upon the properties to which it took title to reimburse the temporary trustees for the cost of the purchases made by them, it must be presumed that the Des Moines Company took not only the legal but the beneficial interests in the properties conveyed to it. Such a statement ignores the principle that the attributes of a trust are to be limited alone by the intent of the parties setting up the same. Trustees may be given powers to sell and reinvest the proceeds of trust property, and to mortgage the same in the interests of the trust estate. The term "trustee" and the term "reimbursement" were used advisedly in the fifth article of the contract of January 2, 1882. It was the clear intent of the parties by their deliberate expression in that contract that a "trustee" should take title to the properties, that a "trustee" should mortgage these properties and issue its bonds and that a "trustee" by means of these bonds should "reimburse" the temporary trustees for the advances made on acount of the terminal properties. Thus, the making of the mortgage by the Des Moines Company, the issuing of the bonds thereunder and the delivery of the same to the temporary trustees of the terminal properties in exchange for the deeds of conveyance were a literal compliance with the provisions of the contract of January 2, 1882.

(4) The Supplemental Agreement of May 10, 1889. (Rec., 479.)

This agreement had its inception in a resolution adopted at a stockholders' meeting of the Des Moines Company on March 31, 1888. (Rec., 476.) It was resolved that the proprietary companies shall "pay the operating expenses, taxes and interest on bonds that are or may be issued, after deducting any amount received from other sources for rental, prorated on a wheelage basis, and that said payments, including interest charges shall be made monthly." It was further resolved "That Colonel W. H. Blodgett be requested to prepare an agreement for thirty years from May 1, 1888, based on the above resolution and covering in detail the conduct and operation of the Des Moines Union Railway Company. Said agreement to be approved and executed by all the lines now holding an interest in the property.

Said agreement shall provide that if, at the end of six months from the date of the same, either party to the contract shall feel that the terms of the same are unjust to them, and give notice to that effect, it shall be a matter for readjustment." (Rec., 478.)

And it was also resolved "that the terms and conditions on which the several lines now interested, or which may hereafter become interested, shall enjoy the use of these terminals, be fully set forth in a supplemental agreement to be made and executed between the Des Moines Union Railway Company and each of the lines using the said terminals." (Rec., 478.)

Of the necessities for this agreement, Col. Blodgett, who drew the same, said:

> "A. It was considered necessary to have something in addition to the agreement of January 2, 1882, for these reasons: In the first place the agreement of January 2, 1882, made no provision for the payment of interest and did not provide how the interest charge should be distributed among the railroad companies using the property. That was one reason. Another reason was, that the contract of January 2, 1882, did not obligate the railroad companies who were parties to it or their assigns to use the terminal.

Q. Or pay interest?

A. Nor pay the interest. Let me see—there was the interest charge and the matter of using the property, and then the contract of January 2, 1882, put everything, all the expenses of maintenance and operation of all the property on a wheelage basis, and Mr. Hays and General Dodge and all the parties interested thought that the cost of operating the roundhouses should not be on a wheelage basis, but should be distributed among the railroad companies according to the number of engines that were housed and taken care of for each company; and those were the three things wherein, I think, the contract of May 10, 1889, differed from the contract of January 2, 1882.

Q. It was to cover those points?

A. It was for those reasons that all parties agreed it would be advisable to have a supplemental agreement." (Rec., 366-367.)

He also called attention to the fact that, in respect to the payment of the interest on the mortgage bonds of the Des Moines Company, the contract was to be made retroactive from May 1, 1888, and that the thirty-year period of its proposed existence was to be identical with the time in which the bonds of the Des Moines Company were to be outstanding. (Rec., 367.)

It is to be observed that at the date of this meeting of the stockholders of the Des Moines Company, a date subsequent to the conveyance of the terminal properties to the Des Moines Company, and to the execution of the Des Moines Company's mortgage, all of the parties distinctly recognize the continuing existence of the contract of January 2, 1882, as it is elementary that a supplemental agreement presupposes the continuing force and vitality of the instrument upon which it is based.

From the above, it is also apparent that the agreement of May 10, 1889, was intended to be merely a regulation of the joint relations of the proprietary companies in the use of their common properties. This is evident not only because Col. Blodgett so states, but because the proprietary companies were resolving not separately but in the form of a resolution adopted by their corporate trustee that they should bear the operating expenses, taxes and interest charged upon their own properties, with the proviso that, if at the end of six months any one of them should regard the terms of the contract unjust, notice should be given to that effect and it should be a matter for readjustment; and that the agreement should be a "supplemental agreement," thus intending to keep in full force and effect the contract of January 2, 1882, and to supplement it with details necessary to make possible a harmonious joint user of the terminal properties by its three proprietors.

In objection to the above, it is stated that the preambles of the contract recite that the Des Moines Company became incorporated and organized under the laws of the State of Iowa, for the purpose of owning and operating a line of railway in the City of Des Moines, etc. (Rec., 363.)

Judge Hook, in his dissenting opinion answers the foregoing by saying that

> "in a preamble it was recited that, in pursuance of its charter, it acquired and owned a railway. The charter was that of 1884, into which the contract of 1882 was written." (Rec., 2121.)

An analysis of the terms of the contract also discloses a recognition of the proprietorship of the second parties thereto in the terminal properties.

(a) No rental was required of the second parties; whereas, it provided for the payment of rental by other railroads who (without becoming stockholders) might be admitted to the use of the terminal properties with the unanimous consent of the second parties.

(b) The Des Moines Company was not intended to acquire revenue over and above its cost of operation, as amounts derived from other railroad companies were to be used to reduce the expense of operating the terminals assumed by the proprietary companies.

(c) The proprietary companies were to assume the control and operation of the Des Moines Company, through an executive committee of three, each of the three proprietors to have one representative. The executive committee was to appoint the superintendent of the properties and to make and enforce the rules and regulations for the use, management and operation of the terminals.

(b) Sections twenty-four and twenty-six identified the second parties to the agreement as proprietors of the properties, by providing the terms and conditions under which stock in representation of their proprietary interests was to be allotted to them, and in identifying the ownership of stock with the right of use and occupation.

(e) If an outsider should default in its obligations, the second parties were to reimburse the first party on a wheelage basis for the amount of such default, thus showing the responsibility of proprietors to protect their own interests.

The foregoing shows that the agreement of May 10, 1889, was made supplemental to the contract of January

2, 1882, for the purpose of settling the details of operation and accounting among the proprietors until May 1, 1918.

(5) The issue of capital stock.

The subject matter of the issue of capital stock has already been fully developed. The record shows that it was neither issued to reimburse the temporary trustees or their beneficiaries for advances made by them in acquiring the terminal properties, nor distributed in relation to such advances, but was issued in exact accord with the contract of January 2, 1882, and of the supplemental agreement of May 10, 1889, with the intent that it should represent the several aliquot estates of the proprietary companies in the common tenancy.

(6) The Amended Articles of Incorporation.

Full comment has been made upon this subject matter under title IV of this brief.

(7) The agreement of July 31, 1897. (Rec., 506.)

The sole object of this agreement was to make the Wabash Railroad Company, as successor to the St. Louis Company, and the Des Moines, Northern and Western Railway Company (the consolidated company) as successor to the Northwestern and Northern Companies, parties to the supplemental agreement of May 10, 1889. It is therein stated that so much of said contract "as relates to the issuance and distribution of the capital stock of said Des Moines Company is no longer binding and that the capital stock of said Des Moines Company is held as follows:" Thereafter, F. M. Hubbell & Son is listed, among others, as holding twenty-five hundred shares.

It is contended that this latter recital is a statement made by the Wabash Railroad Company inconsistent with the continuance of the trust established by the contract of January 2, 1882.

The above may be answered by saying that since it is an attribute of common tenancies that each title holder therein, irrespective of his proportionate interest, has a right of user of the common premises on a parity with all other tenants in common, the assignment by a proprietary company of an allotment of stock to an individual instead of to another railroad company is certainly not an act inconsistent with the continued existence of a proprietary interest in the terminal properties in such railroad assignor to the extent of any aliquot share of the same still held by it; and that the nature of the interest of an individual stockholder, assuming his rightful ownership of such stock in the terminal properties, is not on trial here.

Furthermore, the statement quoted from the above contract has a significance directly contrary to that contended for by the defendant. The sole object of the contract was to bring the consolidated company and the Wabash Company within the terms of the supplemental agreement of May 10, 1889. If stock in the Des Moines Company was not intended to represent proprietary shares in its properties, it would have been idle and irrelevant to recite in such contract its distribution and ownership. The purpose of this recital was undoubtedly to lock up, so to speak, the successor companies as tenants in common with the remaining tenants in common in said property in respect of their joint and several obligations. Finally it may be noticed that no allusion was made to the agreement of July 31, 1897, in the opinions of the court below except in the majority opinion in connection with the disposition of the surplus earnings, where as affecting these earnings the majority opinion states:

> "A subsequent contract of July 31, 1897, does not affect this controversy." (Rec., 2114.)

VI.

TO GIVE THE ACTS AND CIRCUMSTANCES HEREINBEFORE ENUMERATED A CONSTRUCTION OR ASPECT IN DEROGATION OF THE EQUITABLE ESTATES IN COMMON OF THE PROPRIETARY COMPANIES, PURSUANT TO THE CHARACTERIZATION THEREOF, OF THE MAJORITY OPINION OF THE CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS, WOULD BE TO PERMIT TRUSTEES OR FIDUCIARIES, NOT ONLY TO REPUDIATE THE RIGHTS OF THEIR CESTUIS QUE TRUSTENTS, BUT TO ACQUIRE FOR THEMSELVES THE BENEFICIAL INTERESTS IN THE TRUST ESTATES.

The Circuit Court of Appeals in its majority opinion holds that a trust was created under the terms of the contract of January 2, 1882, that the beneficiaries thereunder or proprietary companies at all times intended the continuance of said trust, but that the same, through acts of inadvertence "apparently harmless," was destroyed, and that the Des Moines Company became an independent corporation holding the trust properties free from the terms of the trust and under the control of the Hubbells.

The principle announced in the title to this subdivision of the brief is to be applied to the conclusions of the Circuit Court of Appeals as above stated. It has application to the parties in interest in their relation to the terminal properties in several aspects, namely:

(1) To the Des Moines Company and to any officer, director or agent thereof, making a claim on its behalf or to his own advantage inconsistent with the rights or interest of the proprietary companies as beneficiaries of the trust assumed by the Des Moines Company.

(2) To any cotenant in the common equitable estate, whether one of the proprietary companies or a successor in interest thereto by assignment of its estate as against the interest of any other cotenant in the common equitable estate.

At all times during the transactions involved in this litigation, F. M. Hubbell was an officer and director of the Des Moines Company and of each of the three proprietary companies and the controlling stockholder of the Northwestern Company and of its successor the consolidated company from which he acquired the five-eighths interest in the stock of the Des Moines Company, upon which he now bases his claim. (Rec., 1296.)

In the above respect he actively participated in the management of the corporate affairs of the Des Moines Company and of the Northwestern and the consolidated companies, and he was, moreover, the individual upon whom the Wabash Company and its successor, the purchasing committee, relied in confidence for the purpose of protecting their interest in the terminal properties at Des Moines.

Therefore, as an officer, director or agent of the Des Moines, he was bound by the terms of the trust and in this respect could not take advantage of any act of a proprietary company in derogation of its beneficial interest in the trust estate. A trustee is not permitted to assert in his own behalf any right or interest in trust properties resulting from the inadvertence of his beneficiaries. (Bigelow on Estoppel, 6th Edition, page 568.)

Likewise, as an officer, director and controlling stockholder of the consolidated company, a successor in interest to an aliquot estate in the properties acquired to be held and used in common, he controlled the acts of a trustee and was thus bound as a fiduciary, for cotenants occupy to each other the position of express trustees in respect to the property held in common.

In the case of Bissell v. Foss, 114 U. S., 252, at page 259, it is said:

> "It is true that one of two or more tenants in common, holding by a common title, cannot purchase an outstanding title or incumbrance upon the joint estate for his own benefit. Such a purchase enures to the benefit of all, because there is an obligation between them, resulting from their joint claim and community of interest, that one of them shall not affect the claim to the prejudice of the others. Rothwell v. Dewees, 2 Black, 613; Van Horne v. Fonda, 5 Johns. Ch. 388; Lloyd v. Lynch, 28 Penn. St. 419; Downer v. Smith, 38 Vt. 464."

See, also, to the same effect the case of Rothwell v. Dewees, 2 Black, 613, at page 618, in which it is said:

> "In the case of Van Horne v. Fonda, 5 Johns. Chy. R., 407, the rule is very fully laid down by Chancellor Kent, that where two devisees or tenants in common hold under an imperfect title, and one of them buys in the outstanding title, such purchase will enure to their common benefit upon contribution made to repay the purchase money."

See, also, Turner v. Sawyer, 150 U. S., 578, at page 586, and Starkweather v. Jenner, 216 U. S., 524, at page 538.

The principle announced in the above authorities, which makes one cotenant a trustee for another, where he buys an outstanding title of the common estate, would, of course, apply with peculiar force where one would attempt to acquire a control or title to the common estate as against the other by taking advantage of his unintentional acts in derogation of his title. If the foregoing be true, of course, it also follows that Hubbell, as a successor to the consolidated company in ownership to a portion of the stock in the Des Moines Company, by a transaction in which he was virtually both seller and buyer, could have rights no greater than the consolidated company, his controlled vendor. Thus, whatever his status as an individual stockholder in respect of the terminal properties of the Des Moines Company, he may not assert thereby a control over the properties of the Des Moines Company inconsistent with the trust estates of the proprietary companies therein.

It is appropriate here to submit to this Court the form of relief which should be awarded the complainants in the enforcement of their proprietary interests in the terminal properties. The trust established by the contract of January 2, 1882, has never been abrogated. The period of the supplemental agreement of May 10, 1889, has expired. The rights of the proprietors should be protected upon the basis of the attributes belonging to their equitable estates established by the original trust instrument, and this Court is, therefore, asked to decree that the complainants are entitled to the use and occupation of the terminal properties in perpetuity, the cost of operation to be divided between them on a basis of wheelage, as provided in Article Sixth of the contract of January 2, 1882. (Rec., 413.)

VII.

THE FIVE-EIGHTHS STOCK INTEREST IN THE DES MOINES COMPANY HAVING BEEN ACQUIRED BY THE HUBBELLS FROM THE CONSOLIDATED COMPANY, OF WHICH THEY WERE DOMINATING STOCKHOLDERS AND DIRECTORS, IN VIOLATION OF THEIR FIDUCIARY OBLIGATIONS TO THE PROPRIETARY COMPANIES, THE DECREE HEREIN, IN ADDITION TO THE PRIMARY RELIEF ASKED QUIETING THE EQUITABLE TITLES OF THE COMPLAINANTS IN THE TRUST PROPERTIES, SHOULD ALSO PROVIDE FOR A RESCISSION OF THE STOCK TRANSACTION AND FOR A REDEMPTION OF THE SHARES BY THE COMPLAINANTS ON EQUITABLE TERMS.

Enough has already been said to demonstrate the clear right of the complainants to the primary relief asked in the amended complaint quieting their equitable title to the trust properties and protecting them in the use and enjoyment thereof upon the basis of the contract of January 2, 1882.

It is unthinkable that these great public carriers, serving a populous community by means of railway facilities, which they and their predecessors established in the exercise of corporate franchises derived from the State of Iowa, and in a large measure through the aid of grants and subsidies provided by the community itself, should be cut off from the use of these facilities as the result of machinations of their own fiduciary and trustee.

The granting of a decree enforcing alone the right of the complainants to the use and enjoyment as equitable tenants in common of the terminal properties, would, however, leave undetermined a subordinate but important question as to the proper disposition of the shares of the Des Moines Company claimed to be owned by F. M. Hubbell & Son.

It was never intended by the proprietary companies or their predecessors that any of the shares of the Des Moines Company should be permanently divorced from the beneficial ownership, use and enjoyment of the terminal properties.

By the contract of January 2, 1882, as already pointed out, an undivided quarter interest in the terminals represented a proprietorship thereof, and a one-quarter interest was allotted each to the Northwestern Company and the Northern Company and a one-half interest to the St. Louis Company, leaving in the possession and control of the St. Louis Company a surplus quarter interest which might be sold to another railway company. It was then understood and agreed by the proprietary companies that this surplus quarter interest held by the St. Louis Company might be sold to another railway company desiring to use the terminals, but only sold to such railway company and "not to outsiders."

This agreement was recognized by F. M. Hubbell in his correspondence with Ashley in 1888. (Rec., 1060.) A year later it was definitely incorporated in the supplemental agreement of May 10, 1889, as Section twenty-four thereof. (Rec., 485.)

Afterwards, as testified by A. B. Cummins, the personal counsel of the Hubbell interests, and the general counsel of the Des Moines Company, the proprietary companies determined to broaden the trust enterprise so "that all the railroads in Des Moines could be brought into these terminals" and "that each railroad that might come into the depot in the future might become the owner of one-eighth of the stock." (Rec., 1208.)

This merely involved a redivision of the shares of the trust enterprise into eighths instead of quarters, each interest to be measured by one-eighth of the stock of the Des Moines Company—a division which, as a glance at a railroad map will show, corresponds precisely to the number of railroads entering Des Moines.

At this juncture, F. M. Hubbell again approached Ashley respecting the purchase of the surplus interest held by the St. Louis Company and in the months of February and August, 1890, he induced Ashley to part with three-eighths of the stock of the Des Moines Company held by the St. Louis Company, upon the distinct understanding "that a one-eighth interest in the capital stock shall be sufficient to represent a proprietorship in the company." (Rec., 1602.)

That this transaction was in furtherance of the trust enterprise and not in destruction of it is clear.

That it was not intended that Hubbell individually should permanently hold the stock is equally clear.

In the hands of Hubbell, the stock of the Des Moines Company could have no legitimate value, except for the purpose of resale to other companies who could be admitted with the original proprietors as equitable tenants in common in the use and occupation of the terminals.

What effort, if any, was made by Hubbell to bring in new proprietors does not appear.

It does appear, however, that within a year after the above transaction, Hubbell and Dodge resold at a profit to themselves the three-eighths interest, acquired as above, to the consolidated company formed by the union of the Northwestern and Northern Companies, which it is to be noted was directly in line with the definite understanding of the various parties that shares in the Des Moines Company could only be held by railway companies using the terminals.

For the two-eighths interest sold by Hubbell, he received from the consolidated company its first mortgage bonds at par, in the amount of $60,000, which was at the rate of $30,000 for each one-eighth interest. (Rec., 1461.)

The shares remained in the treasury of the consolidated company for nearly two years when, together with certain other shares, they were removed therefrom by the Hubbells by successive transactions, to which the attention of this Court is especially directed.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the consolidated company, held October 4, 1893, on motion of A. B. Cummins, a director of that company, and the personal counsel of the Hubbell interests, it was resolved to pledge five-eighths of the stock of the Des Moines Company, out of the seven-eighths then held by the consolidated company, as security for certain alleged outstanding notes of that company held by F. M. Hubbell & Son. (Rec., 1480.)

Inasmuch as this pledge of the five-eighths interest in the Des Moines Company was given, or attempted to be given, on the threshhold of a receivership, as security for antecedent indebtedness of the consolidated company, the pledge was voluntary and without consideration and consequently was invalid. (Jones on Collateral Securities, Section 360a.)

The next step taken by the Hubbels was in the nature of a pro forma foreclosure of the invalid pledge.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the consolidated company held January 29, 1894, less than four months after the transaction above mentioned, on motion of A. B. Cummins, a resolution was adopted surrendering to F. M. Hubbell & Son, in satisfaction of a certain part of the consolidated company's alleged note indebtedness the five-eighths interest in the Des Moines

Company's stock at 10 per cent of its face value or at a rate of $5,000 for each one-eighth interest. (Rec., 1482.)

That F. M. Hubbell abstained from voting either for or against the resolution of the board of directors of the consolidated company is, we submit, of no consequence. He was the president of the company, and he and his firm owned and controlled a majority of its capital stock and he dictated and controlled the action of the directors in all respects. Of the seven members of the board of directors, three (F. M. Hubbell, F. C. Hubbell and H. D. Thompson) were members of Mr. Hubbell's immediate family and a fourth, A. B. Cummins, was the personal attorney for the Hubbell interests.

As F. M. Hubbell himself had valued a one-eighth interest at $30,000, in the sale made to the consolidated company two years earlier, giving to the five-eighths he took from the consolidated company under the resolution last above mentioned for $25,000 a valuation of $150,000, it is unnecessary to argue that the transaction in and of itself was a fraud on the consolidated company, its stockholders, bondholders and other creditors. Moreover, the alleged notes of the consolidated company, which the Hubbells surrendered at their face value, in payment for these shares in the Des Moines Company were unsecured, save as they themselves had sought to secure them by the invalid pledge made three months earlier: The property of the consolidated company, including an additional two-eighths interest in the Des Moines Company, was encumbered by a mortgage to the Metropolitan Trust Company of the City of New York, securing an issue of bonds upon which a default was imminent. The notes of the consolidated company, which the Hubbells so surrendered at their face value, were junior in equity to the outstanding mortgage bonds, and as to these the record states "that the company had made strenuous efforts to dispose of the same at 55 per cent of their face value" but had been "wholly unable to do so." (Rec., 1482.)

The immediate purpose of the above transaction was to enable F. M. Hubbell to remove from the treasury of the consolidated company, of which he was the president, a director and the dominating stockholder, certain assets which were unpledged but held by the company in trust for its creditors to apply the same to the full payment of a certain uncollectible indebtedness held by his own firm; thus preferring his own firm over other creditors equally entitled to the benefit of the free assets of the company, including among these creditors the holders of bonds secured by the mortgage to the Metropolitan Trust Company and then unsalable in the market on the basis of 55 per cent of their face value.

The ultimate purpose of the transaction was to place in the possession, and under the dominion and control of F. M. Hubbell, shares of the Des Moines Company, of which he was also an officer and director, to be employed by him in furtherance of a scheme to destroy the proprietary interests of the consolidated company and the Wabash Company in the terminal properties held in trust by the Des Moines Company. At this time he was, it will be recalled, negotiating to sell his interest in the consolidated company to the St. Paul Company.

Against these transactions, the complainants are clearly entitled to equitable relief.

As stated at the outset, it was never intended that the stock of the Des Moines Company should be permanently divorced from the beneficial ownership, use and enjoyment of the terminal properties. Representing, as it unquestionably did, the several proprietary or aliquot interests in the trust properties, each of the proprietary companies was an express trustee of the other as to the common property held in equitable title and was precluded from dealing with the trust properties or with any interest therein to the injury of one or more of the equitable cotenants. The disability of one equitable cotenant to thus deal with the trust properties is an incident of the reciprocal trusteeship existing between cotenants. (Rothwell v. Dewees, 2 Black, 613.)

The defendant Hubbell, as an officer, director and dominating stockholder of the consolidated company, had no right to take from its treasury on any terms an interest in the Des Moines Company to be employed in his hands to lessen or impair or undermine the interests which that company retained in the Des Moines Company and had pledged to the Metropolitan Trust Company.

The consolidated company had no right to give to anyone, much less to F. M. Hubbell & Son, an interest in the Des Moines Company to be employed in the hands of the taker to lessen or impair or undermine the interests in the Des Moines Company held by the St. Louis Company.

Moreover, in the present instance, each of the equitable cotenants had agreed with the others and with the Des Moines Company that no share in the Des Moines Company could be transferred without the consent of all of the proprietors, and it was further agreed that all stock certificates of the Des Moines Company "shall express upon their face that they are not transferable in whole or in part, without the consent in writing" of the proprietary companies. (Rec., 487.)

That F. M. Hubbell, as secretary of the Des Moines Company, issued the stock certificates of the Des Moines Company, without placing thereon this legend is not disputed.

That F. M. Hubbell never obtained from the St. Louis Company or from the Metropolitan Trust Company, as mortgagee of the consolidated company, a written consent or any other consent to the transfer of the five-eighths interest here in question is also not disputed.

Upon these facts the complainants have a clear remedy.

The original pledge of the five-eighths interest to F. M. Hubbell & Son, having been made without notice either to the St. Louis Company or to the Metropolitan Trust Company, as mortgagee of the consolidated company, and the pledge having been foreclosed without public sale or judicial sale, but under a fraudulent private sale had under action of the board of directors of the consolidated company dominated by Hubbell, a sale made without notice either to the St. Louis Company or to the Metropolitan Trust Company, it follows (viewing the transaction most favorably from the standpoint of the Hubbells), that the shares passed to the Hubbells and have been continuously held by them, subject to redemption on equitable terms by the St. Louis Company and the Metropolitan Trust Company or those claiming under it.

Nor is the right of the complainants to equitable relief barred by laches. The fraud was not discovered until after the institution of this suit, and it is elementary that laches does not operate until the fraud is discovered.

As the proprietary companies and their successors held equitable estates in the terminal property as tenants in common, it was immaterial in respect of their rights of use and occupation of the same which company held the major portion of the Des Moines Company's stock. The Hubbells having diverted and obtained possession of 2,500 shares of the Des Moines Company's stock in violation of their trust obligations, the right to redeem the same belongs jointly and severally to the complainants in their status as tenants in common. Therefore, they ask that said 2,500 shares so diverted and held by the Hubbells be surrendered to the complainants upon reimbursement to the Hubbells for the amount claimed to have been paid by them for such shares, to wit: $25,000, with interest thereon from January 29, 1894.

It will be recalled in this connection that the unanimous vote of the stockholders of the Des Moines Company is necessary to elect a director and that the unanimous vote of the eight directors of the company is necessary for the election of officers. The Hubbells controlled the board of the company and held its principal offices at the time of the institution of this suit and the complainants are unable to dislodge them. They are usurping the several offices they hold in plain violation of the community principle upon which the Des Moines Company was organized and have arrogated to themselves, as individuals, the management of the vast property interests held in trust by the Des Moines Company. As the corporate representative and agency of the proprietary companies, the Des Moines Company has ceased to function and, unless equitable relief in this respect is awarded to the complainants, a dissolution of the Des Moines Company is the only alternative to perpetual domination and control of its affairs by these thoroughly discredited defendants, who assert their control by the suffrage of shares of stock held under a title which is fraudulent per se and is voidable by the complainants upon settled principles of equity. In such a situation, affecting as it does not only the rights of these complainants as public carriers but also the vital interests of the City of Des Moines, an application of the well settled principles of equity above developed seems eminently proper and just.

VIII.

NO FACTS APPEAR IN THE RECORD CONSTITUTING AN ESTOPPEL OR LACHES DEFEATING THE EQUITY OF THE COMPLAINANTS.

That the doctrine of estoppel has no application in this controversy, except as it may operate against the Hubbells, is too clear for argument.

It is fundamental that no man can set up another's act or declaration as a ground of an estoppel, unless he, himself, has been misled or deceived thereby.

Further, as stated by Mr. Justice Field, speaking for this Court in Brant v. Virginia Coal & Iron Company et al., 93 U. S., 326, at page 337:

> "It is also essential for its application with respect to the title of real property that the party claiming to have been influenced by the conduct or declarations of another to his injury was himself not only destitute of knowledge of the true state of the title, but also of any convenient and available means of acquiring such knowledge. Where the condition of the title is known to both parties, or both have the same means of ascertaining the truth, there can be no estoppel."

As F. M. Hubbell was an officer and director in the Des Moines Company and had for years been directing the trust enterprise, his actual knowledge of the condition of the title was certainly as good, in fact far superior to that of the proprietary companies and their representatives. Manifestly, he can claim no estoppel against them.

He, however, by reason of his official relation to the trust enterprise was the principal, if not the only, channel of information available to them in respect thereof. They were entitled to rely implicitly upon any statement which he might make with reference thereto, and he is estopped to repudiate any such statement.

Take, for example, his dealings with Ashley in 1890 when he acquired the three-eighths interest in the Des Moines Company's stock:

He induced Ashley to part with the stock in question upon the distinct understanding that a one-eighth stock interest "shall be sufficient to represent a proprietorship in the company." He now seeks to repudiate this understanding, but is estopped to do so because, if a one-eighth interest was not sufficient to represent a proprietorship,

(a) Hubbell so represented the fact to Ashley;

(b) The circumstances were such that knowledge of the truth was imputed to Hubbell; and

(c) Hubbell thereby induced Ashley to change his position.

There are here present all of the elements of a complete estoppel:

Bigelow on Estoppel, 476.

Herman on Estoppel, 797.

The Hubbells insist, however, that at various times, especially during the period between 1897 and the date of the institution of this suit, the complainants had dealings or negotiations with the Hubbells for an extension of the supplemental agreement of May 10, 1889, and that by reason of these negotiations:

(a) They had induced the Hubbells to believe that the stock in the Des Moines Company represented valuable property rights;

(b) That they had led the Hubbells to believe that they recognized them as the lawful owners of the five-eighths interest in the stock of the Des Moines Company, and

(c) That in reliance upon these representations of the complainants they served without direct compensation as officers and directors of the Des Moines Company for a long period of years solely for the purpose of building up the terminals and making the terminals valuable so as to enhance the value of their stock interest in the Des Moines Company.

We shall refer briefly to these propositions in their order, as stated.

The record discloses no representation on the part of the complainants, or either of them, respecting the property rights represented by the Des Moines Company stock apart from the definite agreement and understanding between F. M. Hubbell and Ashley already mentioned, namely, that a one-eighth stock interest in the Des Moines Company should be sufficient to represent a proprietorship in that company. How valuable such proprietorship may be the complainants do not know and have never stated. They do, however, regard it as an immensely valuable interest and have always so regarded it; and inasmuch as the five-eighths stock interest claimed to be owned by the Hubbells is equivalent to five proprietary interests in the Des Moines Company, it follows that the stock interests claimed to be owned by the Hubbells are very valuable. If their title to this five-eighths interest were good, they could readily dispose of the same to various railway companies whose lines enter the City of Des Moines, a number of which are already using the terminals and paying substantial rentals therefor.

The title under which the Hubbells claim to hold this stock has already been discussed.

Neither of the complainants had any knowledge of the purpose for which this stock had been acquired until Hubbell declared it in 1905, and they had no knowledge as to the character of the Hubbells' title thereto until the Hubbells themselves introduced in evidence in this suit the records of the consolidated company, to which the attention of this Court has already been directed.

Afterwards the complainants amended the bill so as to obtain a decree setting the transactions aside.

The first definite advice to the Wabash Company of Hubbell's claim to own this stock interest came to it as follows:

Ashley, on behalf of the Wabash purchasing committee, was negotiating to sell certain of the Des Moines Company's bonds when the point was raised that by reason of foreclosure proceedings and reorganizations of the Northwestern and Northern Companies, parties to the supplemental agreement of May 10, 1889, these companies had ceased to exist, and that the reorganized consolidated company, their successor, was under no definite contract obligation to use the terminals and pay its proportion of the interest on the Des Moines Company's bonds. (Rec., 1561.) Ashley at once wrote Hubbell asking that he arrange for the execution of a new agreement with the reorganized consolidated company as a party, the agreement

> "to be exactly as before, except that the time must be made to correspond with the life of the bonds, or to be made for a period to extend beyond their maturity." (Rec., 1673.)

Upon receipt of this letter Hubbell wrote Cummins directing that he prepare a new agreement and suggesting certain changes, the significance of which, in the light of subsequent developments, cannot possibly be misunderstood.

We call especial attention to the following suggestions made in his letter to Cummins. He says:

> "On page one of the present contract, the extent of the present railway seems to be limited to the east boundary line of the city on the east and to Farnham street on the west. I suggest that there be no limit either east or west."

The purpose of this we will indicate later.

He further says:

"I think it advisable to have the new contract recognize the ownership of the stock as it now exists, hence the last seven lines of Sec. 24 are unnecessary, as the Wabash Company and the D. M. N. & W. Company, each being bound to always have a director in the D. M. Union Company, can decide whether or not new railroad companies shall be admitted." (Rec., 1674-1675.)

Following the directions contained in the above letter Cummins prepared a new agreement which Hubbell mailed to Col. Blodgett with a letter from which we quote the following:

"Mr. Ashley wanted it sent to you for approval. As soon as it is approved, if you will return it to me I will have it printed in the form of a pamphlet and we will execute it in that form instead of the long sheet written in type.

If you have occasion to amend this contract, please do so as quickly as you can and return it to me and if the amendments are agreed to, we will proceed to print, say one hundred copies, four of which we will execute as originals, one for each party to the contract.

Mr. Ashley is in a great hurry for this contract and I therefore ask you to be as expeditious as possible." (Rec., 1679.)

The draft of contract so prepared by Cummins under Hubbell's directions, and forwarded by Hubbell to Col. Blodgett, contained the following provision relative to the Des Moines Company's stock:

"It is stipulated and agreed * * * that the capital stock of the said Des Moines Union Railway Company is now rightfully held as follows, to wit: Purchasing committee of the Wabash,

St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company	500 shares
Des Moines and North Western Company	1,000 shares
F. M. Hubbell & Son	2,500 shares

In spite of Hubbell's obvious anxiety to have the agreement approved and executed without revision, Col. Blodgett withheld his approval. A protracted negotiation ensued, but the parties failed to agree on a new instrument to be substituted for the supplemental agreement of May 10, 1889.

To analyze the correspondence and other data relative to this negotiation would be impracticable.

It is sufficient to say that a careful examination of this evidence will fail to disclose a single fact or representation on the part of the complainants, or their predecessors, which was inconsistent with the continued existence of the trust established by the contract of January 2, 1882.

Failing to agree upon a new agreement to substitute for the supplemental agreement of May 10, 1889, the parties, in order to cover the point originally raised by Mr. Ashley, executed the instrument known and heretofore referred to as the agreement of ratification and confirmation of July 31, 1897. This instrument contains the following provision:

> "That so much of said contract, a copy of which is hereto attached (contract of May 10, 1889) as relates to the issuance and distribution of the capital stock of the said Des Moines Company is no longer binding and that the capital stock of the Des Moines Company is held as follows:
> 500 by the purchasing committee of the Wabash Company, 1,000 by the Des Moines and Northwestern Railway Company and 2,500 by F. M. Hubbell & Son." (Rec., 506.)

This was certainly not an admission on the part of the complainants or their predecessors that the 2,500 shares referred to were rightfully held by the Hubbells, the word "rightfully" inserted in the original draft of agreement submitted by Hubbell having been stricken out by Col. Blodgett. It was merely a recital of the fact not now disputed that the Hubbells then held the stock, and the recital was made under circumstances that did not put the Wabash Company upon inquiry as to the validity of their title.

At the time this so-called agreement of ratification was signed, the Wabash Company had no knowledge or no means of knowledge of the transaction under which the Hubbells acquired possession of this five-eighths stock interest in the Des Moines Company, and they had no knowledge or means of knowledge of the fraudulent purpose for which it was acquired until October, 1905. Moreover, at the time the agreement was executed the consolidated company was still under the domination and control of the Hubbells and could not effectively ratify a fraudulent transaction of which the Hubbells were beneficiaries.

The record further shows that after the St. Paul Company had succeeded to the rights of the consolidated company there were further negotiations with Mr. Miller, on the part of the St. Paul Company, and Mr. Ramsay, on the part of the Wabash Company, for an extension of the supplemental agreement of May 10, 1889.

Mr. Ramsay, called as a witness by the Hubbells, testified that he entered into these negotiations without having considered whether the Wabash Company had any right to use the terminals independent of the contract of 1889. Answering the question whether he had heard either of the Hubbells at any time set up a claim that the Wabash Company would not have the right to use that property after the expiration of the contract of 1889, he testified:

"I never heard any such claim set up." (Rec., 1264.)

Moreover, as we have already pointed out, both Mr. Miller and Mr. Ramsay and the other operating officials of the St. Paul and Wabash companies were dependent upon the Hubbells themselves for information respecting the terminal situation.

That the Hubbells, thus situated, cannot claim an effective estoppel by reason of any act or representation of the officials of the St. Paul and Wabash companies, is clear.

If, however, authority is necessary on this point, the case of Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company v. Des Moines Union Railway Company et al., 165 Iowa, 35, will serve the purpose.

This case grows out of another transaction of the Hubbells in connection with the terminal properties at Des Moines.

The salient features may be briefly stated:

At the time the Hubbells took from the treasury of the consolidated company the five-eighths stock interest in the Des Moines Company, which they now claim to own, they were negotiating to sell their holdings in the consolidated company to the St. Paul Company.

The terminus of the line of the consolidated company was at Farnam street, afterwards 16th street, where it connected with the tracks of the Des Moines Company at the latter's westerly yard limit.

This terminus was so fixed both by the contract of January 2, 1882, and the agreement supplemental thereto of May 10, 1889.

As soon as the negotiations with the St. Paul Company had taken the definite form of a contract, the Hub-bells moved out the yard limit sign to 28th street so as to include in the terminal properties of the Des Moines Company, and exclude from the properties of the consolidated company, one mile of railway between 28th street and 16th street belonging to the consolidated company.

It was in furtherance of this fraud that Hubbell in his letter to Cummins of December 31, 1896, wrote:

> "On page one of the present contract, the extent of the present railway seems to be limited to the east boundary line of the city on the east and to Farnam street on the west. I suggest that there be no limit either east or west." (Rec., 1674.)

Early in 1898, in anticipation of the transfer of their interest in the consolidated company to the St. Paul Company, the Hubbells caused the Des Moines Company to assume possession and maintenance of this mile of railway, and when the consolidated company was transferred to the St. Paul Company the Hubbells represented to the latter that the line of the consolidated company terminated at 28th street.

From that time on until 1907 the Des Moines Company retained possession of and asserted control and ownership of the one mile of railway between 16th street and 28th street.

The true situation was not discovered until 1907 when the St. Paul Company promptly instituted suit to recover the property. The Hubbells resisted the suit and urged there, as they urge here, the plea of estoppel and acquiescence. In rejecting the plea, the Supreme Court of Iowa said:

> "The evidence to sustain the plea of estoppel tended to show that, with knowledge of plaintiff (St. Paul Company) and its grantor (the reorganized Consolidated Company) defendant (the Des Moines Company) expended large sums of money in grading, laying sidetracks, and maintaining the road. These expenses, however, were incurred with knowledge on the part of the officers of the defendants (F. M. Hubbell and F. C. Hubbell) that it did not own the road and that it was in reality the property of plaintiff or its grantor, and, this being so, it could not have been misled to its prejudice by the acquiescence of plaintiff in what was being done, to say nothing of plaintiff's ignorance concerning its title and that of its grantor. That there can be no estoppel under these circumstances is too elementary to require citation of authority."

With this recent expression of the Supreme Court of Iowa, upon an identical state of facts, we might well conclude the discussion.

The Hubbells claim, however, that they have devoted the better part of their lives to the building up of these terminals without compensation and without hope of compensation except such as might flow from the increased value of their stock.

Even if this were true it would not help them for the reason pointed out by the Supreme Court of Iowa.

It is, however, not true.

The record shows that the Hubbells devoted their time and energy to the trust enterprise for a period of fifteen years prior to the time when they acquired stock in the Des Moines Company. They were working then without compensation and were certainly working without hope or expectation of a reward flowing from the increased value of their stock, since they held no stock. The truth is that the management of the terminal enterprise was merely incidental to the real estate operations conducted for many years by the Hubbells under the firm name of F. M. Hubbell & Son. A dominant position in the management of the Des Moines Company gave them a grip upon the development of a great and growing city; and it was their control and manipulation of the terminal enterprise which enabled them to conduct their real estate operations successfully and profitably, a fact admitted with obvious reluctance by F. C. Hubbell, under cross-examination. (Rec., 1199.) That their real estate operations were successful is not disputed, the vast extent of their holdings of real estate in the City of Des Moines being plainly indicated by the deed to the "Trustees of Hubbell Estate," executed December 31, 1903. (Rec., 681.)

In concluding this subdivision, and also in concluding the argument in number 278, we submit the following propositions, which have a direct materiality to every phase of this controversy:

Estoppel, acquiescence, ratification, laches and kindred equitable defenses, which have been developed by chancellors in furtherance of substantial justice, can never rest securely upon an equivocal state of facts. As stated in Bigelow on Estoppel, 6th Ed., page 641: "Certainty is essential to all estoppels." This is especially true of estoppel by laches. The law does not require a party to come into court to assert his rights until his rights have been clearly, directly and indubitably assailed. This rule is peculiarly applicable to the case of a trust. As pointed out by Mr. Justice Gray, speaking for this Court in Speidel v. Henrici, 120 U. S., 377, 386, time does not begin to run against a trust until

> "it is openly disavowed by the trustee, insisting upon an adverse right and interest which is clearly and unequivocally made known to the cestui que trust; as when for instance such transactions take place between the trustee and the cestui que trust, as would in case of tenants in common amount to an ouster of one of them by the other."

The complainants have been in undisputed use and enjoyment of the terminal properties continuously since the establishment of the trust in 1882—originally under the contract of January 2, 1882, alone, and subsequently under this contract as supplemented by the agreement of May 10, 1889. At no time did the Des Moines Company by any clear and unequivocal action (even at the illegal stockholders' meeting of April 8, 1890), repudiate the trust or indicate any purpose to repudiate it. Nor did either of the Hubbells ever repudiate or question the trust until October, 1905, and promptly thereafter the complainants commenced this suit.

IX.

THE SO-CALLED SURPLUS EARNINGS WERE PROPERLY AWARDED TO COMPLAINANTS BY THE UNANIMOUS DECISION OF THE CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS.

The controversy as to the so-called "surplus earnings" presented in No. 279 will only become material in the event that this Court decides that the complainants have no proprietary interest in the Des Moines Company.

The Circuit Court of Appeals—all judges concurring—held that the revenues received by the Des Moines Company, and referred to as surplus earnings, belonged to the St. Paul and Wabash Companies. The majority opinion based such conclusion upon its interpretation of the supplemental agreement of May 10, 1889, taken as a whole, and the construction placed upon it by the acts of the parties thereto for a series of years following its execution. Judge Hook based his conclusion in the above respect not only upon the grounds above stated, but also upon the broader ground that the increments of the trust properties belonged to the proprietors under the terms of the trust.

Since the opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals on this branch of the case was unanimous, and since the issue thus disposed of involves no public interest and no rule or principle of law, which public interest requires this Court to determine, it may be that this court will conclude to dismiss as improvidently granted the writ of certiorari in No. 279, issued upon the petition of the Hubbells. Furness Withy & Co., Ltd., v. Yang-Tsze Insurance Association, Ltd. et al., 242 U. S., 430.

In the contingency, however, of this Court reaching a consideration of the question presented in No. 279, we submit the following brief remarks supplementary to the statement as to this controversy embodied in our preliminary statement of facts:

At the time of the filing of the bill of complaint in this suit, the so-called surplus earnings amounted to approximately $500,000. (Rec., 109-194.)

Although the record does not show the amount of these accumulations at the present time, the testimony having been taken a number of years ago, it seems proper to state to the Court that these accumulations now amount to approximately two million dollars, or a sum equivalent to approximately 300 per cent of the Des Moines Company's outstanding capital stock.

As explanatory of the large amount of these accumulations, it should be noted that they are in no sense surplus earnings, but are the gross receipts of the Des Moines Company for switching, demurrage on cars of the proprietary companies and excess baggage carried by them; and also for rental of parts of its property, principally unused space in the Union Passenger Station and privileges in connection therewith; all of the expenses incident to the production of these earnings being borne by the proprietary companies.

The proprietary companies paid the interest charge on all the capital invested in the terminal enterprise; they paid the taxes on the Union Station, the cost of heating it and lighting it and operating it; they paid the cost of operating the engine houses and the cost of turning, housing and maintaining the engines, the cost of furnishing water and fire, cost of firing and fueling the engines; in short, all of the operating expenses incident to the creation of the revenues denominated by the Hubbells as surplus earnings were borne by the proprietary companies. (Rec., 320-323.) It was, of course, the intention of the parties that all revenues of the Des Moines Company should be applied in the reduction of operating expenses charged to the proprietary companies, and the agreement of May 10, 1889, was authorized and drawn on this theory. Furthermore the resolution authorizing it provided that if at the end of six months any party thereto should feel that the terms were in any respect unjust and should give notice to that effect, the subject should be one for readjustment.

In the agreement itself it was provided (in Article twenty-eight) that if any question arose respecting any matter not provided for in the agreement, the same should be adjusted by arbitration, the arbitrators to "determine what would be just and equitable for each of said parties to do in and about the matter in dispute."

It seems that as early as December, 1889, the question arose as to whether or not these particular revenues should be credited to the proprietary companies under Section four of the agreement, and as soon as receipts of this character arose, the accounting officers of the Des Moines Company, by direction of its executive committee and its president, credited the amount of such receipts upon the monthly bills against the proprietary companies. This was done for a period of nearly two years. (Rec., 272-313.)

Thereupon, as shown in the statement of facts, the board of directors of the Des Moines Company, at a meeting held February 11, 1891, adopted a resolution ordering:

> "That the rents collected for the use of the Company's real estate and the switching charges paid in be credited on the bills of the different tenant companies occupying this Company's terminals, giving to each Company its share ascertained by wheelage." (Rec., 497.)

A year later the board ordered a temporary suspension of the practice pending the accumulation of a small fund for working capital, but distinctly recognized the right of the proprietary companies to receive these revenues. (Rec., 499, 338.)

Thus, the conclusion reached by the Court of Appeals, relating to the disposition of excess earnings, is in exact accord with the interpretation placed upon the provisions of the supplemental agreement of May 10, 1889, by the parties themselves, as disclosed by their acts in the disposition of these earnings, until the Hubbells, in the interest of their claim of corporate control, determined to repudiate this interpretation.

Of course, if the Des Moines Company had undertaken to withhold these revenues from the proprietary companies, they would have at once demanded a readjustment of the matter as being manifestly unjust to them or would have asked that the matter be determined by arbitration under Section twenty-eight on just and equitable principles, and inasmuch as the proprietary companies were paying all the expenses incident to the production of these earnings, their right to receive them could not have been questioned.

The Board itself, therefore, undertook to adjust the matter, and we submit adjusted it properly upon either one or the other of the following interpretations of its acts.

If it be contended that under a literal construction of Section four of the supplemental agreement of May 10, 1889, it is doubtful whether the same be broad enough to include these accumulations, this doubt was resolved against the Des Moines Company by reason of the practical construction given to this section by the Des Moines Company's board of directors. Topliff v. Topliff, 122 U. S., 121, 131.

If, however, it be assumed that these revenues are not covered and disposed of by Section four, then it follows that no definite disposition thereof was made by the supplemental agreement, and the matter was open for adjustment "upon just and equitable" principles by a board of arbitrators under Section twenty-eight. In this situation the board of directors of the Des Moines Company, acting as such arbitrators, deliberately adjusted the matter in the only way it could be disposed of without doing violence to every principle of justice and equity. Central Trust Company of New York v. Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific Railway Company, 34 Fed. Rep., 254.

It is submitted, therefore, that the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals in No. 279 should be affirmed or that the writ of certiorari issued therein should be dismissed.

In Conclusion.

The complainants ask the following relief:

In Case No. 278. (a) That the Court determine that the Des Moines Company took title to all properties vested in it subject to the terms of the contract of January 2, 1882, and holds them in trust for the complainants herein subject to their joint use and occupation in perpetuity, as provided in said contract. (b) That the defendants F. M. Hubbell, F. C. Hubbell and the firm of F. M. Hubbell & Son be directed to surrender and deliver to the complainants 2,500 shares of the capital stock of the Des Moines Company upon payment to them of the sum of $25,000, with interest thereon from January 29, 1894, or in the alternative that said F. M. Hubbell, F. C. Hubbell and F. M. Hubbell and Son, and each of them, be perpetually restrained, by the order and injunction of this court, from selling, pledging or otherwise disposing of said shares of capital stock of the Des Moines Company, issued in their names, and that as holders of stock certificates, representing the same they and each of them be restrained by the order and injunction of this court from exercising any control or management of the terminal properties, excepting such as shall be in accordance with the terms and spirit of the contract of January 2, 1882.

In Case No. 279. That the decree of the Circuit Court of Appeals be affirmed or, in the alternative, that the writ of certiorari issued therein be dismissed.

On Writs of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

REPLY BRIEF OF CHICAGO, MILWAUKEE & ST. PAUL RAILWAY COMPANY AND WABASH RAILWAY COMPANY.

The brief and argument filed in this cause by counsel for the Des Moines Union Railway Company and F. M. Hubbell and F. C. Hubbell, is not responsive in its fundamentals to the brief filed by the complainants. Where reference is made to the argument of the complainants, comment is addressed to quotations, detached from their context, taken from the separate briefs filed by them in the Circuit Court of Appeals.

No attempt has been made to approach the issues upon the theory followed by the majority opinion of the Court of Appeals, or upon the basis of the argument presented by the complainants in the analysis of the facts offered in answer to such theory or of the several points made respecting the same.

Nor do we find in their brief any reference whatsoever to the dissenting opinion of Circuit Judge Hook.

One gathers from a reading of the brief that the conclusions of counsel are based upon the supposition that the trust admittedly created by the contract of January 2, 1882 was abandoned because of the incorporation of the Des Moines Company, and of the conveyance to such Company of the various terminal properties acquired by the temporary trustees.

In this respect counsel have not attempted to reply to the reasons presented in the brief of the complainants showing that the incorporation of the Des Moines Company, the several resolutions of its stockholders and directors, the resolutions of the proprietary companies and the deeds of conveyance, made to the Des Moines Company as a result thereof, were a development in corporate form of the trust created by the parties to the contract of January 2, 1882.

The brief is based wholly upon the supposition that the trust created by the contract of January

2, 1882 would necessarily be destroyed because of the several conveyances in fee simple to the Des Moines Company of the terminal properties, the titles to which were assembled in the names of the temporary trustees.

All subsequent discussion is based upon this supposition.

For instance, the analysis of the Amendments to the Articles of the Des Moines Company proceeds on the stated theory that they represent the thought that it was intended that the defendant company theretofore acquired absolute title to the terminal properties, and that thus such amendments are corroborative thereof.

In view of such a situation, it is submitted that it would serve no useful purpose in clarifying argument to review in detail the several points attempted to be made by counsel for the Hubbells. It is submitted that they have all been anticipated and adequately answered in the original brief filed on behalf of the complainants, and that therefore this reply can be made responsive in the best sense by analyzing a case recently decided by this Court, showing that counsel for the Hubbells have wholly misconceived the true principles governing the issues involved.

In the case of Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company vs. Minneapolis Civic and Commercial Association, 247 U. S. 490 this Court determined the status of the parties in the instant case upon a set of facts so coincident in fundamentals and detail with the facts now before the Court that the opinion there rendered could be applied without substantial alteration as decisive of the case at bar.

This Court in an opinion written by Mr. Justice Clarke delivered June 10, 1918, subsequent to the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals in this case held that the Minneapolis Eastern Railway Company, a Company developed in the interest of two trunk lines entering Minneapolis, which jointly owned its capital stock, was not an independent corporation and had no power to publish tariffs covering service over its lines which the proprietary companies themselves might render.

Although the decision is fresh in the minds of the Court, a brief restatement of the facts will emphasize its coincidence with the case at bar.

The Minneapolis Eastern Railway Company, referred to herein as the Eastern Company, was organized under the laws of Minnesota as a railway company to construct and operate a railway from Minneapolis to St. Paul. It was organized as an independent corporation by a group of mill owners, and, unlike the Des Moines Company, it was not organized by, or in the interest of, or to take title to properties owned by the other railway companies which became its proprietors.

After the organization of the Eastern Company had been completed, but before any right of way had been acquired or any construction work done, the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company and the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha Railway Company, referred to herein collectively as the proprietary companies > "came into exclusive control of the corporation and a board of directors satisfactory to them was elected, with the result that the only road which the company ever built or operated (omitting small fractions) was one mile of main track and one mile and a half of yard track and sidings in the City of Minneapolis" (p. 494).

Although the Eastern Company, like the Des Moines Company, was incorporated as a railroad company, and not as a terminal company, it became in point of fact the corporate instrumentality of the proprietary companies whereby, to avoid duplicating terminal facilities in a congested district, they were enabled > "to construct and operate but one track to the group of industries to be served, instead of each building and maintaining its own track, and to construct and use that track in common so that each might have the benefit of it as fully as if it were the sole owner" (p. 500).

There is here to be noted a significant point of difference in the facts of the two cases:

The Des Moines Company was organized for the sole purpose of holding legal title to the facilities in Des Moines to be used in common by the railway companies which became the owners of its stock, and this purpose was declared in the definite provisions of the contract of January 2, 1882, which was embodied in its Articles of Incorporation as the statute law of its existence. No such declaration of purpose was made by the Eastern Company either at the time of its incorporation or subsequently, but this Court nevertheless found as a fact that such was the purpose for which it was originally acquired and afterwards utilized by the proprietary companies; and made this finding by reason of a series of acts and circumstances which, curious as it may seem, are strikingly like those which the Circuit Court of Appeals held in the case at bar, effected an unintended and unexpected destruction of the proprietary interests of the present complainants or their predecessors in the properties held by the Des Moines Company.

We quote further from this Court's opinion:

"Almost immediately after the organization of the Eastern Company, the three companies entered into a written contract, effective for over 39 years, until May 1, 1918, which is of much significance in determining the decisive fact in the case, as we have stated it.

"This contract provides:

(1) That only 300 shares of the authorized 10,000 shares of capital stock of the Eastern Company shall be issued, and of these, 75 shares each must be issued to the Omaha and Milwaukee Companies, 145 shares to a trustee for the Eastern Company, and the remaining 5 shares shall be issued as qualifying shares to directors. The 145 trust shares 'shall not be transferable except by the written consent of all (3) said parties hereto, and any transfer thereof without such consent shall be void and of no force or effect.'

(2) The Eastern Company shall execute in proper form 150 bonds of $1,000 each and a mortgage on all the property and franchises of the company to secure their payment. The Milwaukee and Omaha Companies agree each to purchase, at 80% of their par value, one-half the amount of such of these bonds as it may be necessary to issue to pay for the right of way, construction and equipment of the railroad;

(3) That the Milwaukee and Omaha Companies shall have 'equal and the same rights in and to the said railway . . . in all respects;' that they shall pay the same charge for switching their respective cars by said railway, and that no partiality or favor shall be shown to either;

(4) That the superintendent having charge of the operation of the railroad, shall be appointed 'by the consent and mutual agreement of all the parties to these presents;'

(5) That the Eastern Company shall charge all parties one dollar for switching each loaded car, but a rebate of fifty per cent. of this charge shall be made to the Milwaukee and Omaha Companies;

(6) If any other company having equal facilities with the Eastern Company for reaching mills in Minneapolis shall promptly and satisfactorily do the switching for the second and third parties (the Milwaukee and Omaha companies) then the Eastern Company with the written consent of the Omaha and Milwaukee Companies, will do switching for such railroad companies over the said railroad of the Eastern Company on the same terms that switching is done for the said second and third parties (the Milwaukee and Omaha Companies) over such railroad but without rebate to any company" (pp. 495-496).

The agreement here summarized is so similar in its basic aspects as well as in detail to the supplemental agreement of May 10, 1889, between Des Moines Company and its proprietors, as strongly to suggest that it may have been utilized as a model by the draftsman of the latter instrument.

Like the supplemental agreement of May 10, 1889, it provided for the issue of the stock of the company in quarters, each quarter representing or evidencing a proprietorship equivalent to an equitable tenancy in common, one of these quarters being allotted to each of the proprietary companies and the surplus quarters being issued to a "trustee for the Eastern Company." The nature of the trust is not disclosed, but it is not improbable that the parties intended that the surplus quarters might be sold to other trunk line companies desiring to use the facilities of the Eastern Company, as in the instant case was provided in section twenty-four of the supplemental Agreement of May 10, 1889.

Provision was also made for the control and operation of the properties of the Eastern Company by representatives of the two proprietary companies, the stipulations in this respect being substantially the same as those provided in sections eleven, twelve and thirteen of the Supplemental Agreement of May 10, 1889.

Summarizing the effect of the above mentioned provisions of the Agreement, this Court said:

> "It deprived the Board of the power: to issue the capital stock of the company and to finance its affairs; to select a superintendent to operate the company's two and one-half miles of track, by requiring that such selection be made only with the consent and mutual agreement of the three companies; to make mutual agreements for the interchange of business with any other company except with the mutual consent of the Milwaukee and Omaha Companies; and it renders one-half (save five shares) of the stock which it permits to be issued, transferable only with the written consent of the Milwaukee and Omaha Companies. Thus, the making of this contract was an obvious surrender by the Eastern Company of substantially all freedom of corporate action and an assumption of control over that company by the Milwaukee and Omaha Companies, which converted it largely into a mere agency or instrumentality for doing their bidding" (pp. 496-497).

It will be recalled that the Des Moines Company was repeatedly declared by the Hubbells to be precisely such an agency or instrumentality in the reports made year after year under oath to the taxing authorities of the State of Iowa, which reports were made subsequent to every transaction which they now claim was destructive of the trust.

This Court then recites certain acts of administrative control exercised thereafter by the proprietary companies, among these being the division of an accumulated surplus of $95,000 equally between the two proprietary companies in the form of a stock dividend, the purchase by the proprietary companies in equal proportions of certain refunding bonds issued by the Eastern Company, and submits the following conclusion:

> "With the facts thus summarized, it is difficult to conceive of a plan for the control of a jointly owned company and for the operation of a jointly owned track more complete than this one is and it is sheer sophistry to argue that, because it is technically a separate legal entity, the Eastern Company is an independent public carrier, free in the conduct of its business from the control of the two companies which own it and therefore free to impose separate carrying charges upon the public" (p. 498).

Without underestimating the difficulty of conceiving as an original proposition a plan of joint control more complete and effective than the plan above outlined, credit for such an accomplishment is due the organizers of the Des Moines Company for the following reasons, among many others:

> (a) The Des Moines Company was created without corporate power or capacity to take title to the terminal properties in Des Moines, except upon a trust to hold the same in perpetuity "subject to the joint use and occupation of" the proprietary companies, for its Articles of Incorporation are premised upon the terms of the contract of January 2, 1882, which is recited in the same in full as a preamble, and it is further provided that all powers exercised by such Company shall be in accordance with the terms and the spirit of the aforesaid contract.

There was no such limitation upon the corporate power of the Eastern Company.

(b) The original Articles of Incorporation of the Des Moines Company vested the management of the affairs of the Company in a Board of eight Directors, all of whom were to be nominated by the proprietary companies, or any grantees or assignees of either of them, and the Board of Directors was not permitted to make any contract, lease, or other agreement amounting to a permanent charge on the property of the Des Moines Company without the approval of the three proprietary companies or their assignees, and without further approval of the holders of more than three-fourths of the stock of the Des Moines Company.

There was no such limitation upon the power and authority of the stockholders and Board of Directors of the Eastern Company.

(c) Substantially all of the provisions of the tripartite agreement between the Eastern Company and its proprietary companies which are summarized in the extracts from the opinion of this Court quoted above are embodied in the Supplemental Agreement of May 10, 1889, between the Des Moines Company and its proprietors, and there are superadded thereto further and more stringent provisions evidencing the identity of the stock interest and property interest of the proprietary companies, among these being (1) the provision requiring the stock of the Des Moines Company to be issued in quarters represented by single certificates, all of which were to be non-transferable, without the unanimous consent of the proprietary companies; (2) the provision admitting a railway company becoming the purchaser of a surplus quarter interest in the stock of the company to the use and occupation of the terminal properties of the Des Moines Company on a parity with the three original proprietors; and(3) the provision that in case any difference should arise between the parties respecting any matter not expressly provided for in the Agreement, the same should be referred to a board of arbitration to be determined not upon the basis of the legal rights of the Des Moines Company, as the holder of the legal title to the terminal properties, but upon principles of justice and equity.

Following the enumeration of the facts which, in its opinion, establish the character of the Eastern Company as the mere corporate agency or representative of the two proprietary companies, facts which manifestly fall far short of the facts disclosed in the case at bar, this Court further says:

"To accomplish this end they resorted to the familiar device of incorporating the Eastern Company, and in order that their purpose might not be defeated in the future, by the design or business necessity of either company, the contract between them which we have discussed, was entered into to prevent the corporate organization of the Eastern Company and the control of its operations from being changed by either owning company without the consent of the other, and the evidence makes it very clear that all through its corporate life the Eastern organization has been consistently used as a mere agency of the two owning companies to accomplish their original purpose.

"Much emphasis is laid upon statements made in various decisions of this Court that ownership, alone, of capital stock in one corporation by another, does not create an identity of corporate interest between the two companies, or render the stockholding company the owner of the property of the other, or create the relation of principal and agent or representative between the two. Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Missouri Pacific Ry Co., 115 U. S. 587; Peterson v. Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Ry. Co., 205 U. S. 364, 391; United States v. Delaware & Hudson Co., 213 U. S. 366, 413; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Stickney, 215 U. S. 98, 108; and United States v. Delaware, Lackawanna & Western R. R. Co., 238 U. S. 516, 529, 530, and it is argued that since the order of the Commission requires that the tracks, the title to which is in the Eastern Company, be treated as the property of the stock owning companies, the effect of it, if enforced, will be to deprive the Eastern Company of its property without compensation and to render valuless its capital stock owned by the Milwaukee and Omaha Companies.

"While the statements of the law thus relied upon are satisfactory in the connection in which they were used, they have been plainly and repeatedly held not applicable where stock ownership has been resorted to, not for the purpose of participating in the affairs of a corporation in the normal and usual manner, but for the purpose, as in this case, of controlling a subsidiary company so that it may be used as a mere agency of instrumentality of the owning company or companies. United States v. Lehigh Valley R. R. Co., 220 U. S., 257, 273, and United States v. Delaware, Lackawanna & Western R. R. Co., 238 U. S. 516. In such a case the courts will not permit themselves to be blinded or deceived by mere forms or law but, regardless of fictions, will deal with the substance of the transaction involved as if the corporate agency did not exist and as the justice of the case may require.

"Satisfied as we are by the evidence that the Eastern Company is a completely controlled agency of the two companies which > own its capital stock, we agree with the Supreme Court of Minnesota that the fact that the legal title to what are obviously terminal or spur delivery tracks is in the Eastern Company should not be permitted to become the warrant for permitting a charge upon shippers greater than they would be required to pay if that title were in the owning companies" (pp. 500-501).

From the foregoing it is quite clear that this decision must control the case at bar, unless it is distinguishable by reason of the fact that at the time the decision was rendered the whole capital stock of the Eastern Company was held apparently in equal proportions by the proprietary companies, whereas in the case at bar a part of the capital stock of the Des Moines Company is now claimed to be owned by the defendants Hubbell.

To urge such a distinction is to ignore the underlying principle of this Court's decision.

This Court held that the Eastern Company was organized and established by the two proprietary companies as a convenient and customary means of creating a tenancy in common in the railway property held in legal title by the Eastern Company "so that each might have the benefit of it as fully as if it were the sole owner."

The proprietary interest was represented by shares of stock of the Eastern Company issued to the proprietary companies, and at the date of this Court's decision the tripartite agreement between the Eastern Company and the proprietary companies had expired and the sole evidence or indicia of their title to and right to use and enjoy the common property was the certificates of capital stock of the Eastern Company. In other words, this Court disregarded the conventional status of the shares and held that in the possession of the proprietary companies such shares represented a right to the common use and enjoyment of the properties held by the Eastern Company precisely as if that right had been definitely expressed upon the face of the stock certificates themselves.

The Des Moines Company was organized under substantially the same conditions as the Eastern Company and for the same purpose, and its capital stock was allotted to the proprietary companies for the same purpose as the stock of the Eastern Company was allotted to its proprietary companies, and, curiously enough, in the same identical proportions.

It is true that at a subsequent date certain shares of the Des Moines Company passed from the control of the proprietary companies into the hands of the defendant Hubbell, but this was not intended to destroy, and, in the nature of things, could not destroy the right of user or the equitable estates inhering in and represented by the shares retained by the proprietary companies for the reason—if for no other reason—that the parties themselves expressly so stipulated.

At the time the Purchasing Committee sold three one-eighth interests to the defendant Hubbell, retaining one-eighth in its own treasury, it was expressly agreed, as we have repeatedly pointed out in our original brief, "that a one-eighth interest in the capital stock should be sufficient to represent a proprietorship in the company" (Rec., 1603).

Moreover, even if there had been no express agreement of this character, the Court, in order to sustain the transaction, would be obliged to imply one. It is quite evident that the Milwaukee Company and Omaha Company could not now defeat the deliberate judgment of this Court by the simple device of selling to an individual, much less an individual who is an officer and director of the Eastern Company, a portion of their stock of the Eastern Company. If such a transaction were presented surely this Court would hold that the Milwaukee Company and the Omaha Company had no corporate power to alienate their interest in the corporate property of the Eastern Company by a transfer of their shares of stock of the Eastern Company, thereby disabling themselves in the performance of their public duties and in the exercise of their corporate franchises. Such a transaction if not held void would be construed as implying a reservation in the Omaha Company and the Milwaukee Company of every right of user represented by their original allotments of stock.

Certainly there is no substantial reason why an eighth stock interest in the Des Moines Company should not be given the same attributes as a one-quarter or a one-half stock interest in the Eastern Company—especially as the record in this case makes it abundantly clear that all of the parties so intended.

To argue further that the parties always intended that an allotment of stock in the Des Moines Company, originally an allotment of one-quarter and subsequently an allotment of one-eighth, should represent a proprietorship, is surely unnecessary. The evidence on this point is overwhelming.

In this connection, we desire, however, to refer again to the provisions of the Articles of Incorporation of the Des Moines Company attempted to be amended at the illegal stockholder's meeting of April 8, 1890.

Article IV provides that

> "At all future elections of directors it shall require the votes of more than seven-eighths of all the stock theretofore issued to elect any director."

The same Article provides that

> "With respect to the matters above mentioned, and all other matters, except the ordinary operation of the property, the Board of Directors can act only upon the unanimous vote of eight members thereof."

And Article IX provides that the Articles may only be amended by a vote of "more than seven-eighths of all the stock in favor thereof."

These provisions give a veto, amounting to a power of strangulation, to a vote of one-eighth of the stock of the Des Moines Company.

What conceivable reason could there be for giving to an eighth stock interest a veto power of this character in perpetuity, unless it be given as supplementary to or complementary of a proprietorship of which the primary attribute is a right to use and occupy the terminal facilities of the Des Moines Company in common with other proprietary companies as contemplated and provided for by the express provisions of the contract of January 2, 1882.

The theory upon which counsel for the defendants have developed their brief, namely, that there is great significance in the fact that the temporary trustees conveyed to the Des Moines Company titles in fee simple to the properties assembled for the proprietary Companies under the trust instrument of January 2, 1882, with the supposed result that such absolute conveyances were inconsistent with the establishment and continuance of a trust in the Des Moines Company, is cast in a series of questions beginning on page 264 of their brief, relating to subject matters upon which it is suggested that counsel for the complainants have been silent.

It is submitted that the queries raised by such questions have been fully disposed of, in our original brief, under Points I, II, V and VI, discussing the plan of the trust created, the reasons for the conveyance of complete legal titles in the trust properties to the Des Moines Company, and the harmonious relationship of the subsequent acts and circumstances to the trust thus created and developed.

Nevertheless, at the risk of repetition, we desire to answer categorically the questions thus submitted:

> Question (1). "If the organization of the defendant company was for the sole purpose of providing the corporate trustee referred to in the contract of 1882, as claimed on pages 99-100 of their argument, why did they organize a corporation having the power and assuming the obligation of a Railway Company and why did they organize a corporation for pecuniary profit?"

Previous to the making of the contract of January 2, 1882, the terminal properties acquired in the common interest of the three proprietary companies were held in the names of two corporations and two individuals. These properties were intended to be used for railroad purposes. It was, therefore, essential that they be concentrated in a railroad corporation having power to exercise all the prerogatives and to perform all of the functions of a common carrier, to the end that the proprietary companies might effectively enjoy for railroad purposes the properties acquired and held for their common benefit. Furthermore, it was essential that these properties be conveyed to a single railroad corporation, to make practicable the mortgaging of the same and the issuing of bonds, in compliance with the terms of the trust instrument. An identical course was pursued by the organizers of the Eastern Company in the case of Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company v. Minneapolis Civic and Commercial Association, above analyzed.

A railway corporation for pecuniary profit was organized because no other corporate form of railway company was possible under the laws of Iowa and, furthermore, because under paragraph Tenth of the trust instrument (Rec., p. 413) it was provided that railroad companies other than the proprietary companies might be entitled to the use of all of said terminal facilities upon the payment of a fair sum for rental and (their) its proportion of the maintenance account."

> Question (2a). "If it was the purpose to transfer to the defendant Company simply the legal title to the Terminal property then why the following:
> Why did the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company, in whose name the title to no part of the Terminal stood, in January, 1895, (1885) pass a resolution authorizing its officers to transfer to the Terminal Company all of its interests in the Terminal Company of whatever kind and character?"

In vesting the trust properties in a corporate trustee, as provided for by the trust instrument, it was appropriate that the proprietary companies should as they did do on January 1, 1885, take coincident corporate action with this end in view. In this respect, the resolutions adopted by the stockholders of the Northwestern Company, on January 1, 1885, were identical with the resolutions passed by the St. Louis and Northern Companies on the same date. By these several resolutions, each proprietary company in unequivocal terms accepted the incorporation of the Des Moines Company as the corporate trustee provided for by trust instrument, and it was appropriate that concerted action be taken by the proprietary companies to vest in such corporate trustee the trust properties assembled in the names of the temporary trustees. Thus, in a determination of the character of estate intended to be conveyed by the proprietary companies to the Des Moines Company, it is without significance that the stockholders of the Northwestern Company adopted the above resolution, notwithstanding, that it had taken title to no part of the trust properties. On the other hand, the fact that the Northwestern Company did not, as both shown and asserted by counsel for the Hubbells on pages 67 and 70 of their brief, make any deed of conveyance of any kind or character to the Des Moines Company is highly significant in demonstrating that the proprietary companies did not intend to convey their equitable estates in common to the Des Moines Company, for as this Court has said in Brown v. Fletcher, 235 U. S. 589, an equitable estate is an estate in property to the same extent as if the legal title thereto were vested in the beneficiary and such an estate passes by deed. It is beyond question, as counsel for the Hubbells themselves state, that the proprietary companies had equitable estates in common in the terminal properties, while the temporary trustees held legal title thereto. Therefore, if it had been the intent of the proprietary companies that such equitable estates should pass with the legal estates in the terminal properties to the Des Moines Company, the Northwestern Company could have divested itself of its own interests in this respect only by proper deed of conveyance.

> Question (2b). "Why did the Northwestern Company, the Northern Company and the St. Louis Company, each, in their resolutions of January, 1885, authorizing their officers to convey this property, use this language: 'convey, assign and transfer to said company all its right, title and interest of whatever name and character in and to the real estate, franchises, choses in action, and rights in possession or contingent to all the property in the City of Des Moines east of Farnham Street in said City now held, enjoyed or claimed by either or all of the signatories of said contract of January 2nd, 1882, or any agent or trustee thereof purchased, acquired, or held in pursuance of said contract.' (Rec., Vol. II, p. 427.)"

The proprietary companies established their trust by virtue of the contract of January 2, 1882. The Des Moines Company became the corporate trustee provided for in this contract, both by express declaration of the incorporators and by virtue of the recital of the trust instrument in the Articles of Incorporation and the declaration contained in Article 2 that "all the powers exercised by this Company shall be in accordance with the terms and spirit of the aforesaid contract entered into on the 2nd day of January, A. D. 1882." The Des Moines Company in its resolution of January 1, 1885, accepted the trust and directed its officers to procure the necessary conveyances and transfers to fully invest it with the title provided for in the trust instrument. For the purpose of carrying out the terms of the trust as expressly provided by the trust instrument, it was essential that the corporate trustee take legal title to the trust properties in fee simple. The trust estates thus being established and reserved by instruments other than the deeds of conveyance made by the temporary trustees, it was both appropriate and essential that the conveyances made by them should be without reservation.

> Question (2e). "Why did Col. Blodgett, whose integrity and ability are unchallenged, who had lived these transactions and who knew the intention better than can counsel or the Court, in preparing the deed of the St. Louis Company in carrying out these resolutions, prepare a warranty deed, and why did he formulate it so as to convey not only the property which stood in the name of that Company but also 'all of the real estate within the City of Des Moines * * * also all its embankments, bridges, sidetracks, * * * all its railroad property acquired or to be acquired and everything appurtenant to said railroad'?" (p. 458)

The answer to this is covered by our answer to Questions (2a) and (2b), and we may also add that Col. Blodgett, precisely because he was a lawyer of unchallenged ability, prepared the deed of the St. Louis Company in the form stated in the question, knowing that the warranty deed was not to be the instrument within which the trust was to be reserved.

Counsel for the Hubbells, failing to appreciate the significance of the principle here involved, assert that the embodiment of the trust instrument in the Articles of Incorporation was a "mere solecism" and an "incongruity" (Brief, p. 191).

From their standpoint this is indeed true; and their own admission that their whole argument is utterly inconsistent with the existence of these reservations in the organic law of the Des Moines Company is the best possible demonstration of the complete fallacy of their fundamental contention.

> Question (2d). "Why did the Northern Company in its deed after describing the property which stood in his name use the following language:
>
> 'Together with all and singular the tenements, hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging, or in anywise appertaining, and the revrsion and reversions, remainder and remainders, rents, issues and profits thereof. And also, all the estate, right, title, interest in the above described property, possession, claim and demand whatsoever, as well in law as in equity of the said parties of the first part, of, in or to the above described premises, etc.'?" (p. 456).

The answer to this is covered by our answer to Questions (2a) and (2b).

> Question (2e). "Why was it provided in the original articles of incorporation of the defendant Company that its capital stock should be issued in payment for the Terminal property?"

It was for the reason that it was contemplated that the stock would be apportioned among the proprietary companies as evidencing and measuring their respective equitable estates in the common properties, precisely as was done with the stock of the Eastern Company in the case of Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Company v. Minneapolis Civic and Commercial Association, supra.

> Question (2f). "Why was it recited in the contract of May 10th, 1889, that the defendant Company owned this property?"

The primary purpose of this agreement was to give assurance to the holders of the bonds issued under the mortgage of the Des Moines Company that the interest on such bonds would be duly and punctually paid by the proprietary companies, and this agreement was formulated and executed primarily as an additional security for the bonds issued under the mortgage, which mortgage also recited that the Des Moines Company was the owner of the terminal properties. Moreover, Judge Hook, in his dissenting opinion calls attention to the fact that such recital of ownership is based upon the provisions of the charter of the corporation and that in such charter is incorporated the trust instrument.

> Question (3). "If the contract of May 10th, 1889, was supplemental to the contract of January 2, 1882, why does it not recite this fact?"

This fact is recited in the resolution authorizing this supplemental agreement and a further recitation of the fact was unnecessary, especially in view of the fact that the agreement is fundamentally a supplemental agreement, in that it only provides for the details of operation of the terminals for the period of thirty years, whereas, the contract of January 2, 1882, is perpetual. In connection with this subject matter, we wish to refer to the assertion in the brief of counsel that we have misquoted the resolution authorizing the supplemental agreement by stating that it provided for a thirty year agreement, whereas, the record in fact shows that the resolution provided for an agreement not for thirty years but for three years. (Brief, pp. 266-268.) It is true that the record is as stated by counsel for the Hubbells, but it obviously contains in this respect a typographical error which has been treated as such from the inception of this litigation, and no suggestion was ever made in oral argument or printed argument, of which we are aware, that the fact was otherwise.

In concluding our reply argument we especially direct this Court's attention to that division of the brief of counsel for the Hubbells (pp. 258, 259) where they defend their alleged title to the five-eighths stock interest in the Des Moines Company which they took from the treasury of the consolidated company under the several transactions analyzed in Point VII of our original brief.

Their defense of these transactions is not even a plea in confession and avoidance; it is indeed a plea of guilty.

The statement that the mortgage debt to the Metropolitan Trust Company through whom the St. Paul Company claims title has long since been paid is not true. The record shows that the mortgage to the Metropolitan Trust Company was duly foreclosed, that the bondholders themselves were forced to buy in the property and that there was a substantial deficiency which ought to have been satisfied by application of the unmortgaged assets wrongfully appropriated by the Hubbells (Rec., 651).

The Hubbells are, however, mistaken in assuming that the security holders of the defunct consolidated company are alone entitled to complain of the breach of trust. As we pointed out in our original brief (Points VI and VII), the consolidated company as one of the equitable tenants in common was itself subject to all the disabilities of a fiduciary in dealing with aliquot interests in the trust properties and the defendants Hubbell stand in no better position than their controlled vendor.

The Hubbells do not attempt to controvert this proposition, and we submit that it is incontrovertible.

To emphasize and illustrate the application of this proposition we refer again to the case of Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company v. Minneapolis Civic and Commercial Association, supra.

Let it be assumed that an individual who was an officer and director of the Eastern Company and also a director of one or both of the proprietary companies by a series of transactions that were fraudulent per se and confessedly in violation of the express provisions of the tripartite agreement had obtained possession of the 145 shares (the two surplus quarters) of the stock of the Eastern Company which under the terms of the tripartite agreement had been issued to "a trustee for the Eastern Company" and let it be further assumed that this individual should assert that his possession and alleged ownership of these shares established the autonomy and independence of the Eastern Company so that it was free to do what this Court held that it could not do in the case in question. Would any lawyer seriously contend that the two proprietary companies, upon a discovery of the fraudulent character and object of the transaction, would not be entitled to a rescission of the transaction and a restoration of the status quo ante?

The fact that such relief in the instant case will deprive the Hubbells of any legitimate profit which they might still realize by transferring the shares to other railway companies is of no consequence. Equity is indifferent to the ill-fortunes of a faithless fiduciary. As the Hubbells, lured by the hope and expectation of inordinate gain, elected to ignore the requirements of conscience and good faith and set about deliberately to destroy property interests of immense value belonging to their cestuis que trustent, surely they will not be heard to complain if at the end of a long, tedious and costly litigation a court of equity should give the injured cestuis their full and complete measure of equitable relief.

Finally attention should be called to the fact that such complete measure of relief cannot be given the complainants with the continuance in the Hubbells of the five-eighths stockholding interest in the Des Moines Company now claimed to be owned by them, for any decree which protects the right of user belonging to the complainants as equitable tenants in common of the terminal properties and still leaves the Hubbells identified with, or in control of, the corporate activities of the Des Moines Company without responsibility in this respect either to the public or to the complainants, and with power to exploit such control in furtherance of the private real estate operations of F. M. Hubbell and Son in the industrial precincts of the City of Des Moines, would both perpetuate a situation in principle indefensible and create paralysis in the legitimate development of the trust enterprise and in the performance by the proprietary companies through it of their duties to the public.

The brief and argument of counsel for the Hubbells upon the controversy as to the so-called surplus earnings, is equally as unresponsive as their argument on the main case. We have nothing to add to the argument in our original brief on this controversy, except to reiterate our belief that it involves no public interest and no rule or principle of law which public interest requires this Court to determine, and that the writ of certiorari issued on petition of the Hubbells may properly be dismissed.

In the brief of counsel for the Hubbells (p. 269), they question the statement in our original brief that these accumulations now amount to approximately $2,000,000.00, and say:

> "There is nothing in the record to sustain this statement and it is not true as a matter of fact. The record does show that a substantial sum involved in this issue."

As we stated in our original brief, the record does not show the amount of these accumulations at the present time, the testimony having been taken a number of years ago.

It seems proper, however, that this Court should be apprised of the precise condition of the case at the time of the argument, relying in this respect upon the good faith of counsel. The fact is that on December 31, 1917, these accumulations, as reported by joint accountants employed to audit the books of the Des Moines Company, amounted to $1,730,582.58. The subsequent accretions, including interest on the fund, practically all of which is in cash, should bring the present total to a figure well above $2,000,000.00.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

OCTOBER TERM, A. D., 1918

CHICAGO, MILWAUKEE & ST. PAUL RAILWAY COMPANY, AND WABASH RAILWAY COMPANY, Petitioners,

vs.

DES MOINES UNION RAILWAY COMPANY, F. M. HUBBELL, F. C. HUBBELL AND F. M. HUBBELL & SON, Respondents.

No. 819

BRIEF IN OPPOSITION TO PETITION FOR CERTIORARI.

The Parties.

The petitioners, the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company and the Wabash Railway Company, have each of them a line of railroad terminating at Des Moines, Iowa.

The respondent, the Des Moines Union Railway Company, owns and operates the railway terminal system which is used by the Milwaukee and Wabash and some other railway companies at Des Moines.

The respondents, F. M. Hubbell and F. C. Hubbell, are officers of the Des Moines Union Railway Company and have been for thirty years or more.

The respondents, F. M. Hubbell and Son are stockholders in the Des Moines Union Railway Company.

The Subject of Contention.

The nucleus of the property of the Terminal Company was acquired about 1882 and prior thereto by the Milwaukee and Wabash Companies, or rather by their predecessors, also railroad companies, and owning and operating the same lines of railroad now owned and operated by the Milwaukee and Wabash.

These predecessor companies organized or caused to be organized, the Des Moines Union Railway Company, with authorized capital stock of one million dollars and with authority for the issuance of bonds.

By deeds absolute and unqualified in form, the predecessors in title of the petitioners, conveyed this terminal property to the corporation they had created and as consideration for such conveyance they took four hundred thousand dollars of the bonds of this terminal company and all of its capital stock.

Other property was later and from time to time acquired by the company and paid for by its bonds or by proceeds of the sale of bonds.

The capital stock of the Des Moines Union was taken by the companies which created it, one-fourth to each of the two original companies which are predecessors of the Milwaukee, and one-half to the predecessor of the Wabash.

The amount of this capital stock was fixed in the first instance at one million of dollars, increased then to two million dollars, and finally left at two million as being authorized, but only four hundred thousand as having been paid for and as so adjusted and issued one-half of the stock was assigned to the Wabah predecessor and the other half to the Milwaukee predecessors.

Of this stock F. M. Hubbell and Son have acquired twenty-five hundred shares by purchase from the predecessors of the Milwaukee and the Wabash, and the stock holding in the Terminal Company now is and has been for more than twenty years as follows:

The Wabash..... 500 shares.
The Milwaukee.....1,000 shares.
F. M. Hubbell & Son.....2,500 shares

The Question in the Case

Is as to the title by which the Terminal Company holds its property.

It got that property from the predecessors of the petitioners and they had unquestioned and unqualified good title. It got it by deeds which by their terms conveyed to the Terminal Company the same unquestioned and unqualified good title which the grantors had. And it paid full rounded measure of value therefor in its stocks and bonds.

Nonetheless, the petitioners contend that at some time in the course of dealing between the parties, there was in some way, some sort of an easement in this property reserved to the grantors, an easement which gave to them the entire beneficial use, right and interest in the property in perpetuity, and that the Terminal Company by the deed absolute to it and for which it gave full value, got only the barren legal title.

Under this contention the Terminal Company must operate this property always for the use and behoof of the petitioning railway companies, for the bare cost of operation so far as they are concerned, with no allowance on account of the value of the property employed, and moreover, all rents, incomes, earnings and profits, the fruit of the use of the property by or for third parties, must go to these same petitioning railway companies.

The shares of stock of the Terminal Company are thus rendered entirely worthless, which the railway companies can well afford since they absorb everything as owners of the dominant estate. F. M. Hubbell & Son, however, lose everything.

The Decision of the Court of Appeals

Was against this contention of the railway companies, and held that the Des Moines Union Railway Company was the owner of its property, that it had in fact gotten what it had bought and paid for, and that the predecessors of the petitioners had parted with what they had sold and received the price for. The Wabash and the Milwaukee seek by their petition a review of this decision.

The Beginning of the Enterprise.

From our point of view the petition for certiorari herein is not entirely accurate in its presentation of the facts of the case, and we therefore think it appropriate to make a statement in chronological order of the acts and contracts involved, and to let these, as far as possible, speak for themselves in the very words of the record.

Three companies, predecessors of the petitioners, prior to 1882 determined on building lines of railroad to Des Moines, one of them, now the Wabash, from the south, and two of them, now the Milwaukee, from the north and northwest. They acquired land in Des Moines to be used by them for terminal purposes jointly, the purchase being made in part directly by the railroad companies and in part by James F. How and General G. M. Dodge, as trustees.

The Contract of January 2nd, 1882.

The arrangement between the companies, the Des Moines & St. Louis (predecessor of the Wabash), and the Des Moines Northwestern and St. Louis, Des Moines and Northern (predecessors of the Milwaukee), was expressed in a writing between these original companies and Col. How and General Dodge of date, January 2nd, 1882 (Rec., Vol. 2, p. 411).

It provided:

"FIRST.

The companies above named are engaged in the construction of railways converging at the City of Des Moines and have heretofore agreed upon the purchase, construction and maintenance, at their joint expense for terminal facilities in the City of Des Moines to be held and used in common as hereinafter provided.

SECOND.

In pursuance of said agreement, various purchases have been made of real property in the City of Des Moines in the name of James F. How, individually; James F. How, trustee, and Grenville M. Dodge, and certain additional property has been appropriated by the Des Moines and St. Louis Railway Company, and the construction of buildings and other improvements upon said premises has been begun.

THIRD.

It is mutually agreed by the parties above named that the expense incurred by the purchases and improvements above mentioned and such others as may be hereafter made, shall be borne in the proportion of one-half by the Des Moines and St. Louis Railway Company and one-quarter by each of the other two companies above named. It is understood that a Depot Company may be organized and may take permanent charge of the property upon the terms herein set forth and that said company may issue and deliver to the companies, parties hereto, its mortgage bonds to the amount of their respective portions of the cost of the said purchases and improvements.

FOURTH.

The title to said property shall be and remain in a trustee to be named by agreement of said companies, but subject to the joint use and occupation of all of said Railway Companies upon the terms herein described.

FIFTH.

The individual signers hereby declare said purchases to have been made in their names upon the trusts above referred to, and agree to quit claim and convey the same to said trustee upon demand and reimbursement.

SIXTH.

The Des Moines and St. Louis Company shall at all times be charged with the police control, supervision and maintenance of said property, and the expense thereof shall be apportioned between it and the said other two companies, the apportionment to be determined by the use thereof which they shall respectively make as evidenced by the wheelage; payment of the sum required to be made monthly to the Des Moines and St. Louis Railway Company, within ten days after rendition of an account stated.

SEVENTH.

The control of said property by the Des Moines and St. Louis Railway Company shall not extend to a determination of the character and extent of improvements to be now or hereafter put upon the same, but differences between the parties under this head shall be settled by arbitration."

The remaining provisions of the contract need not be here considered.

It is obvious that under this contract the Railroad Companies were the absolute owners of this property with right to use it or dispose of it as they might agree among themselves, subject only to the right of Col. How and General Dodge to be reimbursed for what they had paid for lands purchased by them.

The contract does not provide, as stated on page 4 of the petition, that the property constituting its subject matter "should be held in perpetuity subject to the joint use and occupation of all said railway companies."

No trustee was ever named by the parties under paragraph four of the contract.

Operation under and according to the terms of this contract, each company doing its own switching over the tracks with simply police control, etc., by the Des Moines and St. Louis, proved to be unsatisfactory.

Organization of the Des Moines Union Railway Company.

December 10th, 1884, the Des Moines Union Railway Company was organized under the laws of Iowa relating to corporations for pecuniary profit. This was done at the instance of the railroad companies, parties to the agreement of January 2nd, 1882, and was contemplated by paragraph three of that agreement.

The agreement of January 2nd, 1882, is recited and set out in full in the Articles of Incorporation and then it is further recited (Vol. 2, p. 419):

> "Whereas, each of said Railway Companies and said parties has expended large sums of money in purchasing and improving the property aforesaid, and in the construction of suitable buildings for the use of said companies, and
> Whereas, it was provided in the contract aforesaid that a Depot Company might be organized to take permanent charge of the property, and it was the understanding of the parties that such company might acquire, operate and maintain said property in such manner as best to serve the interest of the parties hereto.

Now, therefore, for the purposes aforesaid, as well as for those hereinafter expressed, the undersigned hereby associate themselves in a body corporate, and adopt the following Articles of Incorporation."

The following among the articles of incorporation are pertinent to be considered:

ARTICLE 2.

The general nature of the business to be transacted shall be the construction, ownership and operation of a railway in, around and about the City of Des Moines, Iowa, including the construction, ownership and use of depots, freight houses, railway shops, repair shops, stock-yards and whatever else may be useful and convenient for the operation of railways at the terminal point of Des Moines, Ia., as well as the transfer of cars from the line or depot of one railway to another, or from the various manufactories, warehouses, storehouses, or elevators to each other or to any of the railways or depots thereof, now constructed or to be hereafter constructed, in or around said City of Des Moines, and such corporation shall possess all the powers conferred upon corporations for pecuniary profit by chapter 1 of Title IX of the Code, and the amendments thereto. All the powers exercised by this company shall be in accordance with the terms and spirit of the aforesaid contract entered into on the 2nd day of January, A. D. 1882, by and between the Des Moines and St. Louis Railroad Company, the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company, the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, Jas. F. How, Jas. F. How, trustee, and Grenville M. Dodge. The said company shall have the right to lease or otherwise dispose of the use of any part of its franchises to any other railway company—provided that the assent in writing of the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company and the St. Louis, Des Moines and Northern Railway Company shall be necessary before any such lease or disposition can be made to any other than the parties above named.

ARTICLE 3.

The capital stock of this corporation shall be one million ($1,000,000.00) dollars, which shall be divided into shares of one hundred ($100.00) dollars each and shall be paid in at such times and in such manner as the Board of Directors may determine, and the Board are authorized to receive in payment therefor the property and franchises in the City of Des Moines, now held by the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company, the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, Jas. F. How, Trustee, Jas. F. How and Grenville M. Dodge.

ARTICLE 4.

The affairs of the Company shall be managed by a Board of eight directors, who shall be elected annually, by the stockholders, on the first Thursday of January of each year. The provisional Board of Directors, who shall hold office until the first Thursday in January, A. D. 1886; shall consist of Jas. F. How, A. L. Hopkins, A. A. Talmage, J. S. Runnells, J. S. Polk, F. M. Hubbell, G. M. Dodge, C. F. Meek.

Four members of the Board shall be nominated by the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company, two members by the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company and two members by the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, and no stockholders shall be eligible for membership of the Board unless so nominated.

The fact that a candidate has been duly nominated shall be certified to the stockholders' meeting of this Company by the Secretary of one of the respective companies aforesaid and such certification shall be conclusive.

The provisions herein with respect to nomination for the Board of Directors shall apply to and be enjoyed by any grantee or assignee of either of the railway companies aforesaid. No contract, lease, or other agreement, amounting to a permanent charge upon the property of the corporation, shall be entered into by the Board unless the same shall have been first approved by the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, The Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company and the St. Louis, Des Moines and Northern Railway Company, or their assigns, and shall have been submitted to a meeting of the stockholders, duly called, and shall have been approved by more than three-fourths of all the stockholders; and it shall not be within the power of the Board of Directors to create any limitation whatsoever upon any of the franchises of the corporation, except the same shall have been submitted to and approved by the Stockholders as hereinbefore provided.

The Directors shall elect, from their number, a President, Vice-President, Secretary and Treasurer. All vacancies arising from the death or resignation of a member of the Board shall be filled by the Board.

ARTICLE 9.

These Articles may be amended by a vote of more than three-fourths of all the stock in favor thereof, at a meeting of stockholders thereof, of which a notice containing the proposed amendments shall be mailed to each stockholder at his address, as disclosed by the transfer books of the Company. Notice of such proposed meeting shall also be given by publication for three successive weeks in some newspaper of general circulation—published in the City of Des Moines, Iowa."

It is to be observed:

First: The business of the corporation was expanded greatly beyond what was to be done under the agreement, as it was "the construction, ownership and operation of a railway in, around and about the City of Des Moines" and all sorts of things and everything incident thereto.

Second: The corporation was organized for pecuniary profit.

Third: The Company could not lease or otherwise dispose of its franchises without the consent of the Railroad Companies.

Fourth: The stock of the Company was to be paid for by the property held under the agreement of January, 1882.

Fifth: The members of the Board of Directors were to be nominated, four by the Des Moines & St. Louis Co. and two by each of the other Railroad Companies.

Sixth: No contract, lease or other agreement amounting to a permanent charge upon the property of the corporation could be made by it without approval of the Railroad Companies.

Seventh: These Articles could be amended only by a vote of more than three-fourths of the shareholders and by such vote could be amended.

None of these provisions of the Articles of Incorporation limited or impaired in any way the title to the property which was to be and later was conveyed to the Terminal Company. The railroad companies and Col. How and General Dodge had an absolute title to the property and they conveyed all the title and all the interest they had to the Terminal Company.

The restrictive provisions of the Articles of Incorporation simply determined the mode in which and the limitations under which the powers of the Terminal Company were to be exercised.

Resolutions for Transfer of Property to Des Moines Union Railway Company.

On January 1st, 1885, at a meeting of the shareholders of the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Co. the following resolution providing for the conveyance and transfer of all its right and interest in the terminal property at Des Moines to the Des Moines Union Railway Company was unanimously passed (Vol. II, p. 423):

> "Whereas, The Des Moines and St. Louis Railroad Company, the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company, the St. Louis, Des Moines and Northern Railway Company, G. M. Dodge, James F. How and James F. How, Trustee, on the 2nd day of January, A. D. 1882, entered into a contract whereby it was agreed to purchase, hold, control and use certain real estate and franchises in the City of Des Moines, which had theretofore been held and used by certain of the individual parties thereto, for certain purposes and upon certain conditions set out in said contract; and

Whereas, On the 10th day of December, A. D. 1884, a corporation under the name and style of the Des Moines Union Railway Company was organized as contemplated, and provided in the aforesaid contract to acquire, hold, use and enjoy the real estate property, rights and franchises in the City of Des Moines, east of Farnham Street in said city of the aforesaid railway companies and signatories of said contract acquired or held thereunder and to carry out the purposes of the said contract of January 2nd, 1882.

Now, Therefore:

1. Resolved, That this Company accepts and ratifies, so far as its interests are affected thereby, the Articles of Incorporation of the Des Moines Union Railway Company as in substantial accord and compliance with the terms and conditions of the said contract of January 2, 1882, and undertakes to discharge all the obligations imposed upon it by said contract in order to make effective the purposes of said Des Moines Union Railway Company.

2. Resolved, That the proper officers of this Company be authorized upon the issuance to it of the share of the bonds and stock of said Des Moines Union Railway Company to which it may be entitled, under said contract to convey, assign and transfer to said Company all its rights, title and interest of whatever name and character, in and to the real estate, franchises, choses in action, and rights in possession or contingent to all the property in the City of Des Moines east of Farnham Street in said city, now held, enjoyed or claimed by either or all of the signatories of said contract of January 2nd, 1882, or any agent or trustee thereof purchased, acquired or held in pursuance of said contract."

At the same meeting the following resolution providing for the transfer of the management and operation of the property was passed (Vol. IV, p. 1474):

> "Resolved, That the proper officers of the Company be authorized to transfer the management and operation of its property in Des Moines so far as the same may now be vested in the Company on the first day of January or as soon thereafter as practicable, leaving the question of settlement between this Company and the Des Moines Union Railway Company as authorized under the resolution for that purpose heretofore this day adopted to be arranged as directed therein."

On the same day like resolutions were passed at the shareholders' meeting of the two other Railway Companies.

It is to be observed that by these resolutions the Railroad Companies intended three things—first, a ratification of the incorporation of the Des Moines Union Company, which involved approval of the ownership of the terminal property by that Company; second, a sale of the terminal property to the Des Moines Union Company in consideration of its stocks and bonds, and, third, the immediate transfer of the control, management and operation of the property to the Des Moines Union, leaving the settlement of the amount of stocks and bonds to be paid for the property to be determined thereafter.

On the same day at a meeting of the Directors of the Des Moines Union Company the following resolutions were adopted (Vol. II, p. 433):

> "Resolved,
>
> FIRST.
> That this Company accepts the transfer and management and operation of said property in the City of Des Moines, east of Farnham Street in said city, heretofore owned and controlled by the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad, Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company and the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, and the several others, parties to said contract, and assumes control thereof from this date, so far as practicable, and it hereby instructs its President to make such order as may be necessary to render such control and management effective, as provided in said contract.

SECOND.

That the President, Vice-President, Secretary and Treasurer of this Company be, and they are hereby, appointed a committee to confer with the several parties to said contract and agree with them severally upon the terms and price at which they will respectively assign, transfer and convey said railroad property and franchises to this Company, and procure from them, and each of them, such conveyance and transfers as may be necessary to fully invest this Company with the title, control and management of said properties provided for in said contract of January 2nd, 1882.

THIRD.

That to enable this Company to pay for the property and to maintain, operate and improve the same, and purchase other property necessary to carry out its objects, and remove any and all liens or incumbrances thereon, and pay off all just claims against the same, the President and Secretary of this Company are hereby authorized and directed to issue full-paid capital stock of this Company not to exceed one million ($1,000,000.00) dollars and not to exceed five hundred (500) bonds of this Company, of the denomination of one thousand dollars ($1,000.00); the form to be agreed upon hereafter by this Board.

And to secure said bonds, the President and Secretary are authorized and directed to execute, in the name of this Company, a first mortgage or deed of trust, conveying all of said property so to be conveyed to this Company or thereafter to be acquired, to a trustee therein named, the form of which deed of trust shall be hereafter determined by this Board.

And when said committee shall have agreed with the said several parties to said contract as to the amount of bonds and stocks of this Company necessary to be delivered to them, and each of them, in payment for said railroad property and franchises, the President and Secretary of this Company shall deliver the same to said several parties as each appear to be entitled, on receipt of the conveyances and assignments of said property so to be made to this Company."

Here, then, was the assent of the Des Moines Union to purchase this property with its stocks and bonds and at once to take over its control, operation and management.

The Terminal Mortgage.

But financial difficulties intervened. The railroad enterprises were not prosperous and nothing was done in the way of carrying out these resolutions until some time in 1887, when a mortgage by the Des Moines Union of all its property was prepared by Col. Blodgett, the General Counsel of the Wabash and of the Des Moines and St. Louis. The mortgage is dated November 1st, 1887, but was acknowledged February 28th, 1888, and recorded May 21st, 1888 (Vol II, p. 459).

The mortgage recites that the Des Moines Union is "fully authorized to locate, construct, own and operate a railway in, around and about the City of Des Moines" and that it "has undertaken and partially completed the construction of a railroad in the City of Des Moines," and that it "has purchased, acquired and owns by condemnation and otherwise, valuable real estate in said city, and valuable franchises from the City Counsel of said city" (Vol. II, p. 460), and

> "Whereas, For the purpose of paying for the property aforesaid, aiding in the construction and extension of said railway, perfecting the title to said property, and completing all necessary and desirable improvements thereto and thereon, said party of the first part proposes to issue its bonds to the amount of eight hundred thousand ($800,000) dollars, to be dated on the first day of November, 1887, in accordance with the resolutions and orders of its Board of Directors at a duly called and authorized meeting thereof."

The mortgage described the property covered by it by detailed descriptions which include all the property that was ever within the scope of the agreement of 1882 and then to leave no doubt contains this paragraph (Vol. II, p. 464):

> "Also all the property and realty embraced in the several conveyances made to the said Des Moines Union Railway Company by James F. How, Trustee, James F. How, Grenville M. Dodge, the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company, the Des Moines and St. Louis Railway Company, and the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, or any other person or corporation not specially named above, and for which conveyances reference is hereby prayed to the records of said Polk County, Iowa."

The mortgage was in the general form usual at that time.

While this mortgage was in the course of preparation, the Railroad Companies and the Terminal Company were engaged in carrying out the purposes of the resolutions of 1885.

Resolutions for Conveyance by How and Dodge.

Those resolutions, through inadvertence, perhaps, contained no direction to the Trustees, Col. How and General Dodge to make conveyance of the property held by them, and this omission was now supplied.

November 5th, 1887, the Board of Directors of the St. Louis, Des Moines and Northern passed the following resolutions (Vol. II, p. 435):

> "Whereas, James F. How has prior to 1881 and since then purchased certain property and made expenditures on same as Trustee for this Company, the money expended for said property being furnished by the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company, and
>
> Whereas, Under an agreement between the Company and the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company and others it was intended that said property, standing in the name of James F. How, Trustee, should be transferred to the Des Moines Union Railway Company under certain conditions, it is hereby
> Resolved, That James F. How is requested by this Company to transfer to the Des Moines Union Railway Company the property referred to above, so purchased on receiving from said Company a stipulation that as soon as practicable after the transfer said Union Railway Company is to deliver to him first mortgage bonds of that Company to the amount of the money advanced for the payment of said property and improvements, with interest on same and taxes paid thereon and also three-fourths of the stock of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, said bonds and stock to be transferred by said How to the Purchasing Committee of the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company or their successors or assigns in lieu for the money advanced by said Company to make the purchase of the above property and improvements and the payment of taxes for this Company.

Whereas, Grenville M. Dodge has prior to 1881 and since then purchased certain property and made expenditures on the same as Trustee for this Company, the money expended for said property being furnished by the said Dodge, and

Whereas, Under an agreement between this Company and the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company and others it was intended that said property standing in the name of Grenville M. Dodge, Trustee, and Grenville M. Dodge, individually, should be transferred to the Des Moines Union Railway Company under certain conditions, it is hereby

Resolved, That Grenville M. Dodge is requested by this Company to transfer to the Des Moines Union Railway Company the property referred to above so purchased on receiving from said Company a stipulation that as soon as practicable said Union Railway Company is to deliver to him first mortgage bonds of that Company to the amount of the money advanced by him for the payment of said property and improvements, with interest and taxes on the same, and also one-fourth of the capital stock of the Des Moines Union Railway Company."

Similar resolutions were passed by the two other Railroad Companies on November 8th (Vol II, p. 437 and 442).

Assent by the Terminal Company.

And on November 8th the Terminal Company passed resolutions assenting to the proposals of the Railroad Companies (Vol. IV, p. 1299) and authorizing the delivery of its stocks and bonds in payment of the property conveyed to it.

The Deeds of Conveyance.

Conveyances were now made by the Trustees, Col. How and General Dodge, of the land standing in their names (Vol. II, pp. 446 to 453).

Under date of November 7th, 1887, the St. Louis, Des Moines and Northern made a deed to the Des Moines Union of the property standing in its name, which, after describing the property conveyed, reads as follows (Vol. II, p. 456):

> "Together with all and singular the tenements, hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging, or in any wise appertaining, and the reversion and reversions, remainder and remainders, rents, issues and profits thereof. And also, all the estate, right, title, interest in the above described property, possession, claim and demand whatsoever, as well in law as in equity of the said parties of the first part, of, in or to the above described premises, and every part and parcel thereof, with the appurtenances. To have and to hold all and singular the above mentioned and described premises, together with the appurtenances, unto the said parties of the second part and assigns forever."

There could hardly be left in the grantor after all this, the entire beneficial interest in the property.

Under date of February 21st, 1888, the Des Moines and St. Louis Company executed a deed which, after specifically describing a number of parcels of real estate conveyed by the deed, proceeds (Vol. II, p. 458):

> "And all of the real estate within the City of Des Moines, Iowa, which is the property of the grantor, together with all real estate which may hereafter be acquired by this grantor either by condemnation proceedings or otherwise. Also all its embankments, bridges, turnouts, sidetracks, buildings and structures, water tanks and fixtures, shops, engine and other houses, depots, turntables and all its railroad property acquired and to be acquired, and everything appurtenant to said railroad, and all franchises and rights it may have acquired by grant, donation, purchase or otherwise and particularly all rights, franchises and privileges granted by the City of Des Moines, Iowa, under an ordinance "Granting the right of way to the Des Moines and St. Louis Railroad Company and its assigns, over, across, along and upon certain streets and alleys in the City of Des Moines, Iowa, and the right to bridge the Des Moines River on the south alley in said city between Court Avenue and Vine Streets. And the said Des Moines and St. Louis Railroad Company hereby covenants to warrant and defend the said premises against all the lawful claims of all persons whomsoever, claiming by, through or under it."

The contention is made in the face of this warranty deed that the grantor reserved to itself and to the two other Railroad Companies the entire beneficial interest in all the property conveyed.

The bonds of the Terminal Company were delivered to the Railroad Companies, and by them were sold upon the general market. It is conceded by petitioners that the bonds were a lien upon the property of the Terminal Company, but it is contended that the stock represents no sort of beneficial interest in that property.

Actual possession of the property was taken by the Terminal Company May 1st, 1888, and ever since then that Company has held possession of and has operated the property.

The Operating Contract of 1889.

Under date of May 10th, 1889, a contract was made between the Terminal Company and the three Railroad Companies, effective from May 1st, 1888, and to run for thirty years from that time, providing for the use and operation of the property by the Terminal Company.

This contract was prepared by the General Counsel of the predecessor of the Wabash Company.

The preliminary recitals of this contract are as follows (Vol. II, p. 479):

> "This agreement, made and entered into this 10th day of May, A. D. 1889, by and between the Des Moines Union Railway Company, of Des Moines, Iowa, party of the first part, and the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company, and the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, parties of the second part, witnesseth that:
>
> Whereas, The said party of the first part is the owner of valuable terminal facilities in the City of Des Moines, Iowa, hereinafter described; and
> Whereas, The respective parties of the second part have railroads in the State of Iowa which terminate at, or run into and through, said City of Des Moines, and in order to prevent unnecessary expense, inconvenience and loss attending the accumulation of a number of stations, and in order to facilitate the public convenience and safety, it has become important that said second parties should have the use of the terminal facilities of said first party; and

Whereas, Said party of the first part has become incorporated and organized under the laws of the State of Iowa for the purpose of owning and operating a line of railway in the said City of Des Moines, Iowa, extending from the eastern boundary line of said city to Farnham street, in western part thereof; and

Whereas, Said party of the first part, in pursuance of said charter, has acquired and now owns a railway in said city, as above set forth, and has already acquired or constructed a large number of valuable main and side tracks, depots, depot grounds, lands, yards, shops, round houses, freight houses and other terminal facilities, and intends to acquire and construct more; and

Whereas, Said second parties are each desirous of having the right to use said terminals in connection with their respective railroads; and

Whereas, For the protection of the parties hereto and their assigns, it is important that the rights, duties and liabilities of each in regard to the whole subject-matter of said terminal facilities, including their use, care, control, rental, taxes, expenses, renewals, insurance, and repairs, shall be stated and defined.

Now, therefore, in consideration of the premises, it is mutually agreed by and between said party of the first part and each of the several parties of the second part (each of said second parties contracting for itself), as follows:"

The contract then provides for the acquisition of more property and the construction of more facilities by the Terminal Company, as follows (Vol. II, p. 480):

> Section One. The party of the first part agrees to proceed with reasonable dispatch, and whenever its Board of Directors shall deem it expedient, to erect and furnish for the use of the parties of the second part, in said City of Des Moines, a union passenger depot, and such additional switches, sidings, freight depots, round houses, shops, water tanks and yard appurtenances, as the Board of Directors of said first party may consider reasonable, and for those purposes said first party shall acquire by lease, purchase, or otherwise, such additional real estate as may be necessary.
>
> Section Two. The amount of such additional grounds, and the form, character and cost of said union depot and other structures and appurtenances to be erected and furnished by said party of the first part, as well as the management, operation, improvement and repairs thereof, shall in all matters not otherwise specifically provided for herein, be determined by the Board of Directors of said first party."

Other sections of the contract prescribe details of the service to be rendered and the charges therefor.

There are sections dealing with the transfer of stock in the Terminal Company to be considered later.

This contract was observed by the parties and their successors until the close of its term.

Amendment of Articles of Incorporation of the Des Moines Union Railway Company.

The petition for certiorari, p. 6, states that:

> "He (F. M. Hubbell) caused the records of the Des Moines Company (the Terminal) without knowledge or consent of the railway companies to purport to show that at a meeting of its stockholders, when in fact no stock had been issued or subscribed, its articles of incorporation had been amended so as to eliminate all the rights and interests of the railway companies in their joint railroads and terminal facilities and create a colorable claim that the Des Moines Company had acquired them, etc."

This is a charge, certainly a suggestion, that the amendments to the articles of incorporation were furtively made by Mr. Hubbell.

A recital of what was done, with references to the record, will show that nothing was done without the presence of all parties in interest and participation by them.

It is true that at this time no certificates of shares had been printed and issued to the parties entitled, but the authorized amount of capital stock had been determined, its issuance in payment of property received had been directed and the amount due to each of the railroad companies had been settled.

The integrity of the records of these various corporations is not impeached, and there is nothing in the testimony to contravene any recital of facts in them.

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Terminal Company held January 3rd, 1890, among other things done, a Board of Directors for the ensuing year was elected. General G. M. Dodge presided at the meeting.

J. F. How, on behalf of the Wabash Railroad Co., operating the Des Moines and St. Louis R. R. Co., nominated Jas. F. How, C. M. Hays, W. H. Blodgett and A. B. Cummins "to be voted for as directors of of the Des Moines Union Railway Company to represent the said Wabash Railroad Company, it having been certified to this meeting by the secretary of the Wabash Railroad Company and Des Moines and St. Louis Railroad Company that the above named gentlemen had been duly nominated as candidates for directors in this company on behalf of the Wabash Railroad Company, and the Des Moines and St. Louis Railroad Company" (Vol. IV, p. 1306).

Col. Jas. F. How was a vice-president of the Wabash Company and C. M. Hays was its general manager.

The same record shows that General Dodge, on behalf of the Des Moines and Northern nominated himself and L. M. Martin as directors of the Terminal, and F. M. Hubbell, on behalf of the Des Moines and Northwestern, nominated himself and F. C. Hubbell to represent his company.

The men nominated were all elected. Here was an annual meeting, of which every stockholder had constructive notice, and which was attended in the only way in which corporations can attend, that is, by personal representatives, by every stockholder in the company, and those representatives were on behalf of the Wabash, Col. J. F. How and Chas M. Hays; on behalf of the Des Moines and Northern, General G. M. Dodge and L. M. Martin, and on behalf of the Des Moines & Northwestern, F. M. Hubbell and F. C. Hubbell.

Further proceedings were had at this meeting as follows (Vol. II, p. 1307):

> "James F. How moved that the question of amending the articles of incorporation of this Company, as well as the question concerning issuing of stock for the purchase price of the terminal property be referred to Attorneys W. H. Blodgett and A. B. Cummins for their investigation and recommendation."

Thus, what the petition for certiorari says was done by F. M. Hubbell "without knowledge or consent of the railway companies" was initiated at a meeting presided over by Gen. Dodge of the Des Moines and Northern, being moved by Col. How of the Wabash and referred for investigation and recommendation to Col. Blodgett and Hon. A. B. Cummins, both representing the Wabash.

This meeting adjourned without action on the amendments to February 18th. Meanwhile the attorneys were busy. Mr. Cummins prepared the amendments and sent them to Col. Blodgett for review (Vol IV, p. 1598).

At the February meeting, there being present A. B. Cummins, representing the Wabash, L. M. Martin for the Des Moines and Northern and F. M. and F. C. Hubbell of the Des Moines and Northwestern, the proceedings had were as follows (Vol. IV, p. 1311):

"The secretary reported that notice of the meeting had been duly published and also reported that he had, pursuant to the articles of incorporation, notified each stockholder of the time, place and object of this meeting, which notice contained the amendments proposed to be offered to the articles of incorporation.

Upon motion of A. B. Cummins the report of the secretary was adopted and this meeting declared to be duly and legally called, for the purpose of considering and adopting or rejecting amendments to the articles of incorporation.

Thereupon A. B. Cummins presented certain amendments to the articles of incorporation.

Thereupon F. M. Hubbell moved that the meeting of stockholders do now adjourn for the purpose of having further opportunity to examine said amendments, to meet on Tuesday, the 8th day of April, 1890, at ten o'clock a. m., which motion being seconded, was unanimously carried and thereupon the meeting of stockholders adjourned to meet as aforesaid."

At the meeting on April 8th there were present three men who had been elected as Wabash directors of the Terminal Company, viz., J. F. How, C. M. Hays and A. B. Cummins; one a director representing the Des Moines and Northern, viz., L. M. Martin, and the Hubbells, F. M. and F. C., representing the Des Moines and Northwestern.

The record, Vol. II, p. 488, et seq., shows that the amendments to the articles of incorporation were offered one by one, the different individuals present each taking a hand, and all were unanimously adopted.

Under the law of Iowa, it was necessary for the officers of the Des Moines Union Company to certify the adoption of these articles of amendment and formally to acknowledge the certificate.

This was done by F. M. Hubbell, F. C. Hubbell, L. M. Martin, A. B. Cummins and Horace Seeley on April 10th, 1890; by James F. How, Charles M. Hays and Wells H. Blodgett on April 14th, 1890; by G. M. Dodge, April 16th, 1890, and by H. D. Thompson, April 21st, 1890 (Vol. IV, pp. 1604-1610).

The articles as thus amended and certified were filed for record with the local recorder on April 23rd, 1890, and with the Secretary of State on May 12th.

And then notice of these amendments under signature of General Dodge as president of the company, attested by F. M. Hubbell as secretary, was published in the Des Moines Leader for four consecutive weeks, from April 23rd to May 20th, 1890.

And under these amended articles and in accordance with them all parties concerned voted their stock, elected directors and did business generally without complaint for seventeen years, or until about the time of the institution of this suit.

These amendments were made in light and leisure, not in haste and darkness as charged in the petition.

And so Mr. Hubbell did not cause the records of the Terminal Company "without knowledge or consent of the railway companies to show" that the articles of incorporation were amended, but all concerned, the representatives of all the railroad companies, and particularly the Wabash, believed that amendments were necessary and acting with great deliberation, after successive adjournments and always under the advice of competent counsel, made, published, declared and accepted those amendments.

Issuance of the Capital Stock of the Terminal Company.

The petition (p. 6) states that F. M. Hubbell caused 4,000 shares of the stock of the Terminal Company "to be issued under Article III of the alleged amended articles, which falsely stated the stock would be issued in payment for the property, bonds having been previously issued for that purpose. The stock was therefore issued without consideration."

This is distinctly misleading in its suggestion. What was done respecting the stock of the Terminal Company, from beginning to end was with the knowledge, approval and active participation of each and every one of the railroad companies, the original ones and their successors and assigns.

Article III of the original articles of incorporation of the Terminal Company (Vol II, p. 420), provided that the capital stock of the corporation should be one million dollars and the board of directors was authorized to receive in payment therefor the Des Moines properties and franchises of the three railroad companies.

These properties and franchises had been acquired from time to time since 1880. When they incorporated the Terminal and took over the property, they gave bonds to the parties who had advanced money for the property in amounts equal to the money advanced and as further consideration for the property acquired distributed the stock one-half to the Des Moines and St. Louis and one-fourth to each of the other companies (Vol. II, pp. 423, 435, 436, 437, 438, 442).

In November, 1887, the articles of the Terminal Company were amended increasing the capital stock to two million dollars (Vol. IV, p. 1298).

The contract of May 10th, 1889, precedes by nearly a year the amendments to the articles of the Terminal Company made in 1890. This contract recites, section 26, that the Des Moines and St. Louis Company is entitled to one-half of the capital stock of the Terminal Company, and the two other companies each to one-fourth. It further recites that "no certificates for said shares have yet been issued to said parties," and then proceeds to say that certificates shall be issued for ten thousand shares, par value one hundred dollars each, to the Des Moines and St. Louis and for five thousand shares to each of the other railway companies (Vol. II, pp. 486 and 487).

But no stock certificates were in fact printed and issued to the railway companies at this time. They proceeded in the view, however, until in 1890 they amended the articles of incorporation, that they held stock in the Terminal Company in the amount and proportion stated in the agreement of May 10th, 1889.

There was no doubt some water in this stock, but of this the petitioners cannot complain, for they or their predecessors did the watering.

Mr. Cummins set about to correct this evil by an amendment to the third article of incorporation of the Terminal Company, which provided, among other things (Vol. II, p. 490):

> "The capital stock of the corporation shall be two million dollars ($2,000,000), which shall be divided into shares of one hundred dollars each; said shares shall be paid for and issued in the manner following and not otherwise; four thousand shares as a part of the purchase price of the Terminal property originally acquired by the corporation, it being now agreed by all the stockholders that said sum of four hundred thousand dollars, together with the first mortgage bonds theretofore issued for that purpose constituting the fair value of said property when so acquired; and all resolutions and proceedings of the corporation heretofore had with respect to the amount of capital stock to be issued as such purchase price, are set aside and held for naught.
>
> Said four thousand shares of the capital stock shall be issued to the following corporations and in the following proportions:
>
> Two thousand shares to the purchasing committee of the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company, successor in ownership to the Des Moines and St. Louis Railroad Company, and the present owner of the property known as the Des Moines and St. Louis Railroad.

One thousand shares to the Des Moines and Northwestern Railway Company, successor to the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company, and

One thousand shares to the Des Moines and Northern Railway Company, successor to the St. Louis, Des Moines and Northern Railway Company, and the said shares are hereby declared to be fully paid by the transfer of the aforesaid property. The remaining capital stock, to-wit, sixteen thousand shares, or any part thereof, shall be issued only by the authority of a resolution of the stockholders adopted by the vote of more than seven-eighths of all the stock theretofore issued, and shall be fully paid either in money or property at its fair market value, before certificates therefor shall be executed and delivered."

At this same meeting of the Terminal Company Mr Cummins introduced a resolution which explained and was intended to explain the action of the meeting with respect to the capital stock. The resolution recited that by inadvertence there was some uncertainty in the records of the Company as to the price at which the property had been acquired, and all parties being agreed that the property and franchises incident thereto should be purchased at its fair value payable partly in bonds and partly in stock fully paid and it being agreed that the property was fairly worth the sum of $861,257.11, and the relative shares of this to which the parties respectively were entitled having been ascertained and having been adjusted and paid so far as payable in bonds, it was resolved unanimously (Vol. II, p. 496):

"1st. That the purchase price of the property originally acquired by the Company, as above stated, be fixed at said sum eight hundred sixty-one thousand two hundred fifty seven and 21/100 ($861,257.21) dollars as of the date of the conveyance thereof.

2nd. That the payment of a portion of such purchase price in first mortgage bonds, as above set forth, be confirmed and approved.

3rd. That to complete the payment of such purchase price, the president and secretary are hereby authorized to issue certificates for thirty-nine hundred and ninety-two (3,992) shares of stock, which shares, including eight already issued on behalf of said parties, aggregate four thousand (4,000) shares, as follows:

To the purchasing committee of the Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific Railway Company, nineteen hundred and ninety-six (1,996) shares.

To the Des Moines and Northern Railway Company nine hundred and ninety-eight (998) shares, and to the Des Moines and Northwestern Railway Company nine hundred and ninety-eight (998) shares.

4th. That the proceedings heretofore had respecting the issuance of capital stock, so far as such proceedings are inconsistent with said amendments to the articles of incorporation or with this resolution, are hereby modified to conform hereto."

Certificates of shares were now issued as provided in this resolution to the several parties on the 8th day of April, 1890 (Vol. II, p. 711).

Acquisition of Terminal Stock by F. M. Hubbell & Son.

The petition states that (p. 6):

"by mesne assignments F. M. Hubbell and his son, F. C. Hubbell, acquired individually five-> eighths thereof, or 2,500 shares, from the company they dominated in a trade at the alleged price of ten cents on the dollar, in violation of the agreement that the stock would be sold "only to a railroad company who would join with the Wabash in making a contract with the Des Moines Company, guaranteeing interest upon the bonds, operating expenses, etc."

There was no such agreement as that stated between any of the parties, nor has the inference that F. M. Hubbell & Son acted in bad faith, in acquiring their stock any foundation in the testimony.

The original articles of incorporation contained no restriction on eligibility to ownership of stock. They did impose as a qualification for the directorship that the person must be nominated by one of the three railroad companies and they did restrict the company itself as to the disposition or burdening of the property. The parties evidently thought that individuals might become shareholders (Vol. II, p. 420-421).

The agreement of May 10th, 1889, in Section 26, did contain a restriction on the transfer of Terminal stock viz.: "all of said certificates (of shares) shall express upon their face that they are not transferable in whole or in part without the consent in writing of all the parties of the second part to this agreement (the three railroad companies) except that any shares of stock" issued to qualify some one as a director may be retransferred, etc., etc. (Vol. II, p. 487).

The three railroad companies consenting, anybody could acquire stock in the Terminal Company.

The articles of incorporation as amended in April, 1890, provided in Article 3 that the stock was transferable only on the books of the Company by and with the consent of three-fourths of all the directors, except in case of a transferee who is or becomes the owner of one of the three lines of railroad involved and a director could not be elected except by vote of more than seven-eighths of the stockholders (Vol. II, p. 491).

Here again individuals are not disqualified, but the power of rejection is reserved to one-eighth of the shareholders.

On February 5th, 1890, Mr. O. D. Ashley, who was secretary of the Purchasing Committee of the old Wabash Company and president of the Company itself, which owned all the stock and bonds of the Des Moines and St. Louis Company, wrote F. M. Hubbell, saying (Vol. IV, p. 1599):

> "I will give you for the Purchasing Committee the option of buying of them $135,000 of the bonds of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, and one-fourth interest in the capital stock of that company for $135,000 and accrued interest from November 1st, 1889, any time within ten days from this date. Payment to be made in cash if the option is availed of by you. (Signed) O. D. Ashley, Sec'y Pur. Com."

General Dodge came into this transaction for one half of it, leaving Mr. Hubbell with the remaining half as to which the Purchasing Committee solemnly authorized and empowered "said Des Moines Union Railway Company, or the proper officers thereof, to issue to said Hubbell or his assigns, one-eighth of all the capital stock in the said Des Moines Union Railway Company" and further, "The said Purchasing Committee hereby guarantees the approval by the Des Moines and St. Louis Railroad Company of the transfer of said stock to said Hubbell within sixty days" (Vol. IV, p. 1601).

This sale to Hubbell was reported in writing to the Purchasing Committee and on motion of General Hubbard was approved (Vol. IV, p. 1558).

April 8th, 1890, this sale of stock was approved by the directors of the Des Moines and St. Louis Company, they being James F. How, C. M. Hays, H. S. Priest, George S. Grover, F. M. Hubbell and A. B. Cummins, all save Mr. Hubbell being Wabash representatives (Vol. II, p. 1434).

And the Des Moines Union Company itself on April 8th, by vote of all its directors, ratified and approved the sale and ordered the transfer of the certificates both to F. M. Hubbell and to General Dodge (Vol. II, p. 1312).

Pursuant to these transactions a certificate for five hundred shares was on April 8th, 1890, issued to F. M. Hubbell and for a like number to General Dodge (Vol. 2, p. 711).

April 5th, 1890, Mr. Ashley as president of the Wabash Railroad Company wrote to Mr. F. M. Hubbell as follows, viz. (Vol. IV, p. 1602):

> "I have yours of April 1st, this morning. The result of my conversation with Messrs. Joy and Welles is a rather vague idea that we ought not sell $100,000 of the Des Moines Union Railway Terminal bonds and one-eighth interest in the capital stock at less than $115,000 and accrued interest on the bonds, and I do not feel authorized to offer it at any less price. If, however, you will make me a definite bid of the best price you can, I will communicate it to the other members of the committee and give you an early and definite reply. It must be understood, of course, > that a one-eighth interest in the capital stock shall be sufficient to represent a proprietorship in the Company according to the understanding we had when you were here."

The negotiations opened by this letter resulted in a contract on June 5th, 1890, for the purchase by Hubbell of $50,000 of bonds and 500 shares of the stock of the Des Moines Union Company for $57,736. Transfer of the shares on the books of the Des Moines Union was guaranteed "so far as the vote of the directors of said Des Moines Union Railway Company, representing the Des Moines and St. Louis Railway Company will secure said transfer (Vol. IV, p. 1613).

The directors of the Des Moines and St. Louis Company, on February 11th, 1891, by unanimous vote approved the sale of the stock to Hubbell; Hays and How of the Wabash Company being present (Vol. IV, p. 1438).

The Des Moines Union on the same day approved the sale and made the transfer by unanimous vote of its directors (Vol. IV, p. 1320).

The foregoing are the contracts and agreements under which Mr. Hubbell first got the Terminal stock.

The petition (p. 5) assumes to quote from an agreement providing that this stock would be sold "only to a railway company who will join with the Wabash in making a contract with the Des Moines Union guaranteeing interest on the bonds, operating expenses, etc." No such words are to be found in any agreement between any of the parties; no such restriction on transfer of stock is contained in any of the articles of incorporation, original or amended.

More than a year and a half prior to the sale of the stock to Hubbell he wrote to O. D. Ashley, president of the Wabash, saying that he had been asked whether Des Moines Union stock could be bought and at what price. In his answer, Ashley said the Purchasing Committee would be glad to sell a quarter interest at a fair price, but he said, "I have always supposed that it would be necessary to confine the sale to such railway companies as would be interested in the station." Hubbell in his reply said, "I agree with you that the sale of a quarter interest in the stock of the Terminal Company should be made only to a railway company who will join with the Wabash in making a contract with the Des Moines Union guaranteeing the interest upon the bonds and operating expenses, etc." He says that a certain Mr. Jones has been making inquiries about the shares, but he takes no stock in Jones (Vol. III, pp. 1059-1060). The last letter was written on June 18th, 1888. The subject of sale or purchase of stock by anyone in the Des Moines Union was not broached again until February 5th, 1890, when an entirely new and distinct chapter was opened by the option which Mr. Ashley gave to Mr. Hubbell.

The two transactions were distinct and unrelated, and they were eighteen months apart in time. Nothing was said in 1890 as to limiting sales of Terminal stock to certain railway companies. It is evident that Mr. Ashley, on behalf of the Wabash Company, wanted to market some Terminal stock and bonds. The transactions with General Dodge and F. M. Hubbell were sales of bonds and stocks pure and simple. And in making these sales the Purchasing Committee acted with full knowledge of the situation. Months passed by before the last sale was consummated by transfer of the stock. In truth, the money paid at the time was a great desideratum, and the record shows that it was paid by Dodge and Hubbell to the Purchasing Committee and by that committee to the Wabash Company.

Relation of the Milwaukee Company to These Shares.

The Milwaukee Company has acquired the two Northern lines and in connection with them one thousand shares of the stock of the Terminal. The original Northern Companies lost the properties by foreclosure. New companies were formed, which afterward were consolidated. In the course of these proceedings Hubbell and Dodge transferred their Terminal shares to the consolidated company, which then had 3,500 shares. The consolidated company did not fare well, and being in need of money, pledged 2,500 of its Terminal shares to F. M. Hubbell & Son. These shares were by agreement of the parties taken by F. M. Hubbell & Son in liquidation of some indebtedness. This was in 1893.

This Northern Company found itself very dependent upon the Milwaukee, and whether it would prosper or not was determinable by the division of rates it secured from the Milwaukee. To get a better division the Hubbells, who were largely interested in the securities of the Northern Company, both stocks and bonds, in the year 1894 gave a large block of the stock of the Northern Company, 16,800 shares, to the Milwaukee, together with an option to the Milwaukee to purchase 16,468 shares more at a low price and the exercise of this option would give the Milwaukee full control of the Northern Company (Vol. II, p. 838, and Vol. IV, p. 1618).

At the very beginning of the negotiations leading up to these contracts which were executed in July, 1894, although dated March 15th, and indeed so early as February 22nd, 1894, Mr. Hubbell wrote to Mr. Miller, president of the Milwaukee Company, as follows:

> "Your favor of the 20th is received and noted. Enclosed I send you a copy of the articles of consolidation and incorporation and trust mortgage of the Des Moines, Northern and Western Railway Company. There has been bonds issued on this property to the amount of $2,770,000. I have no printed copy of the articles of incorporation of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, but will say they were drawn by our attorney, Mr. A. B. Cummins, and I think are all right, and if important to you, can have a copy made and sent you. The amount of bonds authorized by that corporation is $800,000, bearing 5 per cent interest, of which amount $612,000 have been issued. I enclose plat of Des Moines Union. We have about five miles of right-of-way occupied by about twenty miles of track. The Des Moines Northern and Western Railway Company own one-fourth of the capital stock of the Des Moines Union Railway Company. The Wabash own one-eighth and five-eighths is owned by individuals.
> If you desire any further information, I shall be glad to furnish it" (Vol. IV, p. 1617).

Thus the Milwaukee was advised from the beginning and before it came into the situation of the precise facts as to this Terminal stock, viz.: one-eighth held by the Wabash, one-fourth by the Northern Company, which the Milwaukee contemplated getting and subsequently did get, and five-eighths by individuals.

The Wabash, of course, knew that individuals held Terminal stock, because it had sold it to them.

Year after year passed, with frequent directors' meetings and annual and perhaps other shareholders' meetings of the Terminal Company, and always the Wabash and the Milwaukee were represented and always the Hubbells were present and at the shareholders' meetings they voted and were recognized as having the right to vote the 2,500 shares of Terminal stock held by them, and shown to be held by them by the books of the Company.

The Ratification Agreement of 1897.

More than this, in the year 1897 a revision of the contract of May 10th, 1889, was desired by the Wabash. For the present purpose it is not necessary to detail the negotiations which followed. There resulted a contract, dated July 31st, 1897, which in some measure is a revision, but more strictly a ratification of the old agreement (Vol. II, p. 506).

There seemed to be some doubt whether the railroad companies, then the Wabash and the Des Moines, Northern and Western, were bound by the old agreement and that was settled and the contract ratified and confirmed by the railroad companies in every respect with this exception, viz. (Vol. II, pp. 508-509):

> "But it is expressly provided that so much of the said contract, a copy of which is hereto attached, as relates to the issuance and the distribution of the capital stock of the said Des Moines Company, is no longer binding, and that the capital stock of the said Des Moines Company is held as follows:
>
> The Purchasing Committee of the Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific Railway Company, 500 shares.

The Des Moines Northern and Western Railroad Company, 1,000 shares.

F. M. Hubbell & Son, 2,500 shares.

Of the above shares belonging to said Purchasing Committee, two shares stand upon the books of the Company as follows: Joseph Ramsey, Jr., 1 share, and H. L. Magee, 1 share.

Of the shares belonging to the Des Moines Northern and Western, Railroad Company, two shares stand upon the books of the Company as follows: A. B. Cummins, 1 share, and F. M. Hubbell, 1 share.

Of the shares belonging to said F. M. Hubbell & son, five shares stand upon the books of the Company as follows: F. M. Hubbell, 1 share; F. C. Hubbell, 1 share; C. Huttenlocher, 1 share; H. D. Thompson, 1 share; A. N. Denman, 1 share."

And this contract of 1897 was formally ratified, approved and confirmed by the directors of the Wabash (Vol. IV, p. 1540); by the directors of the Des Moines, Northern and Western (Vol. IV, p. 1497), and by the directors of the Des Moines Union (Vol. IV, p. 1357).

Acquiescence.

Nearly ten years passed after this without challenge of the rights of F. M. Hubbell & Son as shareholders. And during all the years they were giving their service in official relations to the development of the Terminal Company and its business, and they did this without pay, and that service constant and continuous, faithful and arduous, was accepted without question by these petitioners who now say the Hubbells have no beneficial interest whatever in the property they have served and managed so well.

In Conclusion.

The case involves no profound questions of law.

The three railway companies, predecessors of the petitioners at the time of the contract of 1882, and under it, owned the property in question and every interest in that property.

The individual parties to that contract, Col. How and General Dodge, had no interest or right except to be reimbursed for what they had paid out, and they were so reimbursed.

As the railway companies made the agreement of 1882 so they could change it, and they did.

They created the Terminal Company, and they did this for the very purpose of having it acquire, own, operate and develop this property.

They transferred this property to the Terminal Company by conveyances as comprehensive in description of the rights and interests conveyed as the learning of experienced lawyers could devise.

They mortgaged this property, issued bonds secured by this mortgage, and sold those bonds to the public.

They issued stock against that same property and sold the stock.

The stock had for its basis the same property and the same interest in that property that underlaid the bonds.

The organization of the Terminal Company, the conveyance of the property to it, the contract of 1889, the amendments to the articles of incorporation in 1890, the sales of stocks and bonds, the ratification agreement of 1897, all were known to, participated in and approved by the persons who at the time were the accredited representatives of these petitioners or their predecessors.

And there is not involved in this controversy anything of public interest or importance. The Terminal Company is discharging its public functions and duties and will continue to do so. Its property is affected with a public interest and is dedicated to the public use, and its obligations in this respect are the same whoever its shareholders may be or whatever may be their interest in the property. The controversy is essentially of a private nature. It is whether, notwithstanding the conveyance of the property in the most absolute terms and for a good consideration, the grantors reserved the entire beneficial interest in the property and the grantee got only a barren legal title. This affects the parties not as carriers, but as proprietors, for only proprietory rights are involved.

IN THE

Supreme Court of the United States

OCTOBER TERM, 1918

No._____

THE DES MOINES UNION RAILWAY COMPANY, FREDERICK M. HUBBELL, FREDERICK C. HUBBELL AND F. M. HUBBELL & SON, Petitioners,

vs.

THE CHICAGO, MILWAUKEE & ST. PAUL RAILWAY COMPANY AND THE WABASH RAILROAD COMPANY,

Respondents.

CROSS-PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI

The Des Moines Union Railway Company, Frederick M. Hubbell, Frederick C. Hubbell and F. M. Hubbell & Son, respectfully petition this Court to grant a writ of certiorari to the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Judicial Circuit, to remove therefrom, for review here, the record in the case therein pending, numbered 4885, wherein the petitioners are appellees and the respondents are appellants.

Two controversies are involved in the case, one of which was decided in favor of petitioners and the other against them and in favor of the respondents hereto.

The two controversies are fully presented by the same record and certified copies of that record accompany the petition for certiorari filed by the respondents hereto. And while the two controversies are more or less distinct, they rest upon the same evidence and grow out of the same series of transactions.

The questions to be determined are of the same general nature, involving the construction of contracts and of articles of incorporation as fixed by their terms and the conduct of the parties under them.

Your petitioners believe that if the case is one appropriate for review on writ of certiorari as to one of the controversies therein, it should in justice to all the parties be brought before the Court in its entirety, and being advised that they cannot otherwise have a review of the decision and decree herein, in so far as adverse to them, they respectfully submit this cross-petition for a writ of certiorari.

What is dealt with and designated by the parties and by the Court of Appeals as the "main" controversy or question in the case is presented by the petition of the respondents hereto. The question presented by these petitioners is designated by the parties and the Court as that of the "surplus earnings."

The "main" question is as to the rights of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company and the Wabash Railroad Company, hereinafter called the Railway Companies, and the Des Moines Union Railway Company, hereinafter called the Terminal Company, in and to the property to which the Terminal Company holds title and which it uses in the course of its operations as a Terminal Company.

The contention of the Railway Companies is that they are the real and beneficial owners of the property, and that the Terminal Company simply holds the title in trust for them, or that the ownership of the Terminal Company is subject to an easement in favor of the Railway Companies which gives them the right to the use of the property in perpetuity for terminal purposes at actual cost of operation, maintenance and taxes, they getting the benefit in reduction of the cost of operation of all revenue from whatever source obtained, thus depriving the Terminal Company of all beneficial interest in the property, and making its shares of stock worthless to the owners of them.

The issued capital stock of the Terminal Company amounts to four hundred thousand dollars divided into four thousand shares of the par value of one hundred dollars each, of which the Wabash Company owns and holds five hundred shares, the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Company, one thousand shares, and F. M. Hubbell & Son, twenty-five hundred shares. F. M. Hubbell & Son bought their shares from the predecessors in right and title of the Railway Companies.

The real purpose of this branch of the case, and the effect of the contention of the Railway Companies, if sustained, is to nullify and render worthless the shares of F. M. Hubbell & Son.

The determination of this "main" controversy, the Court of Appeals said, was "the definition of the legal effect of certain instruments and acts of the parties or their predecessors in interest."

This question was decided by the Circuit Court of Appeals in favor of these petitioners, the Court holding that the Terminal Company was the absolute owner of its property, and that the rights of the Railway Companies therein or thereto were simply those of share holders in the Terminal Company.

The Surplus Earnings

controversy is the subject of this petition or cross-petition for certiorari and we may say as the Court of Appeals said of the main "controversy," that the determination of it is "the definition of the legal effect of certain instruments and acts of the parties or their predecessors in interests," and the same instruments and the same acts of the same parties are involved in the petition and cross-petition. This a statement of the case will show.

In December, 1880, the Des Moines and Northwestern Railway Company and the St. Louis, Des Moines and Northern Railway Company, to which companies the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway is the successor, and the Des Moines and St. Louis Railway Company to which the Wabash Railroad Company has succeeded, desired to bring their lines to the city of Des Moines, the first two from the North and Northwest and the third from the South.

Among other things done by them was the acquisition of certain real estate in the city of Des Moines, respecting which they made an agreemnt on January 2nd, 1882, reciting the acquisition of the property and providing that the expense of acquiring and improving it should be borne one-fourth each by the Northern companies and one-half by the Southern. We can speak of them hereafter, the Northern companies as the Milwaukee and the Southern as the Wabash.

The property had been acquired chiefly in the names of in dividuals who were confessedly trustees for the railroad companies.

The contract provided:

> "Third: * * * It is understood that a depot Company may be organized and may take permanent charge of the property upon the terms herein set forth and that said Company may issue and deliver to the Companies, parties hereto, its mortgage bonds to the amount of their respective portions of the cost of the said purchases and improvements."
>
> "Fourth: The title to said property shall be and remain in a trustee to be named by agreement by said Companies but subject to the joint use and occupation of all of said Railway Companies upon the terms herein prescribed."
>
> "Tenth: In the event that any Company, whose railroad does not extend to Des Moines, shall effect an arrangement for running its trains into Des Moines over the railroad of either of the parties hereto, such Company shall be entitled to the use of all of said terminal facilities upon the payment of a fair sum for rental and its proportion of the maintenance account, the rental to inure to the companies hereto in the same proportion as the original outlay, and the sum due from such Company for maintenance account to be determined in the same manner as the sums due from the other companies, parties hereto. Railroad Companies whose roads extend to Des Moines, may be admitted to the use of said facilities by agreement of all the parties hereto." (Record, pp. 120-122.)

The Wabash Company was to have control, supervision and maintenance of the property and the expense of this was to be borne by the several companies on a wheelage basis.

The companies operated under this contract for some years, each doing its own terminal work, that is, employing its own engines and crews and moving its own cars.

This was not a satisfactory method of operation and in December, 1884, the Railway Companies organized the Terminal Company under the laws of the State of Iowa governing corporations for pecuniary profit, to carry out, as they said, the objects and purposes of the contract of January 2nd, 1882.

They provided for a capital stock of one million dollars "which shall be divided into shares of one hundred ($100.00) dollars each, and shall be paid in at such times and in such manner as the Board of Directors may determine and the Board are authorized to receive in payment therefor the property and franchises in the city of Des Moines now held by the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company, the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, Jas. F. How, trustee, Jas. F. How and Grenville M. Dodge." (Record, pp. 9-11.)

There was no restriction in the articles as to who might become a stockholder in the Company, but the directors were distributed among the Railway Companies, four to the Northern companies and four to the Southern. And no stockholder was eligible to a directorship unless nominated by a Railway Company.

The terminal property held by and for the Railway Companies was in time duly conveyed to the Terminal Company. The consideration for such conveyance was the proportion of each of the Railway Companies of the stock and bonds of the Terminal Company. Bonds to the extent of Eight Hundred Thousand Dollars, secured by mortgage on all the property of the Terminal Company, were authorized and executed November 1st, 1887, and something above four hundred thousand of these were delivered to the parties entitled to them on account of the property then and previously conveyed to the Terminal Company. Other of the bonds were issued from time to time as other property was acquired.

No shares of capital stock were then actually printed or issued, but the parties assumed the existence and outstanding of ten thousand shares of one hundred dollars each, one-fourth as held by each of the Northern Companies and one-half by the Southern Company.

May 1st, 1888, the Terminal Company took actual possession of its property and has ever since operated the same.

The delay in the proceedings was due undoubtedly to the fact that the railway enterprises were not prosperous, the Record showing a foreclosure of mortgages in every case except that of the Terminal Company.

May 10th, 1889, the contract was made between the Terminal Company and the Railway Companies, which underlies the contention as to "surplus earnings." It was to be effective from May 1st, 1888, and to run for a period of thirty years from that date. (Record, pp. 150-159.)

When this contract was executed, the capital stock of the Terminal Company was owned, one-fourth by each of the predecessors of the Milwaukee Company and one-half by the predecessor of the Wabash.

The contract recited that the Terminal Company was the owner of valuable terminal facilities in the city of Des Moines and that it was important that the Railway Companies should have use of them. Also that the Terminal Company should from time to time acquire other and further facilities, among them a union passenger depot, freight depots, etc., etc., the amount, character, cost and management of these to be determined by the Board of Directors of the Terminal Company.

Section three of the contract provided:

> "Each of said parties of the second part (Railway Company) for itself and its assigns, agrees to pay to said party of the first part (Terminal Company) a sum of money to be ascertained as follows, to-wit:
>
> 1st. There shall be ascertained the amount required to pay five per cent interest upon the mortgage bonds of the party of the first part, one-twelfth of which, less any deduction hereinafter provided for, shall be payable monthly as hereinafter specified.
> 2nd. At the expiration of each month, or as soon thereafter as practicable, there shall be ascertained the expenses of maintaining and repairing the property of the party of the first part, including the maintenance and repair of tracks, depots, round houses, engine houses, etc., during the preceding month. And in like manner there shall be ascertained the taxes, general or special, levied upon or against said property and paid during the preceding month, or to be paid during the next succeeding month, and the insurance, if any, paid during the preceding month, or to be paid during the next succeeding month.

3rd. There shall be likewise ascertained the costs and expenses of every nature connected with the operation of said terminal station, freight and passenger depots, depot grounds, round houses, transfers and other properties, which is to include every item of expense or disbursement incurred or made by the party of the first part not hereinbefore mentioned, except the expenses specified in Section Nine hereof."

Section nine makes special provision as to the operation of engine houses, which need not be further considered.

Section four is as follows:

Having so ascertained the monthly aggregate of all the items and sums mentioned in the preceding section, there shall be deducted therefrom the amount, if any, which other railway companies may be under obligation to pay by virtue of contracts for the use of said property, or parts thereof, for the preceding month, and the remainder shall be paid by the parties of the second part in the proportion that the wheelage of each of said parties bears to the entire wheelage of all said second parties during such preceding month, and it is expressly understood and agreed that in computing wheelage, three narrow gauge cars shall be taken as the equivalent of two standard guage cars, and that the term "wheelage" as used in this contract means that three narrow gauge cars are to be accepted as the equivalent of two standard gauge cars.

Provisions of the contract for the enforcement of payment need not be considered.

The contract recites the shareholding in the Terminal Company by the Railway Companies as above set forth, and further the authorized capital stock having been increased to two million of dollars "that as the authorized capital stock of said company is two million dollars, or twenty thousand shares of one hundred dollars each, the same shall be issued and held as follows, to-wit: One certificate of ten thousand shares shall be issued and delivered to the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company; one certificate for five thousand shares shall be issued and delivered to the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, and one certificate for five thousand shares shall be issued and delivered to the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company, and all of said certificates shall express upon their face that they are not transferable in whole or in part, without the consent in writing of all the parties of the second part to this agreement, except that any shares of stock issued on request of either of said companies to any person, to qualify him as a member of the Board of Directors shall be retransferable to the company on whose request it shall have been issued without the consent of the other companies; but certificates of stock so issued shall express upon their face that they are only transferable to the company on whose request they were issued, unless consented to by the other parties of the second part.

The bonds of the Terminal Company were negotiable and were in fact sold on the open market.

The Railway Companies were interested in the Terminal Companies in two ways, first as shareholders and second as entitled to service by the Terminal Company in accordance with the terms of the contract.

Neither of these interests was an equal one as between the companies. As shareholders, two of them had one-fourth each, and the other had one-half. So far as the service was concerned each was to pay for such service as it received, that is on a wheelage basis.

As shareholders each, if the company made any net earnings out of its property, was entitled to the proportion indicated by its holding of capital stock. As to service it paid for what it got on the terms to which it had agreed.

The charge for the service was to be ascertained as to all the companies by ascertaining certain costs and expenses, deducting therefrom certain items of credit and then dividing the remainder between the Railway Companies on a wheelage basis.

There is no controversy here as to the wheelage basis, nor as to the items of charge, which are: (1) interest on bonds, (2) maintenance and repair, (3) taxes, (4) insurance, and (5) costs and expenses of every nature connected with operation.

From the sum of these items of charge there is to be a deduction and it is as to this that the controversy arises.

The contract provides that the aggregate of the items of charge having been ascertained "there shall be deducted therefrom the amount, if any, which other railway companies may be under obligation to pay by virtue of contracts for the use of said property or parts thereof."

The Terminal Company has such contracts and the amounts received under them have always been deducted from the ascertained items of charge against the Railway Companies.

And the Terminal Company has other sources of revenue. From time to time it moves cars from and to industries located on its lines to carriers other than the Railway Companies and other than those with which it has contracts, and for this it makes and collects a charge.

It leases portions of its depot building for news and cigar stands and for restaurant purposes. And it has acquired property in advance of its immediate use for terminal purposes and lets this for various purposes. The returns from this switching service and these rentals are known as "surplus earnings." At the time of the trial in the District Court these earnings aggregated about a half million dollars and they have accumulated since at the rate of about a hundred thousand dollars a year.

The Railway Companies contend that these surplus earnings should be deducted from the monthly aggregate of the items of charge against them under the contract of May 10th, 1889. The petitioners contend that, inasmuch as none of the moneys from which the "surplus earnings" are derived are "amounts to which other railway companies may be under obligation to pay by virtue of contracts for the use of said property," they should not be so deducted.

The Circuit Court of Appeals decided this adversely to these petitioners, saying of the contention of the petitioners that > "this latter contention is a strict construction of the exact wording of the contract. It is not in our judgment a fair construction of the spirit of the agreement. This conclusion is based both upon the history of the transaction and upon the meaning to be given to this precise language when read in connection with the entire contract."

The provision of the contract here in question, that is, section four, is clear and unambiguous in itself, providing for deduction from the aggregate of charge, the moneys received on a single account, being the amount, if any, which other railway companies may be under obligation to pay by virtue of contracts for the use of said property.

To deduct the rentals of news and cigar stands and payments for restaurant privileges is to add to the deduction provided for in the contract deductions of a very different kind, and is to write something into the contract which the parties did not write there.

"The meaning to be given this precise language when read in connection with the entire contract," is the same as when considered by itself, for this section is the only one in the entire contract dealing with this subject in any way. No other clause alludes to it even remotely and so cannot in any way qualify it.

Nor is the spirit of the agreement in any wise offended, and on the contrary, the "strict construction of the exact wording of the contract" is "a fair construction of the spirit of the agreement."

The contract is one for services by the Terminal Company, involving the use of its property, to be rendered to the Railway Companies. It did not involve the use of properties not used for terminal railway purposes. It had nothing to do with news stands or restaurants.

The Railway Companies were shareholders in the Terminal Company. Indirectly they were proprietors, and in such proportion as they had deliberately determined a number of times by agrement with each other. If there were any profits resulting from any use of this property other than that provided for by this contract each company had its share in those profits in the measure of its indirect share of the property itself.

These "surplus earnings" were incidents of the proprietorship of the Terminal property and not incidents of the service contract between the Railway Companies and the Terminal Company.

"The history of the transaction" leads to the same conclusion. There were no individual shareholders in the Terminal Company until some time in 1890, when F. M. Hubbell and General G. M. Dodge acquired shares. Until now it was a matter of small significance what was done with the surplus earnings, for two reasons, i. e., they were small in amount and they went to the benefit of the Railway Companies in any event, and whether on a wheelage or a stock basis made no practical difference.

On February 11th, 1891, was had the first action respecting them. On that day it was ordered by the Board of Directors of the Terminal Company:

> "That the rents collected for the use of the Company's real estate, and the switching charges paid in, be credited on the rolls of the different tenant companies occupying this Company's terminals, giving to each Company its share ascertained by wheelage." (Record, p. 497.)

This was a disposition of these earnings by the Terminal Company and the authority of the Terminal Company therefor was regarded as necessary. The earnings were earnings of the use of the property and not earnings of the service rendered by the Terminal Company to the Railway Companies. So they belonged to the owner of the property, and consequently the owner of the property determined the disposition of them.

On the 7th day of January, 1892, the holdings of F. M. Hubbell had increased to one thousand shares and G. M. Dodge still held five hundred, and the Board of Directors of the Terminal Company again exercised the right of disposing of these earnings by the following resolution, viz.:

> "Whereas, this Company is in need of a cash capital with which to purchase supplies and pay current bills which come in before it receives its monthly revenue from the tenant companies.
> Therefore, Be It Resolved: That until the further action of the Board the sums received as rents of real estate and all switching charges shall not be credited upon the accounts of the tenant companies, but shall be used for the aforesaid purposes." (Record, p. 499.)

And from this time on without question these earnings were dealt with by the Terminal Company as its own, and growing yearly in amount they were used in the acquisition of more property and in the making of improvements and extensions or accumulated as a surplus in the treasury until after January, 1906, a period of fourteen years, and but a short time prior to the beginning of this litigation.

Meanwhile the shareholding interests in the Terminal Company had greatly changed.

In April, 1890, the articles of incorporation of the Terminal Company were materially amended. At the meeting of the shareholders making these amendments on motion of A. B. Cummins, there was a valuation of the property of the Terminal Company in order to fix its fair worth in bonds and stocks, he being evidently of opinion that $2,000,000 of stock with the bonds that had been issued constituted a material over-valuation. The fair value was fixed at $861,257 and 21/100, the individual interests in which were settled as follows, viz.:

The Wabash	$470,110.80
The Des Moines & N. W.	215,058.40
The St. L., Des Moines & N.	100,000.00
G. M. Dodge	74,088.01
Polk & Hubbell	2,000.00
	$861,257.21

On this account bonds had been issued as follows:

The Wabash	$270,000.00
G. M. Dodge	74,000.00
Polk & Hubbell	2,000.00
Des Moines & N. W.	115,000.00
	$461,000.00

This left aside from $257.21 settled in cash, $400,000, which went in shares of the Terminal Company to the parties entitled, $200,000 to the Wabash and $100,000 to each of the two Northern Companies.

But with this adjustment of the Terminal stock in view the Wabash Company had a short time before sold one-eighth of its allotment to F. M. Hubbell and the same amount to G. M. Dodge and a month or more later sold 500 more shares to F. M. Hubbell, so that on June 5th, 1890, the stockholding stood:

The Wabash	500	shares
Milwaukee predecessors	2,000	"
F. M. Hubbell	1,000	"
G. M. Dodge	500	"

January 15th, 1892, Dodge and Hubbell transferred their shares to a consolidated company which was the immediate predecessor of the Milwaukee, giving it 3,500 shares and leaving the Wabash with five hundred.

October 4th, 1893, the consolidated company pledged 2,500 of its shares to F. M. Hubbell & Son as collateral for indebtedness and January 29th, 1894, sold the stock so pledged in liquidation of debt to F. M. Hubbell & Son.

Ever since January 29th, 1894, the stock of the Terminal Company has been owned:

The Wabash	500	shares
The Milwaukee, or predecessor	1,000	"
F. M. Hubbell & Son	2,500	"

It so appeared on the record and the Wabash Company was well aware of it all of the time. It had sold 1,500 of its own shares and knew where they had gone.

The Milwaukee Company became interested in the Northern railways in 1894 and acquired a majority of their capital stock in large part by gift from F. M. Hubbell & Son and in lesser part by purchase. The Milwaukee Company was advised that the consolidated Company owner of the two Northern railways, owned also 1,000 shares of the Terminal Company and no more, that the Wabash owned 500 and that private parties owned 2,500, or a majority.

With this knowledge the Milwaukee acquiesced in the disposition made of the surplus earnings for more than twelve years, after it acquired its interest in the Terminal Company.

The Circuit Court of Appeals in its opinion said and held that "a subsequent contract of July 31st, 1897, does not affect this controversy."

In this we think the Court erred, for the contract of July 31st, 1897, was a reaffirmation in terms of the contract of May 10th, 1889. From the beginning to the time the new contract was made the "surplus earnings" had been disposed of as determined by the Directors of the Terminal Company and ever since January 7th, 1892, they had so far as disposed of, been appropriated to the uses of the Terminal Company for the acquisition of additional property. And this disposition of the earnings was deliberately approved by Mr. Hays, the Wabash representative on the Board. June 7th, 1894, Mr. Hays wanted time to consider the appropriation made to discharge a mortgage debt on some newly acquired property. June 19th, 1894, he gave his consent. In August of that year and again in November he approved of other like dispositions of these monies. At the November meeting of the Terminal Board, Mr. Cummins representing Mr. Hays, a resolution was passed directing that a certain mortgage debt be paid out of the "surplus earnings" and providing in terms that

> "The term 'surplus earnings' as herein used means that fund arising from the rentals of real estate and from switching charges." (Record, p. 1344.)

Why such a resolution? If every penny received by the Terminal Company from any and all sources must be deducted from the aggregate of the charges against the tenant companies, there would be and could be no "surplus earnings." The very use of the term was an acknowledgment that the parties recognized the meaning of the contract to be expressed by what the Court of Appeals spoke of as its exact wording.

December 28th, 1896, Mr. Ashley, President of the Wabash, wanted a new contract with the Terminal Company, because of a foreclosure of mortgage against one of the tenant companies, which had weakened the position of the Terminal bonds on the market.

When it came to drafting the new contract, changes were desired and proposed by the Wabash as to the surplus earnings, and they were spoken of as changes.

Mr. F. C. Hubbell for the Terminal wrote to Mr. Ramsey of the Wabash, as follows:

> "Referring to the new terminal contract, I have seen the correspondence between you, Mr. Blodgett and Mr. Cummins. With respect to the Des Moines Union's revenue from rental and switching, would say that this fund has always been controlled by the Terminal Company, and is the only money which it has to use for other than strictly operating expenses. We therefore feel that the new contract should leave this fund the property of the Terminal Company. The rental and switching is a small item, and is now being used to pay our floating debt, consisting of $31,000 held by Commercial Bank of St. Louis, which will consume this fund for a good many years." (Record, p. 1680.)

On the same day, February 18th, 1897, Mr. Cummins wrote to Col. Blodgett, General Counsel of the Wabash, as follows:

>
> * * * * * * *
> "With respect to the change in Sec. 4, which would require the Des Moines Co. to credit upon its expenses and disbursements the accounts re- ceived by it for switching charges, rental of houses and things of that character, Mr. Hubbell has written to Mr. Ramsey recalling to his attention the situation, which absolutely precludes the disposal of such revenues of the company in that way." (Record, p. 1686.)

February 24th, 1897, Mr. Cummins wrote to Mr. Hubbell, saying, "I have a telegram from Col. Blodgett asking me to send a copy of the amended articles of the company," etc.

March 26th, 1897, Col. Blodgett wrote to F. M. Hubbell, enclosing proposed amendments to the contract which he speaks of as changes. The second change is as follows:

"2nd. I send Section 3 in two forms, and I need not go into any detailed explanation of them. Number one is founded upon the theory that the Des Moines Company may do a switching business during the whole period of the lease, paying, on a wheelage basis, the same proportion of interest charges, cost of maintenance and operating expenses, as is paid by the tenants, and using its net revenue throughout the term in improving the property. That is the form suggested by Mr. Ramsey and myself.

Number two presents the section as you and Mr. Ashley suggested. Under it you are to switch and handle cars for others than tenant companies, and collect the revenue, until the net profits, together with the rentals from portions of the ground, amount to fifty thousand dollars, of which sum thirty-five thousand dollars is to be applied on the floating debt, and the balance used for a working fund. And after the fifty thousand dollars has been realized, all the net revenues from switching is to go to the tenant companies to reduce their expenses, on a wheelage basis." (Record, p. 1687.)

Different changes were proposed by different parties, but not accepted, and the matter was closed by a ratification agreement of date July 31st, 1897.

At this time all the original parties to the contract of 1889 except the Terminal Company had gone out of business because of insolvency and new companies owned and operated their lines of railroad, one company having now acquired both Northern lines. The new contract recited this history and further that "it has been doubted whether the said contract is legally binding upon the said Wabash Company and the said Des Moines Northern and Western Company." It was provided as follows:

> "Now, therefore, in consideration of the premises and for the purpose of removing all doubt with respect to the said subject, it is now agreed by and between the parties hereinbefore named that the said contract, a copy of which is attached, shall be and become binding and obligatory upon said Wabash Company and the Des Moines, Northern & Western Company.
> And the said Wabash Company for itself agrees to make the payments therein provided for at the times and in the manner prescribed for the said Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company so long as it operates the railroad of the said Des Moines & St. Louis Company, and when the said Wabash Company ceases to operate the railroad of the said Des Moines & St. Louis Company its obligation to so pay, and all the obligations herein assumed by it, shall at once determine and be and become the obligations of whatever company operates the said railroad, it being the intention that the obligations of the said contract, so far as they pertain to the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, shall attach to and become the obligations of the successor of the said Wabash Company in the operation of the said Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad, and any company succeeding the Wabash Company in such operation shall be held by the operation of trains over the said Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad, and upon the property leased in the said contract, to assume all the obligations therein or hereby undertaken by either the said Des Moines & St. Louis Company or the said Wabash Company.

And the said Des Moines, Northern & Western Company for itself agrees to assume all the obligations of a lessee railroad company as prescribed in the said contract for the entire term named therein, and as though it had been named in and was a party to the said contract when originally made, and to pay to the said Des Moines Company at the times and in the manner therein prescribed, the sums of money which may become due, computed according to the terms and provisions of the said contract with respect to a tenant company; and the said Des Moines, Northern & Western Company further agrees that the obligations therein named and hereby assumed shall pass with the railroad it now owns and operates, and shall become the obligations of any assignee, grantee, or successor of the said Des Moines, Northern & Western Company in the ownership or operation of the said Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad, and any company succeeding the Des Moines, Northern & Western Company, in such ownership or operation shall be held by the operation of trains over the said Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad, and upon the property leased in the said contract, to assume all the obligations therein expressed and herein undertaken by said Des Moines, Northern & Western Company.

But it is expressly provided that so much of the said contract, a copy of which is hereto attached, as relates to the issuance and the distribution of the capital stock of the said Des Moines Company, is no longer binding, and that the capital stock of the said Des Moines Company is held as follows:

The purchasing committee of the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company, 500 shares.

The Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Company, 1,000 shares.

F. M. Hubbell & Son, 2,500 shares." (Record, p. 506.)

Here is not only a ratification or adoption of the contract by the Wabash Company and the company to which the Milwaukee is successor, but a reiterated agreement to pay to the Terminal Company at the time and in the manner prescribed in the contract the sums of money "which may become due computed according to the terms and provisions of said contract with respect to a tenant company."

And added to this is the very express recognition of the fact that there is a large, a majority interest in the shares of the Terminal Company which is independently and individually held and is interested in the construction of the contract according to its express terms.

And from this time until 1906 the contract was construed according to its terms, surplus earnings being used from time to time for the acquisition of additional property, without protest from any one and with the approval of all concerned.

In view of all the facts, preceding, attending and following the execution of the contract of July 31st, 1897, there was manifest error in holding that it "does not affect this controversy."

The history of this transaction has in considerable part been given, but there is much more in the record of the same nature, and much of that related to the main controversy which bears directly and indirectly upon the question of surplus earnings. The Hubbells, father and son, gave liberally and freely, the son for many years entirely, their time and service to this enterprise. They fostered it during all the thirty years of the contract of 1889, which certainly they would not have done if this contract had been a barren one and their stockholdings barren also. True, for a time they were interested in the Northern railroads, but from the time the Milwaukee acquired its holdings in these they had, if the contention of the respondents now made is warranted, no interest whatever in the Terminal Company, except the holding of stock which was forever precluded from yielding any profit. Still they conducted its business, managed and directed its affairs for years and were permitted to do this by respondents without the pay of a dollar, conduct upon both sides inconsistent with any view other than that they had a substantial beneficial interest as large stockholders in the Terminal Company.

We submit that the Circuit Court of Appeals erred in holding:

I. That the contention of petitioners that the only character of credit items to which the respondents were entitled under the contract "were such as were paid by some other railway by virtue of a contract for the use of the property" while "a strict construction of the exact wording of the contract" is not "a fair construction of the spirit of the agreement."

II. That its conclusion as to what was the "spirit of the agreement was based upon or warranted by the history of the transaction.

III. That its construction of the contract giving the surplus earnings to the respondents was justified by the reading of the contract in its entirety.

IV. And in its order, judgment and decree directing the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of Iowa to so modify its decree "that the surplus earnings belong to the railways, and to appoint a master under instructions to ascertain the part due each upon a wheelage basis."

The petitioners therefore pray that a writ of certiorari issue to said Circuit Court of Appeals to remove therefrom the Record in this cause for review here by this Court of the questions presented and the errors specified in this petition.

Respectfully submitted,

J. L. PARRISH and
F. W. LEHMANN,
Of Counsel for the Petitioners.

CHICAGO, MILWAUKEE & ST. PAUL RAILWAY COMPANY and WABASH RAILWAY COMPANY, Petitioners,
vs.
DES MOINES UNION RAILWAY COMPANY, F. M. HUBBELL and F. C. HUBBELL, Respondents.
No. 278

DES MOINES UNION RAILWAY COMPANY, F. M. HUBBELL, F. C. HUBBELL and F. M. HUBBELL & SON, Petitioners,
vs.
CHICAGO, MILWAUKEE & ST. PAUL RAILWAY COMPANY and WABASH RAILWAY COMPANY, Respondents.
No. 279

On Writs of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

Statement, Brief and Argument for Respondents in No. 278

These cases present two controversies in one and the same suit brought by the petitioners in No. 278 as complainants against the respondents in that case as defendants, in the District Court of the Southern District of Iowa, Central Division.

One controversy concerns what has been called the Main Issue, which is as to the ownership of certain terminal property at Des Moines, and the other is as to what are called Surplus Earnings, arising under a contract of 1889 for the operation of the terminal properties.

The District Court decided the main issue in favor of the defendants, with a qualification as to which the defendants appealed, and decided the surplus earnings question unqualifiedly in their favor.

The Circuit Court of Appeals decided the main issue unqualifiedly in favor of the defendants and that decision was brought here for review by the petitioners in No. 278. The question of surplus earnings was decided adversely to the defendants and that decision is the subject of review in No. 279.

We shall deal first with the Main Issue.

STATEMENT OF FACTS.

Prior to 1881 the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company (hereafter sometimes referred to as the "Wabash Company") was the owner of a line of railroad extending from St. Louis northwesterly to Albia, Iowa. The Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company was the owner of a line of narrow gauge railway extending from Waukee, Iowa, a town some ten miles west of Des Moines, northwesterly to Panora, in which railway J. S. Clarkson and others were interested.

These railway companies being desirous of extending their lines to Des Moines and interchanging traffic therein, the Wabash Company on December 8, 1880, entered into a contract with J. S. Clarkson and others (vol. II, p. 396), providing for the organization of the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company and the building of a line from Albia to Des Moines with funds to be furnished by the Wabash Company. On the same day the Wabash Company also entered into a contract with the Des Moines Northwestern Railway (vol. II, p. 400), looking to the extension of that line to Des Moines and also in a northwesterly direction, and also looking to the use by that company of a terminal in the City of Des Moines to be owned by the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company.

In pursuance of these contracts, the Wabash Company, in the early part of 1881, commenced to acquire property in Des Moines for terminal purposes taking the title in James F. How, who was then Vice-President of the Wabash Company, and charging the money so expended to the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company (vol. III, p. 989).

In April, 1881, there was organized under the laws of Iowa a corporation known as the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, with power to construct a railroad from Des Moines northwesterly to Boone, Iowa, and thence to the northerly part of the state. This company proceeded to construct a narrow gauge line from Des Moines to Boone, with a branch line from Clive (a station about five miles west of Des Moines), to Waukee.

In January, 1882, it entered into a contract (vol. II, p. 600) with the Des Moines Northwestern Company, by which it sold to that company the line from Clive to Waukee, and a one-half interest in the line from Clive to Des Moines thereby giving the latter company access to Des Moines.

In the meantime there had been changes in the plans of these companies with respect to the terminal in Des Moines which it was originally intended should be owned exclusively by the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company. In April, 1881, the plan was changed from an ownership exclusively by the Des Moines & St. Louis Company to an ownership jointly by the Des Moines & St. Louis and the Des Moines Northwestern Company (vol. III, p. 989), and later this plan was changed to an ownership jointly by the three companies—the Des Moines & St. Louis, the Des Moines Northwestern, and the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern. This ripened into the contract of January 2, 1882, (vol. II, p. 411), which set out the terms on which the terminal property should be owned and used by the three railroads.

In the meantime additional terminal property was acquired and improvements made thereon with money furnished principally by the Wabash Company, though some of the money was furnished by General Dodge who was the principal owner of the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Company. The title to the terminal property was taken principally in the name of James F. How, trustee, though a small amount was taken in the name of General Dodge, a small amount in the name of the Des Moines & St. Louis Company, and a still smaller amount in the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Company.

The Des Moines & St. Louis Company having constructed its line into Des Moines these three railroads or their lessees commenced to use and operate the terminal property jointly, as provided in the contract of January 2, 1882. That contract provided that the terminal property should be owned jointly by the three railways in the proportions therein stated; that the title thereto should stand in the name of a trustee, who might or might not be a depot company; that it should be policed and maintained by the Des Moines & St. Louis Company, and that the expenses of maintenance and operation should be borne by the users on a wheelage basis.

Thus matters continued until December, 1884, when the representatives of the three railorad companies organized, under the laws of the State of Iowa relating to the organization of corporations for pecuniary profit, the defendant, the Des Moines Union Railway Company, with power to acquire, own and operate a terminal railway in the City of Des Moines, and especially authorized to issue its capital stock in purchasing the terminal property then owned by the three railway companies (see articles of incorporation of Des Moines Union Railway Company, vol. II, pp. 416-23).

Immediately upon the organization of the defendant, the Des Moines Union Railway Company, the three railways parties to the contract of January 2, 1882 at meetings of their stockholders passed resolutions authorizing their officers to transfer to the defendant company the ownership of the terminal property (vol. II, pp. 423-32). These resolutions did not authorize How and Dodge, the trustees, to transfer to the defendant company the legal title to the property, but simply authorized the beneficial owners to convey the ownership. The consideration for the transfer of the ownership was stated in the resolutions to be the bonds and stock of the defendant company.

On the same day the Board of Directors of the defendant company passed resolutions accepting the propositions of the three railroad companies (vol. II, p. 432). However, nothing was immediately done under these resolutions owing, no doubt, to the fact that at about this time the Wabash Company (which was the leading spirit behind all these transactions) became insolvent, its property placed in the hands of a receiver and sold to certain persons known in this record as the "Purchasing Committee." These resolutions were, however, never repealed and were finally acted upon.

Nothing further was done in the matter until in the fall of 1887, when these three railroad companies passed resolutions authorizing How and Dodge, trustees, to transfer the legal title to that portion of the terminal property which they held, to the defendant company (vol. II, pp. 435-43); these deeds to be delivered to the defendant company upon its giving to How and Dodge written agreements that it would deliver to the parties entitled thereto bonds of the defendant company equal in amount to the sums advanced by the Wabash Company and General Dodge in payment for the terminal property the improvements thereon, taxes and interest, and also its capital stock.

Following the passage of these resolutions, How and Dodge gave to the defendant company deeds to the property standing in their names; the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company gave the defendant company a special warranty deed not only to that portion of the terminal property standing in its name, but also to all other property, including railways, embankments, buildings, improvements, franchises, etc., in which it had any interest, in the City of Des Moines, Iowa; and the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Company gave to the defendant company a deed, which by its terms transferred an absolute title to that portion of the terminal property standing in its name (vol. II, pp. 446-59). No part of the terminal property stood in the name of the Des Moines Northwestern Company and no deed was given by that company to the defendant, but each of the three railway companies or their successors received the consideration provided for in the resolutions.

On May 1, 1888, the defendant railway company took possession of the terminal property and has ever since possessed and operated it.

Immediately upon the defendant's taking possession of the terminal property, it commenced to furnish terminal service to the three railroad companies or their successors, and negotiations were entered into to determine the terms on which such terminal service should be rendered. These negotiations resulted in the contract of May 10, 1889 (vol. II, p. 479). This contract provided that for a certain consideration the defendant company should furnish to the three railway companies terminal facilities and perform certain terminal services for a period of thirty years from and after May 1, 1888. Ever since the execution of this contract the defendant has furnished to the three railroads and their successors, terminal facilities and services as therein provided.

On April 8, 1890, for the purpose of making the title and ownership of the terminal property by the defendant company more clear and certain, a meeting of the stockholders (among whom were complainants' predecessors) was held, at which the articles of incorporation of the defendant company were amended and certain resolutions passed (vol. II, pp. 488-97).

During the whole period from May 1, 1888 (the date the defendant took possession of the property), to the commencement of this suit (in 1907), the defendant treated the terminal property as its own. It acquired additional property, made improvements and extensions, made contracts to furnish service to other companies, and made other contracts with complainant companies and their predecessors. Not only during this period did defendant company treat the property as its own, but it was so treated by complainants and their predecessors and all others who had any relation to the properties. The facts in the record sustaining this are so voluminous that it is impracticable to make specific reference to them here, but such reference will be made in our argument on the facts.

THE ISSUANCE AND OWNERSHIP OF THE STOCK IN THE DEFENDANT COMPANY.

Under the contract of January 8, 1882, the ownership of the then terminal property was as follows:

One-half in the Des Moines & St. Louis Company.

One-fourth in the Des Moines Northwestern Company.

One-fourth in the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Company.

This contract also contemplated that the parties advancing money to acquire and construct the terminal should receive first mortgage bonds for the money so advanced. The resolutions of the three railways passed January 1, 1885, authorizing a transfer of the ownership of the terminal property to the defendant company, provided:

> "That the proper officers of this Company be authorized upon the issuance to it of the share of the bonds and stock of said Des Moines Union Railway Company to which it may be entitled, under said contract, to convey, assign and transfer," etc. (Vol. II, p. 424).

Under these resolutions, presumably the bonds would go to the persons or companies advancing the money (which were the Wabash Company and General Dodge), and the stock distributed between the three railway companies parties to the contract of January 2, 1882, in the proportion heretofore mentioned, viz. ownership of the terminal property.

In the resolutions of November 5, 1887, authorizing a transfer to the defendant company by How and Dodge, trustees, it was provided that the transfer should be made upon the defendant company agreeing to give to the purchasing committee of the Wabash Company first mortgage bonds equal in amount to the money advanced by the Wabash Company in purchasing and improving the terminal property, paying taxes thereon with interest, together with three-fourths of the capital stock of the defendant company, and upon giving to General Dodge bonds equal in amount to the money advanced by him for the same purpose, with interest, and one-fourth of the capital stock of the defendant company.

The reason for authorizing the issuance of three-fourths of the stock to the Purchasing Committee and one-fourth of the stock to General Dodge was that the Purchasing Committee was in equity entitled to the stock coming to the Des Moines & St. Louis Company as well as to the Des Moines Northwestern Company, while General Dodge represented the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Company.

After the transfer of the property to the defendant company, but before possession was taken, the amount of bonds to be issued for the property was ascertained and the issuance thereof was authorized and directed by the defendant company (vol. II, p. 478). No certificates of shares of stock were actually issued until April 8, 1890.

In the meantime, however, the firm of Polk & Hubbell, of Des Moines, had acquired through contracts with the Purchasing Committee the line of road formerly owned by the Des Moines Northwestern Company extending from Des Moines, through Panora, to Fonda, and a one-fourth interest in the terminal property in Des Moines; or in lieu of such one-fourth interest, one-fourth of the stock and bonds issued by the defendant company in payment for the terminal property (Exhibits 263, 264, 265, vol. IV, pp. 1573-6; ex. 60, vol. II, p. 613). This property Polk & Hubbell transferred to the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company on May 19, 1888 (vol. II, p. 619). From this time up to about April, 1890, the stock of the defendant company, though not issued, was owned as follows:

One-half by the Purchasing Committee, as representative of the Des Moines & St. Louis Company;

One-fourth by the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Company;

One-fourth by the Des Moines & Northwestern Company.

On April 8, 1890, a resolution passed at the meeting of the stockholders of the defendant company authorized the issuance of $400,000.00 of the capital stock of the defendant company in final payment for the terminal property, the same to be issued to the corporations and in the proportions above named (vol. II, pp. 494-6).

Just prior to this time the defendant F. M. Hubbell, and General Dodge, each bought of the Purchasing Committee certain bonds of the defendant company, and one-eighth of its capital stock (vol. IV, pp. 1599-1601). This sale was ratified by the directors of the Des Moines & St. Louis Company (vol. IV, p. 1434). The stock, therefore, when issued on April 8, 1890, was issued one share to each of the directors of the defendant company, and

To the Purchasing Committee	996 shares,
To the Des Moines & Northern Railway Company (successor to the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company)	998 shares,
To the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company (successor to the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company	998 shares,
To F. M. Hubbell	500 shares,
To G. M. Dodge	500 shares.

(Vol. II, p. 711.)

Again, on June 5, 1890, F. M. Hubbell bought of the Purchasing Committee an additional 500 shares of stock in the defendant company (vol. IV, p. 1613), which shares were transferred on the books of the defendant company August 28, 1890 (vol. II, p. 711); the transfer being ratified by action of the Des Moines & St. Louis Company on February 11, 1891 (vol. IV, pp. 1437-8).

On January 15, 1892, the shares of the Des Moines & Northwestern Company, the Des Moines & Northern Company, F. M. Hubbell and G. M. Dodge, amounting altogether to 3,500 shares (less the shares necessary to qualify directors), were transferred to the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railway Company, a consolidation of the Des Moines & Northern Company and the Des Moines & Northwestern Company (vol. II, p. 711).

On October 4, 1893, the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railway Company pledged 2,500 shares of this stock to F. M. Hubbell & Son, as collateral security on certain indebtedness (vol. IV, p. 1480). On January 29, 1894, the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railway Company sold these same shares to F. M. Hubbell & Son in satisfaction of certain indebtedness (vol. IV, pp. 1482-3). These 2,500 shares of stock were transferred on the books of the Des Moines Union Company to F. M. Hubbell & Son October 4, 1893, and have ever since stood in their name (vol. II, p. 711). The capital stock of the defendant company is now owned as follows:

Wabash Railway Company (the remote successor of the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company)	500 shares,
Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company (remote successors of the Des Moines Northern & Western Company)	1,000 shares,
F. M. Hubbell & Son	2,500 shares.
Making a total of	4,000 shares.

being all the outstanding stock. A few of the shares belonging to each of the above owners stand in the name of the directors of the defendant company, who represent the owners on the Board of Directors.

On this branch of the case the complainants allege that they are the real owners of the terminal property and that defendant company simply holds the title in trust for them, or that that ownership is subject to an easement in their favor which gives them the right to use the property in perpetuity for terminal purposes, upon payment of the actual cost of operation, maintenance and taxes, thus depriving the defendant company from having any beneficial ownership in the property. The real purpose of the suit is to obtain a decree which will render the 2,500 shares of stock owned by F. M. Hubbell & Son of no value.

The amended bill of complaint (Rec., Vol. I, p. 82 et seq.) made numerous charges of gross fraud against the respondents, accusing them of manipulating, falsifying and virtually forging the records of the Des Moines Union Railway Company and other companies involved, so as to sustain their claims, but there is not an iota of evidence in the record to support any of the charges, no evidence was offered with a view to support them and the records in question were received in evidence without objection and indeed were brought into the case by stipulation of the parties.

The amended bill of complaint also charges (Rec. Vol. I, p. 111) that the Hubbells, father and son, and their three other associates, at a meeting of the Directors of the Des Moines Union Railway Company held on March 12th, 1906, "voted to allow additional salaries as follows, namely: To the defendant Frederick C. Hubbell as President of the company, for the years 1901, 1902, 1903, 1904 and 1905, $37,500, and to the defendant Frederick M. Hubbell, as Secretary of the company for the same years, the sum of $12,500."

The proceedings of the meeting mentioned are shown in the Record, Vol. II, pp. 333 to 336, and there is not a word of salary as to either father or son. On the other hand the evidence is undisputed that from the time the terminal company began operations down to the time of the trial, the father gave much of his time and care—and the son made it practically his exclusive occupation—to the conduct of the terminal's affairs and business. And this without a dollar of direct pay. It was done not altogether as a matter of public spirit; they had a large interest in the terminal company and hoped to profit by its welfare and prosperity. And so they labored unceasingly for its development and expansion. And the petitioners accepted these gratuitous services, well knowing that they were being rendered and why they were rendered.

The claim of the respondents is that a good and perfect title to the terminal property passed to the Des Moines Union Railway Company, and that petitioners are estopped from questioning such title by their conduct and laches.

To go into a detailed statement of facts at this point supporting these defenses would serve no useful purpose and would result in unnecessary repetition.

The decree of the Court of Appeals adjudged that the defendant company had a good and perfect title to the terminal property, and that complainants have no interest therein except that which is represented by the stock of the defendant company which they own. It is this portion of the decree which complainants bring up for review by their writ of certiorari.

THE ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF THE DES MOINES UNION RAILWAY COMPANY AND AMENDMENTS THERETO ARE VALID.

Upon the organization of the Des Moines Union Railway Company those who by contract were entitled to shares of stock were actually stockholders, though no certificates evidencing such shares were issued. As between shareholders and the corporation, the issuance of certificates of stock is not necessary.

III.

THE COMPLAINANTS ARE ESTOPPED FROM ASSERTING THAT THE TITLE TO THE TERMINAL PROPERTY IS NOT VESTED ABSOLUTELY IN THE DES MOINES UNION RAILWAY COMPANY, AND FROM CLAIMING THAT THE STOCK OF THE COMPANY HELD BY THE DEFENDANT, F. M. HUBBELL & SON, DOES NOT REPRESENT A VALUABLE INTEREST IN SUCH PROPERTY, BECAUSE ALL THE PARTIES HAVE ACTED UPON THAT THEORY SINCE 1888

(ALMOST TWENTY YEARS PRIOR TO THE COMMENCEMENT OF THIS SUIT), AND BECAUSE, RELYING UPON THE DEEDS, CONTRACTS, RESOLUTIONS, AND ACTS BY WHICH THE COMPLAINANTS' PREDECESSORS TRANSFERRED THE PROPERTY TO DEFENDANT, AND THE ACTS OF THE COMPLAINANTS IN RESPECT THERETO, THE HUBBELLS PURCHASED OF COMPLAINANTS' PREDECESSORS STOCK IN THE DEFENDANT COMPANY FOR A VALUABLE CONSIDERATION, AND DEVOTED MANY YEARS OF THEIR LIVES TO THE CONSERVATION AND BUILDING UP OF THE PROPERTY, WITHOUT OTHER COMPENSATION THAN THAT WHICH THEY WILL SECURE BY REASON OF THE INCREASE IN THE VALUE OF THEIR STOCK.

The doctrine of estoppel always applies where one relying upon the acts and representations, either active or passive, of another, changes his position in respect to the subject matter.

IV.

THE COMPLAINANTS ARE ESTOPPED FROM MAINTAINING THIS SUIT BECAUSE OF THEIR LACHES.

For nearly twenty years prior to the bringing of this suit complainants and their predecessors knew all the facts; knew that the Des Moines Union Railway Company claimed to be the absolute owner of this property, and for seventeen years prior to the bringing of the suit knew that the Hubbells were acting in the belief that the stock owned by them represented a valuable interest in the terminal property.

Under ordinary circumstances a suit in equity will not be stayed for laches before, and will be stayed after, the time fixed by the analogous limitation at law.

Pomeroy, Eq. Jur. Vol. 5, Sec. 23 says:

"No doctrine is so wholesome when wisely administered as that of laches. It prevents the resurrection of stale titles, and forbids the spying out from the records of ancient and abandoned rights. It requires of every owner that he take care of his property, and of every claimant that he make known his claims. It gives to the actual and longer possessor security, and induces and justifies him in all efforts to improve and make valuable the property he holds. It is a doctrine received with favor, because its proper application works out justice and equity, and often bars the holder of a mere technical right, which he has abandoned for years, from enforcing it when its enforcement will work large injury to many."

ARGUMENT.

I.

THE DEFENDANT, THE DES MOINES UNION RAILWAY COMPANY, ACQUIRED AND POSSESSES A PERFECT TITLE IN FEE SIMPLE TO THE TERMINAL PROPERTY.

The solution of this question does not, we think, involve any difficult or seriously disputed questions of law, but simply an examination of the origin and evolution of the terminal property. In its consideration it is well to start at the beginning and consider the origin and growth of the property, step by step, to determine the objects and intentions of the various corporations and persons who had to do with the transaction.

The first item for consideration is the contract of December 8, 1880, between the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company and J. S. Polk and others, which provided for the organization of the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company (the remote predecessor and grantor of the Wabash Railway Company), and the construction by that company of a line from Albia to Des Moines with funds to be furnished by the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company, which line when constructed was to be leased in perpetuity to the last named company (Vol. II, p. 396).

This contract is of no great importance except that it furnishes a starting point for the consideration of this case and the origin of the scheme out of which the terminal proposition grew. The line from Albia to Des Moines was constructed as contemplated in the contract, and leased to the Wabash Company.

On the same date the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company entered into a written contract with the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company and the Narrow Gauge Construction Company (Vol. II, p. 400), which recites the fact that the Des Moines Company owned a railroad from Waukee, a point on the Des Moines & Fort Dodge Railroad about fifteen miles west of Des Moines, to Panora; recites the making of the contract between the Wabash Company and J. S. Polk and others heretofore referred to, contemplating the construction and lease of the railroad of the Des Moines & St. Louis Company, and the desire of the Wabash Company to obtain the business originating on the road of the Des Moines Company, and provides for the extension of the road of the Des Moines Company in a northwesterly direction and also to Des Moines, and among the provisions are the following (p. 406):

> "It is further mutually agreed by and between the parties above named, that if certain pending negotiations between the Wabash Company and the Des Moines & Fort Dodge Company shall result in the Wabash Company's acquiring control, by lease or otherwise, of the Des Moines and Fort Dodge Road, then the Des Moines Company shall have the right (upon terms to be fixed by agreement of the parties, otherwise to be settled under the general provisions herein made for arbitration) to extend its line into Des Moines by laying a third rail upon the Des Moines & Fort Dodge Road.
> It is further mutually agreed by and between the parties above named, that if the pending negotiations between the Wabash Company and the Des Moines & Fort Dodge Company shall fail, then the railroad of the Des Moines Company shall be extended to a connection with the railroad of the Des Moines & St. Louis Company, at or near Des Moines, substantially under the provisions of the foregoing agreement, but with such modifications as the greater cost of such extension may require. The Des Moines Company shall in that case have full right of entry into Des Moines, by laying a third rail on the Des Moines & St. Louis Roal, and full use of the terminal facilities of that road, upon terms to be settled by agreement between the Des Moines Company and the Wabash Company, or else under the arbitration elsewhere provided for herein.

It is further agreed on the part of the Wabash Company that if it shall acquire control of the Des Moines & Fort Dodge Road, then the Wabash Company will permit the Des Moines Company to lay down a third rail on the track of the Des Moines & St. Louis Road, from the terminus of the Fort Dodge Road, in the City of Des Moines, eastwardly far enough to reach such pork houses and other sources of freight as are on the east side of the City of Des Moines, and are reached by the tracks of the Des Moines & St. Louis Road."

On page 989 of volume III appears an entry on the books of the Wabash Company made in April, 1881, as follows:

"For the following payments for a/c of real estate in the City of Des Moines, Iowa, charged to Des Moines & St. Louis R. R. in the months of Feb'y, March and April, 1881, now transferred to real estate Des Moines, the property being held for joint account of the Des Moines & St. Louis and Des Moines & North Western Rys., as per letter of James S. Clarkson, Pt. filed herewith:"

And then follow various items of expenditure which had theretofore been made for a terminal property in the City of Des Moines and charged to the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company.

The foregoing contracts and this entry show that it was originally contemplated that the terminal property in the City of Des Moines should be owned by the Des Moines & St. Louis Roailroad Company and not by a terminal company and not jointly by that road and the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company.

The entry on the books of the Wabash above referred to shows that this plan as originally contemplated was changed in April, 1881, to a plan which contemplated that the terminal property should be owned jointly by the Des Moines & St. Louis and the Des Moines Northwestern companies, because at that time the charge upon the Wabash books was changed from a charge against the Des Moines & St. Louis to a charge against Real Estate Des Moines, to be held for the joint account of the two companies named.

In April, 1881, there were adopted under the laws of the State of Iowa articles of incorporation of the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company (Vol. II, p. 729), for the purpose of constructing a line of railway from the City of Des Moines through Boone, Iowa, toward the north line of the state.

This company proceeded toward the construction of this line of road, and also a branch from Clive, a station about five miles west of Des Moines, to Waukee, and on January 23, 1882, it made a contract with the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company by which it sold to the latter company the branch from Clive to Waukee, and a one-half interest in the line from Waukee to Farnham street in Des Moines (the western limit of the terminal property), giving the Des Moines Northwestern entrance into the City of Des Moines.

This shows that the plan of the Wabash Company to acquire a control of the Des Moines & Fort Dodge line failed, and the entrance of the Des Moines Northwestern Company into Des Moines was secured through this contract with the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company.

On January 2, 1882, a contract was entered into between the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company and the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, G. M. Dodge, James F. How and James F. How, trustee (Vol. II, p. 411), which shows that another change was made in the plan for a terminal in the City of Des Moines and by which it was contemplated that the terminal property should be owned and operated jointly by the three railway companies—the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, and the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company.

This contract recited the fact that the three companies desired to own and operate jointly terminal facilities in the City of Des Moines and use the same in common; that certain purchases had been made of real property in the said city in the name of James F. How, individually, and James F. How, trustee, and Grenville M. Dodge, and certain additional property had been appropriated by the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, and the construction of buildings and other improvements thereon had begun. It was agreed that the expense thereof should be borne one-half by the Des Moines & St. Louis Company and one-fourth each by the other companies, and that a depot company might be organized to take permanent charge of the property upon the terms set forth in the contract. It specifically provided that the title to said property should be and remain in a trustee to be named by agreement of the said companies, and subject to the joint use and occupation of all the railway companies upon the terms therein contained; that the Des Moines & St. Louis Company should be charged with the police control and supervision and maintenance of the property, and that the expense thereof should be apportioned among the companies upon a wheelage basis. Other provisions were made in the contract not necessary to be here mentioned.

It will be seen from the foregoing that up to this time three different schemes had been adopted for this terminal property:

First. that it should be owned exclusively by the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company.

Second. That it should be owned jointly by the Des Moines & St. Louis and the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company.

Third. That it should be owned jointly by the three companies parties to the contract last above mentioned.

A short time prior to this date, on December 1, 1881, the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company mortgaged its property to the Central Trust Company of New York (Vol. II, p. 509). This mortgage specifically excepted the terminal property in the City of Des Moines, the exception being in the following language (p. 511):

"except the real estate, buildings and improvements thereon lying and being within the corporate limits of the City of Des Moines."

thus showing that the terminal property was to be handled as a proposition separate from the main line of the Des Moines & St. Louis Road.

Counsel for petitioners devote much time and space to a discussion and an analysis of this contract and the rights of the railway companies thereunder. To our mind the rights acquired by the railway companies by this contract are simple and easily stated. By its terms the three railway companies became the beneficial owners of the property.

Here it is proper to note that the ownership of the three railway companies was not equal, but one-half by one and one-fourth by each of the others. The usual and ordinary rights and incidents of ownership were recognized by the parties. They contemplated use of the property by other railway companies, for which those other companies were to pay. And what was to be done with the money received from such sources? Was it to go to the three in equal measure? By no means. It was distributed among them in the ratio of ownership. Section 10 of the contract of January 2nd, 1882 expressly provides "the rental to enure to the companies hereto in the same proportion as the original outlay." Vol. II, p. 413.

Each Company owned an undivided interest in the property, with the right to use the whole property for railway purposes. Whether, as between the three railway companies, we term the right of one company to use the whole property for railway purposes an easement, or what not, is entirely immaterial. Considering the three railways together, they not only owned the property, but had the right to direct the trustees, How and Dodge to transfer the legal title to them or to any one whom they might select. As a result, they had absolute dominion over the property, with the right to continue to use it in accordance with the strict terms of the contract, or to make any other disposition of it to which the three railway companies could agree. They might by agreement have placed the legal title in a trustee, reserving to themselves the beneficial ownership; they might have transferred the property to a third person, reserving in themselves an easement; or they might have made any other disposition of it upon which they could agree. In other words, their power of disposition of this property was unlimited because they were its owners. The question we have for solution is what disposition they in fact did make of it, and for this purpose we must examine their subsequent acts and from them and the surrounding circumstances ascertain the true intent of their acts.

In this connection, however, it must be noted that looking forward to possible changes in their terminal plans, as the future might develop the necessity therefor, the parties had carefully segregated the terminal property from their main lines, as see the provision in the Des Moines & St. Louis mortgage above noted, eliminating the terminal property therefrom, the deed and contract above noted between the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Company and the Des Moines Northwestern Company, which limited the transfer to property west of the terminal, and to the mortgage given by the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern to the Mercantile Trust Company (Vol. II, p. 552), which only covered property extending "from the western boundary line of the City of Des Moines," etc. (p. 554).

The significance of these changes in the plan for the terminal property, and its careful segregation from the main lines, lies in the fact that they indicate that the terminal plan was in a formative stage, and the parties wished to so manage it that any desired change might be made in the future. It is for us to determine if such changes were made.

Subsequent to the making of this contract of January 2, 1882, additional property was acquired, improvements made thereon, and the property for some years was used jointly by the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company and by the Wabash Company, lessee of the other two companies.

Among the things which were contemplated by these railway companies with respect to this terminal property, as shown by these contracts already referred to, was that other companies should be induced to use it to the end that the expense of operating it might be lessened. The impracticability of thus operating the terminal property and having two or more railway companies operating over it indiscriminately is apparent upon reflection, and it is apparent that its impracticability became impressed upon the persons engaged in operating it, for we find that in 1884 steps were taken to change the method of operation and to provide for its operation by a terminal company, and in this step we have the first evidence of a change of the plan as outlined in the contract of January 2, 1882.

At this point we are aided by a concession made by counsel for the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company on page 13 of their argument in the Court of Appeals, as follows:

> "It needs no railroad man to know that such use in common by three different companies, without any central head or management, would lead to confusion and to danger. It was quite natural, in fact necessary, that the control and management and in fact the operation of this property should be put in charge of some one individual, or some natural or artificial person."

In ascertaining the changes that were made in the terminal plans as outlined in the contract of January 2, 1882, we may therefore start with the concession that those plans had proved impracticable and the necessity for a change had become apparent.

At the instance of the three railway companies parties to the contract of 1882 a meeting of the incorporators of the defendant, the Des Moines Union Railway Company, was held in Des Moines, Iowa, at which were adopted the original articles of incorporation of the defendant company (Vol. II, pp. 416-23). The articles adopted set out by reciting the fact of the execution of the contract of January 2, 1882, and incorporate the contract as a preamble to the articles.

Counsel for petitioners have attempted to make much of the recitations contained in these articles of incorporation and in the minutes of the meeting at which they were adopted, but an examination of them will, we think, demonstrate that they support our view of this case. The first recitation is as follows (p. 416):

> "At a meeting held in Des Moines, Iowa, on the 10th day of December, 1884, for the purpose of organizing a Union Depot & Railroad Company to be run and operated in and around the City of Des Moines, Iowa, in pursuance of a contract heretofore, to wit: on the 2nd day of January, A. D. 1882, entered into * * *."

It will be noted that the purpose of this meeting is stated to be the organization of a "Union Depot & Railroad Company to be run and operated in, around and about the City of Des Moines, Iowa." The contract of January 2, 1882, did not by its terms provide for a railroad company which should operate a railroad in and around the City of Des Moines, but only for a depot company which would simply have permanent charge of the property, without the power of ownership or operation. This demonstrates a change in the plans of the parties.

After setting out the contract the articles provide:

> "Whereas each of said railway companies and said parties has expended large sums of money in purchasing and improving the property aforesaid, and in the construction of suitable buildings for the use of said company, and " (p. 419).

This recitation did not accurately state the facts. As a matter of fact, neither one of the three railway companies had contributed a dollar directly toward the purchase or construction of this terminal property. The money used for its purchase and construction had all been furnished by the Wabash Company and by General Dodge. No one else had put a dollar into it. The only way in which the three railway companies, parties to the contract of January 2, 1882, put any money into it was that the Wabash Company had charged the money advanced to these three companies.

The articles then recite:

> "Whereas it was provided in the contract aforesaid that a Depot Company might be organized to take permanent charge of the property, and it was the understanding of the parties that such company might acquire, operate and maintain said property in such manner as best to serve the interest of the parties hereto."

This recitation shows one of two things: either that the contract of 1882 did not correctly state the understanding of the parties, or that the plan for the terminal had changed since the execution of that contract. It recites that "it was the understanding of the parties that such company might acquire, operate and maintain said property." No such understanding can be found in the language of the contract. The contract provides that the property should be acquired by the three railway companies, though the title might be taken in the name of a trustee; that it should be operated by them jointly, and that it should be maintained by the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, while this recitation evidenced the fact that it was the understanding that the property should be acquired, operated and maintained all by a separate company.

The articles then continue (p. 420):

> "Now, therefore, for the purposes aforesaid, as well as for those hereinafter expressed, the undersigned hereby associate themselves in a body corporate, and adopt the following:"

The object, then, of organizing the defendant company was not merely to provide a depot company referred to in the contract, but for other purposes. One of the "purposes aforesaid" was that "such company might acquire, operate and maintain said property," and the purposes "hereinafter expressed" must be those which are subsequently contained in the articles of incorporation.

Article 1 provides that the name of the corporation shall be the Des Moines Union Railway Company. This name is significant in fixing the intention of the parties. It wasn't a mere depot company or a company organized for the purpose of holding the legal title to the terminal property in trust, but it was a corporation organized for the purpose of performing the duties and functions of a railway terminal company.

As will appear later there is great difference under the laws of Iowa between a depot company and a railway company. The Des Moines Union is a railway and terminal company.

Article 2 provides:

> "The general nature of the business to be transacted shall be the construction, ownership and operation of a railway in, around and about the City of Des Moines, Iowa, including the construction, ownership and use of depots, freight houses, railway shops, repair shops, stockyards and whatever else may be useful and convenient for the operation of railways at the terminal point of Des Moines, Iowa, as well as the transfer of cars from the line or depot of one railway to another, or from the various manufactories, warehouses, storehouses, or elevators to each other or to any of the railways or depots thereof, now constructed or to be hereafter constructed, in or around said City of Des Moines, and such corporation shall possess all the powers conferred upon corporations for pecuniary profit by Chapter I of Title IX of the Code, and the amendments thereto."

This article provides that this railway company shall exercise the following powers and duties not contemplated by the contract of January 2, 1882:

(1) The construction of a railway;

(2) The ownership of a railway;

(3) The operation of a railway;

(4) The construction of depots, freight houses, railway shops, repair shops, stockyards, and whatever else may be useful and convenient for the operation of a railway at the terminal point in Des Moines, Iowa;

(5) The ownership of such depots, freight houses, etc.;

(6) The use of such depots, freight houses, etc.;

(7) The transfer of cars from the line or depot of one railway to another;

(8) The transfer of cars from the various manufactories, warehouses, storehouses, or elevators to each other or to any of the railways or depots now constructed or hereafter constructed in or around the City of Des Moines;

(9) The possession of all powers conferred upon corporations for pecuniary profit by Chapter I, Title IX of the Code, and the amendments thereto.

None of these nine functions was contemplated by the contract of January 2, 1882. It is evident from these provisions that the plan of ownership and operation of the terminal property had changed since the making of that contract.

It is then provided in article 2 in part as follows (p. 420):

> "* * * All the powers exercised by this company shall be in accordance with the terms and spirit of the aforesaid contract entered into on the 2nd day of January, A. D. 1882."

Much time and space has been devoted to a discussion of this provision by counsel for petitioners. In its interpretation we must give force and effect to other provisions in the articles of incorporation and the acts and conduct of the parties in relation thereto. This provision is purely interpretative in its character and cannot serve to qualify any provision of the articles which is clear and express in its terms, nor can it nullify any grant of power to the Des Moines Union Company clearly made by the articles. Manifestly, it cannot be construed to nullify or modify the power of the terminal company to construct, own and operate a railway in, around or about the City of Des Moines, because these powers are expressly granted. Manifestly, also, it cannot mean that the terminal property is to be owned or operated according to the terms of the contract of January 2, 1882, because that contract provides for the ownership by the three railway companies; provides for its operation by the three railroad companies jointly, and provides for police control, supervision and maintenance by the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company.

From the beginning these parties had in mind the construction of terminal facilities in the City of Des Moines separate from their main systems, as well in ownership as in operation, which might be used by all of them as well as others in connection with the operation of their roads. This primary object was never departed from. The departures which were made were with respect to the method by which this primary object should be attained.

Article 3 provides:

> "The capital stock of this corporation shall be one million ($1,000,000.00) dollars, which shall be divided into shares of one hundred ($100.00) dollars each, and shall be paid in at such times and in such manner as the board of directors may determine, and the board are authorized to receive in payment therefor the property and franchises in the City of Des Moines, now held by the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company, the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, Jas. F. How, trustee, Jas. F. How and Grenville M. Dodge."

This article clearly contemplates two things not contemplated by the contract of January 2, 1882:

First. That the stock should be paid for when issued.

Second. That it might be paid for by a transfer of the terminal property and franchises.

It needs no argument to show that these purposes were not contemplated by that contract, and that it evidences a change in the plan.

Under the contract of January 2, 1882, the three railway companies owned this terminal property, although it was contemplated that the title thereto might stand in the name of the trustee. As such beneficial owners, and under that contract, they had power to control it because they owned it and because of the terms of the contract.

Counsel for the Wabash Company, speaking of what was intended to be represented by this stock, on page 209 of his Coprt of Appeals brief, frankly says:

> "* * * I think it axiomatic that a corporation takes absolutely that which is transferred to it in exchange for its shares of stock, and, accordingly, that the Depot Company does not hold the servient estate in trust, but absolutely."

The question here is, what was intended, by the article above quoted, should be received by the terminal company in exchange for "its shares of stock."

The article says, first, that it shall receive "the property and franchises in the City of Des Moines now held by the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company."

Under the contract of January 2, 1882, the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company owned a one-half interest in the terminal property, which included not only the real estate where absolute title had been acquired by deed, but also the easement or right of way over property acquired by condemnation proceedings or right of way deed; also the embankments, ties, rails, buildings, and other structures located upon the property and used in connection with the operation of the terminal; also the franchise or right to use the property for terminal purposes. All these were property and were the things that were contemplated should be transferred to the terminal company in exchange for its stock.

Likewise, the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company and the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railroad Company owned and held each a one-fourth interest in the same property. James F. How and Grenville M. Dodge held the legal title to a portion of the real estate. The whole property and every interest therein was owned and held by these three railroad companies and the trustees, and it was this property which it was contemplated should be transferred for the stock—therefore adopting the axiom stated by counsel for the Wabash; this article contemplated that the terminal company should take "absolutely" the whole terminal property "in exchange for its shares of stock."

It evidently was their desire to change the status of the property and turn it over to a separate corporation which should own and operate it, but in connection therewith they did not desire to lose their power of control and therefore it was in their opinion necessary to put something into the articles of incorporation by which a limitation should be placed upon the power of the terminal company to control the property, and in article 2 they provide:

> "• • • All the powers exercised by this company shall be in accordance with the terms and spirit of the aforesaid contract entered into on the 2nd day of January, A. D. 1882, by and between the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company, the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, Jas. F. How, Jas. F. How, trustee, and Grenville M. Dodge. The said company shall have the right to lease or otherwise dispose of the use of any part of its franchises to any other railway company—provided that the assent in writing of the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company and the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company shall be necessary before any such lease or disposition can be made to any other than the parties above named."

And in article 4 it was provided:

"Four members of the board shall be nominated by the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company, two members by the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company and two members by the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, and no stockholders shall be eligible for membership of the board unless so nominated.

The fact that a candidate has been duly nominated shall be certified to the stockholders' meeting of this company by the secretary of one of the respective companies aforesaid and such certification shall be conclusive.

The provisions herein with respect to nomination for the board of directors shall apply to and be enjoyed by any grantee or assignee of either of the railway companies aforesaid. No contract, lease, or other agreement, amounting to a permanent charge upon the property of the corporation, shall be entered into by the board unless the same shall have been first approvel by the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company and the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, or their assigns, and shall have been submitted to a meeting of the stockholders, duly called, and shall have been approved by more than three-fourths of all the stockholders; and it shall not be within the power of the board of directors to create any limitation whatsoever upon any of the franchises of the corporation, except the same shall have been submitted to and approved by the stockholders as hereinbefore provided."

Now, it wasn't necessary to put these provisions into the articles of incorporation if it was not intended to give the terminal company the title and ownership of the property. If the terminal company simply was to hold the property as trustee, it would have no power to dispose of or encumber it without the consent of the beneficial owners. So these provisions, instead of showing that it was intended that the three railway companies should retain an interest in the property, show that it was intended that the terminal company should own the property, but these provisions were put in as a limitation upon the power of the corporation to alienate its property.

Now, of course, the adoption of these articles did not change the title or ownership of the terminal, but they clearly indicate the purpose of the parties instrumental in organizing it to transfer the ownership and title, just the same as the building of a house would indicate the purpose of the builder that some one should live in it.

These articles were adopted on the 10th day of December, 1884. On the 1st day of January, 1885, there were certain resolutions passed at meetings of the stockholders of the three corporations parties to the contract of January 2, 1882. To correctly understand what was intended by these resolutions it is well to consider first the resolutions adopted by the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company. This company did not hold the legal title to any portion of the terminal property. The only interest it had in the property was that evidenced by the contract of January 2, 1882. under the terms of which it was the beneficial owner of a one-fourth interest.

The resolutions appear commencing at page 426 of volume II, and in them it is first

> "Resolved, that this company ratifies and approves the selection heretofore made of J. S. Polk and F. M. Hubbell to serve as directors of the Des Moines Union Railway Company in accordance with the provisions of article four (4) of the articles of incorporation of that company authorizing this company to nominate two members of the board of directors of said company."

In connection with this resolution it is important, for reasons which we will hereafter state, to note that from the organization of the Des Moines Union Railway Company down to the adoption of certain amendments to the articles of that company, the three railway companies parties to the contract of January 2, 1882, exercised the power given them in article 4 of the articles of incorporation, to nominate directors of the Des Moines Union Railway Company.

The resolution then continues:

> "Whereas, the Des Moines, St. Louis Roailroad Company, the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company, the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, G. M. Dodge, James F. How, and James F. How, trustee, on the 2nd day of January, 1882, entered into a contract whereby it was agreed to purchase, hold, control and use certain real estate and franchises in the City of Des Moines which had theretofore been held and used by certain of the individual parties hereto for certain purposes and upon certain conditions set out in said contract, and"

The only importance of this recitation is to indicate that the subject matter of the resolutions which follow.

The resolution then continues:

> "Whereas, on the 10th day of December, A. D. 1884, a corporation under the name and style of the Des Moines Union Railway Company was organized as contemplated and provided in the aforesaid contract, to acquire, hold, use and enjoy the real estate, property rights and franchises in the City of Des Moines east of Farnham street in said city of the aforesaid railway company and signatories of said contract acquired or held thereunder, and to carry out the purposes of the said contract of January 2nd, 1882."

Note the use of the word "enjoy" in connection with the above resolution. This corporation was organized not only to acquire, hold and use the real estate, but also to enjoy it. We take it that the word "acquire" used in this connection means to get the title to the property; the word "hold" means to be possessed of it; the word "use" means to operate it for the purpose of carrying on a railway business, and the word "enjoy" means to derive a profit or benefit from the acquiring, holding and using of the property. The things which it was contemplated this terminal commany was to "acquire, hold, use, and enjoy" were, first, the real estate; second, the property rights, and third, the franchises. These three words comprised all the interest which the three railroad companies or the trustees had in the terminal property.

The resolution then continues:

> "Now, Therefore, Resolved, That this company accepts and ratifies so far as its interests are affected thereby, the Articles of Incorporation of the Des Moines Union Railway Company as in substantial accord and compliance with the terms and conditions of the said contract of January 2nd, 1882, and undertakes to discharge all the obligations imposed upon it by said contract in order to make effective the purposes of said Des Moines Union Railway Company."

Note that this resolution accepts and ratifies the articles of incorporation of the defendant railway company, as in substantial accord and compliance with the terms of the contract. When they ratified the articles of the Des Moines Union Railway Company they ratified that portion which gave to that railway company the power to own, construct and operate a terminal property in the City of Des Moines, and the power to acquire the ownership of this particular property and pay therefor by an issuance of its stock, as well as any other portion of the articles of incorporation. And note, also, that by this resolution they undertook to make effective the purposes of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, which were to acquire the ownership, management and control of this terminal property, and to pay therefor by an issuance of its capital stock.

This resolution adopted by each of the three railway companies relative to the articles of incorporation, recites the execution of the contract of 1882, the adoption of the articles of incorporation, that it was such a corporation as contemplated in the contract, and that the corporation so contemplated was to acquire, hold, use and enjoy all of the property in question; and then it is resolved that the railway company accepts and ratifies the articles of incorporation as in substantial accord and compliance with the terms and conditions of the contract of 1882, and the company "undertakes to discharge all the obligations imposed upon it by said contract, in order to make effective the purposes of said Des Moines Union Railway Company."

The resolution then continues:

> "Resolved, That the proper officers of this company be authorized upon the issuance to it of the share of the bonds and stock of said Des Moines Union Railway Company to which it may be entitled under said contract to convey, assign and transfer to said company all its right, title and interest of whatever name and character in and to the real estate, franchises, choses in action, and rights in possession or contingent to all the property in the City of Des Moines east of Farnham street in said city now held, enjoyed or claimed by either or all of the signatories of said contract of January 2, 1882, or any agent or trustee thereof purchased, acquired, or held in pursuance of said contract."

Now, what was it, the transfer of which was intended by the stockholders to be authorized by this resolution? Was it something which it had, or something which it didn't have? The Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company did not have the legal title to a single shovelful of dirt, a single tie, a single rail or spike, or any other portion of the terminal property. What it had, and all it had was the beneficial interest in one-fourth of the property contemplated by the contract of January 2, 1882.

If it had been intended to authorize the transfer only of the legal title to the property, there would have been no occasion whatever for the passage of this resolution. What would have been necessary for such a purpose would have been a resolution authorizing the persons who held the legal title to make the transfer. The only purpose of this resolution was to authorize the transfer of something which it had, which as we have said, was the beneficial ownership of a one-fourth interest in the property, and this is exactly what the language of the resolution authorizes. It says:

> "assign and transfer to said company all its right, title and interest of whatever name and character in and to the real estate, franchises, choses in action, and rights in possession or contingent to all the property in the City of Des Moines."

which is covered by the contract of January 2, 1882.

What possible interest did or could the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company have had in this property which was not authorized to be transferred by this resolution? What right, title or interest is reserved by the terms of this resolution? What more appropriate language could have been selected to express an intention to transfer the ownership of the property?

The resolutions speak of carrying out the purposes of the contract of January 2, 1882. That was precisely what they were doing, and doing it by transferring the terminal property to the terminal company and taking to themselves the stock of the terminal company. Through this stock ownership they could control the terminal company.

On pages 40 and 41 counsel for the Milwaukee Company in their Court of Appeals brief discuss the rights of that company as the successor of the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company (owner of the Fonda line), and assert that by the contract of January 2, 1882, the Des Moines Northwestern Company acquired a one-fourth interest in the terminal property, and then say:

> "Now, two questions arise. Could any conveyance or any act of the St. Louis Company and the Northern Company, or either of them, cut off or destroy this right of the Northwestern Company, which they had solemnly granted to it by the contract of January 2, 1882? Or has the Northwestern Company or its successors ever done anything that would destroy or convey away this right to the use of this property?"

The answer to the first query above quoted is, of course, no. The rights of the Northwestern Company could only be cut off by its own action or that of its successors. When we come to answer the second question as to what the Northwestern Company or its successors have done to convey its interest in this property, the anwer is easy.

In the Milwaukee's chain of title there appear the following owners of the property in the order named:

1. The Des Moines Northwestern Company.

2. Polk & Hubbell, who acquired the property in pursuance of a contract with the Wabash purchasing committee, and through a foreclosure of the original Des Moines Northwestern mortgage.

3. The Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company, which acquired the property from Polk & Hubbell.

4. The Des Moines Northern & Western Railway Company, which acquired the property by the consolidation of the Boone and Fonda lines.

5. The Des Moines Northern & Western Railroad Company, which acquired the property through a foreclosure of a mortgage given by its immediate predecessor.

The act of the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company by which a conveyance of the ownership of the property was authorized, consisted in the resolutions from which we have just quoted.

These resolutions are supplemented by the resolutions of 1887 hereafter referred to.

If the purchase price provided for in these resolutions had been paid to the Northwestern Company and the conveyance authorized by this resolution made, no question could arise.

The thing actually done was this: Polk & Hubbell made a contract with the purchasing committee of the Wabash Railroad Company, which owned the Des Moines Northwestern bonds, by which the purchasing committee agreed to sell to Polk & Hubbell the Des Moines Northwestern Road extending northwesterly from Farnham street, and a one-fourth interest in the terminal property; title to be secured by a foreclosure of the Des Moines Northwestern line mortgage. By this contract, however, the purchasing committee retained the option of delivering to Polk & Hubbell one-fourth of the stock and bonds which it might receive from the terminal company in payment for the one-fourth interest in the terminal property, in lieu of conveying such interest in the terminal property.

This mortgage was foreclosed and Polk & Hubbell acquired the title to the Des Moines Northwestern Line through the foreclosure proceedings, and received from the purchasing committee one-fourth of the stock and bonds of the terminal company in lieu of one-fourth interest in the terminal property.

Polk & Hubbell transferred to the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company the Des Moines Northwestern or Fonda line, commencing at Farnham street, and one-fourth of the stock and bonds of the terminal company which they had received in lieu of an interest in the terminal property.

In this way the grantee of the Des Moines Northwestern Company received the purchase price for the former's interest in the terminal property, in lieu of receiving an interest in the terminal property itself.

As heretofore noted, there appears in the Milwaukee's chain of title the decree of foreclosure of the mortgage given by the Des Moines Northern & Western Railway Company, and the deeds executed in pursuance thereof. The Milwaukee Company have no rights which were not included in this foreclosure and these deeds. The mortgage referred to covered only the railroad property extending northwesterly from Farnham street, and the only interest ever possessed by the Des Moines Northwestern Company in the terminal property at Des Moines covered by this mortgage under which the Milwaukee holds was the interest represented by the stock acquired by Polk & Hubbell pursuant to their agreement with the Wabash purchasing committee.

Very clearly every right of the Des Moines Northwestern had thus been transferred to Polk & Hubbell, and that transfer was in the form of a transfer of the consideration which was to be paid for the interest in the terminal property. There was no occasion for any direct conveyance by any one, of the interest of the Des Moines Northwestern in the terminal property, because no interest in that company appeared of record.

After the adoption of this resolution another one was offered and adopted which reads as follows:

> "Resolved, That the proper officers of the company be authorized to transfer the management and operation of its property in Des Moines, so far as the same may now be vested in the company to the Des Moines Union Railway Company on the 1st day of January, 1885, or as soon thereafter as practicable, leaving the question of settlement between this company and the Des Moines Union Railway Company as authorized under the resolution for that purpose heretofore this day adopted to be arranged as directed therein." Vol. II, p. 427.

Taking these resolutions as a whole, it will be noted that there were two subjects covered by them—first, a sale and transfer of this property to the Des Moines Union Railway Company and the payment by that company in bonds and stock, the amount of which, so far as the bonds were concerned, could only be ascertained by an accounting between the companies. This would necessarily take some time. It was desired that the management of the property should be turned over to the defendant company at once, the reason being, we assume, that the impracticability of operating it in the manner in which it had theretofore been operated was pressing upon the parties. The last resolution provided for an immediate transfer of the possession, control and operation of the property, leaving the settlement between the parties, as authorized in the prior resolution, for future adjustment. Thus, as we have said, two objects were intended:

First. The immediate surrender of the possession and operation of the property; and Second. A transfer of the ownership thereof and a settlement of the purchase price.

The same identical resolutions were on the same day passed by the stockholders of the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company (Vol. IV, pp. 1473-4), and by the stockholders of the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company (Vol. II, pp. 430-2).

The only difference between the situation of the Des Moines Northwestern Company and the situation of the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern and the Des Moines & St. Louis companies was that the title to a small portion of the terminal property stood in the name of each of the latter two companies, so that they not only owned the beneficial interest in the terminal property, in accordance with the contract of January 2, 1882, but they also held the legal title to a small portion of it.

The resolutions passed by the two latter companies authorized the transfer of not only the property to which these companies had the legal title, but also all their right, title and interest of whatever kind and character in the whole terminal, whether it stood in their names or the names of others. The effect of this was to authorize the transfer of the ownership of the property.

Supposing these resolutions had been immediately carried out and these railway companies had executed the deeds authorized: the effect would necessarily have been to have given to the defendant company the beneficial ownership of the whole terminal, but the legal title to only that portion of it which stood in the name of the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern and the Des Moines & St. Louis companies.

On the same day the board of directors of the defendant, Des Moines Union Railway Company, held a meeting, a record of which appears on pages 432 to 435 of volume II. At this meeting certain resolutions were passed with respect to the subject matter under consideration.

The first paragraph of the resolution is as follows:

> "Whereas, the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company, G. M. Dodge and James F. How, both in his individual right and as trustee under the contract mentioned and set out in the Articles of Incorporation of this company, have by their o officers and by themselves, personally notified this company that they have each for themselves approved of the organization of this company, and have directed their officers, agents and trustees to surrender and deliver to this company the railroad property and franchises mentioned in said contract, and requested it to take possession of, and maintain and operate the same for the purposes and on the terms mentioned in said contract, and that said railway companies and individual signatories have indicated their desire and purpose to transfer said property to this company in accordance with the terms of said contract."

This is the only intimation in the evidence that the trustees, How and Dodge, were at this time authorized to transfer any of this property.

The resolution then continues:

> "Whereas, it is desirable that this company should at once take possession of said property and maintain, control and operate the same, and that it should procure all necessary conveyances and transfers of the same as soon as practicable, and make provisions for and pay for said property so proposed to be conveyed to it, Now, Therefore, be it Resolved,"

It will be noted that the recitation last above set out, like the resolutions of the three railway companies, includes two propositions:

First. The immediate possession, maintenance, control and operation of the property; and Second. Procuring all conveyances and transfers of the same and making provision for the payment of said property.

The resolution then continues:

> "First.
>
> That this company accepts the transfer and management and operation of said property in the City of Des Moines, east of Farnham street in said city, heretofore owned and controlled by the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad, Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company and the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, and the several others, parties to said contract, and assumes control thereof from this date, so far as practicable, and it hereby instructs its president to make such order as may be necessary to render such control and management effective, as provided in said contract."

It will be noted that this portion of the resolution does not say anything about the purchase or conveyance of the property, but only treats of the question of the immediate possession, control and management.

The resolution then continues as follows:

"Second.

"That the President, Vice President, Secretary and Treasurer of this company be, and they are hereby appointed a committee to confer with the several parties to said contract and agree with them severally upon the terms and price at which they will respectively assign, transfer and convey said railroad property and franchises to this company, and procure from them, and each of them, such conveyance and transfers as may be necessary to fully invest this company with the title, control and management of said properties provided for in said contract of January 2, 1882."

This portion of the resolution treats exclusively of the purchase of the property. It authorizes this committee to agree upon the terms and price at which the property is to be transferred and conveyed, and to procure the necessary conveyances and transfers to fully invest the defendant company with the title, control and management of the property. This is apt language to express the intention of the defendant company to acquire the ownership of this property, and there is nothing in it to suggest that it was contemplated that the three railway companies were to retain any interest in the property, or that defendant was to pay merely for the privilege of holding the naked legal title.

The resolution then continues:

"Third.

That to enable this company to pay for the property and to maintain, operate and improve the same, and purchase other property necessary to carry out its objects, and remove any and all liens or incumbrances thereon, and pay off all just claims against the same, the President and Secretary of this company are hereby authorized and directed to issue full-paid capital stock of this company, not to exceed one million ($1,000,000.00) dollars and not to exceed five hundred (500) bonds of this company, of the denomination of one thousand dollars ($1,000.00); the form to be agreed upon hereafter by this board.

And to secure said bonds, the President and Secretary are authorized and directed to execute, in the name of this company, a first mortgage or deed of trust, conveying all of said property so to be conveyed to this company or thereafter to be acquired, to a trustee therein named, the form of which deed of trust shall be hereafter determined by this board.

And when said committee shall have agreed with the said several parties to said contract as to the amount of bonds and stocks of this company necessary to be delivered to them, and each of them, in payment for said railroad property and franchises, the President and Secretary of this company shall deliver the same to said several parties as each appear to be entitled, on receipt of the conveyances and assignments of said property so to be made to this company."

Thus we find the defendant company arranging on its own account to raise the funds necessary to pay for the property and to improve the same and acquire other property necessary to carry out the objects of the defendant company, and authorizing the payment for said property upon the execution of the necessary conveyances. The intention of these three railway companies, which, according to complainants' theory, owned this property, to transfer the same in fee simple to the defendant company, and the intention of the defendant company to acquire the ownership thereof, could not be more clearly expressed than by the language used in these various resolutions, and these resolutions simply carry out the thought expressed in the articles of incorporation of the Des Moines Union Railway Company.

No action was immediately taken under these resolutions, probably because about this time the affairs of the Wabash Company were placed in the hands of a receiver and its property transferred to what is known in this record as the Purchasing Committee.

These resolutions, however, remained unrepealed until they were carried out by certain deeds executed by them to the defendant company in the early part of the year 1888, to which we will hereafter call attention.

The subject of the sale and transfer of this property to the defendant company came up at meetings of the directors of the three railroad companies, held on November 5 and 8, 1887, but before considering the action of these various companies at that date, we think it is well to call the court's attention to the mortgage or trust deed which was subsequently given by the defendant company to the Central Trust Company of New York, to secure an issue of bonds, a portion of which bonds was subsequently delivered to the persons and corporations who had furnished the money for the purpose of acquiring and improving the terminal property. This mortgage appears commencing on page 459 of volume II, and is dated November 1, 1887. It was drawn by Col. Wells H. Blodgett, general counsel for the Wabash Company, one of the most able and conscientious lawyers who ever practiced in this court, and who was apt, as this record again and again shows, in selecting language which accurately conveyed the intention of the parties.

This mortgage, as it will be noted, was prepared before the resolutions of November, 1887, to which we have just referred, and before any transfer of the property was made, and expresses the understanding of Colonel Blodgett, as he looked into the future, of what was intended to be done with this property.

After reciting the date and the parties to the contract, the mortgage provides (p. 460):

> 'Whereas: The Des Moines Union Railway Company is a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the State of Iowa, and as such is fully authorized to locate, construct, own and operate a railway in, around and about the City of Des Moines, Iowa, including the construction, ownership and use of depots, freight houses, railway shops, repair shops, stock yards and whatever may be useful and convenient for the operation of railways in said city, and the transfer of cars from the lines and depots of one railway to another, and from said depots to the various manufactories, warehouses, storehouses or elevators, and from one manufactory, warehouse, storehouse or elevator to another, as said depots, manufactories, warehouses, storehouses and elevators are now constructed or may be hereafter constructed in or around the said City of Des Moines, Iowa, and for such purposes has full right to acquire by purchase and condemnation all such right of way, land and lots as are necessary and proper for the operation and construction of such line of railroad, and to provide itself with depot grounds, yards, shops and other terminal facilities adequate for handling of traffic to be transported upon such railroad, and"

If you will compare this recitation with the articles of incorporation of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, you will at once conclude that when Colonel Blodgett dictated this paragraph he had before him the articles of incorporation of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, and from them ascertained just the powers and purposes of that company.

Colonel Blodgett understood that this corporation was organized, not as a mere depot company for the mere purpose of holding the legal title to this property for the benefit of any one, but for the purpose of constructing, owning and operating a raiway in the City of Des Moines.

The mortgage then continues:

"Whereas, the Des Moines Union Railway Company has undertaken and partially completed the construction of a railroad in the City of Des Moines, Polk County, Iowa, extending from the main lines of the Des Moines & St. Louis Railway Company, the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company and the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company to a connection with and across the line of various other railroads which center or terminate in the City of Des Moines, and to various manufactories and industries in said city, and has purchased and owns various structures and buildings used for depots, railway shops, round houses and other structures suitable and useful for railway purposes, and has purchased, acquired and owns by condemnation and otherwise, valuable real estate in said city, and valuable franchises from the City Council of said city, and"

Now the Des Moines Union Railway Company at this time hadn't undetaken and partially completed any railroad in the City of Des Moines or elsewhere. It hadn't purchased, acquired or owned, by condemnation or otherwise, any valuable real estate or franchises in the City of Des Moines or elsewhere. Up to this time it was simply a corporation which had been organized for the purpose of acquiring and owning these things, but Colonel Blodgett in drawing this particular paragraph was looking into the future and planning for doing the things which were afterward done and which gave to the Des Moines Union Railway Company the ownership of the very property to which reference is made in this mortgage. Nothing could more clearly show the intention of these parties than the language incorporated in this mortgage by the person who was furnishing the legal service necessary to carry out the objects of the persons and corporations engaged in this transaction. This wasn't a construction of what had been done, but an expression of what was intended to be done and what was in fact afterward done.

The mortgage then continues:

desirable improvements thereto and thereon, said party of the first part proposes to issue its bonds to the amount of eight hundred thousand ($800,000) dollars, to be dated on the 1st day of November, 1887, in accordance with the resolutions and orders of its Board of Directors at a duly called and authorized meeting thereof;"

The mortgage then proceeds by its terms to convey to the Central Trust Company the very property which was afterward transferred to the defendant company by appropriate deeds from the three railway companies.

Let us now examine the record and see whether or not the purposes so aptly expressed by Colonel Blodgett in this mortgage were carried out, and for that purpose we wish to call the court's attention to the resolutions of these railway companies passed in November, 1887—a few days after the date of the mortgage in question.

Before doing so, however, we wish again to remind the court that the resolutions already referred to and passed by these railway companies in 1885, authorized not the transfer of the legal title to this property by the trustees, but the transfer of the beneficial interests by the railway companies. In carrying out the plan which is evidenced by the mortgage above referred to, it no doubt came to the attention of the parties that the resolutions of 1884 were defective in that they did not authorize a transfer by the trustees, which was necessary to give to the defendant a perfect title to the property, and therefore the resolutions now referred to were passed by the railway companies.

The resolutions of the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company will be found on pages 435 and 436 of volume II. They recite the fact that James F. How had acquired the title to certain property in the City of Des Moines with money furnished by the Wabash Company; that by an agreement between this company and the Wabash Company and others, it was intended that the said property should be transferred to the Des Moines Union Railway Company; and they then authorize Mr. How to transfer said property to the Des Moines Union Railway Company upon receiving from said company a stipulation that as soon as practicable thereafter the defendant railway company shall deliver to him first mortgage bonds to the amount of money advanced for the paymentof said property and improvements, with interest and taxes paid thereon, and also three-fourths of the stock of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, the said bonds and stock when received to be transferred by How to the Purchasing Committee of the Wabash Company. They also recite the fact that Grenville M. Dodge had purchased certain property as trustee, and the fact that in accordance with the contract above mentioned it was intended that said property should be transferred to the Des Moines Union Railway Company; and they then direct General Dodge to transfer said property to the Des Moines Union Railway Company upon receiving from said company a stipulation that as soon as practicable the railway company should deliver him bonds for the amount of money he had advanced in payment for the terminal property and improvements, interest and taxes, and also one-fourth of the capital stock of the Des Moines Union Railway Company.

In explanation of the fact that the Purchasing Committee was to receive three-fourths of the capital stock of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, it may be noted that at this time the Purchasing Committee were entitled, in equity at least, to whatever was coming to the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company and the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company; and General Dodge was entitled to whatever was coming to the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company.

Similar resolutions were passed by the directors of the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company (vol. II, pp. 437-9). There were present at the meeting of the Des Moines & St. Louis Company, among others, James F. How, Vice-President of the Wabash Company, and Col. Wells H. Blodgett, general counsel for the Wabash Company and the Purchasing Committee.

In addition to the resolutions similar to those passed by the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern, the Des Moines & St. Louis Company passed the following resolution, which was offered by James F. How (vol. II, p. 439):

> "Resolved, that the President and Secretary of this company, be and they are hereby authorized and directed to execute to the Des Moines Union Railway Company a deed conveying to it all its real estate rights of way, franchise, road bed and other property of said company lying and being in the City of Des Moines, east of Farnham Street, whether the same was acquired by grant from City of Des Moines or by purchase or condemnation, this resolution being offered for the purpose of carrying out the contract of date January second, 1882, entered into by and between this company, the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company, the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company and others."

Thus again authorizing a transefr by the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company of its beneficial interest in the property which stood in the name of the trustees.

The record does not show the resolutions themselves that were passed at the time by the Des Moines Northwestern Raiwlay Company, but the complainants offered in evidence a notice served by the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company on the Des Moines Union Railway Company at this time, notifying the latter company that it had passed similar resolutions. This appears as plaintiffs' exhibit 15, page 442, volume II.

We therefore find in the record resolutions of the three railway companies, which, the complainants admit, were the real owners of this property, authorizing a transfer of the property both by these corporations and the trustees, in consideration of the defendants' captial stock and bonds, the latter representing the amount actually invested in the purchase and improvement of the property, with interest and taxes thereon.

In pursuance of these resolutions, James F. How executed and delivered to the Des Moines Union Railway Company three deeds, and G. M. Dodge and wife one deed, which appear in volume II, pages 446 to 454. The St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company and the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company each executed a deed to the Des Moines Union Railway Company, which deeds appear on pages 455 to 459 of volume II. These deeds were prepared or approved by Colonel Blodgett.

On January 31, 1888, James F. How, Vice-President of the Wabash, wrote to J. S. Polk, of Des Moines, Iowa, enclosing what he refers to as "deeds from General Dodge to the Des Moines Union Railway Company," which he says, "Colonel Blodgett has examined and pronounces all right" (vol. IV, p. 1587).

On the next day, Mr. Polk writes to Mr. How, saying:

> "Your letter of the 31st ult. enclosing two deeds, one from the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern, and the other from G. M. Dodge, to the Des Moines Union Railway Company for certain property in Des Moines is received.
>
> We delivered to General Dodge the contract of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, to give him the bonds, and stock of the company when the same are issued, in payment for said terminals. If the deeds are satisfactory to you we will put them on record at once." (Vol. IV, pp. 1587-8.)

On February 13, 1888, Mr. How wrote to Mr. Polk as follows:

> "Encosed please find a deed from the Des Moines & St. Louis Ry. Co. to the Des Moines Union Ry. Co. for the property owned by the former Co. in Des. Moines. Please have same executed by Mr. Clarkson as President, and by Mr. Hubbell as Secretary and return same to me as Mr. Blodgett wishes to see that it is properly executed before it is put on record.
>
> I understand that the Des Moines Northwestern Ry. make no deed as they have no property in Des Moines to transfer. Am I correct about this? If not, I would like to see their deed before it is recorded." (Vol. IV, p. 1588.)

On February 21, 1888, Mr. Polk replied:

> "I herewith enclose deed from the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company to the Des Moines Union Railway Company, which you forwarded to us for execution. The same has been signed by Mr. Clarkson, and Mr. Hubbell, and propery acknowledged. Hope you will find it all satisfactory." (Vol. IV, pp. 1589-90.)

The deed from the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company appears on pages 455 and 456 of volume II, and after describing the particular pieces of property which stood on the record in the name of the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, the deed continues:

"• • • Together with all and singular the tenements, hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging, or in any wise appertaining, and the reversion and reversions, remainder and remainders, rents, issues and profits thereof. And also, all the estate, right, title, interest in the above described property, possesison, claim and demand whatsoever, as well in law as in equity of the said parties of the first part, of, in or to the above described premises, and every part and parcel thereof, with the appurtenances. To Have and to Hold all and singuar the above mentioned and described premises together with the appurtenances, unto the said parties of the second part and assigns forever."

The property which was transferred by this deed was a part of the terminal property. It is the theory of petitioners that the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company retained some interest in the property itself. In view of this contention, we would like to inquire what possible interest, easement or equity the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company could have had in this property that was not transferred by the terms of this deed. We are unable to formulate or conceive of more apt and complete language to transfer every possible interest in real estate. This deed not only transferred the legal title, but whatever equity, right or easement the grantor had in the property. It clearly shows the intention to give to the Des Moines Union Raiway Company a perfect title to the property.

When we come to examine the deed of the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company to the Des Moines Union Railway Company, we think there can be no question about it. It will be remembered that while, under the contract of 1882, the Des Moines & St. Louis Company owned a half interest in the terminal property, the title to only a small portion of it stood in its name. This deed, after describing the property which stood in its name, continues as follows (p. 458):

> "* * * And all of the real estate within the City of Des Moines, Iowa, which is the property of the grantor, together with all real estate which may hereafter be acquired by this grantor either by condemnation proceedings or otherwise. Also all its embankments, bridges, turnouts, sidetracks, buildings and structures, water tanks and fixtures, shops, engine and other houses, depots, turntables and all its railroad property acquired and to be acquired, and everything appurtenant to said railroad, and all franchises and rights it may have acquired by grant, donation, purchase or otherwise, and particularly all rights, franchises and privileges granted by the City of Des Moines, Iowa, under an ordinance 'granting the right of way to the Des Moines and St. Louis Railroad Company and its assigns, over, across, along and upon certain streets and alleys in the City of Des Moines, Iowa, and the right to bridge the Des Moines River on the south aley in said city between Court Avenue and Vine Streets.' And the said Des Moines and St. Louis Railroad Company hereby covenants to Warrant and Defend the said premises against all the lawful claims of all persons whomsoever, claiming by, through or under it. Signed this 21st day of February, A. D. 1888."

What more appropriate language could have been selected to transfer to the Des Moines Union Railway Company not only the property specifically described in said deed, but all the railroad property which the grantor had in the City of Des Moines, and which, according to the theory of petitioners was a half interest in the property which stood in the name of How and Dodge? Note, also, that the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company covenants to warrant and defend the premises against the lawful claims of all persons whomsoever, claiming by, through or under it. The plaintiff, the Wabash Railway Company, claims under it (the Des Moines & St. Louis Company).

The Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company did not make a deed because there was no property standing in its name. It had, however, as we have shown, authorized a transfer of all its interest in this terminal property, and it or its successors received the purchase price agreed upon, as we will hereafter show. Also, the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company or its successors, as well as the Des Moines & St. Louis Company or its successors, received the consideration.

These deeds were put upon record soon after their execution, and on May 1, 1888, the Des Moines Union Railway Company took possession of the terminal property and has ever since possessed and operated it.

The mortgage of the terminal property, which was prepared in Novmeber, 1887, before the actual transfer of the property to the Terminal Company, was now, after the transfer had been completed, executed and placed of record. The bonds secured by it were negotiable in form and were designed to be sold in the open market. Had there ensued a default and foreclosure what estate would have passed to the purchaser at the foreclosure sale? Certainly nothing less than an absolute estate. But it could not have been more than passed to the Terminal Company. And if that Company got only the legal title in trust, if the entire beneficial interest remained in the three railway companies, and that interest was inalienable, then the bonds and mortgage were nothing more than counters in a scheme of fraud. The right, title and interest of the Des Moines Union in this property, from the time it got it until now was what it was, when it made this mortgage. True it could not, under its articles of incorporation, encumber this property without the approval of the three railway companies, its stockholders, but this restriction upon the mode of its corporate action did not qualify its estate in its property. The railway companies approved the mortgage as required, but they did not extend its scope to their own property. They simply did "ratify and approve the execution of the mortgage to the Central Trust Company by the Des Moines Union Railway Company upon all its property and franchises to secure the issuance, etc." (R. 474.)

We claim that by reason of the facts hereinbefore referred to—the articles of incorporation of the terminal company, the resolutions of the three railway companies proposing to sell the property to the terminal company, the resolutions of the terminal company accepting this proposition, the execution and delivery of the deeds to the property, the payment of the purchase price to the parties entitled thereto, the taking possession of the property by the terminal company—the terminal company became the absolute owners of the terminal property, and that the ownership of the three railway companies in the terminal property was changed to the ownership of the capital stock of the terminal company.

THE CONTRACT OF MAY 10, 1889, AS BEARING UPON THE INTENTION OF THE PARTIES.

If there can now be any doubt who owned this property after May 1, 1888, let us see what the parties themselves had to say about it after the consummation of the transaction, because if they thought that the Des Moines Union Railway Company then owned this property, there is no occasion for the court to inquire further into it. Fortunately we have in the record the undisputed agreements of these parties with reference to the title, in a contract which was introduced by the complainants.

For some reason or other, counsel for complainants have never seemed to understand just what we claim for the contract of May 10, 1889, as applied to this branch of our case. Counsel for the Milwaukee, on page 59 of the Court of Appeals brief, says:

> "it is the contention of the defendants that this contract of May 10, 1889, killed that of 1882, and terminated all rights of the Railway Companies to use the property after May 1, 1918, because the supplemental contract covers a period of time up to that date only."

And counsel for the Wabash Company, on page 131, Court of Appeals brief, says:

> "Defendants have contended that by the execution of the contract of 1889 the Railway Companies intended to rest their right to use the terminal property on the provisions of that contract, and are by that contract estopped from asserting a claim to the terminal property adverse to the depot company, and have argued that the Railway Companies thereby released any claim to an easement in the terminal property."

Neither of these statements correctly states our position with relation to this contract. Our position is, first, that it having been deliberately prepared, considered, and executed by the parties, and approved by the formal action of their boards of directors, is of the highest value—of the greatest probative force—because of its interpretation of the intention of the parties by their prior transactions.

Second: It is of importance when we come to consider the defense of estoppel and laches, which we will hereafter discuss.

The title and ownership of this property were not transferred to the terminal company by reason of the contract of May 10, 1889, but by reason of the things that had gone before and to which we have referred.

Upon taking possession of the property by the defendant company, the question of the terms upon which the defendant should furnish to these railway companies terminal services became a subject of negotiation, which resulted in a written contract, dated May 10, 1889, between the defendant company as party of the first part, and the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company (successor of the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company), and the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, parties of the second part, which contract appears commencing on page 479 of volume II. This contract was drawn by Colonel Blodgett, general counsel of The Wabash Railroad Company and the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, who had guided these transactions and who knew the situation and what was intended by the parties. We therefore not only have the written statement of the interested parties as to the title to this property, so far as it is contained in this contract, but we have such written statement in the language of one who knew how to select words apt for the purpose of expressing his understanding.

The contract, after reciting the date and the parties to it, says:

> "Whereas, the said party of the first part (Des Moines Union Railway Company) is the owner of valuable terminal facilities in the City of Des Moines, Iowa, as hereinafter described; and"

Now neither Colonel Blodgett nor the parties to this contract, who were the only ones interested in it, had any doubt at this time as to who the owner of the property was. They agree that it was the defendant, the Des Moines Union Railway Company.

Th contract then says:

> "Whereas, the respective parties of the second part have railroads in the State of Iowa which terminate at, or run into and through said City of Des Moines, and in order to prevent unnecessary expense, inconvenience and loss attending the accumulation of a number of stations, and in order to facilitate the public convenience and safety, it has become important that said second parties should have the use of the terminal facilities of said first party; and"

Again we have the agreed statement of these parties that the ownership was in the defendant.

The contract continues:

"Whereas, said party of the first part has become incorporated and organized under the laws of the State of Iowa for the purpose of owning and operating a line of railway in the said City of Des Moines, Iowa, extending from the eastern boundary line of said city to Farnham Street, in the western part thereof; and"

There is no pretense here that the defendant corporation was organized for the purpose of acting as trustee or holding the naked legal title to this property, but on the contrary these parties agree that it was organized for the specific purpose of owning and operating this terminal property—something never contemplated in the contract of January 2, 1882.

The contract then continues:

"Whereas, said party of the first part, in pursuance of said charter has acquired and now owns a railway in said city, as above set forth, and has already acquired or constructed a large number of valuable main and side tracks, depots, depot grounds, lands, yards, shops, round houses, freight houses and other terminal facilities, and intends to acquire and construct more; and"

This is the language selected by Colonel Blodgett and adopted by all the parties interested, to state the result of the transactions which we have been heretofore considering.

The contract then continues:

> "Whereas, said second parties are each desirous of having the right to use said terminals in connection with their respective railroads; and"

Why, let us inquire, were each of the parties of the second part desirous of acquiring by contract the right to use these terminals if they already had that right, as is claimed by counsel for petitioners?

The contract then continues:

> "Whereas, for the protection of the parties hereto and their assigns, it is important that the rights, duties, and liabilities of each in regard to the whole subject-matter of said terminal facilities, including their use, care, control, rental, taxes, expenses, renewals, insurance, and repairs, shall be stated and defined.
> Now, therefore, in consideration of the premises, it is mutually agreed by and between said party of the first part and each of the several parties of the second part (each of said second parties contracting for itself), as follows."

The contract then provides what the defendant company shall do in respect to acquiring further terminal property, improvements thereon, and the amounts which the tenant companies are to pay for the use of the property, and then provides that in consideration thereof the defendant company grants to the said second parties the use of the terminal property.

The contract goes into considerable detail as to how the property is to be managed, etc., not necessary here to refer to; provides how the capital stock of the defendant company shall be distributed among the three railway companies, and then says (section 27, p. 487):

> "Whereas, the parties of the second part have herein and hereby obligated themselves to pay as a part of the compensation for the use of said premises a sum sufficient to pay the interest on the whole number of bonds issued and used, or to be hereafter issued and used by said first party in purchasing, improving and equipping the terminal properties herein described;
> Now, therefore, in consideration of the premises, the said first party hereby contracts and agrees to and with each of the second parties hereto, that it will not at any time hereafter issue or dispose of any of said bonds, except for the purpose of purchasing with them or their proceeds additional terminal property, or for improving or equipping that now owned by it in said City of Des Moines."

Note that the reason given in the contract for limiting the right of the defendant company to issue its bonds is that the parties of the second part had agreed to pay the interest on the bonds. If the parties of the second part thought they were the real owners of this property, they would have been interested in the principal of these bonds rather than in the interest on them. They were not interested in the principal because they were not the owners of the property, and their only obligation with respect to the bonds was the contract obligation to pay the interest.

Another significant thing about this contract is the provisions therein contained with respect to the sale and transfer of the capital stock of the terminal company and the assignment of the rights of either of the three railway companies acquired by the terms of the contract.

It will be remembered that the articles of incorporation of the terminal company placed no restriction on the right of its stockholders to sell and transfer its capital stock, or any part thereof, the result being that any stockholder might freely sell and transfer any portion of his stock. The three railway companies having intended to control the management and operation of the terminal property, the reason for their desiring to in some way limit the right to transfer this stock is apparent. It was therefore provided in section 24 of the contract (p. 485) as follows:

> 'It is understood and agreed that the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, as the owner of one-half of the capital stock of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, may sell and transfer one-half of said stock, or one-quarter of the whole to such railway company as may be acceptable to a majority of the parties of the second part; in which case it is agreed that said railway company which may become the purchaser of said stock, may be admitted as one of the parties hereto, of the second part, upon the same terms and conditions as those stipulated for the other parties of the second part."

It is now contended by petitioners that the terminal company was a "mere agency" for the railway companies, having no valuable interest in the terminal property, and therefore that the stock was "merely nominal and of nominal value." because it represented no valuable interest in the property. If this theory be true, what would any railway company have received in consideration for the money paid for one-half of the terminal stock owned by the Des Moines & St. Louis Company? Merely the right to become a party of the second part to the contract of May 10, 1889, and the possession and ownership of some nicely lithographed pieces of paper. Its rights under the contract of May 10, 1889, would have expired at the end of thirty years from that date. As the owner of the stock, it would have had no rights because, as counsel claim, that didn't represent anything of value.

To illustrate: The record shows that negotiations were subsequenty entered into to sell this stock to the Chicago & North Western Railway Company and secure the entrance of that company on the terminal property. Supposing these negotiations had been successful and after the North Western Company had paid its money for this stock it had been told that this stock didn't represent anything of value and that the only right it gave was the right to become a party of the second part to this contract and the privilege of paying its share of the expenses during the existence of such contract; would the North Western Company have felt that it had been fairly dealt with?

We do not think the persons who were instrumental in these transactions and who conducted these negotiations had any such purpose in their mind, nor can we bring ourselves to think that the Purchasing Committee of the Wabash Company and the others who had relations with the subsequent sale of the stock of the terminal company to the Hubbells, which included Colonel Blodgett, James F. How, Charles M. Hays, and others, had in their minds any purpose of swindling Mr. Hubbell and General Dodge when they sold them stock in the terminal company.

It is apparent from these provisions in the contract, as well as the provisions of section 26 (p. 486), which related to a sale and transfer of stock, that the parties understood that this stock represented a valuable interest in the terminal property.

Again, by section 25 of the contract (p. 486), it was attempted to control the right of each of the three railway companies to assign and transfer the rights which they obtained under the terms of the contract. If we are to believe the present theory of counsel for petitioners the three railway companies didn't obtain any rights under this contract, notwithstanding the fact that the contract purports to grant them rights, because they say that the contract was merely a formality, that it was really an arrangement between the three railway companies to regulate, as between them, the use of the property. But it seems to us that this theory is too absurd to warrant further discussion.

That the present theory of petitioners with relation to their rights in the terminal property never occurred to anyone until the commencement of this suit is demonstrated by the fact that the three railway companies and their successors at all times thereafter, when transferring or mortgaging their interest or rights in the terminal property, described them as their rights acquired under the contract of May 10, 1889, and the contract of July 31, 1897 (the ratification contract), and the capital stock of the terminal company owned by them. And this is particularly true of the mortgage of The Wabash Company executed in 1889 under the guidance of Colonel Blodgett, to which more particular reference will hereafter be made.

What better evidence could we ask of ownership of this property than the contract or statement signed by all the parties immediately or soon after the transaction by which the property was transferred to the defendant company, and a statement drawn by one who not only knew what the understanding was, because he had been a party to the transactions, but who had the capacity to accurately state it?

The contract of January 2, 1882, according to its language, contemplated that the terminal property should be owned by the three railway companies, though the title should stand in the name of a trustee, which might or might not be a corporation. Now what have we up to this point which evidences the fact that these three railway companies intended to and did change their plans from an ownership by the three railway companies, to an ownership by an independent corporation. Briefly stated, the facts are as follows:

1. The organization of a corporation at the instance of these three railway companies for the purpose of, and with the power to, own and operate a terminal railway in the City of Des Moines, Iowa, and with the express power of acquiring by purchase the ownership of the particular terminal in question. This corporation was the defendant, the Des Moines Union Railway Company.

2. The intention expressed prior to the transfer of the ownership of the property, that the Des Moines Union Railway Company should acquire the title to the property. This intention was expressed by the mortgage prepared by Colonel Blodgett on November 1, 1887, from the Des Moines Union Railway Company to the Central Trust Company, and afterward executed by the terminal company.

3. The resolutions of the three railway companies and of the terminal company passed in January, 1885, and November, 1887. These resolutions authorized the transfer of the ownership of the terminal property in consideration of its stock and bonds.

4. The deeds executed and delivered to the Des Moines Union Railway Company in 1888, by the terms of which every possible interest which the parties had in the property was transferred.

5. The payment of the agreed purchase price and delivery of the property.

6. The written statement prepared by Colonel Blodgett and executed by all the parties interested in the property, reciting the fact that the Des Moines Union Railway Company had by these transactions acquired the ownership of the property. This written statement was contained in the written contract of May 10, 1889.

This evidence is not the oral evidence of witnesses who attempt to state their recollections of transactions happening a quarter of a century prior to the time of the giving of their evidence, but consists of the solemn and formally executed instruments at the tme the transactions occurred and about which there is no controversy.

If there is, however, any lingering doubt in the mind of the court as to the effect of the transaction in which this property was transferred to the defendant company, let us examine a transaction which occurred in the early part of the year 1890—less than two years after the property was delivered to the defendant company, and in which the actors were the same persons who had been active in the management of not only the terminal property, but of the interests of the other railroads therein from the very beginning, and who, if anybody, knew and appreciated the situation. This transaction was the amendment to the articles of incorporation of the defendant company which was consummated on April 8, 1890.

AMENDMENTS TO ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF DES MOINES UNION RAILWAY COMPANY.

The complainants challenge the validity and effect of these amendments—a subject which we will discuss in a subsequent division of our brief—but for the present we are only inquiring as to the intention of the parties to the transaction by which this property was transferred to the defendant company, and for the present we will only consider the record in respect to these amendments for that purpose.

These amendments were adopted at an adjourned meeting of the stockholders of the Des Moines Union Railway Company held on April 8, 1890. A record of that meeting appears in volume II, commencing on page 488. There were present, among others, James F. How, Vice-President of the Wabash Company, and who had been intimately connected with this terminal transaction as a representative of the Wabash Company since its inception; C. M. Hays, who was general manager of the Wabash Company and had been with that company since 1883; A. B. Cummins, who was local attorney for the Wabash Company in Des Moines and represented it on the board of directors of the defendant company, and who was also general counsel for the defendant company. G. M. Dodge and Wells

H. Blodgett were both present by proxy, the former being represented by L. M. Martin, and the latter by J. F. How. Both General Dodge and Colonel Blodgett signed and acknowledged the amendment to the articles after they were authorized. There were also present F. M. Hubbell, L. M. Martin and F. C. Hubbell, all of whom had been familiar with the terminal proposition either from the beginning or during its early stages. these parties knew what was intended by the transactions under consideration, and they were all honorable, able and upright men.

After the organization of the meeting, C. M. Hays moved that article 2 of the original articles be stricken out and that there be enacted in lieu thereof the following (p. 490):

"Article 2.

The object of the corporation and the general nature of the business to be transacted shall be the purchase, lease, construction, ownership, maintenance and operation of a system of railway in, around and about the City of Des Moines, Polk County, Iowa, including the construction, purchase, ownership, maintenance and use of a union depot, depots, freight houses, railway shops, repair shops, stock yards and whatever other things may be useful or convenient for the operation of railways at terminal stations, as well as the transfer and switching of cars from the line or depot of one railway to another, or from the various manufactories, warehouses, elevators or other sources of traffic to each other or to any of the railways or depots thereof, now constructed or hereafter to be constructed in or around said City of Des Moines, and also to lease terminal facilities to and furnish and perform terminal services for all railways whose lines reach or pass through or near the said

City of Des Moines, and the corporation shall possess all the power conferred upon railway corporations by the laws of the State of Iowa, including the power to condemn private property for its use."

This motion was adopted and thereby there was stricken out of the article all reference to the contract of January 2, 1882, and thereby the thought that it was intended that the defendant company should acquire absolute title to the property is corroborated.

L. M. Martin moved that article 3 be stricken out and the following enacted in lieu thereof (p. 490):

"Article 3.

'The capital stock of the corporation shall be two million dollars ($2,000,000.00) which shall be divided into shares of one hundred dollars each; said shares shall be paid for and issued in the manner following and not otherwise; four thousand shares as a part of the purchase price of the terminal property originally acquired by the corporation, it being now agreed by all the stockholders that said sum of four hundred thousand dollars, together with the first mortgage bonds theretofore issued for that purpose constituting the fair value of said property when so acquired; and all resolutions and proceedings of the corporation heretofore had with respect to the amount of capital stock to be issued as such purchase price, are set aside and held for naught.

Said four thousand shares of capital stock shall be issued to the following corporations and in the following proportions:

Two thousand shares to the Purchasing Committee of the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company, successor in ownership to the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, and the present owner of the property known as the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad.

One thousand shares to the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company, successor to the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company, and

One thousand shares to the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company, successor to the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, and the said shares are hereby declared to be fully paid by the transfer of the aforesaid property. The remaining capital stock, to-wit: sixteen thousand shares, or any part thereof, shall be issued ony by the authority of a resolution of the stockholders adopted by the vote of more than seven-eighths of all the stock theretofore issued and shall be fully paid either in money or property at its fair market value, before certificates therefor shall be executed and delivered."

This resolution was unanimously adopted by all present and language could not be conceived more appropriate to express the thought that the defendant company had acquired an absolute title to this property in consideration of the bonds and stock issued.

In order to protect the companies in the control of the defendant company through their stockholding interest, article 4, as amended, provided that the affairs of the company should be managed by a board of eight directors, but that at all future elections of directors it shall require the vote of more than seven-eighths of all the stock theretofore issued, to elect any director. Thus no new directors can be elected without the unanimous consent of all stockholders holding five hundred or more shares of the capital stock. This article also provided that in all matters other than the ordinary operation of the property, the board of directors can only act upon the unanimous vote of eight members thereof, and gives the power to each director to delegate by written authority some other person to vote for him. The other amendments to the articles are immaterial for the purposes for which we are now considering them, except article 15 (p. 494), which provides as follows:

> "The proceedings of a meeting held December 10, 1884, with certain preambles, including a contract executed on the 2nd day of January, 1882, between the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company and the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, consented to by the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company, which now appears as part of the Articles of Incorporation of this Company, are hereby repealed, stricken out and expunged."

It is interesting to note that the only reference to the contract of January 2, 1882, to be found in the record, from May 1, 1888, up to the time of the commencement of this suit (almost twenty years) is the reference found in the record of this meeting of April 8, 1890, when it was formally revoked.

The contract of January 2, 1882, could not, of course, be changed or abrogated by third parties. It was in that sense inviolate, but it was not any more than any other contract immutable and irrevocable by the unanimous agreement and action of the parties themselves. And here we have in these amendments to the articles of the Des Moines Union, an absolute revocation of the contract and the action making the revocation—the amendment to the articles—is not the action of the Des Moines Union itself, but of its stockholders, and they are the parties and all the parties (or successors in right and title), to the original contract.

In addition to adopting the amendment to the articles of incorporation and authorizing their filing and publication, the following resolution, offered by A. B. Cummins, was passed by a unanimous vote of all the directors present: (P. 494.)

> "Whereas, by inadvertence, there appears to be some uncertainty in the records of the Company respecting the purchase price of the terminal property originally acquired by the company, and
>
> Whereas, it was the agreement between all the parties in interest that said property, including the franchise incident thereto, should be purchased at its fair value, payable partly in first mortgage bonds and partly in capital stock fully paid up, and
> Whereas, it was and is agreed that said property was fairly worth the sum of eight hundred sixty-one thousand two hundred and fifty-seven and 21-100 dollars, of which purchase price the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company or its representative, the purchasing committee, the said purchasing committee being now the real owner of the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad, together were and are entitled to four hundred and seventy thousand one hundred and ten and 80-100 dollars ($470,110.80) of said purchase price, the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company was entitled to two hundred and fifteen thousand and fifty-eight and 40-100 dollars ($215,058.40) of said purchase price, the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company was entitled to one hundred thousand dollars ($100,000.00) of said purchase price. G. M. Dodge to seventy-four thousand and eighty-eight and 01-100 dollars ($74,088,- 01) of said purchase price and Polk & Hubbell to two thousand dollars ($2,000.00) of said purchase price, and

Whereas, by a settlement heretofore had and now confirmed, it appeared that of such purchase price the purchasing committee of the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company, being the real owner of the railroad known as the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad, has received two hundred and seventy (270) bonds of one thousand dollars each. G. M. Dodge seventy-four bonds; Polk & Hubbell two (2) bonds and the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company, successor of the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company, one hundred and fifteen (115) bonds, making in all four hundred and sixty-one bonds, and as a further part of such purchase price the company has paid to the purchasing committee, G. M. Dodge and the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company two hundred and fifty-seven and 21-100 dollars in cash, and

Whereas, there still remains four hundred thousand dollars ($400,000.00) of the purchase price of said property yet unpaid, which sum is to be paid in capital stock, and

Whereas, by agreement between the several persons and corporations owning the said property prior to the said transfer, so much of the purchase price as was to be paid in capital stock was to be divided among three corporations, to-wit: one-half to the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, one-quarter to the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company and one-quarter to the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company, and

Whereas, the purchasing committee of the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company is now the owner of the property of the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, including its proportion of stock, and the Des Moines & Northern Railway Company is now the owner of the property of the

St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, including its proportion of said stock, and the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company is now the owner of the property of the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company, including its proportion of said stock, and

Whereas, the articles of incorporation have been amended so as to conform to the true intent of the several parties,

First. That the purchase price of the property originally acquired by the company, as above stated, be fixed at said sum of eight hundred sixty-one thousand two hundred fifty-seven and 21-100 ($861,257.21) dollars as of the date of the conveyance thereof.

Second. That the payment of a portion of such purchase price in first mortgage bonds, as above set forth, be confirmed and approved.

Third. That to complete the payment of such purchase price, the President and Secretary are hereby authorized to issue certificates for thirty-nine hundred and ninety-two (3992) shares of stock, which shares, including eight already issued on behalf of said parties, aggregate four thousand (4,000) shares, as follows:

To the purchasing committee of the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Raiway Company, nineteen hundred and ninety-six (1996) shares.

To the Des Moines & Northern Railway Company nine hundred and ninety-eight (998) shares, and to the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company nine hundred and ninety-eight (998) shares.

Fourth. That the proceedings heretofore had respecting the issuance of capital stock, so far as such proceedings are inconsistent with said amendments to the articles of incorporation or with this resolution, are hereby modified to conform heretofore."

This resolution and preamble were unanimously adopted by all the stockholders present. We have therefore set out here in detail the understanding of all the persons who were active in the transactions under consideration and in whose mind there is apparently no question but that the defendant company purchased something with its more than $861,000.00 which it paid, and that something which it purchased was the terminal property.

Not only was this the expression of the persons who were present at this meeting, but this was the expression of the railway companies themselves, who, as successors of the original parties to the contract, were present, because this was a stockholders meeting and this was the act of the stockholders, among whom were numbered these railroads, and not the act of the Des Moines Union Railway Company as a separate identity. But upon this thought we will enlarge in another division of our argument.

These amendments were adopted with great deliberation after full notice and information to all in anywise concerned. They seem to have originated with Mr. Cummins, who at the time was counsel for the Wabash, for the Des Moines Union, and for General Dodge, who was virtually the owner of the Des Moines and Northern. He suggested the need of amendments at the meeting of stockholders of the Des Moines Union on January 3, 1890. On January 22d he wrote to Col. Blodgett concerning the matter and proposed a conference. He discussed the matter with Mr. Hays, who was general manager of the Wabash. On January 27th he wrote to General Dodge enclosing a copy of the proposed amendments and discussing them. He spoke to Mr. Hubbell, who at first was opposed to them. (Rec., Vol. III, pp. 1210 to 1214.) Mr. Cummins, who testifies to this, produces the letters written by him at the time. And the records of the Company show the facts in greater detail.

At the meeting of January 3d Mr. How, then Vice-President of the Wabash, and Mr. Hays, General Manager of the Wabash, were present as Wabash representatives. Mr. How moved and it was carried "that the question of amending the articles of incorporation of this Company, as well as the question concerning the issuing of stock for the purchase price of the terminal property, be referred to attorneys, W. H. Blodgett and A. B. Cummins for their investigation and recommendation." (Rec., Vol. IV, p. 1307.) General Dodge presided at this meeting. He represented the Des Moines and Northern. F. M. Hubbell was present representing the Des Moines and Northwestern. Thus the three railway companies were all represented. The meeting adjourned to February 18th.

At the adjourned meeting Dodge, How, Hays and Blodgett were represented by proxy. The Secretary reported that he had notified each stockholder of the meeting and that amendments to the articles of incorporation would be offered. Mr. Cummins presented the amendments. On motion of Mr. Hubbell the meeting was adjourned to April 8th to give further opportunity to examine the amendments. (Rec., Vol. IV, p. 1311.)

At the April meeting the Wabash representatives present were How and Hays. Col. Blodgett was represented by proxy as was General Dodge. Mr. How presided. The remaining railroad representatives were present in person. At this meeting one by one the amendments were adopted. (Rec., Vol. II, pp. 488 et seq.)

Thus it was not until more than three months after the matter was broached and after every stockholder had had months of notice that the final action was taken. It will not now serve to say that they knew not what they did.

And when these articles were amended everybody in interest knew that stock of the Des Moines Union had on February 5, 1890, been sold to individuals, five hundred shares to General Dodge and the same number to F. M. Hubbell. At the directors' meeting of the Des Moines Union held on the same day as the stockholders' meeting Mr. Hays moved and the Board adopted the following resolution:

> "Resolved, That the shares of the capital stock of this corporation of the par value of fifty thousand dollars sold by the Purchasing Committee of the Wabash St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company to F. M. Hubbell, which sale has been ratified by the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroaad Companay, be approved and the transfer thereof to said Hubbell upon the books of the company be and the same is hereby ordered." (Rec. vol. IV, p. 1312.)

A like resolution respecting the sale of shares to General Dodge was offered by Mr. Cummins and was adopted.

Thus the amendments in questions were made with full knowledge that shares of stock of the Des Moines Union were held by individuals as well as by railway companies. This was in harmony with the laws of Iowa and by all concerned was regarded as consonant with the purpose of the parties in respect of the terminal property.

THE ISSUE, SALE AND TRANSFER OF THE CAPITAL STOCK OF THE DES MOINES UNION RAILWAY COMPANY.

The disposition of the capital stock which was issued by the defendant company in part payment for the terminal is important not only as bearing upon the intention of the parties in relation to title to the property, but also on the issue of estoppel which is set up in the defendants' answer.

It will be remembered that by the terms of its original articles, the defendant's capital stock was fixed at $1,000,000.00, all of which it was contemplated should be issued in payment for the terminal property. Likewise, the resolutions of January 1, 1885, authorizing the transfer of the ownership of the terminal property to the defendant, contemplated that defendant would issue its capital stock in payment therefor to the persons or corporations entitled thereto, who were presumably the three railroads parties to the contract of January 2, 1882, and this would be in the following proportions:

One-half to the Des Moines & St. Louis;

One-fourth to the Des Moines Northwestern;

One-fourth to the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern.

In considering this issue, it is well to keep in mind that the Wabash Company was the owner of all the stock and bonds of the Des Moines & St. Louis Company and of one-half of the stock and all the bonds of the Des Moines Northwestern Company. It was also the lessee in perpetuity of the roads of these two companies. The result was that these two roads were substantially Wabash properties and they were in fact so treated by the Wabash Company. It is also well to keep in mind that General Dodge advanced all the money to build the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern line, and a considerable part of the money to acquire the terminal property. As we have heretofore stataed, the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company became insolvent and its property placed in the hands of a receiver about 1884, in a proceeding to foreclose a general mortgage given by that company. In the process of this foreclosure proceeding a purchasing committee composed of James F. Joy, Ossian D. Ashley, Thomas H. Hubbard and Edgar T. Welles, and representing the bondholders of the Wabash Company, was organized, who acquired title by foreclosure sale to all of the property of the Wabash Company, including the interest of that company in the Des Moines & St. Louis and the Des Moines Northwestern companies in the early part of 1886. (See deed Mercantile Trust Company to Purchasing Committee, Vol. II, pp. 706-8, and deed Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company to Purchasing Committee, Vol. II, pp. 536-42.)

This Purchasing Committee as alleged in the amended bill of complaint had power under the agreement creating it to purchase and hold all of the mortgaged property * * * "It being provided in said agreement that said Purchasing Committee might, after the foreclosure of said mortgaged properties, dispose of the same in such manner as they might deem to be for the best interests of the holders and owners of said bonds, or organize or cause to be organized new corporations to take title to and operate said railroad properties for the use and benefit of said bondholders." (Rec., Vol. I, pp. 63 and 64.)

On October 9, 1886, the firm of Polk & Hubbell of Des Moines entered into a written contract with the Purchasing Committee (Vol. IV, pp. 1573-4), by which the latter agreed to secure title to the railroad of the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company by foreclosure of the trust deed thereon, and sell the same, including "a one-fourth interest in the terminal property at Des Moines," to Polk & Hubbell for $450,000.00, the same to be paid in first mortgage bonds secured by a mortgage on that part of the "railway lying between Farnham Street" (the western limits of the terminal property) "and the Town of Fonda." This agreement was ratified by the directors of the Wabash Company (Ex. 264, Vol. IV, pp. 1574-5).

On September 10, 1887, the Purchasing Committee and Polk & Hubbell entered into a supplemental agreement with respect to this (Vol. IV, pp. 1575-6). One of the purposes of this supplemental contract was to provide that Polk & Hubbell should further secure the $450,000.00 to be paid to the Purchasing Committee, by giving them a lien upon the one-fourth interest in the terminal property. This provision in the contract reads as follows (p. 1576):

> "Simultaneously with the conveyance above mentioned of one-fourth interest in the terminal property at Des Moines, the same shall be mortgaged back to the purchasing committee for the further security of the said $450,000. In case, however, the terminal property at Des Moines shall be merged in a terminal company either before or after the transfer of one-fourth interest as above, the bonds and stock received from the Terminal Company in exchange for said one-fourth interest shall be transferred in lieu of the property to Messrs. Polk & Hubbell, or their assignees."

By the terms of this contract the purchasing committee retained the option of doing either one of two things in carrying out the contract by which they agreed to transfer to Polk & Hubbell "a one-fourth interest in the terminal property at Des Moines;" either,

First. Transfer to Polk & Hubbell a one-fourth interest in the terminal property itself; or

Second. In the event "the terminal property at Des Moines shall be merged in a terminal company either before or after the transfer of one-fourth interest as above," to transfer to Polk & Hubbell "the bonds and stock received from the Terminal Company in exchange for said one-fourth interest * * * in lieu of the property."

Now it is perfectly clear that a transfer of the stock and bonds of the Terminal Company could not be "in lieu of the property" unless the Terminal Company acquired a good title to the property. This contract was made September 10, 1887, less than two months prior to the time we find Colonel Blodgett in St. Louis preparing the mortgage of the Terminal Company reciting the fact that the Terminal Company has acquired and owns the terminal property. It shows clearly what was in the minds of the parties as to the disposition of the title and ownership of the terminal property. They were looking forward to transferring the title and ownership to the Terminal Company.

In carrying out this contract there was a delivery of one-fourth of the stock and bonds of the defendant company "in lieu of" one-fourth of the terminal property (testimony of F. M. Hubbell, Vol. III, pp. 1007-9).

On February 5, 1890, F. M. Hubbell contracted to purchase of the "purchasing committee" certain bonds and a one-fourth interest in the capital stock of the Des Moines Union Railway Company (Ex. 297, Vol. IV, p. 1599). Immediately following the making of this contract it was agreed between Mr. Hubbell and General Dodge that the latter should participate in the purchase of the stock and bonds (testimony of F. M. Hubbell, Vol. III, pp. 1009-10). This was followed by making separate contracts with the purchasing committee (testimony of F. M. Hubbell last above referred to, and Exs. 298-300, Vol. IV, pp. 1600-2). This sale of stock was ratified at a meeting of the board of directors of the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, held April 8, 1890 (Ex. 185, Vol. IV, p. 1434). The purchasing committee accounted to the complainant, the Wabash Railroad Company, for the money paid by Hubbell and Dodge for this stock (Vol. IV, p. 1543, at top of page, and Ex. 244, Vol. IV, p. 1558). Now, what did the purchasing committee, the Wabash Company and the Des Moines & St. Louis Company intend to sell Messrs. Hubbel and Dodge when they took and retained their money for stock in the defendant company? Did they intend thereby to transfer to them a valuable interest in the terminal property, or were they simply intending to transfer some nicely lithographed paper which didn't represent anything? The natural inference is that they intended to transfer something of value, and if they had any other intention they did not advise Hubbell or Dodge of it. Did they act intelligently? The purchasing committee owned and had for years owned and managed the Wabash property. The persons present at the meeting of the directors of the Des Moines & St. Louis Company which ratified the sale of this stock were James F. How, vice-president of the Wabash Company; C. M. Hays, general manager of the Wabash Company;

A. B. Cummins, local attorney for the Wabash Company; F. M. Hubbell, H. S. Priest, general attorney for the Wabash Company, and George S. Grover, assistant general attorney for the Wabash Company (Vol. III, pp. 1011-12). Certainly these people knew what was intended by the transaction which culminated in the transfer of the terminal property to the defendant company.

Again on June 5, 1890, Mr. Hubbell made a contract with the purchasing committee by which he bought $50,000.00 of the Des Moines Union bonds and 500 shares of Des Moines Union stock for $57,736.00 (Vol. IV, p. 1613). The bonds at this time were worth about ninety cents on the dollar (Ex. 248, Vol. IV, p. 1561). This sale of stock was ratified by a resolution of the board of directors of the Des Moines & St. Louis Company on February 11, 1891 (Ex. 187, Vol. IV, p. 1437). The money paid for these bonds and this stock came into the hands of the purchaing committee (Vol. IV, p. 1560), and the committee accounted to the complainant, the Wabash Company, for the same (Vol. IV, p. 1543).

Does it now lie in the mouth of the Wabash Company to say that this stock was not intended to represent any valuable interest in the terminal property, when its predecessor, the purchasing committee, sold it to Hubbell for a valuable consideration, which consideration passed to the Wabash Company which now retains it? It can only represent a valuable interest in the terminal property if the Terminay Company acquired a good title to the property.

In this connection see the letter of O. D. Ashley, president of the Wabash Company, and one of the purchasing committee, to Mr. Hubbell, of April 5, 1890

(Vol. IV, pp. 1602-3), in which, speaking of the proposed sale of this second 500 shares of stock in the defendant company, which it will be remembered left in the hands of the purchasing committee one-eighth of such capital stock, Mr. Ashley says:

> "It must be understood, of course, that a one-eighth interest in the capital stock shall be sufficient to represent a proprietorship in the company according to the understanding we had when you were here."

The capital stock could not represent a proprietorship unless the corporation owned the property.

On January 15, 1892, all the capital stock of the defendant company held by the Des Moines & Northwestern, the Des Moines & Northern, F. M. Hubbell, and General Dodge, aggregating 3,500 shares (except a few shares standing in the name of the directors), was transferred to the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railway Company (Vol. II, p. 711), a consolidation of the Des Moines & Northern and the Des Moines & Northwestern companies.

On October 4, 1893, the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railway Company pledged 2,500 of these shares of stock in the Des Moines Union Company to F. M. Hubbell & Son to secure certain indebtedness to that firm (Vol. IV, pp. 1480-1), and on January 29, 1894, it sold this same stock to F. M. Hubbell & Son in satisfaction of certain indebtedness (Vol. IV, pp. 1482-3). At this last meeting there were present the following stockholders of the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railway Company: F. M. Hubbell, L. M. Martin, A. B. Cummins, A. N. Denman and H. D. Thompson, who constituted all the stockholders of that company except General Dodge, who held 5,000 shares; W. R. Warfield, who held 50 shares, and F. C. Hubbell, who held one share. F. C. Hubbell is a defendant in this suit and is not complaining; W. R. Warfield has never complained, and General Dodge was told of this sale within a few days thereafter and ratified it (Vol. III, pp. 1017-8). This stock was transferred on the books of the defendant company to F. M. Hubbell & Son on October 4, 1893, and has ever since stood in that name.

The first interest, either direct or indirect, which the complainant, the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company, acquired in the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railway Company was by virtue of the two contracts of March 15, 1894 (Ex. 80, Vol. II, p. 838; Vol. IV, p. 1618), which were not, however, executed until several months after that date and to which we will make more extended reference in another division of our argument. Prior to this the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul was advised in writing that the Des Moines, Northern & Western Company owned only 1,000 shares of stock in the defendant company and that five-eighths of the stock was owned by individuals (Vol. IV, p. 1617).

The letter is as follows:

"February 22, '94.

Mr. Roswell Miller, President,
Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company, Chicago, Ill.

Dear Sir:—

Your favor of the 20th is received and noted. Enclosed I send you a copy of the Articles of Consolidation and Incorporation and Trust Mortgage of the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railway Company. There has been bonds issued on this property to the amount of $2,770,000. I have no printed copy of the articles of incorporation of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, but will say they were drawn by our attorney, Mr. A. B. Cummins, and I think are all right, and if important to you, can have a copy made and sent you. The amount of bonds authorized by that corporation is $800,000, bearing 5 per cent interest, of which amount $612,000 have been issued. I enclose plat of Des Moines Union. We have about five miles of right of way occupied by about twenty miles of track. The Des Moines, Northern & Western Railway Company own one-fourth of the capital stock of the Des Moines Union Railway Company. The Wabash owns one-eighth and five-eighths is owned by individuals.

If you desire any further information I shall be glad to furnish it.

Yours truly,
(Signed) F. M. Hubbell,
President."

It therefore appears without controversy that the defendant company issued in payment for this property $400,000.00 of its fully paid capital stock, all of which went to the predecessors of the complainants; that their predecessors sold five-eighths of this stock for money, upon the theory that it represented a valuable interest in the property, and that this money is still retained by complainants. So far as the predecessors of the Wabash were concerned, they were either honest or dishonest. If they were honest, they intended that Hubbell and Dodge, when they bought this stock, should get something for their money, which intention necessarily involves the thought that the Terminal Company held a good title to the property. If they were dishonest, their successors have received the money and have no standing in this Court. We prefer to think they were honest, and there is nothing in the record to lead us to think otherwise.

So far as the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Company is concerned, their predecessors thought they were parting with something of value when they disposed of this stock, and that company acquired its interest with full understanding of the situation.

At the end of this argument will be found two diagrams—one showing the various changes in the ownership of the capital stock, and one showing the transfers of the capital stock.

It will no doubt be said, as it has been, that there was a great disparity between the value of this stock and the price paid for it. Nothing could be further from the fact at the time. The three railway enterprises had culminated in disaster, as indicated by the multiplicity of foreclosure shown by the record. They could none of them pay the interest on their bonded debt. Take, for example, the Des Moines Northwestern. It had a narrow gauge line from Des Moines to Fonda, a distance of about 113 miles, and it had a one-fourth interest in the Des Moines terminal property. The line of railroad, not the terminal interest, was mortgaged to secure $800,000.00 of general Wabash bonds. So early as 1887 it was in arrears for interest upon this debt in the sum of $300,000.00, showing that it had never paid a penny of return on the investment. The Wabash virtually owned this property, but it was a burden and not a benefit. The purchasing committee made an agreement with Polk and Hubbell which came to this: the railroad was to be cleared by foreclosure proceedings of all its old burdens and turned over to them, together with one-fourth interest in the terminal property, or the equivalent in stocks and bonds of the Terminal Company if one was formed. Polk and Hubbell were to pay for this by bonding the railroad for $450,000.00 and turning over the bonds to the purchasing committee. They were not to incur any personal liability. In other words, the bonded debt and interest was scaled down more than 54 per cent, and then with the terminal interest given to Polk and Hubbell. Nor was this all. A little later the bonded debt was scaled down to $400,000.00, which F. M. Hubbell agreed personally to pay, as follows: $112,000.00 in terminal bonds, which he had gotten in the purchase, and the remainder in his individual notes, so that he got the railroad and one-fourth of the stock of the Terminal Company for $288,000.00.

A Terminal Company serving three railroads of this kind as its principal business, and bound to render that service at cost was not a very promising institution. The only chance for value in its stock in view of the contract of 1880 was in what are called "surplus earnings," as to which we will speak presently.

General Dodge was identified with railroad construction and operation all his life, and so was optimistic with respect to such enterprises and capable of appreciating their value. And he was interested in these Des Moines roads from the beginning. What did he think of this terminal stock? In 1894, after the Hubbells had acquired the stock, they now hold from the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Company, a large block of whose shares the General held, Mr. Hubbell met him and showed him the record of the transaction and told him "that Hubbell & Son had bought this (terminal) stock of the company, and he expressed himself satisfied." And Mr. Hubbell offered to let him have an interest in the stock with him, but he said he did not want it. "He said he thought it would be valuable at some time, but he did not want to invest in it." (Rec., Vol. III, p. 1018.)

The "surplus earnings" were revenues derived from the rent of property not immediately required for railroad uses, and payments for switching services rendered, not under contract, for other outside railroad companies and for transportation over the terminal lines. At the beginning they were insignificant and negligible.

There was no issue as to these which called for a full and detailed showing, but there is enough in the record to show substantially what they were. We submit what is shown, omitting cents.

There is no showing for the period from December 1, 1891, to January 1, 1898. For the years following,

Not one dollar of these earnings was distributed as dividends. The money, $200,000.00, explicitly shown, and the revenues for eight years not so shown, was applied to improvements of and additions to the property, the remainder $176,715.00 appearing and being carried as "surplus earnings" at the time the evidence closes.

The evidence shows conclusively that these surplus earnings, insignificant at first, increased after the Hubbells acquired their stock, slowly at the beginning and more rapidly later as the terminal properties were improved and expanded, and as the City of Des Moines grew and the volume of its business increased, and during this period of eighteen years, covered by the evidence, the enterprise was in the charge of the Hubbells, the father as secretary and the son as president, the father giving much of his time, and the son most of his to their official duties, and this without salaries, and with no other compensation than would in the future come to them as to the other stockholders from the increased welfare and prosperity of the enterprise in which they were embarked.

When the Wabash purchasing committee sold this stock its value was problematical and entirely speculative. If the future was as the past it was worth nothing. They preferred the price for which they sold at the time. Now that the future has justified the faith of the Hubbells, they want to regain the property they sold and to retain the price for which they sold it.

Ever since May 1, 1888, the terminal property has been treated by everybody as the absolute property of the defendant company.

The defendant company took possession of the property on May 1, 1888, and has ever since possessed and operated it.

The corporate action of the defendant company from the time of its organization to January 8, 1909, in so far as it does not appear in complainants' testimony, appears in defendants' exhibits, volume IV, pages 1297 to 1413. We do not intend at this time to refer to it in detail. Its examination will disclose the undisputed fact that at all times the defendant treated this property as its own. It bought the original terminal property and paid for it. It acquired other property, took the title in its own name in fee simple; improved the property on its own motion and according to its own ideas, and paid for it with its own money. It elected its own directors and its own officers, made its own contracts, and in every way conducted its own business. At no time did the defendant do a single act recognizing any rights of the complainants or their predecessors in the property, except the rights which they possessed by reason of their stock interest. In examining this record, bear in mind that at all times there was on the board of directors of the defendant company one or more persons representing the stock of the complainant, the Wabash Company or its predecessors, and two or more directors representing the stock interests of the complainant, the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company, or its predecessors.

But the interesting question is, how has this property been treated by the complainants and their predecessors since May 1, 1888?

First, as to the Wabash Company (and in considering this it is interesting to note how this property was treated by the Wabash Company before and after May 1, 1888, and to note what, if any, change is apparent in its relation to the property at that date):

At a meeting of the executive committee of the Wabash Company, held December 26, 1882 (Ex. 227, Vol. IV, p. 1529), a resolution was passed authorizing the transfer to the Mercantile Trust Company of New York of certain property to secure certain indebtedness, and among the property scheduled is "Real Estate in Des Moines, $300,000."

At a meeting of the purchasing committee, held August 6, 1886 (Ex. 240, Vol. IV, p. 1555), the terminal property in Des Moines is referred to as follows:

> "And the sale to include only one-quarter of the terminal property formerly owned by the Wabash Railway Company and General Dodge; this sale leaving the purchasing committee or the new Wabash Company in possession and ownership of one-half of said terminal property."

We have already shown how Polk & Hubbell in October, 1886, made a contract with the purchasing committee to purchase the property of the Des Moines Northwestern Company and "a one-fourth interest in the terminal property at Des Moines" (Ex. 263, Vol. IV, p. 1573), and how in a supplemental contract the purchasing committee had secured the option of delivering "in lieu of" the property, one-fourth of the stock and bonds of the terminal company.

Under date of February 25, 1888, Mr. Charles M. Hays, general manager of the Wabash Western Railway Company, made his annual report, whcih was embodied in the annual report presented to the stockholders on March 13, 1888, as follows (Ex. 229, Vol. IV, p. 1532):

> "There has also been erected during the year an addition of fifteen stalls to roundhouse at Moberly at a cost of.....$15,625.79
> Fifteen-stall roundhouse at Des Moines, Iowa (which will be conveyed, with other property at that point, to the Des Moines Union Railway Co.).....$12,472.96"

Thus it appears that prior to the execution and delivery of the deeds to the Terminal Company, the terminal property is referred to and treated by the parties as property of the Wabash Company, although the title to most of it stood in the name of trustees.

A very different attitude is shown on the part of this complainant and its predecessors in relation to this property after May 1, 1888.

On March 5, 1889, Mr. How writes to F. M. Hubbell (Ex. 290, Vol. IV, p. 1595) as follows:

> "I am in receipt of your letter of Mar. 2nd. As the property referred to in your letter now be- longs to the Des Moines Union Ry. Co., I think that Co. should pay the interest on the mortgage and will also arrange to take care of the principal. The last payment of interest was made in the month of Jan'y, 1886."

Again on April 1, 1889, he writes (Ex. 292, Vol. IV, p. 1596):

"I have just returned from the East and am in receipt of your letter of the 23d ult. I think that the interest due on the deed of trust on the lot owned by the Terminal Co. referred to in your letter should be paid and an arrangement made to continue the deed of trust on the property at a lower rate of interest. Of course the interest now due and to become due should be paid by the Terminal Co."

Again he writes to Polk & Hubbell under date June 28, 1889 (Ex. 294, Vol. IV, p. 1597):

"I am in receipt of yours of June 26th calling attention to certain bills for delinquent taxes on railroad property in Des Moines. Any such bills that are a lien on the property transferred to the Des Moines Union Ry. Co. should be paid by that Co., all the property having been bought for that Co. and since been transferred to it.

I am also in receipt of a letter from Mr. Hubbell of same date referring to your letter and speaking of a similar tax certificate held by him on the same property. Will you please show this letter to him."

These letters were written very shortly after the transfer of the property, and were written by James F. How, who had been the moving spirit in this matter during all the years since 1881, who knew the intent of the transaction, and he seems to have no doubt as to who owned this property.

We have already shown the facts in relation to the amendments to the articles of incorporation of the defendant company of April 8, 1890, and the resolutions passed that day with respect to the title to this property and the payment of the purchase price therefor by the defendant company, and the part which was taken in the same by James F. How, vice-president; Charles M. Hays, general manager ,and Wells H. Blodgett, general counsel of the Wabash Company, all of whom were familiar with the transaction, were active in promoting the terminal organization, and knew what was intended.

Again on May 20, 1890, Mr. How wrote Mr. Hubbell as follows (Ex. 304, Vol. IV, p. 1612):

> "I am just in receipt of yours of the 17th, giving list of certain property that you have purchased in Des Moines, which you offer to sell to the Des Moines Union Raiway Company at the price you paid for same, with interest from the date of purchase, said offer to be accepted at any time within thirty days of the date of your letter. As I understand it, this question will have to be acted upon by the board of directors of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, and I suppose your letter is written with the idea of ascertaining how Mr. Hays and myself would vote on the question at such a meeting. It is our opinion that your offer should be accepted, provided the Des Moines Union Railway Company can pay for the property in their bonds at par, with accrued interest."

This doesn't sound as though Mr. How had in mind that the ownership of this property was in the complainants or their predecessors.

On June 6, 1890, General Dodge wrote Mr. Hubbell as follows (Ex. 305a, Vol. IV, p. 1614):

> "I duly received yours of May 17th in re. property you have bought at Des Moines. I would like to have you send me a map showing this property. I think the Des Moines Union Railway Co. should take it as soon as they can raise the money to do so on their bonds."

Note the letters of Charles M. Hays to Mr. Hubbell, dated April 28, 1892, and April 22, 1893 (Exs. 306-7, Vol. IV, pp. 1616-7), in the latter of which he says:

> "While it seems to me that it is desirable that the lot should be owned by the Des Moines Union Company, we are not in such position that we feel we can conveniently advance the amount that would be chargeable to us on usual basis for distributing the expense of such purchase. I think since you are now the largest holder in Des Moines Union bonds and stock, you should sell the lot to the company and take bonds at par for same. As a director of the Des Moines Union Company I am willing to approve getting lot in this way, but I am not willing to approve of it on basis of each company contributing its proportion of the purchase price and taking bonds therefor."

If the Hubbell stock-holding interest was intended to be of no value to him, why should he sell the lot to the company and take its bonds therefor?

There will be found among defendants' exhibits voluminous correspondence passing between the defendant company and the Wabash Company and its predecessors, covering the period from May 1, 1888, to the time of the commencement of this suit. It would unnecessarily extend this argument to refer to this correspondence in detail. With respect to it we desire to say that there isn't a single letter passing between the parties in this period of twenty-three years which does not either tacitly or expressly recognize the absolute ownership of the defendant company, and no intimation at any time that the Wabash Railroad Company or its predecessors claimed any interest in the property whatever, except that to which it was entitled by reason of its being the owner of some of the defendant's shares of stock. We will content ourselves with here calling attention to a few of the more solemn and formal acts of the Wabash Company and its predecessors, which show conclusively that no claim was made to any interest in this property other than the stock-holding interest.

CORPORATE ACTS OF WABASH COMPANY.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company held in New York on March 16, 1899, there were present the following persons: O. D. Ashley, Edgar T. Welles, Cyrus J. Lawrence, Thomas H. Hubbard and J. C. Otteson. Ashley, it will be remembered, was president of the Wabash Company, and he with Edgar T. Welles and Thomas H. Hubbard had been three of the members of the purchasing committee. Otteson was secretary of the Wabash Company. These persons were familiar with the history of the terminal property and the intention of the parties with respect thereto. At this meeting (see Ex. 192, Vol. IV, pp. 1446-9), a resolution was passed authorizing the execution of a deed from the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company to the complainant, the Wabash Company, of the property of the former company, which was described in the resolution and in the deed so authorized as follows (pp. 1448-9):

> "commencing at a point in or near the City of Des Moines, where said road connects with the tracks of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, and extending from thence in a southeasterly direction through the counties of Polk, Marion and Monroe to the town or City of Albia, in Monroe County, a distance of about sixty-seven miles, * * * and especially including all the rights and leasehold and other interests of the first party under a contract dated May 10, 1889, between the Des Moines Union Railway Company of the first part and the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company, and the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, of the second part."

According to the complainants' theory, the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company owned a one-half interest in the terminal property, but it will be noted that this deed does not purport nor attempt to convey any interest in the terminal property whatever, except the interest it had under the lease of May 10, 1889, and in describing its railroad property it describes it as commencing at the point where its tracks connect with the tracks of the Des Moines Union Railway Company.

On January 1, 1899, the Wabash Railroad Company gave a mortgage to the Central Trust Company of

New York (Ex. 530, Vol. IV, p. 1928). This mortgage was prepared by Colonel Blodgett (testimony of Colonel Blodgett, Vol. II, p. 379), who had been the guiding spirit in the terminal transaction and was fully familiar with the situation. This mortgage covered what is known as the Des Moines division, the northerly terminus of which is at Des Moines. Among the recitations in the mortgage is the following:

> "And, whereas, the company owns the entire capital stock of the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, consisting of twenty thousand (20,000) shares of the par value of one hundred ($100) dollars each, and five hundred (500) shares of the capital stock of the Des Moines Union Railway Company of the par value of one hundred ($100) dollars each."

The property is described in the mortgage as follows (p. 1929):

> "commencing at a point in or near the City of Des Moines, where said road connects with the tracks of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, and extending from thence in a southeasterly direction through the counties of Polk, Marion and Monroe to the town or City of Albia, in said County of Monroe, a distance of about sixty-seven miles; * * * also five hundred (500) shares of the capital stock of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, of the par value of one hundred (100) dollars each; * * * and also all the leasehold rights and privileges of the company to use and enjoyment of the tracks, stations and terminal properties of the Des Moines Union Railway Company in or near said City of Des Moines, including also the rights and interests of the company in and to a certain terminal contract, dated the 31st day of July, 1897, and made by and between the Des Moines Union Railway Company, the company and the Des Moines Northern & Western Railroad Company, and in and to another contract, dated the 10th day of May, 1889, and made by and between the Des Moines Union Railway Company, the Des Moines & St. Louis Railway Company, the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company, and the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company."

The mortgage further provides:

"The company agrees at the time of the execution of these presents to deliver to and deposit with the trustee the above-mentioned terminal contract, dated the 31st day of July, 1897, * * * and also the other above-mentioned contract, dated the 10th day of May, 1889, * * * together with an assignment or assignments by the company to the trustee of all its rights and interest in and to said contracts, and the consents to such assignment or assignments of the remaining above-mentioned parties to said contracts or of their successors or assigns.

* * * * * * * *

And the company further agrees at the time of the execution of these presents to deliver to, and deposit with, or cause to be delivered to, and deposited with the trustee, duly endorsed in blank, the above-mentioned shares of stock of the * * * Des Moines Union Railway Company, * * * and also a consent to the assignment or mortgage by these presents to the trustee of the above-mentioned shares of stock of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, which consent is to be given by the above-mentioned Des Moines Northern & Western Railroad Company, party to the above-mentioned terminal contract of the 31st day of July, 1897, or its successors or assigns."

It will be noted that this mortgage does not purport to cover any interest in the terminal property itself. It describes the complainants' property as commencing at a point at or near the eastern limits of the City of Des Moines, where it connects with the tracks of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, and then for the purpose of transferring to the mortgagee whatever rights it has with respect to the Des Moines Union Company or its property, it specifically and with great care provides for a transfer of the 500 shares of the capital stock in that company and the contracts by which it is entitled to be furnished terminal service by the defendant company for the period of thirty years from and after May 1, 1888. The man who drew this mortgage, and the parties who executed it, never suspected that the complainant had any interest in this terminal property except the interest represented by its share of the capital stock and its interest as a lessee or tenant under the terms of the operating contract.

The things we have called attention to are only a very few of the very many things appearing in this record which show that at no time between May 1, 1888, and the commencement of this suit did the Wabash Company, or any of its predecessors, or any of its officers, have the least suspicion that that company had any interest in the property in controversy other than its interest as a stockholder, or that the shares of stock held by the defendant, F. M. Hubbell & Son, were "merely nominal and of nominal value."

THE RELATION OF THE CHICAGO, MILWAUKEE & ST. PAUL RAILWAY COMPANY AND ITS PREDECESSORS TO THE TERMINAL PROPERTY.

Going now to the history of the relations sustained by the complainant, the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company, and its predecessors, to the terminal property since May 1, 1888.

It will be remembered that the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company in February, 1881, gave a mortgage to the Central Trust Company (Vol. II, p. 605) to secure certain general mortgage bonds of the Wabash Company.

It will also be remembered that in 1886 Polk & Hubbell made a contract and supplement thereto with the purchasing committee by which the committee undertook to foreclose the Des Moines Northwestern mortgage, acquire title to the property of that company, and sell the same, together with a one-fourth interest in the terminal property, or "in lieu thereof," one-fourth of the stock and bonds of the terminal company.

In pursuance of that contract, the purchasing committee caused the Central Trust Company to bring a suit in the District Court of the United States for the southern district of Iowa to foreclose that mortgage. The decree in the case appears in complainants' testimoney (Vol. II, pp. 609-13). The decree describes the property as "being a line of railway extending from Farnham street, Des Moines, Iowa, through the counties of Polk, Dallas," etc. (p. 610). The deed to Polk & Hubbell executed in pursuance of the sale under that decree (Vol. II, pp. 613-5) describes the property (p. 614) as "being a line of railway extending from Farnham street, Des Moines, Iowa, through the counties of Polk, Dallas," etc.

Farnham street was the western terminus of the terminal property, and this line of road extended westerly from that street. It will be seen that the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company, by virtue of this decree and these deeds, acquired title simply to the railway property commencing at Farnham street, the westerly limit of the terminal property.

On April 8, 1890, when the capital stock of the defendant company was issued, one-fourth thereof (1,000 shares, less two shares standing in the name of the two directors representing that company) was issued to the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company (Vol. II, p. 711), and thereby the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company acquired the only interest it had in the terminal property outside of the interest which it had as a tenant under the contract of May 10, 1889.

It will be remembered that the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, which owned the line from Des Moines to Boone, on August 1, 1881, gave a mortgage to the Mercantile Trust Company (Vol. II, p. 552), which described the property (p. 554) as

> "all its railroad extending as aforesaid, from the western boundary line of the City of Des Moines, in Polk County, Iowa, by way of Clive in said county, through the counties of Polk, Dallas and Boone," etc.

The western boundary line of the City of Des Moines was almost a mile west of Farnham street, the western boundary line being what is now known as Twenty-eighth street, and Farnham street being now known as Sixteenth street. This left a piece of road extending from Farnham street to West Twenty-eighth street which was not covered by this mortgage, nor did the mortgage purport to cover any interest which the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Company had in the terminal property. For the purpose of extending the lien of this mortgage to cover the omitted property, the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company executed a supplemental mortgage to the Mercantile Trust Company (Vol. II, pp. 561-3), which after reciting the execution of the original mortgage says:

> "Whereas, there was omitted from the description of the property conveyed by said mortgage a part of the road of the party of the first part which should have been included, and
> Whereas, the board of directors of the party of the first part has this day authorized its president, and assistant secretary, to execute and deliver a supplement to said mortgage so that said omitted property shall be included in said mortgage.
> Now, therefore, the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, by this indenture doth grant, bargain, sell and convey unto the Mercantile Trust Company, as trustee, and to its successor or successors in trust, all that portion of its line of railroad lying between Farnham street, in the City of Des Moines, and the western corporate limits of said city, being situated in the County of Polk and State of Iowa, together with all the appurtenances thereto belonging or therein included, and also all its interest of whatever kind in the obligation or stock of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, and all its property of whatever name or nature not included and covered by said original mortgage."

It will be noted that by this supplemental mortgage the only interest which is attempted to be transferred in the terminal property is the obligation or stock of the defendant company.

This mortgage was foreclosed by an action in the District Court of the United States for the southern district of Iowa, the bill of complaint therein appearing in complainants' testimony (commencing on page 563, Vol. II), and which bill of complaint, referring to this supplemental mortgage, describes the interest in the terminal property thereby conveyed as being the obligations or stock of the terminal company (p. 565). The decree in the case, which appears in complainants' testimony (commencing at page 578, volume II), describes the property in the same way. The deed executed to Solon Humphreys and J. T. Granger in pursuance of the decree describes the property in the same way (Vol. II, pp. 584, 590).

In November, 1889, articles of incorporation of the Des Moines & Northern Railway Company were adopted (Vol. II, pp. 592-6). On November 23, 1889, Solon Humphreys and others, who had purchased this property at the foreclosure sale, deeded it to the Des Moines & Northern Railway Company (Vol. II, pp. 596-7), the deed describing the property as follows:

> "* * * The line of railway and franchises (except the franchise to be a corporation) formerly belonging to the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, extending from Farnham street in the City of Des Moines, County of Polk and State of Iowa, through the Town of Clive and the counties of Polk, Dallas and Boone to the City of Boone * * * and all its interest in the stock of the Des Moines Union Railway Company."

On April 8, 1890, when the defendant company's certificate of shares were issued, 1,000 shares (less two shares issued to the directors of the defendant company) were issued to the Des Moines & Northern Railway Company.

At a meeting of the stockholders of the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company, held October 12, 1891 (Ex. 199, Vol. IV, p. 1456), a lengthy resolution was adopted looking to the consolidation of the properties of the Des Moines & Northwestern and the Des Moines & Northern companies. In examining this resolution it is interesting to note that wherever the properties of these two companies are referred to they are described as commencing at Farnham street, in the City of Des Moines, and extending in a westerly and northwesterly direction, and wherever their interest in the terminal property is concerned it is referred to as "shares of stock" of the defendant company. References are made to these matters in the following paragraphs of the resolution and the contract which is made a part of it: third (p. 1459), fourth and fifth (p. 1460), ninth, tenth and eleventh (p. 1461), fifteenth (p. 1463), and fourth paragraph of contract (pp. 1468-9). Nowhere in this resolution is any reference made to any claim on the part of these companies that they owned any interest in the terminal property itself.

Carrying out this resolution, articles of consolidation and incorporation of the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railway Company were adopted on the 14th of December, 1891 (Ex. 64, Vol. II, p. 624). By the terms of the second article (pp. 625-6) the property of the two constituent companies, the Des Moines & Northern Company and the Des Moines & Northwestern Company, became the property of the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railway Company, the consolidated corporation.

The objects of the new corporation were stated in part as follows (pp. 626-7):

> "(1) To own, complete, extend, improve, maintain, and operate the line of railway heretofore owned and operated by the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company, extending from Farnham street, in the City of Des Moines, Polk County, Iowa, through the counties of Polk, Dallas, Guthrie, Greene, Calhoun and Pocahontas to Fonda, in said last-named county.
>
> (2) To own, complete, extend, improve, maintain and operate the line of railway heretofore owned and operated by the Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, extending from Farnham street, in the City of Des Moines, Polk County, Iowa, through the counties of Polk, Dallas and Boone, to the City of Boone, in said last-named county.
>
> • • • • • • • • •
> (10) To purchase, own and sell capital stock of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, or any other company owning or operating terminal grounds, tracks or stations."

As we have already shown, upon the organization of this company, all the capital stock of the defendant company theretofore owned by the Des Moines & Northwestern Company, the Des Moines & Northern Company, by G. M. Dodge and by F. M. Hubbell, aggregating 3,500 shares, were transferred to and became the property of the Des Moines Northern & Western Railway Company.

On December 14, 1891, at a meeting of the stockholders of the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railway Company (Ex. 208, Vol. IV, p. 1476), a resolution was passed authorizing the giving of a mortgage to the Metropolitan Trust Company of New York. A part of that resolution is as follows (pp. 1477-8):

> "Be it therefore resolved; that the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railway Company, the consolidated corporation hereinbefore referred to, shall duly execute and acknowledge a trust mortgage to the Metropolitan Trust Company of the City of New York, as trustee, which mortgage shall convey, under the usual terms and conditions, all its railroad extending from Farnham street, in the City of Des Moines, County of Polk, and State of Iowa, through the counties of Polk, Dallas, Guthrie, Greene, Calhoun, and Pocahontas, Iowa, to Fonda, in said last-named county, and also extending from Farnham street aforesaid over the same line to Clive, in the County of Polk, and thence through the counties of Polk, Dallas and Boone, Iowa, to the City of Boone * * * also a one-fourth interest in the capital stock of the Des Moines Union Railway Company; but it is expressly understood and agreed that said mortgage shall not convey an additional five-eighths interest in the capital stock of the said Des Moines Union Railway Company, of which the said company is the owner."

In pursuance of this resolution, the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railway Company on the 15th day of December, 1891, executed a mortgage to the Metropolitan Trust Company of New York, which appears as exhibit 65, on page 633 of volume II. This mortgage described the property covered by it in the terms of the resolution above quoted (p. 637).

It will be remembered, as we have heretofore shown, that this five-eighths of the capital stock of the Des Moines Union Railway Company (2,500 shares) was transferred to F. M. Hubbell & Son on the 4th day of October, 1893, and has ever since stood upon the books of the defendant company in that name.

The first interest, either direct or indirect, which the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company had in the transactions under consideration, or in any of the companies interested in said transactions, grew out of two contracts dated March 15, 1894, one of which is a contract between that company and Frederick M. Hubbell and Frederick M. Hubbell & Son, and appears as complainants' exhibit 80 (commencing at page 838 of volume II), and the other of which appears as defendants' exhibit 309 (p. 1618, Vol. IV), and which was between the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railway Company and the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company. These contracts, however, were not actually executed until the 17th of July, 1894 (see testimony of F. M. Hubbell near bottom of page 1018, volume III).

The negotiations leading up to the making of these contracts were conducted by Mr. Hubbell, representing himself and the Des Moines Northern & Western Railway Company, and Roswell Miller, president of and representing the Milwaukee Company (testimony of F. M. Hubbell near top of page 1019, volume III).

By the terms of the contract between the Des Moines, Northern & Western Company and the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Company (Ex. 309, Vol. IV, p. 1618), the former company was to receive a division of the through rate on joint business, at percentages fixed in the contract and depending upon the origin and destination of the freight. In consideration of the execution of this contract, F. M. Hubbell and F. M. Hubbell & Son entered into the contract with the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company heretofore referred to (Vol. II, p. 838), by which the Hubbells made a present to the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company of 16,800 shares of the capital stock of the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railway Company and agreed to sell it an additional 6,468 shares at any time between January 1, 1897, and the first Monday in April, 1899, for $46,200.00. The thing which induced the making of these contracts on the part of the Hubbells is detailed by Mr. F. M. Hubbell (near the top of page 1020, volume III) as follows:

> "Some time during the summer of 1893, the Milwaukee Company notified the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railway Company that the divisions in freight interchanged between the two companies would be reduced from 50 per cent to 25 per cent. This great reduction in the division would prevent the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railway Company from earning its interest and operating expenses; and rather than submit to bankruptcy and a foreclosure, we made this arrangement in order to obtain an increase in the division in favor of our company to 40 per cent. hoping thereby that we could earn sufficient revenue to pay operating expenses and interest on the bonds."

As we have heretofore shown, before the making of this contract and during the negotiations which led up to it, Roswell Miller, president of the Milwaukee Company, was advised that the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railway Company only owned 1,000 shares of stock in the defendant company, and that five-eighths of the defendant's capital stock was owned by individuals (see letter of F. M. Hubbell to Roswell Miller, Ex. 308, Vol. IV, p. 1617).

It was further provided in sections 4 and 5 of the contract last above referred to (pp. 839-40) that under certain conditions the mortgage heretofore referred to and given by the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railway Company to the Metropolitan Trust Company, should be foreclosed and the property transferred to the new corporation, in which event the interest of the Milwaukee Company in the capital stock of the new corporation should be the same as its interest in the capital stock of the present corporation.

Afterward a suit was brought in the Circuit Court of the United States for the southern district of Iowa to foreclose the mortgage given by the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railway Company to the Metropolitan Trust Company, and in this suit a decree was entered which appears, commencing on page 645 of volume II, in which decree the property upon which a lien was established was described as > "a certain line of railroad extending from Farnham street, in the City of Des Moines, in Polk County, Iowa, through the counties of Polk, Dallas, Guthrie, Greene, Calhoun, and Pocahontas, to the Town of Fonda, in said last-named county, and also of a line of railroad extending from Clive to the County of Polk, through the said county to the City of Boone, in the County of Boone, and State of Iowa, * * * Also a one-fourth interest in the capital stock of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, it being by the said mortgage expressly understood and agreed that the said mortgage did not embrace or convey an additional five-eighths interest in the capital stock of said Des Moines Union Railway Company of which the said Des Moines Northern & Western Railway Company was the owner."

In pursuance of this decree a sale was had at which the property was purchased by G. M. Dodge, F. M. Hubbell and F. C. Hubbell. A report of this sale appears as Complainants' Exhibit 67 (commencing on page 651, volume II), in which report the property sold is described in the terms used in the decree. This sale was approved, and on the 8th of February, 189[illegible], the Commissioner made a Commissioner's deed to G. M. Dodge and others constituting the purchasing committee, in which the property transferred was described as in the decree (Ex. 69, Vol. II, p. 654).

On the 1st day of January, 1895, the articles of incorporation of the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Company were adopted (Ex. 70, Vol. II, p. 657), in which the objects and purposes of the corporation were described in part as follows:

"First. To own, complete, extend, improve, maintain and operate the line of railway heretobefore owned and operated by the Des Moines Northern & Western Railway Company, extending from Farnham street, in the City of Des Moines, Polk County, Iowa, through the counties of Polk, Dallas, Guthrie, Greene, Calhoun, and Pocahontas, to Fonda, in said last-named county; also extending from Clive, in the County of Polk, through the counties of Polk, Dallas, and Boone, to the City of Boone, in said last-named county.

* * * * * * * *

Twelfth. To purchase, own and sell capital stock of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, or any other company owning or operating terminal grounds, tracks or stations."

To this corporation G. M. Dodge and the other members of the purchasing committee transferred this property by deed appearing as Complainants' Exhibit 71 (Vol. II, p. 663), in which the property was described as in the deed from the Commissioner to them. In none of these records or documents is any reference whatever made to any possible interest (except through the stock) in the terminal property.

About the time of the execution of this deed there was held a meeting of the board of directors of the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Company (Ex. 215, Vol. IV, p. 1487) in which it was resolved to purchase of G. M. Dodge and others constituting the purchasing committee this railway property, which was described as follows:

> "A certain line of railroad extending from Farnham street, in the City of Des Moines, Polk County, Iowa, through the counties of Polk, Dallas, Guthrie, Greene, Calhoun, and Pocahontas, to Fonda, in the said last-named county; and also extending from Clive, in the County of Polk, through the counties of Polk, Dallas and Boone to Boone, in the County of Boone, and State of Iowa, * * * also a one-fourth interest in the capital stock of the Des Moines Union Railway Company."

At the same meeting it was resolved (p. 1490) to execute a mortgage to the Metropolitan Trust Company of New York as trustee, upon the property which was described as heretofore set out.

At a meeting of the stockholders of the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Company, on March 5, 1895, certain resolutions were passed on this same subject, in which the property was described as in the deed and former resolution (Ex. 216, Vol. IV, p. 1492).

The Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Company after it acquired the property gave a mortgage to the Metropolitan Trust Company of New York (Vol. IV, p. 1518) in which the property was described:

> "All its railroad, extending from Farnham street, in the City of Des Moines, County of Polk, and State of Iowa, through the counties of Polk, Dallas, * * * also a one-fourth interest in the capital stock of the Des Moines Union Railway Company."

By the seventh section of the contract of March 15, 1894, between Hubbell & Son and the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company, it was provided (Vol. II, p. 841) that the board of directors of the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railway Company should consist of three persons who should be nominated by the St. Paul Company, and four persons to be nominated by Hubbell & Son.

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railway Company, held on January 3, 1895 (ex. 214, vol. IV, p. 1486), this portion of the agreement was carried out and E. P. Ripley, A. J. Earling and P. M. Myers, representing the St. Paul Company, were elected upon the board of directors of the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railway Company, and thereafter three or more representatives of the Milwaukee were upon the board of directors of that company or its successor, the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Company, and during these years the representatives of the St. Paul Company, and particularly Mr. Roswell Miller, president of that company, were active in the management of the affairs of the former company. In this way they not only became familiar with the affairs of the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railway and Railroad Company, but also with the relations between that company and the defendant, the Des Moines Union Railway Company. They knew that the only interest which the Des Moines, Northern & Western Company had in the Des Moines Union Company was the interest represented by the 1,000 shares of stock which the former had in the latter (ex. 308, vol. IV, p. 1617). They were familiar with the foreclosure of the mortgage upon the property of the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railway Company, the organization of the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Company, and the steps by which the property of the former was transferred to the latter, and had certified copies of all the records in respect thereto. They were furnished with copies of the articles of incorporation of the defendant, the Des Moines Union Railway Company, advised as to what property it owned, and furnished with copies of the contract of May 10, 1889, and the ratification thereof of July 31, 1897. (See the following exhibits of defendants, vol. IV: 317 and 318 (p. 1628); 319 and 320 (p. 1630); 321 (p. 1631); 322 (p. 1632); 323 (p. 1634); 324 and 325 (p. 1636); 326 (p. 1637); 339 (p. 1650); 340 (p. 1651); 341 (p. 1652); 342 (p. 1654); 343 and 344 (p. 1655); 345 (p. 1657); 415 (p. 1763); 416 (p. 1764); 417 and 418 (p. 1765); 419 and 420 (p. 1766); 421 (p. 1767); 425 (p. 1770).)

In the year 1898 the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company acquired all the outstanding capital stock and bonds of the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Company for the purpose of consolidating the line of the latter company with its own line of railroad.

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Company held January 5, 1899 (ex. 219, vol. IV, p. 1498), the board of directors elected consisted of W. G. Collins, A. J. Earling, C. A. Goodnow, Burton Hanson, F. M. Hubbell, F. C. Hubbell and P. M. Myers, all of whom, except the two Hubbells, were officers of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Company held in Chicago on April 24, 1899, at which were present the members of the board of directors above named, except the two Hubbells (ex. 220, vol. IV, p. 1499), there was laid before the board of directors a proposition made by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company looking toward the consolidation of the property of the two companies, a part of such resolution being as follows (p. 1503):

> "Resolved, that the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Company be, and is hereby requested to sell and convey to this Company all its railroad and property and for this purpose to make, execute and deliver, through its proper officers, a good and sufficient deed of conveyance, conveying and transferring to this Company all its railroad and property of every name and nature, wheresoever situated, and all its rights, franchises, licenses, privileges and immunities of every kind, howsoever derived, in consideration of the sum of One Dollar and of the cancellation and surrender by this Company of all the above mentioned mortgage bonds of the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Company, amounting in the aggregate to the sum of $2,933,000, with the interest due thereon, and of the payment of all other lawful debts of said Company; and this Company hereby agrees that, upon the delivery to it of such deed, it will cancel and surrender the said mortgage bonds and will assume and pay all other lawful debts of said Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Company, and hold said Company free and clear and harmless therefrom."

Upon consideration of this proposition, the directors of the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Company passed a resolution accepting this offer and calling a meeting of the stockholders for the purpose of considering it (p. 1504). It will be noted that this proposition of the Milwaukee was to acquire all the property of the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Company of whatever character. This stockholders' meeting was held on May 8, 1899 (ex. 222, vol. IV, p. 1508). At this meeting the stockholders authorized the transfer of the property of the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Company to the Milwaukee Company, and authorized the execution of a deed transferring the same, a part of which reads as follows (p. 1512):

"Whereas, the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Company now owns and operates a certain line of railroad, commencing at the east line of Section Seven (7), Township Seventy-eight (78) North, Range Twenty-four (24) West, in the City of Des Moines, Polk County, Iowa, and thence extending in a general northwesterly direction, via Clive in said County, through the Counties of Polk, Dallas, Guthrie, Greene, Calhoun and Pocahontas, to Fonda in said last named County; and also a line of railroad extending from Clive, in said County of Polk, through said County of Boone, in the County of Boone; said lines of railroad having an aggregate length of about one hundred and fifty miles, all in the State of Iowa; and also one-fourth interest in the capital stock of the Des Moines Union Railway Company."

* * * * * * * * *

The east line of section 7 referred to in this deed was coincident with the west city limits of the City of Des Moines at that time and what is now known as Twenty-eighth Street, which is approximately a mile west of what was formerly known as Farnham Street and now known as Sixteenth Street. This was the form of the deed approved by the stockholders of the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Company in carrying out the proposition to transfer to the Milwaukee Company all its property, and shows clearly that at this time no claim was made that that company owned any interest in the terminal property other than that represented by its stock. This deed was executed as authorized, delivered to the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company, and filed for record (ex. 74, vol. II, p. 673).

As above noted, this deed from the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Company to the complainant, the Milwaukee Company, described the line of road as commencing at the east line of section 7, whereas, all former transfers and mortgages of the property had described it as commencing at Farnham Street. To correct this error in the description, a special meeting of the stockholders of the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Company was held on June 12, 1907 (ex. 75, vol. II, p. 678). This was more than eight years after the execution of the deed last above referred to, during which eight years the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company had had two representatives on the board of directors of the defendant company.

At this meeting a resolution was passed reciting the fact that by the transactions of 1899 heretofore referred to, it was the intention to transfer to the Milwaukee Company all the railroad and property of the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Company "of every name and nature, wheresoever situated, and all its rights, franchises, licenses, privileges and immunities of every kind, howsoever derived," and reciting the fact that through some error or oversight the deed described the property as commencing at a point on the east line of section 7, instead of "Sixteenth Street (formerly called Farnham Street), in the said City of Des Moines," and then states:

> "Now, Therefore, Be It Resolved, that for the purpose of correcting such error and carrying out the purpose and intent of this Company to convey to the said Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company its entire property as aforesaid, the President and Secretary of this Company be required and directed to execute and deliver to the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company, a deed in due form of law, of that part of the said tracks and right of way omitted as aforesaid, to-wit: That part of said tracks, right of way and fixtures between the said Sixteenth Street (formerly called Farnham Street) and the said Western Avenue or Twenty-eighth Street, inclusive, in the said City of Des Moines."

In pursuance of this resolution a correction deed was executed, delivered and recorded (ex. 76, vol. II, p. 680).

If the complainants, as successors of the three railroads parties to the contract of January 2, 1882, are the real owners of the terminal property, and the title thereto is simply held by the defendant company in trust, or if they have an easement in the property which entitles them to the use and occupation thereof in perpetuity for railway purposes, or any other interest therein except as represented by the capital stock in the defendant company owned by them, it is singular that no such thought is contained in the deeds by which the property was transferred to the terminal company, and it is singular that in the various transfers and mortgages of these properties through which complainants trace their title, no reference is made to such an interest in the terminal property, and it is singular that wherever in these transfers or mortgages any reference is made to their interest in the terminal property, it is always referred to as that of owners of the capital stock in the defendant company.

The necessary and legitimate inference is that from May 1, 1888, up to the time of the commencement of this suit, none of the parties suspected that the defendant company did not have an absolute title to this property. The various parties to these transactions were the ablest lawyers and shredwest business men among those who for many years had carried on the largest enterprises in the Middle West, and this record shows that during all these years in these various instruments thev have with the greatest care particularly described the properties in which these various companies have been interested, and all of them have been drawn upon the theory that the terminal property was the absolute property of the defendant company.

THE NEGOTIATIONS WITH RESPECT TO A RENEWAL OR EXTENSION OF THE TERMINAL CONTRACT OF MAY 10, 1889.

By the year 1896 there had come a change in the situation. The railroad companies, original parties to the contract of May 10th, 1889, were no longer operating the railways and were either dead or in a dying condition. Their successors, the Wabash Company and the Des Moines, Northern and Western, had come into the contract arrangement apparently as a matter of course, but some of the parties interested doubted that these companies were bound by the contract. This doubt somewhat discredited the bonds of the Des Moines Union Company on the market and as the Wabash was a holder of these bonds and wanted to dispose of them, it wanted that doubt removed.

So, on December 26, 1896, Mr. Ashley, as President of the Wabash, wrote to Mr. Hubbell, as Secretary of the Des Moines Union, as follows (Rec., vol. IV, p. 1673):

> "Permit me to remind you of our understanding to the effect that you would have prepared at once a new agreement for the tenant companies of the Des Moines Union Railway Co. to sign; this new agreement being considered necessary on account of the foreclosure of the Des Moines & Northwestern. I understand that the agreement will be exactly as before, except that the time must be made to correspond with the life of the bonds, or to be made for a period to extend beyond their maturity.
>
> I write now for the purpose of urging the immediate preparation of this agreement, as without it we cannot well dispose of our bonds. When it is ready pleace forward it to Colonel Blodgett, asking him to examine the same and to send it to me as soon as possible. I should not suppose it would take long to have the agreement prepared and as time in this case is of importance I hope you will see that the paper is gotten under way at once. Perhaps you have already taken the matter in hand and if so, so much the better."

Mr. Hubbell took up the matter at once with Mr. Cummins, who in turn entered into corrsepondence with Colonel Blodgett. Various changes were proposed and discussed upon the one side and the other, and the outcome was the contract of July 31st, 1897, called the Ratification Agreement (Rec., vol. II, p. 506).

This, it will be seen, followed substantially the suggestion of Mr. Ashey that "the agreement will be exactly as before."

The agreement recites the contract of 1889 and annexes a copy. It notes the passing from the scene of the old railroad companies and that the successor companies had both been using the terminal property and had recognized the contract of 1889 as binding upon them and then proceeds:

"Whereas, it has been doubted whether the said contract is legally binding upon the said Wabash Company and the said Des Moines, Northern & Western Company;

"Now, Therefore, in consideration of the premises and for the purpose of removing all doubt with respect to the said subject, it is now agreed by and between the parties hereinbefore named, that the said contract, a copy of which is attached, shall be and become binding and obligatory upon said Wabash Company and the Des Moines, Northern & Western Company."

There follow stipulations, first by the Wabash and then by the Des Moines, Northern and Western, that the Company will make the payments provided with respect to its railroad, and that when it ceases to operate its road, its obligation under the contract shall cease and pass to its successor company.

It was aso provided that so much of the contract of 1889 "as relates to the issuance and distribution of the capital stock of the said Des Moines Company (the terminal) is no longer binding, and that the capital stock of the said Des Moines Company is as follows:

The Purchasing Committee of the Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific Railway Company	500 shares,
The Des Moines, Northern and Western Railroad Company	1,000 shares,
F. M. Hubbell & Sons	2,500 shares."

There follows a statement of a few qualifying shares for directors which we need not consider.

This agreement was made at the instance of the Wabash Company and it was a party thereto, and the Des Moines, Northern and Western, predecessor of the Milwaukee, and on whose Board of Directors the Milwaukee then had three members, was also a party, and as we shall show, the Milwaukee must have known and did know all about the Ratification Agreement and hence of the agreement of 1889.

And here again the ownership of the terminal property of the Des Moines Union and the relation of the other companies to it as tenants were fully recognized.

It will be remembered that in 1898 the Milwaukee Company acquired all the outstanding stock and bonds of the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Company. A portion of this stock and bonds was purchased of the defendant, F. M. Hubbell & Son (exs. 413, 414, vol. IV. pp. 1759-90). According to these letters, the sale of these bonds and stock was to be closed up on the 6th of December, 1898. On December 2, 1898, Mr. Miller, President of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company, wrote to Mr. Hubbell the following letter (ex. 418, vol. IV, p. 1765):

> "I observe that the contract between the Des Moines Union Railway Company and the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Company is only for 20 years. I think it should be for 50 years. Have you any objection to extending it for so long?"

In carrying out the agreement to sell to the Milwaukee these bonds and stocks, Mr. Miller met Mr. Hubbell in New York, December, 1898, and there requested Mr. Hubbell to agree that the defendant company would extend to the Des Moines, Northern & Western the operating contract of May 10, 1889, for 100 years (testimony of F. M. Hubbell, vol. III, pp. 1023-4). With respect to it, Mr. Hubbell testified (near the top of page 1024):

> "He was ready to buy our bonds and stock if I would write him a letter that the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Co. should give him a contract with the Des Moines Union the same as the present contract for one hundred years. He pressed me hard to sign such a letter, I refused and told him that I would come back to Iowa and see if we could get him a contract extending the contract of July 31st, 1897."

This testimony of Mr. Hubbell's is corroborated by a letter which Mr. Hubbell on that day wrote to his brother-in-law, H. D. Thompson, and to his son, which appears as defendants' exhibit 421 (vol. IV, p. 1767).

As a result of this request on the part of Mr. Miller, a contract was prepared by Mr. Cummins, which appears as defendants' exhibit 430 (vol. IV, p. 1772). In this contract it was recited that the defendant company owned and operated the terminal company. This contract was submitted to Mr. Miller and to the general counsel of the Milwaukee Company, George R. Peck, but the same was never consummated because there were some provisions in the contract upon which they could not agree, but no question was ever raised as to the correctness of the recitations in the contract to the effect that the terminal property was owned by the defendant company.

From time to time thereafter attempts were made by the defendant company on the one hand, and the complainants on the other, to agree upon a new terminal contract, but they were unsuccessful, not because any question was ever raised about the absolute ownership of the terminal property by the defendant company, but because they were unable to agree upon the compensation which was to be paid by the complainants for the use of the terminal. (See vol. IV, exs. 454 (p. 1800); 455 (p. 1801); 456 and 457 (p. 1802); 458 and 459 (p. 1803); 460 (p. 1804); 466 and 467 (p. 1807); 468 (p. 1808); 471 (p. 1810); 479 (p. 1818); 480 (p. 1819); 481 (p. 1820); 484 (p. 1822); 485 (p. 1823); 486 and 487 (p. 1825); 488 (p. 1826); 492 (p. 1828); 493 (p. 1829); 494 (p. 1830); and 495 (p. 1832).)

In addition to this, the defendant company from time to time entered into contracts with other railway companies, by which it agreed to furnish such other railway companies terminal services. These agreements are, one with the Chicago, St. Paul & Kansas City Railway Company (ex. 524, vol. IV, p. 1871), one with the Chicago Great Western Railway Company (ex. 526, vol. IV, p. 1879), one with the Iowa Central Railway Company (ex. 526a, vol. IV, p. 1894), one with the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad Company (ex. 527, vol. IV, p. 1901), one with the Des Moines, Iowa Falls & Northern Railway Company (ex. 528, vol. IV, p. 1911), and one with the Des Moines & Fort Dodge Railroad Company (ex. 529, vol. IV, p. 1920).

In each one of these contracts the terminal property is described as being owned by the defendant company, in almost the identical language that is used for that purpose in the contract of May 10, 1889, with the complainants' predecessors. Each one of these contracts was approved by directors of the defendant company who represented complainants and their predecessors upon the board of that company, because the articles of incorporation of the defendant company provide that no such contracts can be made unless they are approved by the unanimous vote of the board of directors. In fact, no question was ever raised after May 1, 1888, up to the time of the commencement of this suit in 1907, with respect to the ownership of this property by the defendant. It is impossible to find a single word in this record to show that complainants or their predecessors at any time between those two dates ever claimed to have any interest in the terminal property of any kind or character, except the interest which is represented by the stock which they hold, and the record is full of contracts, deeds, resolutions, letters and other transactions recognizing the ownership of the defendant by the plaintiffs and their predecessors.

So far we have discussed this case for the purpose of ascertaining the intent of the parties by the transactions which resulted in the transfer of the title, ownership and possession of the terminal property to the defendant company in the year 1888. We will now go to another phase of the case, but in doing so we do not wish to be understood as thinking we have at all exhausted the subject of intent. To exhaust this subject we would have to refer to every item of evidence contained in this long record, because there isn't a thing in the record from the time of the original inception of the terminal company down to the bringing of this suit, which does not evidence the intent to give to the defendant company a perfect title to the property. The things to which we will call attention in subsequent divisions of our argument will all bear upon the question of intent, as well as upon other phases of the case which we will discuss.

II.

THE AMENDMENT TO THE ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF THE DES MOINES UNION RAILWAY COMPANY ENACTED APRIL 8, 1890, AND THE RESOLUTION PASSED BY THE STOCKHOLDERS AT THAT MEETING.

Brief reference has heretofore been made to these amendments and resolutions, and the court no doubt understands in a general way their nature. It will be remembered that of those who were present at this meeting, James F. How, Vice-President of the Wabash Company, Charles M. Hays, General Manager of the Wabash Company, and F. M. Hubbell, Secretary of the defendant company, were active in the transactions of 1884, 1887 and 1888, in which the title and ownership of the terminal property were transferred to the defendant, and knew what was thereby intended; and these amendments and the resolutions clearly show that it was understood by these persons and the others who were present at the meeting, that it was intended by the transactions heretofore referred to, to vest in the defendant company an absolute title to the property. But upon this phase of the situation we need not enlarge at this time.

If the court, in view of the facts to which we have heretofore called its attention, believes that the result of the transactions which culminated in the surrender of the property to the defendant company on May 1, 1888, was to vest in the terminal company a good title to the property, the amendments to the articles of incorporation above referred to are not of great importance, but if there is any lingering doubt in the mind of the court as to the nature of defendant's title, then a consideration of these articles and resolutions becomes important for the reasons which we will hereafter point out.

It is the claim of complainants, as we understand it, that notwithstanding the fact that the defendant company was organized as a corporation for pecuniary profit for the purpose of acquiring, owning and operating the terminal property, and notwithstanding the fact that by the resolutions of 1884 the three railway companies who, plaintiffs claim, were the beneficial owners of the property, authorized the transfer of the ownership thereof to the defendant company, and notwithstanding the fact that the resolutions of 1887 authorized the trustees to transfer the property to defendant without any reservations, upon being paid the agreed purchase price therefor, and notwithstanding the fact that the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company executed and delivered to the defendant company a warranty deed to the property, and notwithstanding the fact that the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company executed and delivered to the defendant company an absolute deed to the property without reservations, and notwithstanding the fact that How and Dodge executed deeds to that portion of the property standing in their names, without any reservations, and notwithstanding the fact that the defendant paid to the parties entitled thereto the purchase price agreed upon, and notwithstanding the fact that from May 1, 1888, down to the commencement of this suit, every person and corporation connected with the transaction treated the property as the absolute property of the defendant company; yet by reason of the fact that there was incorporated as a recitation in the original articles of incorporation of the defendant company a copy of the contract of January 2, 1882, and an attempt made in articles 2 and 4 of defendants' articles of incorporation to limit the power of the defendant to alienate the property, and by reason of certain references to the contract of January 2, 1882, in the resolutions of 1887, the defendant company acquired the title to the property in trust only and for the benefit of complainants' predecessors, or acquired the title subject to an easement in favor of complainants' predecessors to use the property in perpetuity for terminal purposes.

Our answer to this contention is, if there is any question about the effect of the transactions resulting in the transfer of the property to the defendant company in 1888, that question was forever set at rest by the action of the stockholders of April 8, 1890. In other words, the effect of this action was to quiet the title to the property in the defendant company, if theretofore there was any question about the title.

For the convenience of the court, we here set out in parallel columns the sections of the original articles of incorporation upon which complainants base their claim, and the corresponding articles as amended on April 8, 1890 (vol. II, p. 489), also sections ratifying the purchase of the terminal property, and the section striking from the original articles of incorporation the contract of January 2, 1882:

Article 14, as adopted April 8, 1890, is as follows:

"Article 14.

The purchase of the property heretofore conveyed to the corporation, the conveyance made in pursuance thereof, the execution of Trust Mortgage to the Central Trust Company of New York, dated February 28th, 1887, and recorded in the Recorder's office of the County of Polk, State of Iowa, on the 21st day of May, 1888, in book 196 at page 525 and the issuance of bonds secured by the same are hereby approved, ratified and confirmed."

Article 15, as adopted April 8, 1890, is as follows:

"Article 15.

The proceedings of a meeting held December 10, 1884, with certain preambles, including a contract executed on the 2nd day of January, 1882, between the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company and the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, consented to by the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company, which now appears as part of the Articles of Incorporation of this Company, are hereby repealed, stricken out and expunged."

As we understand it, it is the claim of complainants that these amendments were invalid and ineffective, for the following reasons:

1. Because at this time (April 8, 1890), no certificates of shares of stock had been actually issued by the defendant company, and therefore there were no stockholders who could amend the articles.

2. Because the persons who were present at the meeting and purported to represent the complainants' predecessors, had no authority to act for them.

3. That the amendment to the articles of incorporation and the passage of the resolutions referred to were the acts of the defendant company, and that such action by the defendant company could not affect any interest which complainants' predecessors had in the property.

4. That the published notice of the amendment of the articles is insufficient as to Article II. This objection is made for the first time in this Court.

Our contention is as follows:

(a) The stockholders were the persons and corporations who were entitled to the stock of the defendant company under the articles of incorporation and contracts by which the defendant acquired title to the terminal property and the persons who were representing them. The issue of the actual certificates of shares of stock was not necessary in order to constitute them stockholders.

(b) The stockholders had both actual and constructive notice of the meeting and the purpose thereof. The presumption is that the stockholders were lawfully represented at the meeting, and the evidence fails to overcome this presumption.

(c) That the adoption of the amendments and the resolutions were acts of the stockholders (acts of complainants' predecessors) as distinguished from the acts of the defendant corporation, and the plaintiffs and their predecessors were bound thereby.

(d) These amendments to the articles were properly signed, acknowledged and recorded and notice thereof was given as required by the Iowa statute. The complainants and their predecessors had both actual and constructive notice thereof. They carried on the business of the defendant corporation under these amendments for the period of seventeen years before the commencement of this suit, and are now estopped by their laches to raise the question of the validity of these amendments.

(e) The complainants acquired the stock which they hold in the defendant company long after the adoption of these amendments and the resoution referred to, and cannot now raise any question as to their validity.

(f) The adoption of these amendments and this resolution, and the acquiescence of the plaintiffs and their predecessors therein and the continuous conduct by them of the business of the corporation in accordance therewith for the period of seventeen years, is one of the strong grounds of estoppel urged by the defendants, the Hubbels, as against the complainants' right to a decree which would destroy the value of the 2,500 shares of stock which they own in the defendant company.

(g.) The published notice of the amendments was sufficient in every respect and in any event the amendments made are good as between the parties.

We will consider these grounds in their order:

(a) AS BETWEEN THE STOCKHOLDERS AND THE CORPORATION, THE ISSUANCE OF A CERTIFICATE OF STOCK IS NOT NECESSARY.

The general rule laid down by

Thompson on Corporations, 2d Ed., Vol. 4, § 3455,

is as follows:

"Sec. 3455. Certificate merely a muniment of title—Broadly speaking, a share certificate is merely the paper representative of an incorporeal right of a stockholder. It is nothing more than the symbol or paper evidence of a proprietary right. It stands on a footing similar to other muniments of title. In other words, the act of subscribing for the shares gives title to the subscriber, and the certificate neither constitutes nor is necessary to it; it is only evidence of title. The certificate transfers nothing from the corporation to the stockholder, but only affords him the evidence of his rights. • • • An original proprietor and subscriber for shares, having paid his installments thereon, has a complete title, though there has been no formal entry in the books of the corporation passing the stock to his credit. • • •"

"Sec. 3507. Issuance of certificate not necessary to constitute relation of stockholder—While a contract and an intention to assume the relation is necessary to make one a stockholder, the rule is that a certificate is not required to constitute this relation. It has been expressly held that, 'it is not essential that a certificate should have issued in order to create the relation of stockholder, provided a contract to take stock has been duly made, or provided the rights, privileges and emol-uments of a stockholder had been enjoyed, with the consent of the corporation.' The certificate is not in itself property, but is merely the symbol or paper evidence of property, and the proprietary right may exist without the certificate. A person may acquire the rights and incur the liabilities of a shareholder, both to the corporation and to its creditors, although no certificate has in fact been issued. In other words, one who has subscribed for stock and fulfilled the annexed conditions, or one to whom stock has been apportioned, has all the rights of a stockholder, though no certificate has been issued to him. It follows that a subscription cannot be rescinded on the ground that certificates had not been isued to the subscriber. Among other things he may vote at corporate elections, and hold corporate offices. He has the power to transfer his stock, and to receive dividends, and is liable to assessment on his shares, and to creditors for the debts of the corporation to the same extent as though certificates had been issued to him. * * * The isuance of a certificate to a person and his receipe of the same raises the presumption that he owns the share."

This is the rule in Iowa.

First Nat. Bank v. Gifford, 47 Iowa 583.

"The former owner of the stock, Mr. Oehe, delivered the certificate held by him to Porter, and the stock was assigned by the former to the latter by means of what is termed a transfer ticket, and an entry thereof was made in the transfer book of the bank. No certificate was ever issued to Porter, and the Oehs certificate was cancelled, or at least the defendant does not claim that it was ever assigned to him.

It is useless to consider what would be the rights of the defendant if a certificate had been executed to Porter, and by him assigned to the defendant, and no transfer entered on the books of the bank, for no such state of facts is presented by the finding.

As between Porter and the corporation, he was the undoubted owned of the stock. No certificate was required to perfect his title. It mattered not whether one ever was issued. He being the owner, and the bank not chargeable with notice of defendant's rights, Porter had the right to sell and transfer said stock, and the bank was bound to recognize his transferee as owner. Whatever title Porter had was obtained by Smith and Whitaker.

It seems to us that the transfer on the books of the bank was sufficient to make Porter's title full and complete. A stock certificate would be only additional evidence of his title, but it was by no means essential."

Morrow v. Gould, 145 Iowa, 4.

"It follows from the foregoing definitions that shares of stock represent an interest in the earnings and property of the corporation and that a certificate is not stock itself but only a convenient representation of it for one may be a stockholder without having a certificate issued to him."

In Pendery v. Carleton, 87 Fed. 41, the rule is laid down by Thayer, Circuit Judge, as stated in the syllabus, as follows:

"A mining company contracted with complainant for the purchase of his interest in certain mining property, in consideration of a certain proportion of its capital stock, which stock, however, was never issued to him. Later, the board of directors, in good faith, order a sale of all the company's stock to pay the expenses of development, and purchased it themselves, but without taking undue advantage of any other interested parties. Finally, the property, proving of little or no value for mining purposes, was sold—the sale being an advantageous one—and the proceeds divided among themselves by the directors, who believed themselves to be the only shareholders. On suit against the directors for an accounting, held, that complainant was the equitable owner of the agreed amount of stock, and was entitled to such proportion of the net proceeds of the sale as his stock bore to the total capital of the company, and no more, with interest from the date of filing the amended bill asking for such accounting."

This Court, in Hawley v. Upton, 102 U. S. 316, said:

"It cannot be doubted that one who has become bound as a subscriber to the capital stock of a corporation must pay his subscription if required to meet the obligations of the corporation. A certificate in his favor for the stock is not necessary to make him a subscriber. All that need be done, so far as creditors are concerned, is that the subscriber shall have bound himself to become a contributor to the fund which the capital stock of the corporation represents. If such an obligation exists, the courts can enforce the contribution when required. After having bound himself to contribute, he cannot be discharged from the obligation he has assumed until the contribution has actually been made, or the obligation in some lawful way extinguished. These are elementary principles."

And in Jellenik v. Huron Copper Mining Co., 177 U. S, the Court said, l. c. 13:

"The certificates are only evidence of the ownership of the shares, and the interest represented by the owner."

Applying the rule to this case, the St. Louis Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company and the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company, by virtue of certain resolutions passed by the boards of directors of those companies and certain notices served on the Des Moines Union Railway Company in November, 1887 (exs. 11, 12, 13, 14 and 15, vol. II, pp. 435-443 incl.), became subscribers to the capital stock of the Des Moines Union Railway Company. The Des Moines Union Railway Company accepted these subscriptions by virtue of the action of its board of directors on November 8, 1887 (ex. 102, vol. II, p. 259). The three subscribers for this capital stock caused the same to be paid for by the execution of deeds (exs. 17, 18, 19, 20, 21 and 22, vol. II, pp. 446-59 incl.) and thereafter they, or their successors, were stockholders in the Des Moines Union Railway Company, although no certificates were actually issued until April 8, 1890.

It will be noted that the resolution of the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company (ex. 12, vol. II, p. 437) authorized its proportion of the stock to be issued to the Purchasing Committee of the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company.

While this resolution of the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company may not of itself have bound the Purchasing Committee as stockholders, yet this action was ratified by the Purchasing Committee by selling and transferring a portion of the stock and accepting the issuance of the stock at the time it was issued in April, 1890.

And from the day of the incorporation of the company down to the last day to which this record recites they and their successors acted consistently as the stockholders of the company.

(B) THE STOCKHOLDERS HAD BOTH ACTUAL AND CONSTRUCTIVE NOTICE OF THE MEETING AND THE PURPOSES THEREOF. THE PRESUMPTION IS THAT THE STOCKHOLDERS WERE LAWFULLY REPRESENTED AT THE MEETING, AND THE EVIDENCE FAILS TO OVERCOME THIS PRESUMPTION.

It was provided in the original artices of incorporation of the defendant company as follows (vol. II, p. 422):

"Article 9.

> These Articles may be amended by a vote of more than three-fourths of all the stock in favor thereof, at a meeting of stockholders thereof, of which a notice containing the proposed amendments shall be mailed to each stockholder at his address, as disclosed by the transfer books of the Company. Notice of such proposed meeting shall also be given by publication for three successive weeks in some newspaper of general circulation—published in the City of Des Moines, Iowa."

By the provisions of article 4 (p. 421), the annual meeting of the stockholders was fixed on the first Thurday of January of each year. At the annual meeting of the stockholders, held on January 3, 1890 (ex. 107, vol. IV, p. 1305), The Wabash Railroad Company and the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company were present in the manner pointed out by the articles of incorporation, and nominated directors to represent those companies as provided by said articles.

Likewise, the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company and the Des Moines & Northern Railway Company were present and nominated directors representing those companies (p. 1306). At this meeting the following resolution was adopted (p. 1307):

> "James F. How moved that the question of amending the Articles of Incorporation of this Company as well as the question concerning the issuing of stock for the purchase price of the terminal property be referred to Attorneys W. H. Blodgett & A. B. Cummins for their investigation and recommendation."

The meeting then adjourned to the 18th day of February, 1890. At this adjourned meeting on February 18, 1890, there were present in person F. M. Hubbell, L. M. Martin, F. C. Hubbell and A. B. Cummins, and by proxy G. M. Dodge, J. F. How, C. M. Hays and W. H. Blodgett. At this meeting the following record was made (ex. 109, vol. IV, p. 1311):

> "The secretary reported that notice of the meeting had been duly published and also reported that he had, pursuant to the articles of incorporation, notified each stockholder of the time, place and object of this meeting, which notice contained the amendments proposed to be offered to the articles of incorporation.
>
> Upon motion of A. B. Cummins the report of the Secretary was adopted and this meeting declared to be duly and legally called, for the purpose of considering and adopting or rejecting amendments to the Articles of Incorporation.
>
> Thereupon A. B. Cummins presented certain amendments to the Articles of Incorporation.
> Thereupon F. M. Hubbell moved that the meeting of stockholders do now adjourn for the purpose of having further opportunity to examine said amendments, to meet on Tuesday, the 8th day of April, 1890, at ten o'clock a. m., which motion being seconded, was unanimously carried and thereupon the meeting of stockholders adjourned to meet as aforesaid."

The record of the second adjourned meeting of the stockholders of the defendant company, held on April 8, 1890, appears as plaintiff's exhibit 28 (commencing on p. 488, vol. II). A portion of said record is as follows (p. 489):

"There were present in person:

J. F. How,	representing One Share
C. M. Hays,	representing One Share
F. M. Hubbell,	representing One Share
L. M. Martin,	representing One Share
F. C. Hubbell,	representing One Share
A. B. Cummins,	representing One Share

There were present by proxy:

G. M. Dodge, by L. M. Martin, representing One Share.

W. H. Blodgett, by J. F. How, representing One Share.

There were also present the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company, successors to the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company, by F. M. Hubbell, President.

The Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, successor to the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, by A. B. Cummins, Vice-President.

The Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company by J. F. How, President.

J. F. How, President, presiding.

Thereupon, by an examination of the records and the books of the Company, it was determined that all the stockholders of said Company were present either in person or by proxy duly filed with the Secretary of the Company."

The rule of law with reference to the presumptions indulged in favor of the recitations contained in a corporate record is so well settled that we do not need here to do more than call to the attention of the court the authorities cited in that portion of our brief devoted to this subject. Applying that rule to this record, it appears:

1. That this meeting was duly and legally called.

2. That due and legal notice of the proposal to amend the articles of incorporation of the defendant company, as the same appear to have been amended at this meeting, was given to all the stockholders of the company.

3. That all of the stockholders of the defendant company were present or represented at this meeting.

4. That the articles were amended as provided by the resolution passed at that meeting, and the officers and directors of the corporation were duly authorized to execute said amendments and give notice thereof as provided by the statutes of Iowa.

Other facts bearing upon the regularity of this meeting and the notice and knowledge of the stockholders with respect thereto, and the carrying out of the resolutions by the proper execution and filing of said amendments, will be referred to in the division of our brief relating to the acts of the parties under said amendments.

THE ADOPTION OF THE AMENDMENTS AND RESOLUTIONS WERE ACTS OF THE STOCKHOLDERS (ACTS OF COMPLAINANTS' PREDECESSORS), AS DISTINGUISHED FROM THE ACTS OF THE DEFENDANT CORPORATION, AND THE COMPLAINANTS AND THEIR PREDECESSORS WERE BOUND THEREBY.

It is the claim of petitioners, as we understand it, that even assuming the meeting of April 8, 1890, was properly called and organized, and that all the stockholders were present and represented, yet the act of amending the articles of incorporation was the act of the defendant corporation, and that the defendant could not thereby change the relations they claim theretofore existed between their predecessors and the defendant company with respect to the property in question; that is, they say that by reason of the transactions which resulted in transferring the property in question to the defendant, the title of the defendant was merely that of a trustee for the benefit of their predecessors, who were the beneficial owners, and the defendant could not by this action affect the interest of cestuis que trustent.

The error in complainants' theory grows out of a misconception of the function and effect of the adoption of the amendments to the articles of incorporation and the failure to distinguish between the effect of the action of a corporation and the action of its stockholders. It is true, of course, that a corporation cannot by its own action affect its relations or contracts with third parties without the consent of such third parties, except in so far as such action may be urged by way of estoppel. But the acts of the stockholders of April 8, 1890, were not the corporate acts of the defendant company within the meaning of this rule. They were rather the acts of complainants' predecessors, who were the stockholders in defendant company and who, the complainants claim, owned the beneficial interest in the property. This thought must be perfectly clear when we come to consider the nature of articles of incorporation and the transactions of stockholders of a corporation.

When two or more persons get together to organize a corporation under the laws of Iowa, the act of such persons is their individual act and not at all the act of the corporation about to be organized. By adopting their articles they make a contract between themselves and between the corporation and themselves, and between the corporation and the state. In making this contract they reserve the power to amend these articles of incorporation; that is, they reserve the power to change the terms of this contract at their own volition and without consulting the corporate entity, and when they meet, as provided by the terms of their contract, and change the contract by amending the articles, such act is of their own volition and without consulting the corporate entity.

The rule with relation to the nature of articles of incorporation is laid down in

Thompson on Corporations (2d Ed.), Vol. 1, sec. 172,

as follows:

"Articles of association on the one hand may be said to constitute the contract of association between the stockholders, at the same time defining the character and extent of the business in which the corporation shall engage, while on the other hand the general laws constitute the grant from the state, to those organizing the corporation, of the franchise or right of organizing the corporation and accomplishing the purposes agreed upon."

Again, the same authority, in section 312, lays down the rule:

"It is now universally conceded that the charter of a corporation is a contract. It is also very generally conceded that the charter is a contract in different aspects: (a) it is a contract between the state and the corporation; (b) between the state and the stockholders; (c) between the corporation and the stockholders; (d) between the state and third persons who have dealt with the corporation on the faith of the terms of the grant; (e) between the stockholders themselves."

In the case of

Jones v. Electric Co., 144 Fed. 756 (C. C. A.),

Judge Sanborn lays down the rule as follows (p. 770):

"The relation of a stockholder to his corporation, to its officers and to his co-stockholders is one of contract and of confidence. By the acceptance of his shares of stock, he agrees to assume the liability and to discharge the duties imposed upon a stockholder by the law. The statutes, charter and the by-laws of the corporation, as well as the settled law of the land at the time he takes his stock are read into and become a part of his agreement. The provision of the statutes of Missouri that a manufacturing corporation might be consolidated with another corporation whose objects and business were of the same nature upon the consent of three-fifths of the owners of its stock was a part of the agreement of the complainant and a consolidation made by the officers and owners of the requisite amount of the stock of his corporation by the faithful exercise of the powers thus granted was neither void in itself nor voidable at his option because it was but the performance of the agreement which he made with them."

The Supreme Court of Iowa, in the case of

lays down the rule:

"The articles of incorporation were adopted long before the indebtedness to the bank was contracted and the rights of the parties, as between themselves, were fixed by the articles of incorporation, at least from the time they were adopted by the association. The articles of incorporation were not recorded as required by section 1060 of the code and it is claimed that for this reason the stockholders are liable for the debts of the association. It is averred by the appellants that the articles of incorporation are of no validity whatever, but it is to be remembered that this is an action between stockholders. Their contractual relations as between themselves are to be found in what they adopted as their agreement. It was in writing and denominated 'articles of incorporation' and either signed or adopted by the stockholders."

Again the same court, in the case of Traer v. Lucas Prospecting Co., 124 Iowa 112, said:

"When a person becomes a shareholder in a corporation he assents to the transaction of the business expressly or impliedly authorized by its charter and, therefore, if the charter authorizes the sale or other disposition of all of its property, he cannot complain."

Applying this rule to the case at bar, when the plaintiffs' predecessors organized the defendant, the Des Moines Union Railway Company, they entered into a contract between themselves, as well as with the corporation and with the state. By the terms of this contract the stockholders reserved the power to change the contract by means of changing the articles of incorporation in the manner pointed out in the articles themselves. By the act of the stockholders' meeting of April 8, 1890, the stockholders exercised this power to change the terms of this contract. They had the right to change the contract as between the stockholders themselves, as well as between the stockholders and the corporation, so long as such action did not conflict with any statutory provision of the state, and they had the right to do this without consulting the corporate entity, because such was the right obtained by the provisions of the original articles. The stockholders were bound by whatever changes they made in this contract, and by these changes in the contract they changed their existing relations with the corporation. It seems to us that the soundness of this proposition cannot be questioned.

Therefore, when they struck out article 2 of the original articles and adopted a new article 2, as shown by the record, they abandoned all that part of the original article 2 that was not contained in the substituted article, and therefore abandoned any claim with respect to the contract of January 2, 1882, which might have been made under the article as originally adopted; and by the adoption of articles 3 and 4 in place of the original articles numbered the same, they abandoned any right to control the alienation of the property in controversy as provided in the original articles, and adopted a method of controlling the defendant corporation which consisted in requiring the election of directors to be made by a more than seven-eighths vote of the outstanding stock, and requiring that all major action of the board should be by unanimous vote; and by the adoption of articles 14 and 15 they ratified the purchase by the defendant of the property in controversy and abandoned any and all claims which could be made under the contract of January 2, 1882.

By the adoption of the resolutions appearing on pages 494 to 496 of volume II, these stockholders (complainants' predecessors) declared:

1. That the original agreement between them and the defendant corporation was that the defendant purchased the property in controversy "including the franchises incident thereto," at its fair value, payable partly in first mortgage bonds and partly in capital stock of the company.

2. That these bonds had been issued and received by the persons entitled thereto.

3. That there still remained to be paid the sum of $400,000.00 upon said purchase price, which sum was to be paid in the capital stock of the defendant company.

4. They determined who was entitled to receive such capital stock.

5. That the articles of incorporation had been amended to conform to the true intent of the several parties.

6. They authorized the issuance of the capital stock which was to be issued as a part of the purchase price.

7. They modified and amended all prior proceedings so as to comply with the action at that time taken by the stockholders.

This action, as we have stated, was the action of the stockholders, the plaintiffs' predecessors. They had the right to make this contract changing the terms of the prior contract, and they had the right to do it without the assent of the defendant corporation, because they had reserved that right in the original contract. There was an adequate consideration for it and as we will hereafter show, they have ever since acted in pursuance of the amended contract (the amended articles of incorporation).

THESE AMENDMENTS TO THE ARTICLES WERE PROPERLY SIGNED, ACKNOWLEDGED, RECORDED, AND NOTICE THEREOF WAS GIVEN AS REQUIRED BY THE IOWA STATUTE. THE COMPLAINANTS AND THEIR PREDECESSORS HAD BOTH ACTUAL AND CONSTRUCTIVE NOTICE THEREOF. THEY CARRIED ON THE BUSINESS OF THE DEFENDANT CORPORATION UNDER THESE AMENDMENTS FOR THE PERIOD OF SEVENTEEN YEARS BEFORE THE COMMENCEMENT OF THIS SUIT, AND ARE NOW ESTOPPED BY THEIR LACHES TO RAISE THE QUESTION OF THE VALIDITY OF THESE AMENDMENTS.

We have already called to the attention of the court the corporate record in relation to these amendments, and we will here content ourselves with referring to some of the evidence there is in the record showing both actual and constructive knowledge with respect to these amendments outside of the corporate record itself.

It will be remembered that at the annual meeting of the defendant company in January, 1890, the subject of the amendments was referred to Colonel Blodgett and to Mr. A. B. Cummins. The testimony of Mr. Cummins will be found commencing on page 1203 of volume III. The substance of his testimony on this subject is as follows (commencing p. 1206):

> "I never heard any suggestion from anybody connected with the property or the proceedings, that the Des Moines Union Railway Company was not the owner of the property referred to. This, however, does not cover the suggestions that I myself made to persons who were interested in these companies concerning the title to the property at the time I was engaged in preparing certain amendments to the articles of incorporation, and before that time. My answer is intended only to relate to suggestions made by other persons with whom I was connected, than myself.
>
> The suggestions I made began very soon after I became the counsel for the Des Moines Union Railway Company, and while I cannot recall the dates or places, I know that I made them at the meetings of the directors, meetings of the stockholders, and individually to everybody who was connected with the Des Moines Union Railway Company, or those companies which were then called the tenant companies. In order to answer the question intelligently, it seems to me it would be necessary for me to state the situation as I recall it, because that situation was the subject of repeated conferences and conversations with these various representatives of these several companies.

In the first part of the year 1890, and before that but after I had become thoroughly familiar with the affairs of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, this is the way in which it was presented to me: First, as to the tenant companies, the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company had practically passed out of existence. It was the owner of one-half of the capital stock of the Des Moines Union Railway Company at that time.

I am not pretending to repeat what I told the stockholders. I am stating the situation as it appeared then to me, and that situation I discussed with all the people connected with this company at various times, and it was that situation which led up to the proposition on my part to amend the articles of incorporation. I made that proposition, and the title to the property was one of the phases of the proposition. I have already said the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company was practically out of existence. It was the nominal owner of one-half the capital stock in the Des Moines Union Railway Company, except as that title had passed to the Purchasing Committee of the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company; and the original articles of incorporation specifically provided that certain interests were to nominate a certain number each of directors. The Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company had purchased of the Purchasing Committee a one-fourth interest in the stock of the Des Moines Union Railway Company. It was in trouble, that is to say, it was finding great difficulty in making its revenue meet its expenses. Nobody knew what was ahead for that company. The St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company was also the owner, from the beginning, as I remember it, of one-fourth interest in the stock of the Des Moines Union Company; it likewise was on the verge of bankruptcy. It was impossible to predict with any certainty what would become of it or its interest in the Des Moines Union Company, and this situation presented, as I thought, a very serious question.

I knew at that time that negotiations were pending between Mr. Hubbell and the Purchasing Committee for the purchase of a part of the one-half of the capital stock then held by the Purchasing Committee. The Purchasing Committee seemed to be anxious to dispose of a portion of this stock, and looking forward to the conduct of the Company in the future, it seemed to me that readjustment of that phase of the articles of incorporation I have referred to was absolutely necessary. More than that, it was discussed among all these people, that, inasmuch as the project of the union depot had been brought into existence, it was hoped that all the railroads in Des Moines could be brought into these terminals; that it would be very wise to have it so arranged that each railroad that might come into the depot in the future might become the owner of one-eighth of the capital stock. I thought that hope or expectation could never be realized without an amendment to the articles of incorporation, as it is evident that it could not be. Moreover, the original articles provided for a capital stock of one million dollars, and as I understood these articles, that stock was to be issued as a part of the purchase price of the property. The articles had been subsequently amended so as to increase the capital stock to two million dollars, and in that amendment it was specifically provided that the board of directors might receive in payment for this stock the property which had theretofore been conveyed—speaking of theretofore, at the time I made these suggestions to the Des Moines Union Railway Company.

I was always somewhat opposed to issuing capital stock without consideration and I did not believe that the property was worth any such amount and that to issue it in that way would impose, if disaster should come, a liability upon its owners, and would frustrate in a measure the hope of getting into this Des Moines Union Railway Company as stockholders as many of the railroads entering Des Moines as could be brought in. This was the standpoint as viewed, I thought, by the stockholders; but from the standpoint of the Des Moines Union Railway Company the situation was even more complicated and unsatisfactory.

And now I come to the specific answer to the question that was put to me. The Des Moines Union Railway Company was ignoring entirely, as it seemed to me, both as to ownership and as to management, the contract out of which the Des Moines Union Railway Company grew, namely, the contract of 1882. It had abandoned the terms of the contract as to the title of the property and as to the method of operation and management.

I am testifying to the substance of what I told these people and told all of them. The Des Moines Union was ignoring the articles of incorporation which in themselves, as I thought then and said then, were inconsistent with the contract of January, 1882. I told them that the contract provided for a title of the property in trust for the three companies which had signed it and for the joint use and occupation limited by Farnham Street in the west part of the city, and the company was claiming to own and operate a property extending to the west border of the city, and in the contract the Des Moines & St. Louis Railway Company, the company that had really no active functions, was charged with certain management and control of the property, and the other companies were required to pay to it whatever sums they were obliged to pay for the use of the property. And furthermore, the contract and the articles seemed to contemplate in certain very important matters that there should be a formal preliminary approval by three independent companies before it could take action.

The substance of it was that I said that in view of the original articles, in view of the conveyances that had been made to the Des Moines Union Railway Company of the property which was originally in the names of Gen. Dodge and Mr. How, both individually and as trustee, and possibly some in the name of one of these other companies, or both of them, and that the Des Moines Union Railway Company had paid in its bonds for the original outlay for this property and had provided in its articles for the issuance of capital stock for the remainder of the purchase price, if any, that it was imperative to clear up the title and get rid of any question of doubt respecting the ownership of the Des Moines Union Railway Company and its right to manage its own property. These were the reasons which led up to my suggestion that there ought to be an amendment to the articles of incorporation that would put this company beyond any question in the ownership and control of its property just as any other corporation would be, leaving the interests which had been created in favor of the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company and the Des Moines Northern Railway Company and the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company to be represented by the stock as in the case of other corporations, and the only suggestion that I ever heard from anybody in all my connection with any of these companies regarding the title to the property was the suggestion that I made myself arising out of the circumstances that I have stated.

I prepared a draft of the amended articles of incorporation that were finally adopted April 8, 1890, and I wrote Col. Blodgett the letter of date January 22, 1890. (This is the letter in which Col. Blodgett is advised that the stockholders of the terminal company had referred the question of amendments to Col. Blodgett and Mr. Cummins. See volume III, p. 1210.)

Prior to April 8, 1890, the draft of the amended articles of incorporation as it was afterwards adopted, was submitted to Col. Blodgett as the representative of the legal department of the Wabash interests, and I had a conference with him about it, and possibly more than one. I also discussed the matter with Mr. Hays (p. 311). I also wrote to Gen. Dodge about it in a letter dated January 27, 1890. (This is a letter in which Gen. Dodge was sent a copy of the proposed amendments, and in which it is stated that Mr. Hubbell was at first disposed to oppose the amendments. See p. 1211.)

These amendments were not suggested by Mr. Hubbell. They were entirely my own suggestion and came about in the way that I have already related. With regard to Mr. Hubbell's opposition, my recollection is that Mr. Hubbell—conservative then as now, never disposed to move very rapidly into the future—was opposed to my proposition, as I thought, without any good reason (p. 1212).

So far as I know, every interest in the terminal property concurred in and was in favor of the adoption of the amended articles before the meeting was held at which they were adopted. I was not aware of any opposition at all at that time. In fact, I know that they had all consented to it. In connection with the proposed amendments I had prepared a resolution, or series of resolutions, carrying out my general proposition, which had been submitted to all, I believe, who were interested in the matter and was understood to be a part of the thing to be done at the meeting just as we understood the amendments were to be adopted. I do not remember who suggested the exact amount of four hundred thousand dollars. I only know that I had suggested that it ought to be a great deal less amount than two million dollars and ought to be an amount that could fairly be said to represent, together with the bonds, the value of the Des Moines Union Railway Company property at the time the company was organized in 1884.

During the discussion that preceded this meeting and at this meeting there was no suggestion by anybody that the Des Moines Union Railway Company was not to acquire the absolute title for this property for which it was issuing this stock and these bonds. On the contrary, everybody there knew the very purpose, or one of the purposes, for adopting the amended articles of incorporation was to remove all doubt or any doubt on that subject and to abrogate the contract of 1882.

I prepared the preambles and resolutions at my own suggestion. I did it because it was the next step to be taken to clear up the matters that I was endeavoring to clear up in the amendment to the articles of incorporation. I recited that these people were present because they were present, and my understanding was that the eight directors and the three companies owned all of the capital stock of the Des Moines Union Railway Company. Neither of the Hubbells had anything to do with the preparation of the resolution, nor the incorporation of any part of it, unless it were to furnish me with the information that was necessary in order to draft it. I recall in this connection that between the time the resolution was passed for the preparation of amendments to the articles and this meeting to which you have just referred, the Purchasing Committee had sold a portion of the stock of the Des Moines Union Railway Company to Mr. Hubbell and, as I remember it, a portion of it to General Dodge.

All of the persons who are recited to have been present upon that occasion had information from me with regard to the articles of incorporation, the amendments to the articles of incorporation and the resolution to which reference has been made, and in addition to those who were present, Col. Blodgett had information of these things from me, and General Dodge had information of these things from me, and my recollection is that Mr. Ashley also had information from me.

There was no attempt to conceal the transaction. On the other hand, as far as I was concerned, I made every possible effort that everybody connected with the whole matter should be fully and completely informed, and I drew the resolutions as specific as they are and as long as they are in order that there could be no possible controversy about it."

On cross examination Mr. Cummins testified on this subject (p. 1237):

> "I suggested that the articles of incorporation should be amended months before I knew that Mr. Hubbell was negotiating for any stock or that he had any idea of buying any part of the stock, as I now recall it."

There is no testimony to contradict that of Senator Cummins as to the manner in which the subject of the articles arose and the publicity of the matter, or as to the fact that everybody was consulted and thoroughly informed with respect thereto, but on the contrary all the evidence corroborates his testimony.

There are a few other significant facts shown by the record to corroborate the theory that the stockholders and parties interested in the corporate affairs of the terminal company had proper notice of the proposed amendments to the articles of incorporation and consented thereto and acquiesced therein.

It will be noted that article 4 of the original articles of incorporation of the terminal company (exs. 5½ and 6, vol. II, p. 421), which provides for the election of directors, contained the following provisions:

> "Four members of the Board shall be nominated by the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company, two members by the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company and two members by the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, and no stockholders shall be eligible for membership of the Board unless so nominated.
> The fact that a candidate has been duly nominated shall be certified to the Stockholders' meeting of this Company by the Secretary of one of the respective companies aforesaid and such certification shall be conclusive."

This is a very peculiar and unusual provision in relation to the election of directors. It appears that the first meeting of the stockholders of the terminal company for the purpose of electing directors, so far as is shown by the record, was on March 31, 1888 (ex. 26, vol. II, p. 476). At this meeting James F. How nominated four directors on behalf of the Wabash Company and the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company and the Wabash Western Railway Company; F. M. Hubbell nominated directors on behalf of the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company, and G. M. Dodge nominated directors on behalf of the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company. These directors so nominated were elected.

The next annual meeting of the stockholders of the terminal company was held on January 8, 1889, and a like proceeding was had; A. B. Cummins nominated four directors on behalf of the Wabash Company and the Wabash Western Railway Company; Mr. Hubbell nominated two directors on behalf of the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company, and L. M. Martin nominated two directors on behalf of the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company (ex. 106, vol. IV, p. 1304).

At the next annual meeting of the stockholders of the terminal company, held January 3, 1890 (ex. 107, vol. IV, p. 1305), a like proceeding was had.

We quote from the record as follows:

> "• • • J. F. How on behalf of the Wabash Railroad Company operating the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, nominated Jas. F. How, C. M. Hays, W. H. Blodgett and A. B. Cummins to be voted for as directors of the Des Moines Union Railway Company to represent the said Wabash Railroad Company, it having been certified to this meeting by the Secretary of the Wabash Railroad Company and Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company that the above named gentlemen had been duly nominated as candidates for directors in this Company on behalf of the Wabash Railroad Company, and the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company."

A like record was made with respect to nominations by G. M. Dodge on behalf of the Des Moines & Northern Railway Company and by F. M. Hubbell on behalf of the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company.

It will, therefore, be noted that down to this time this peculiar method of nominating directors was followed.

The amendments to the articles of incorporation of the terminal company adopted April 8, 1890, changed the method of nominating directors and provided the usual method in that respect. (See article 4 of the amendments to the articles of incorporation, ex. 303, vol. IV, p. 1604.)

At the next annual meeting of the stockholders of the terminal company, held February 11, 1891 (ex. 115, vol. IV, p. 1318), no certificates of these various railroads were presented certifying the nomination for directors as was required by the original articles, but the various stockholders appeared in person or by proxy and the directors were elected as they are ordinarily elected at corporate meetings. At no time after the annual meeting, held on January 3, 1890, were any certificates of the secretaries of these railway companies presented certifying the nomination of directors as provided for in the original articles, but on the contrary at all meetings after that the ordinary and usual method was followed as provided in the amendments. The necessary conclusion from this is that all the railroads and all the stockholders knew of and acquiesced in and ratified the amendments to the articles of incorporation.

Again, as we have already shown, the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company had authorized that portion of the stock that was coming to that company to be issued to the Purchasing Committee of the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company, which, upon acceptance of the stock, or acquiescence there in by the Purchasing Committee, constituted such Purchasing Committee stockholders in this company. It will be remembered that prior to the adoption of these amendments to the articles, Mr. Hubbell and General Dodge had bought of the Purchasing Committee each one-eighth of the capital stock of the terminal company. One of the agreements in connection with this purchase (ex. 300, vol. IV, p. 1601), was that the articles of incorporation should be so amended as to permit one director of the terminal company to be nominated by any person or corporation holding one-eighth of the stock. At this time Colonel Blodgett was one of the directors nominated by the Wabash interests as representing it (ex. 107, vol. IV, p. 1306). At the conclusion of the meeting of April 8, 1890, at which the articles of incorporation were amended (ex. 28, vol. II, p. 496), the resignation of Colonel Blodgett as director was accepted and Mr. H. D. Thompson, a brother-in-law of Mr. Hubbell, was elected to fill his place. Undoubtedly this was done in pursuance of the agreement entered into with the Purchasing Committee, as heretofore stated, at the time it sold this stock to Mr. Hubbell and to General Dodge, and the necessary inference is that the Purchasing Committee was advised of this meeting, its purpose, and that the resignation of Colonel Blodgett was presented at the suggestion of such committee.

Again it is shown by complainants' testimony that Mr. How and Mr. Hays, both of whom were present at the meeting and voted for the adoption of these amendments, represented the Wabash interests, whatever they were (vol. II, p. 242).

Again it will be remembered that the authorized capital stock of the terminal company was $1,000,000.00, which was raised to $2,000,000.00 by an amendment adopted November 1, 1887 (vol. IV, p. 1298).

By the resolutions of January, 1885, and November, 1887, by which the transfer of the property to the terminal company was authorized, it was provided that as a part of the purchase price there should be issued all of the defendant's capital stock.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, held on April 8, 1890 (the same day on which the articles of the defendant company were amended), and at which were present James F. How, C. M. Hays, A. B. Cummins, F. M. Hubbell, H. S. Priest and George S. Grover, all of whom, except Mr. Hubbel, were either officers or attorneys of the Wabash Company, the following proceedings were had (ex. 185, vol. IV, p. 1434):

> 'C. M. Hays offered the following resolution and moved its adoption:
>
> Whereas, the purchasing committee of the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company has sold to F. M. Hubbell one-eighth and to G. M. Dodge one-eighth of the stock of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, and
>
> Whereas, the entire capital stock of said company owned by the company, issued as a part of the purchase price thereof, has been fixed at Four Hundred Thousand Dollars,
>
> It is therefore now
> Resolved, that the said sale by the said Purchasing Committee be and the same is hereby ratified, confirmed and approved by the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company."

How did the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company ascertain that that portion of the purchase price of the terminal property which was to be paid in defendant's capital stock had been fixed at $400,000.00? All of the proceedings prior to April 8, 1890, had provided that the capital stock to be issued in part payment of the purchase price was the full capital stock authorized by the defendant to be issued, which was originally $1,000,000.00, and subsequently $2,000,000.00. The only place where it was fixed at $400,000.00 was at the meeting of the stockholders of the defendant company, held on April 8, 1890, and it must have been from this record that the Des Moines & St. Louis Company ascertained this fact. It therefore necessarily follows that the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company had knowledge of the proceedings of the stockholders of the defendant company on April 8, 1890, by which the articles of the defendant company were amended, and the amount of the capital stock to be issued in part payment for the property was fixed at $400,000.00.

On the same day there was issued to the Purchasing Committee of the Wabash Company, 1,000 shares of stock of the defendant company (less two shares of stock, standing in the name of directors), (ex. 79, vol. II, p. 711).

Bearing in mind that the resolutions of November, 1887, authorized the issuance to the Purchasing Committee of 15,000 shares of stock of the defendant company as a part of the purchase price, of what was the Purchasing Committee put upon its inquiry when it received this 1,000 shares of stock? This was adequate notice to the Purchasing Committee that some change had been made in the plan and it was up to the Purchasing Committee to make inquiry, and if it had done so it would have discovered the action of April 8, 1890, if it didn't already know about it.

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Des Moines Union Railway Company held February 11, 1891, which was the first annual meeting after the adoption of the amendments of April 8, 1890, there were present G. M. Dodge, James F. How, C. M. Hays, F. M. Hubbel, L. M. Martin, F. C. Hubbell and A. B. Cummins, all in person, and the Purchasing Committee of the Wabash Company by James F. How, proxy, the Des Moines & Northwesteri Railway Company by F. C. Hubbell, vice-president, and the Des Moines & Northern Railway Company by G. M. Dodge, president (ex. 115, vol. IV, pp. 1318-9). At this meeting the following proceedings were had:

> "The President stated the first business of the meeting to be the reading of the minutes of the previous meeting of the stockholders held during the year 1890, and the minutes of the directors' meetings and of the Executive Committee, and thereupon called upon the Secretary to read the same, which was done.
>
> Mr. A. B. Cummins moved that the proceedings of the stockholders' meeting and the meetings of the board of directors and of the Executive Committee be approved. The motion was seconded and carried."

It will be remembered that certificates of stock had been issued prior to this meeting.

There was no controversy but that plaintiffs' predecessors were present at this meeting by their proper representatives, so at this time they were all advised of the amendments to the articles of incorporation of April 8, 1890, and the action was formally approved. An examination of the corporate records of the defendant company will disclose that from April 8, 1890, down to the time of the commencement of this suit the business of the defendant company was carried on under the amendments of April 8, 1890, and no question was ever raised about their validity. (See vol. IV, commencing p. 1314.)

The amendments to the articles of incorporation as adopted April 8, 1890, appear as defendants' exhibit 303 (vol. IV, pp. 1604-10). They were signed and acknowledged by F. M. Hubbell, F. C. Hubbell, A. B. Cummins, Horace Seeley, L. M. Martin, Charles M. Hays, James F. How, Wells H. Blodgett, G. M. Dodge and H. D. Thompson (p. 1604), and were filed for record in the office of the county recorded of Polk County, Iowa, on April 23, 1890, and in the office of the secretary of state on May 12, 1890 (p. 1610), as required by the statute of Iowa.

Notice of these amendments was properly published as required by the statutes of Iowa (exs. 614-5, vol. IV, pp. 2010-1).

By chapter 88 of the acts of the twenty-second General Assembly (1888), in force on April 8, 1890, it was provided:

> "That any of the provisions of the Articles of Incorporation may be changed at any annual meeting of the stockholders or special meeting called for that purpose; but said changes shall not be valid unless recorded and published as the original articles are required to be; and said changes in the Articles need only be signed and acknowledged by the officers of said Corporation."

By chapter 23 of the laws of the seventeenth General Assembly (1878), in force on April 8, 1890, it was provided:

> "Previous to commencing any business, except that of their own organization, they must adopt articles of incorporation, which must be signed and acknowledged by the incorporators, and recorded in the office of the recorder of deeds of the county where the principal place of business is to be, in a book kept therefor; the recorder must record such articles as aforesaid, within five days after the same are filed in his office, and certify thereon the time when the same was filed in his office, and the book and page where the record thereof will be found. The said articles and certificate of recorder shall be then recorded in the office of secretary of state, in a book kept for that purpose."

Section 1613 of the code of 1897 was in force on April 8, 1890, and provided for the publication of notice of the adoption of the articles of incorporation.

The purpose of this statute is to give to the world (which includes the stockholders), notice of the articles of incorporation and amendments thereto.

In the case of

Dempster v. Downs, 126 Iowa, 80,

the Court said:

"Every one who acquires certificates of stock must be assumed to know that they were issued by virtue of articles of incorporation, and that these may be found in the office of the Secretary of State. Indeed, the very object of requiring the filing and recording of the articles is to give them the same publicity, as nearly as may be, as statutory charters, and render them easily accesisble to all who may be interested in ascertaining their contents. These articles are expressive of the relative obligations of the company and stockholders, and inhere in the certificates of stock, in whosesoever hands they may come."

If the provisions of the articles of incorporation and amendments stand upon the same basis and must be taken notice of by all the world, including the transferees of the stock, certainly the filing, recording and giving notice of the amendments is constructive notice of the provisions thereof to all stockholders.

In passing, we may call the court's attention to the fact that petitioners acquired their stock and whatever interest they have in this property long after the adoption of these amendments, and, therefore, come squarely within the doctrine of the above case, but of this we will have more to say at a later time.

Not only does the record show that complainants and their predecessors had actual and constructive notice of these amendments to the articles, but it is a presumption of law that all stockholders assent to any change in the articles of incorporation.

Holmes v. Loan Assn., 107 S. W. (Mo.) 1005.
Cook on Corporations, (6th Ed.) Vol. 2, sec. 503.

THE PUBLICATION OF THE AMENDMENTS.

The objection made by counsel to the sufficiency of the published notice of the Amendments is without validity. The Statute of Iowa, Code of 1897, Sec. 1613, requires the published notice of incorporation to show,

1. The name of the corporation and its principal place of business.

2. The general nature of the business to be transacted.

3. The amount of capital stock authorized and the times and conditions on which it is to be paid in.

4. The time of the commencement and termination of the corporation.

5. By what officers or persons its affairs are to be conducted, and the time when and manner in which they will be elected.

6. The highest amount of indebtedness to which it is at any time to subject itself.

7. Whether private property is to be exempt from corporate debts.

Sec. 1615 requires amendments to be published "as the original articles are required to be."

Article two of the Articles of Incorporation of the Des Moines Union, both original and as amended comes under the second head of Section 1613, "the general nature of the business to be transacted." As to this there was no change. It was and continued to be that of a terminal railway. The allusion to the contract of 1882 did not affect this. And this was expressly decided by the Supreme Court of Iowa in Morgan vs. Des Moines Union Ry. Co., 113 Iowa 561. The Court, l. c. 565, said:

> "That defendant was incorporated under the general law is made apparent by the terms of its articles of which the following is a part: Art. II. The general nature of the business to be transacted shall be the construction, ownership and operation of a railway in, around and about the City of Des Moines, Iowa, including the construction, ownership and use of the depots, freight houses railway shops, repair shops, stock yards, and whatever else may be useful and convenient for the operation of railways at the terminal point of Des Moines, Iowa, as well as the transfer of cars from the line or depot of one railway to another, or from the various manufactories, warehouses, storehouses, or elevators to each other, or to any of the railways or depots thereof now constructed or to be hereafter constructed in or around the City of Des Moines, and such corporation shall possess all the powers conferred upon corporations for pecuniary profit by Chapter 1 of title IX of the Code and the amendments thereto.' These articles were afterward amended, but in no way was the language set out qualified in the amendment."

Counsel cite this case as if it held that the attempted amendment failed because of insufficient publication. But the Court decided nothing of the kind. It decided that the Amendment which was made, one by elimination of a mere solecism, did not qualify "the general nature of the business to be transacted," so that it was, not less than it had been, "a railway corporation" with all the powers of such a corporation. So under paragraph 2 of Section 1613 of the Code there was nothing to be published. The reference to the agreement was an incongruity, an obsolete thing recognized as such by the parties and as such removed from the articles.

In Thornton vs. Balcom, 85 Ia. 198, the articles provided as to the total of indebtedness of the corporation that it "shall not at any time exceed three hundred dollars, except by a majority vote of the stockholders present at a called or annual meeting." The published notice declared simply that "the indebtedness of the company shall not exceed three hundred dollars at any one time." The Court, l. c. 201, said:

"It is claimed that this is not a true statement of the amount of the authorized indebtedness. It appears to us that it is just such a statement as the law required. It was the amount of indebtedness then authorized, and it was wholly unnecessary to publish the manner in which the limit of indebtedness might thereafter be increased or diminished."

The statutes of Iowa do not requre publication of the articles in full, nor even of a summary of them, but only the seven enumerated points, or the substance of them. And so as to amendments. Everything enumerated in them and affected by the amendments was contained in the notice. There was much in the amendments which had no place in the notice. And so it was as to the reference to the 1882 agreement. It would be a veracious bull to say that as to this silence was the only statement required.

As between the stockholders, it was not necessary that any publication should be made. They had notice. They knew what had been done, for they participatedi in making the amendments and acted under them for years.

Heald v. Owen, 79 Iowa 95.

A DISSENTING STOCKHOLDER MUST ACT PROMPTLY.

If the complainants have any standing in this court to question the validity of the amendments of April 8, 1890, it must be in their capacity as stockholders of the defendant company. The question of the validity of a corporate action of this kind cannot be raised by one having merely contractual relations with it, but can only be raised by a stockholder or the state.

The general rule is laid down by

Cook on Corporations (6th Ed.), Vol. 2, sec. 503, as follows:

> "A stockholder may be estopped from objecting to an amendment by his express or implied acquiescence therein. Any acts indicating an acceptance by him of the amendment bind him and bar his suit. Acquiescence may sometimes grow out of his silence or delay under circumstances that called on him to dissent if he so intended. A court of equity will go far to aid a dissenting stockholder where he applies promptly and before large investments and many changes are made on the faith of the acts complained of. But laches will not be tolerated by the court, especially where important interests are involved."

In the case of

Rabé v. Dunlap, 25 Atl. (N. J.) 959, the suit was to invalidate a consolidation of two companies because beyond their corporate powers. The Court said (p. 961):

> "The stockholders of a corporation have an indisputable right to have the property of the corporation applied and used exclusively for the purpose specified in its charter, and any attempt by its managers to appropriate it to any other purpose is a ursupation of power and a violation of the rights of the stockholders. * * * But stockholders, to be entitled to the summary interference of the court in cases where they seek protection against acts which are merely in excess of the power of the corporation, and are not prohibited by law, must be diligent. They must apply so recently after the doing of the act of which they complain that the court may stop or undo the wrong to them without doing equal or greater wrong to some other person. The principle which must control the action of a court of equity in cases where the defense is laches was laid down by Lord Camden, many years ago in these words: 'Nothing can call forth the activity of a court of equity but conscience, good faith and reasonable diligence. Where these are wanting the court is passive, and does nothing. Laches and neglect are always discountenanced, and therefore, from the beginning of his jurisdiction, there was always a limitation to suits in equity.' * * *

Or, stated with greater brevity, and in its simple essence, the rule is this: If he wants protection against the consequences of an ultra vires act, he must act for it with sufficient propmtness to enable the court to do justice to him without doing injustice to others."

The general rule is laid down by Circuit Court Judge Lurton, in an opinion in the Circuit Court of Appeals, Sixth Circuit, in the case of

in which case it was claimed that the action complained of was invalid, so far as complainant was concerned, because complainant's proxy in voting at the stockholders' meeting exceeded his power as expressed in the proxy.

Referring to the question under consideration, Justice Lurton said (p. 385):

"We deem it unnecessary to express any opinion as to the conclusive effect upon Mrs. Synnott of the action of Hayward in participating in the doing of business not included in the notice for the adjourned meeting, because we are of the opinion that whether her agent could waive the sufficiency of the notice of the business undertaking at that meeting or not, nothing but the most active diligence in repudiating what was there done in her name and by her apparent consent can void the consequences of her agent's action. That action was held on January 17, 1898. This bill was filed May 1, 1899. For more than a year no protest was made to the action of her agent, and, indeed, the bill filed contains no word of complaint that he had exceeded his authority or that the meeting had exceeded the notice or call made for it.

An effort has been made to excuse Mrs. Synnott for her inaction by the claim that she did not know of the action taken at the January meeting until shortly before her bill was filed. Mrs. Synnott does not testify at all. Her husband says he acted for her in looking after her stock. He states that he cannot say definitely when he got the information as to what had been done, but thinks it was several months afterward. Mr. Synnott was an old and expert building and loan man, and though he lived in another state, it is hardly credible to suppose that he long remained in ignorance of so important and public an action as that affecting this common stock.

* * * * * * * * *

It will not do to say that no change occurred in the attitude of the company between that action and the filing of the bill. We may take notice that the shares in such companies are constantly changing hands, and new shares being issued at short periods, constituting new series of stock. It may well be presumed that the elimination of the special powers of this common stock by the apparent consent of the stockholders would be an important factor in all the future issues of new stocks and sales of old. Mrs. Synnott should have actively repudiated what was apparently done for her. Until she did so every one had a right to suppose that she had agreed to permit her shares to stand upon a plane of equality with other prepaid shares of what is called installment stock and to act upon that theory."

The rule is laid down in the case of

as follows (p. 629):

"• • • The stockholders must be charged with such knowledge as would have come to them in the exercise of due diligence and attention to their business interests, and in this case to business interests of very large magnitude."

In the case of

Thompson v. Lambert, 44 Iowa 239, complaint was made of the act of an agricultural association in making a donation to a railroad company. Complainants Thompson and Cressler were not present at the meeting at which the donation was authorized, but knew that such was being discussed.

With respect to the promptness with which they should have acted, the court said (p. 247):

"Under these circumstances we are of the opinion that Thompson and Cressler had sufficient knowledge to put them on an inquiry. They knew it was proposed in some way to have the Agricultural Society aid in building the railway, and inquiry prosecuted with diligence and a fair degree of earnestness to obtain information, would have developed the fact as to the proposal to guarantee the notes and execute the mortgage. There is nothing tending to show there was any secrecy intended, nor was the proposition in any manner concealed. But knowing the matter was talked about and canvassed, Thompson and Cressler did nothing to prevent the consummation of the claimed illegal act, and to which they were opposed until the commencement of this action in December, 1872. They had sufficient knowledge of what was proposed to be done to warrant them in applying for an injunction as early as March, 1871, and had they done so before the loan was effected, their standing and the question for determination would have been very different.

The stockholder of a corporation who seeks to prevent the consummation of an illegal corporate act, or to avoid it, should be swift to make known his desires and assert his rights through the tribunals appointed for that purpose."

The Supreme Court of the United States in one case (Foster v. Mansfield, etc., R. Co., 146 U. S. 88), has laid down the rule as follows (p. 96):

"The bill in this case was dismissed in the court below upon the ground of laches, and also for want of equity. • • •

As the alleged fraudulent sale of this road, which constitutes the gravamen of the bill, took place August 28, 1877, and the bill was not filed until August 30, 1887, ten years thereafter, there is certainly a presumption of laches, which it is incumbent upon the plaintiff to rebut. His reply is that he did not discover the fraud until a few months before the filing of the bill. • • •

The defense of want of knowledge on the part of one charged with laches is one easily made, easy to prove by his own oath, and hard to disprove; and hence the tendency of courts in recent years has been to hold the plaintiff to a rigid compliance with the law which demands, not only that he should have been ignorant of the fraud, but that he should have used reasonable diligence to have informed himself of all the facts. Especially is this the case where the party complaining is a resident of the neighborhood in which the fraud is alleged to have taken place, and the subject of such fraud is a railroad with whose ownership and management the public, and certainly the stockholders, may be presumed to have some familiarity."

It appears, therefore,

First. That the presumption is that all the stockholders had notice of this meeting at which the articles of incorporation were amended and had a copy of the proposed amendments.

Second. That the recitals contained in the minutes of the meeting are presumptively correct, and, therefore, that the stockholders had notice of the meeting and the proposed amendments and that they were all represented in person or by proxy.

Third. It is presumed that all stockholders consented to the enactment of the amendments and acquiesced therein.

Fourth. The filing, recording and giving notice of the amendments as provided by statute, is notice to the world of such amendments.

Fifth. That the stockholders are charged with notice of everything which they might have learned by the exercise of reasonable diligence, and that in order to challenge the validity of these amendments it was necessary for them to act promptly, or, as the Supreme Court of Iowa put it, "swiftly."

For more than seventeen years the defendant company, its officers, directors and stockholders (including complainants and their predecessors) acted under these amendments and acquiesced therein and no question was ever raised about their validity until the commencement of this suit. Certainly the complainants are far from having acted "swiftly" as they were required to by the rules of law above set out.

COMPLAINANTS ARE NOT IN A POSITION TO COMPLAIN OF THESE AMENDMENTS, BECAUSE THEY ACQUIRED THEIR STOCK AND WHATEVER INTEREST THEY HAVE IN THE TERMINAL COMPANY, SUBSEQUENT TO THE ENACTMENT OF THE SAME AND AFTER THE SAME WERE FILED, RECORDED AND PUBLISHED, AS REQUIRED BY STATUTE.

So far as the Wabash is concerned, the interest which it now claims to have in the property in controversy belonged originally either to the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company or to the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company, and for the purposes of this proposition it doesn't matter which.

On the 25th day of April, 1888, the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company transferred to James F. Joy, Ossian D. Ashley, Edgar T. Welles and Thomas H. Hubbard, known as the Purchasing Committee, all its property (ex. 45, vol. II, p. 536). After describing the specific property, this deed by its terms (p. 540) includes "also all the property, rights, interests and choses in action acquired by said Wabash Railroad Company after June 1st, 1880, whether hereinbefore described or not." This would be sufficient to transfer to the Purchasing Committee whatever rights the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company had in the property in controversy.

As we have heretofore shown, the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company authorized the issuance of its share of the stock to the Purchasing Committee and all the parties recognized the title of the Purchasing Committee to the stock.

On June 1, 1899, about nine years after the amendments to the articles of incorporation, the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company transferred to the complainant, The Wabash Company, all the property of the first named company (ex. 44, vol. II, p. 533), and included in the deed is the following:

> "does grant, bargain, sell, assign and set over unto the Wabash Railroad Company, its successors and assigns forever, all of its said line of railroad and right of way as the same now is, or may be hereafter constructed, or acquired in said State of Iowa, commencing at a point in or near the City of Des Moines, where said road connects with the tracks of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, and extending from thence * * * to the town or city of Albia in Monroe County, * * * and all its rights, privileges and franchises and all other things, real and personal, now owned, or used, or that may be hereafter owned or used by the party of the first part in connection with the line of railroad above described and herein and hereby granted, and especially including all the rights and leasehold and other interests of the first party under a contract dated May 10th, 1889, between the Des Moines Union Railway Company of the first part and the Des Moines and St. Louis Railroad Company, the Des Moines and Northwestern Railway Company, and the St. Louis, Des Moines and Northern Railway Company, of the second part."

Whatever interest in the property in controversy was acquired by the complainant, The Wabash Company, from the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company was acquired by virtue of this deed. On August 18, 1898, the Purchasing Committee transferred to The Wabash Company, all the property acquired and then owned by the Purchasing Committee. Whatever interest the complainant, The Wabash Company, acquired from the Purchasing Committee in the property in controversy was acquired by virtue of this deed and by the transfer of the stock of the terminal company to the Continental Trust Company on March 23, 1899, which latter company held the same as security for the indebtedness of the Wabash Company.

On the 1st day of May, 1899, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company acquired from the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Company (ex. 74, vol. II, p. 673), its interest in the property in controversy, which is described (p. 675) "and also a one-fourth interest in the capital stock of the Des Moines Union Railway Company."

It appears, therefore, that for a period of about nine years complainants' predecessors acted under the articles of incorporation of the terminal company, as amended on April 8, 1890, and that complainants for another period of eight years after acquiring their interest in the stock, themselves acted under said articles before they brought this suit.

The ninety-fourth equity rule provides as follows:

> "Every bill brought by one or more stockholders in a corporation against the corporation and other parties, founded on rights which may properly be asserted by the corporation, must be verified by oath, and must contain an allegation that the plaintiff was a shareholder at the time of the transaction of which he complains, or that his share had devolved on him by operation of law, and that the suit is not a collusive one to confer on a court of the United States jurisdiction of a case of which it would not otherwise have cognizance. It must also set forth with particularity the efforts of the plaintiff to secure such action as he desires on the part of the managing directors or trustees, and, if necessary, of the shareholders, and the causes of his failure to obtain such action."

This rule is carried forward in substantially the same language as equity rule number twenty-seven, taking effect February 1, 1913.

This proceeding, so far as it relates to the validity of the amendments to the articles of incorporation of April 8, 1890, is a proceeding by the stockholders of the terminal company founded on alleged rights which may properly be asserted by the corporation, that is, the stockholders in the terminal company having the power to amend the articles of incorporation, have the power to repeal such amendments or to declare them invalid and of no effect, if such is true. The proper forum to which the complainants should make their first appeal is the annual meeting of the stockholders. This has never been done, although seventeen such annual meetings were held subsequent to the adoption of the amendments and before the commencement of this suit. During all these years the subject of the validity of these amendments never seems to have been mentioned by any one to any one, or to have been thought of by any one until the value of this property became so great as to excite the cupidity of complainants.

The purpose of the enactment of the rule was twofold: first, to prevent collusive suits being brought in the United States courts, and, second, to establish the equitable rule of law that one who has bought into a corporation may not complain of the acts of the corporation prior thereto, because he bought with actual or constructive knowledge of the situation, and because any other rule might permit a holder of stock to challenge the act of the corporation even though his stock had been voted in favor of such act.

The second reason for the rule above indicated applies with twofold force when we come to consider the validity of the amendments to the articles of incorporation enacted prior to the acquisition of the stock by complainants. In the first place, the amendments having been executed, acknowledged, recorded, and notice having been given as provided by law, subsequent stockholders have constructive notice of the amendments; and in the second place, complainants do not claim to have been deceived with respect to these amendments or to have been ignorant of them. Under these circumstances, it seems to us that with respect to this particular issue complainants come squarely within the terms of equity rule XCIV, for both of the reasons suggested, and for this reason if for no other they are not entitled to relief with respect to these amendments.

III.

THE COMPLAINANTS ARE ESTOPPED FROM ASSERTING THAT THE OWNERSHIP OF THE TERMINAL PROPERTY IS NOT VESTED ABSOLUTELY IN THE DES MOINES UNION RAILWAY COMPANY, AND FROM CLAIMING THAT THE STOCK OF THE COMPANY HELD BY THE DEFENDANT, F. M. HUBBELL & SON, DOES NOT REPRESENT A VALUABLE INTEREST THEREIN.

As we have heretofore indicated, the real purpose of this suit is to secure a decree which will make the capital stock held by the defendant, F. M. Hubbell & Son, of no value. If the complainants owned all the stock in the defendant company, then the question of whether it had a perfect title to the terminal property would be of no importance, because in either event the complainants would own the beneficial interest. Therefore, they seek a decree which will give them a direct interest in the property and which would destroy the value of the stock.

The doctrine of equitable estoppel is well settled in the courts of the United States and in the State of Iowa, as well as in other courts of last resort. In order to meet the rule, the following facts must appear:

1. Representations, either active or passive, on the part of the persons against whom the rule is sought to be enforced.

2. A reliance upon such representations by the person or persons in whose favor the doctrine is invoked.

3. Acts of such persons resulting in changing their position.

In the

Encyclopedia of the U. S. Supreme Court Rep., Vol. 5, p. 939, the editor of that work refers to the principle as follows:

> "The principle of estoppel in pais or by the act of the party is an important one in the administration of the law. It is founded in reason and justice and in a wise and salutary policy. It is a means of repose. It promotes fair dealing. It accomplishes that which ought to be done between man and man, and is not permitted to go beyond this limit. It is available only for protection, and cannot be used as a weapon of assault. It cannot be made an instrument of wrong or oppression, and it often gives triumph to right and justice where nothing else known to our jurisprudence can, by its operation, save them from defeat or secure those ends. It is akin to the principle involved in the limitation of actions, and does its work of justice and repose where the statute cannot be invoked."

In the case of

Morgan v. Railway Co., 96 U. S. 716, the court lays down the rule as follows (p. 720):

> "The appellee insists that the record discloses a case of estoppel in pais, and that the appellant is thereby barred from maintaining the claim which he seeks to enforce in this litigation. The principle is an important one in the administration of the law. It not infrequently gives triumph to right and justice where nothing else could save them from defeat. It proceeds upon the ground that he who has been silent as to his alleged rights, when he ought in good faith to have spoken, shall not be heard to speak when he ought to be silent. The Bank of the United States vs. Lee, 13 Pet. 107.

He is not permitted to deny a state of things which by his culpable silence or misrepresentations he had led another to believe existed, and who has acted accordingly upon that belief. The doctrine always presupposes error on one side and fault or fraud upon the other, and some defect of which it would be inequitable for the party against whom the doctrine is asserted to take advantage. Merchants' Bank vs. State Bank, 10 Wall. 604."

In the case of

Kirk v. Hamilton, 102 U. S. 68, the court says (p. 75):

"In the view we take of the case, it is unnecessary to pass upon these several objections. If it be assumed that the record of the suit of Moore & Co. vs. Kirk, etc., was, of itself, insufficient in law to divest Kirk of title to the premises in dispute, or to invest Hamilton with title, the question still remains, whether the facts disclosed by the first bill of exceptions do not constitute a defense to the present action.

After the confirmation of the sale of April 19, 1864, before any deed had been made, and while the cause was upon reference for a statement, as well of the trustee's account as for distribution of the fund realized by the sales, Kirk it seems, appeared before the auditor, by an attorney, and made objection to the allowance of the simple-contract debts which had been proven against him in his absence. So far as the record discloses, no other objection to the proceedings was interposed by him. Undoubtedly, he then knew, he must be conclusively presumed to have known, after he appeared before the auditor, all that had taken place in that suit during his absence from the District, including the sale of the premises in dispute, which took place only a few months prior to his appearance before the auditor. If that sale was a nullity, the court, upon application by Kirk, after his appearance before the auditor, could have disregarded all that had been done subsequently to the first sale, discharged Hamilton's bond, returned the money he had paid, and, in addition, placed Kirk in the actual possession of the property. No such application was made. No such claim was asserted. No effort was made by him to prevent the execution of a deed to the purchaser at the second sale. So far as the record shows, he seemed to have acquiesced in what had been done in his absence. In 1868, three years after his return to the city, and two years after Hamilton had secured a deed in pursuance of his purchase he became aware that Hamilton was in actual possession of the premises, claiming and improving them as his property. He personally knew of Hamilton's expenditures of money in their improvement, and remained silent as to any claim of his own. Indeed, his assertion while the improvements were being made, of claim to only three feet of ground next to the adjoining lot upon which he resided, was in effect, a disclaimer that he had, or would assert, a claim to the remainder of the lots 7 and 9 which Hamilton had purchased at the sale in April, 1864. and his subsequent declaration that he was in error in claiming even that three feet of ground, only added force to his former disclaimer of title in the premises. Hamilton was in possession under an apparent title acquired, as we must assume from the record, in entire good faith, by what he supposed to be a valid judicial sale, under the sanction of a court of general jurisdiction.

The only serious question upon this branch of the case is whether, consistently with the authorities, the defense is available to Hamilton in this action of ejectment to recover the possession of the property. We are of opinion that the present case comes within the reasons upon which rest the established exceptions to the general rule that title to land cannot be extinguished or transferred by acts in pais or by oral declarations. 'What I induce my neighbor to regard as true is the truth as between us, if he has been misled by my asservation,' became a settled rule of property at a very early period in courts of equity. The same principle is thus stated by Chancellor Kent in Wendell vs. Van Ransselaer, 1 Johns (N. Y.) Ch. 344: 'There is no principle better established, in this court, nor one founded on more solid considerations of equity and public utility, than that which declares, that if one man, knowingly, though he does it passively, by looking on, suffiers another to purchase and expend money on land, under an erroneous opinion of title, without making known his own claim, shall not afterwards be permitted to exercise his legal right against such person. It would be an act of fraud and injustice, and his conscience is bound by this equitable estoppel.' p. 354."

In

Linton v. Nat. Life Ins. Co., 104 Fed. 584,

Judge Sanborn states the rule as follows (p. 589):

"* * * One who by his acts or representations or by his silence when he ought to speak out, intentionally or through culpable negligence induces another to believe certain facts to exist, and the latter rightfully acts on such belief, so that he will be prejudiced if the former is permitted to deny the existence of such facts, is thereby conclusiveley estopped from interposing such denial."

In the case of

Given v. Times Printing Co., 114 Fed. 92, the same authority states the rule as follows (p. 95):

> "No principle is more universal in the jurisprudence of civilized nations, no principle is more equitable in itself or more salutary in its effects, than that one who, by his acts or representations, or by his silence when he ought to speak out, intentionally or through culpable negligence induces another to believe certain facts to exist, and the latter rightfully acts on such a belief, so that he will be prejudiced if the former is permitted to deny the existence of such facts, is thereby conclusively estopped to interpose such denial. This principle is equitable, because it forbids the untruthful or culpably negligent deceiver from profiting by his own wrong at the expense of the innocent purchaser or contractor who believed him. It is salutary because it represses falsehood and fraud. It rests on the solid foundation of our common sense of justice, which revolts at the idea of rewarding the intentional or culpably negligent deceiver at the expense of the innocent purchaser who believed him."

In this latter case this rule was applied to a sole stockholder in a corporation who had sold his stock without disclosing the fact of the existence of an indebtedness of the corporation to him.

The rule in Iowa is laid down as follows:

> "Where a party by his conduct induces another to act to his own disadvantage he will not afterwards be permitted to change his position."

Wright v. Leith, 146 Iowa 290.
Seberg v. Bank, 141 Iowa 99.
Anderson v. Buchanan, 139 Iowa 676.

It will be remembered that in February, 1890, the defendant, F. M. Hubbell, and G. M. Dodge each purchased of the Purchasing Committee one-eighth (or 500 shares) of the capital stock of the defendant company, for which they paid a valuable consideration, which consideration was finally received by The Wabash Company; that in June of the same year, the defendant, F. M. Hubbell, purchased an additional 500 shares from the Purchasing Committee; that this stock became the property of the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railway Company, and that in 1892 the defendant, F. M. Hubbell & Son, acquired from the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railway Company 2,500 shares of the stock of the defendant company, which ever since said date has stood upon the books of said company as owned by F. M. Hubbell & Son; that during all the years since 1890, up to the commencement of this suit, the defendant, F. C. Hubbell, devoted substantially all his time to the growth, management and development of the terminal property, and the defendant, F. M. Hubbell, a large share of his time to such purpose, without any compensation whatever, except as might accrue to them by reason of the increase in the value of the property and the resulting increase in the value of their stock.

Upon this branch of the case, what we have for consideration is, what acts were done or representations made, either active or passive, by complainants and their predecessors, leading the defendants to believe, and authorizing them to believe that the defendant company had a good title to the property in controversy, and therefore that their stock represented a beneficial interest therein and induced them to part with their money and devote years to the development of the terminal property.

As we have already said, the contract of January 2, 1882, did not contemplate the organization of a terminal railway, but rather a terminal property which might be used jointly by the parties to that contract and such others as might thereafter join. What is there in the record to show a change in this plan and upon which defendants had a right to rely?

The articles of incorporation of the defendant company adopted in 1884 were, as we have already shown, adopted at the instance of, and specifically ratified by the three railroad companies parties to the contract of January 8, 1882.

After setting out this contract as a part of the preamble, those articles provide (vol. II, p. 419):

> "Whereas, it was provided in the contract aforesaid that a Depot Company might be organized to take permanent charge of the property, and it was the understanding of the parties that such Company might acquire, operate and maintain said property in such manner as best to serve the interest of the parties hereto."

Were the defendants required to understand from this that the beneficial interest in this property was still to remain in the three railroads parties to the contract of 1882, and that the terminal company was to only acquire a naked legal title to the property, or were they justified in believing that this evidenced a change in the plan? Note that this recital states the fact that the contract provises "that a Depot Company might be organized to take permanent charge of the property," but that it was the "understanding" (not the contract of the parties), that such company might "acquire," etc. This latter was something outside of the contract and an understanding which the parties were proceeding to carry out.

Likewise the next recital:

Were they required by this to understand that this corporation was being born simply for the purpose of carrying out literally the contract of 1882, or were they justified in believing that there were some other purposes, to-wit, "those hereinafter expressed"?

Note the provisions of article 2, which provide that the general nature of the business to be transacted shall be the "construction, ownership and operation of a railway, in, around and about the City of Des Moines, Iowa," including the ownership of depots, freight houses, etc., and the business of transferring cars, none of which was contemplated by the contract of January 2, 1882. By these articles the terminal company assumed the powers and incurred the obligations of a common carrier—something which was not contemplated by that contract. Were not the defendants authorized from this to believe that a change was contemplated in the terminal plans, as indicated by that contract?

Again, examine article 3 of the original articles of incorporation (vol. II, p. 420), which fixes the capital stock at $1,000,000.00 and authorizes its issuance and authorizes the board "to receive in payment therefor the property and franchise in the City of Des Moines, now held by the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company, the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, Jas. F. How, Trustee, Jas. F. How and Grenville M. Dodge."

Now the contract of January 2, 1882, did not contemplate that the terminal property should be acquired by an independent corporation, or that the franchise incident to the terminal property should be acquired by a terminal corporation, but this article indicates that at this time it was contemplated that both the terminal properties and the franchises incident thereto should be acquired by the defendant company in consideration of the issuance of its capital stock. Ought the defendants to have understood from this that no change had been made in the plan as evidenced by the contract of January 2, 1882?

These were acts of the three railroads parties to the contract of January 2, 1882, and complainants' predecessors, which were specifically authorized and afterward specifically ratified by action of their boards of directors. By the adoption of these articles there was created a corporation for pecuniary profit under the laws of the state of Iowa, for the specific purpose of acquiring the terminal property and the "franchises" connected therewith.

A mere depot company organized in strict accord with the 1882 contract or in strict accord with the statutes of Iowa, Section 2099, Code of 1897, authorizing the formation of depot companies is something very different from the terminal company which the parties did in fact create by their articles of incorporation.

The Company in fact formed was organized under the general incorporation laws of the State and was vested with all the powers of a railroad company and this none the less so, that its lines were all within the limits of the City of Des Moines, and that it possessed among its powers, the distinctive powers of a depot company.

A depot company under the laws of Iowa is restricted as to the manner and extent of acquiring property and also as to the functions it may perform. In the case of Morgan against this very company, 113 Iowa 561, the crucial question was as to the character of it, whether a mere depot company or a railway company. Of a depot company, the Court said:

> "It is not intended that it shall operate locomotives or cars. Its purpose is to construct buildings and tracks for use by railway companies."

As to railway companies the Court said:

> "There is no reason for assuming that a railway company could not also, irrespective of this act (Depot Act) construct a union depot, or that in so doing it would lose any of the powers it possessed under the general incorporation Act."

It was contended that because this railway was confined within the city limits and its business was principally a terminal business, it was therefore not a railway, but a depot company. As to this the Court said:

> "We hardly think it is meant that a railway's rights are to be measured by its length. Nor do we believe that length of line alone fixes the character of such a corporation. This (the Des Moines Union) is solely a commercial railway, and as such it is invested with the rights given by statute alike to all incorporations of that character. The number of tracks which they may lay is not limited by statute, and it would seem contrary to public policy that such limitation should be made. They are and should be allowed to provide facilities for doing the business required by public demand."

What were the defendants authorized to believe and understand from the resolutions passed by the three railroad companies parties to the contract of January 2, 1882, on the 1st day of January, 1885? The resolutions were exactly alike and we need consider only one set of them.

One of the resolutions passed by the stockholders of the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company at this time was as follows (vol. II, p. 423):

> "Whereas, on the 10th day of December, A. D. 1884, a corporation under the name and style of the Des Moines Union Railway Company was organized as contemplated, and provided in the aforesaid contract to acquire, hold, use and enjoy the real estate property, rights and franchises in the City of Des Moines, east of Farnham Street in said City of the aforesaid railway companies and signatories of said contract acquired or held thereunder and to carry out the purposes of the said contract of January 2nd, 1882."

What did the defendants have a right to believe from this action? The right to use the terminal property for the purpose of carrying on a terminal business was a franchise which was possessed by the three railway companies in the City of Des Moines by reason of their having devoted the terminal property to terminal purposes; and it was this franchise, as well as the property itself, which the complainants' predecessors say in this resoluiton it was contemplated should be acquired by the terminal company.

The resolution then, after having specifically ratified the articles of incorporation of the terminal company, proceeds as follows:

> "Resolved: That the proper officers of this Company be authorized upon the issuance to it of the share of the bonds and stock of said Des Moines Union Railway Company to which it may be entitled, under said contract to convey, assign and transfer to said Company all its right, title and interest of whatever name and character, in and to the real estate, franchises, choses in action and rights in possession or contingent to all the property in the City of Des Moines east of Farnham Street in said City, now held, enjoyed or claimed by either or all of the signatories of said contract of January 2, 1882, or any agent or trustee thereof purchased, acquired or held in pursuance of said contract."

Let us inquire what possible interest complainants' predecessor, the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, could have possessed in the terminal property which was not authorized by this resolution to be transferred to the defendant company. This resolution covered all the property held by any of the signatories to the contract of January 2, 1882, and authorized the transfer of all the "right, title and interest of whatever name and character" the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company had in said property or franchises.

As we have said, identical resolutions were passed by the two other railroads parties to the contract.

Again, note the resolutions which were passed by the defendant company on the same day (vol. II, p. 432-5), a part of which is as follows:

> "That the President, Vice President, Secretary and Treasurer of this Company be, and they are hereby, appointed a Committee to confer with the several parties to said contract and agree with them severally upon the terms and price at which they will respectively assign, transfer and convey said railroad property and franchises to this Company, and procure from them, and each of them, such conveyance and transfers as may be necessary to fully invest this Company with the title, control and management of said properties provided for in said contract of January 2nd, 1882."

Were the defendants authorized to believe that it was the understanding of the defendant company that it was to get transfers which would "fully invest" the defendant company with the "title" to the terminal property, or should they have understood that this language contemplated that the three railroads parties to the contract of January 2, 1882, would still continue to be the beneficial owners of the property?

These resolutions were known to Mr. Hubbell, because he was a director in, and secretary of each of these companies, and they stood unrepealed on the record and were acted upon by the execution of the deeds of 1888.

Again, take the resolutions of November, 1887, by which the trustees, How and Dodge, were authorized to transfer the legal title to the defendant company upon payment of the purchase price therefor. These resolutions were passed and notice thereof was given to the defendant company, whereupon that company, acting through its board of directors, after reciting the giving of said notice, resolved as follows (vol. IV, p. 1300):

> "Therefore, It Is Resolved, That on receipt from the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company and the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company and the Des Moines & St. Louis Railway Company and from James F. How, Trustee, and G. M. Dodge, of deeds to this Company of the property standing in their name in the City of Des Moines, that the officers of this Company be authorized to issue to said James F. How and G. M. Dodge, respectively, an agreement to deliver to them, as soon as prepared, bonds for the amount of money with interest and taxes added, which will be shown by them, at that time, to have been expended by or through them for or on the property referred to."

By this resolution and an additional resolution passed at the same time, which we have not taken the space to quote, the defendant company accepted the proposition made to it by the three railroad companies and agreed, in consideration of a transfer of the property, to pay therefor the full amount which the three railroad companies, or others in interest, had invested in the terminal property, together with interest and taxes, and in addition thereto issue to them defendant's capital stock. There was in this resolution no reservation to the three railroad companies of any interest in the terminal property.

So we see that not only was a corporation organized for the specific purpose of acquiring the title to this property and the franchises incident thereto, but that a transfer of such property and the franchises incident thereto was properly authorized by all of the corporations interested therein, and this without any reservations of any kind. Let us now see what was actually done to carry out these resolutions.

Deeds were duly executed and delivered to the defendant company by How and Dodge. Of course, How and Dodge being merely trustees, could not on their own motion have transferred to the defendant company a good title, but their deeds taken in connection with these resolutions and the actual payment of the purchase price, would and did of themselves transfer a perfect title. However, we are not required to rely upon these deeds. Fortunately, both the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company and the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company executed deeds to this property, the former covering all the property, and the latter a portion thereof.

The deed of the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, after describing the particular property which stood in its name, continued as follows (vol. II, p. 458):

> "And all of the real estate within the City of Des Moines, Iowa, which is the property of the grantor."

Now what was the purpose of putting in the deed this clause, and to what property did it refer? The deed had already contained a description of the specific property which stood on the record in the name of the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, and therefore this clause must have referred to some other property. Under the contract of January 2, 1882, the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company was the beneficial owner of one-half of all the terminal property, no matter in whose name it stood, and it was the only party who could authorize or transfer such beneficial interest. Therefore, this clause in the deed must have reference to that portion of the terminal property in which the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company owned a beneficial interest of one-half which did not stand in its name, and this thought is emphasized by the following language of the deed (p. 458):

> "together with all real estate which may hereafter be acquired by this grantor either by condemnation proceedings or otherwise. Also all its embankments, bridges, turnouts, side-tracks, buildings and structures, water tanks and fixtures, shops, engine and other houses, depots, turntables and all its railroad property acquired and to be acquired, and everything appurtenant to said railroad, and all franchise and rights it may have acquired by grant, donation, purchase or otherwise, and particularly all rights, franchises and privileges granted by the City of Des Moines, Iowa, under an ordinance 'granting the right of way to the Des Moines and St. Louis Railroad Company and its assigns, over, across, along and upon certain streets and alleys in the City of Des Moines, Iowa, and the right to bridge the Des Moines River on the south alley in said City between Court Avenue and Vine Street.'"

Upon this terminal property had been constructed embankments, bridges, turnouts, sidetracks, buildings and other structures, and of one-half of this the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company was the beneficial owner under the contract of January 2, 1882, and this deed was for the purpose of transferring to the defendant company this beneficial ownership.

The deed then continues (p. 458):

> 'And the said Des Moines and St. Louis Railroad Company hereby covenants, to warrant and defend the said premises against all the lawful claims of all persons whomsoever, claiming by, through or under it."

When the defendants examined this deed and noted that it not only described the property which stood in the name of the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, but also included all the property of every kind and character owned by that company in the City of Des Moines, or in which it had any interest, and that it warranted the title to said property against all persons claiming by, through or under it, what reason did they have to believe that there was reserved to that company any possible interest in this property?

The deed of the St. Louis, Des Moines & Nothern Railway Company (ex. 21, vol. II, p. 455) is no less significant. After describing the specific property which stood in its name, this deed continues:

> "* * * Together with all and singular the tenements, hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging, or in any wise appertaining, and the reversion and reversions, remainder and remainders, rents, issues and profits thereof. And also, all the estate, right, title, interest in the above described property, possession, claim and demand whatsoever, as well in law as in equity of the said parties of the first part, of, in or to the above described premises, and every part and parcel thereof, with the appurtenances. To Have and to Hold all and singular the above mentioned and described premises together with the appurtenances, unto the said parties of the second part and assigns forever."

Upon reading this deed, ought the defendants to have believed that by the terms thereof the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company retained any interest of any kind in this property? If this language does not convey all and every possible interest which that company had in the real estate described, what language could be conceived which would effect that purpose?

The next act of the parties was the making of the contract of May 10, 1889, the parties to which were the defendant company on the one hand, and the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company and the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company (successor to the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company) on the other (vol. II, p. 479).

This contract, in so far as it relates to the title and ownership of the property, is as follows:

> "Whereas, the said party of the first part (the Des Moines Union Railway Company) is the owner of valuable terminal facilities in the City of Des Moines, Iowa, as hereinafter described; and
>
> Whereas, the respective parties of the second part have railroads in the State of Iowa which terminate at, or run into and through said City of Des Moines, and in order to prevent unnecessary expense, inconvenience and loss attending the accumulation of a number of stations, and in order to facilitate the public convenience and safety, it has become important that said second parties should have the use of the terminal facilities of said first party; and
>
> Whereas, said party of the first part has become incorporated and organized under the laws of the State of Iowa for the purpose of owning and op- erating a line of railway in the said City of Des Moines, Iowa, extending from the eastern boundary line of said city to Farnham Street, in the western part thereof; and

Whereas, said party of the first part, in pursuance of said charter has acquired and now owns a railway in said city, as above set forth, and has already acquired or constructed a large number of valuable main and side tracks, depots, depot grounds, lands, yards, shops, round houses, freight houses and other terminal facilities, and intends to acquire and construct more; and

Whereas, said second parties are each desirous of having the right to use said terminals in connections with their respective railroads; and

Whereas, for the protection of the parties hereto and their assigns, it is important that the rights, duties and liabilities of each in regard to the whole subject-matter of said terminal facilities, including their use, care, control, rental, taxes, expenses, renewals, insurance and repairs, shall be stated and defined.

Now, therefore, in consideration of the premises, it is mutually agreed by and between said party of the first part and each of the several parties of the second part (each of said second parties contracting for itself), as follows:

Section One. The party of the first part agrees to proceed with reasonable dispatch, and whenever its board of directors shall deem it expedient, to erect and furnish for the use of the parties of the second part, in said City of Des Moines, a union passenger depot, and such additional switches, sidings, freight depots, round houses, shops, water tanks, and yard appurtenances, as the board of directors of said first party may consider reasonable, and for those purposes said first party shall acquire by lease, purchase or otherwise such additional real estate as may be necessary.

Section Two. The amount of such additional grounds and the form, character and cost of said union depot and other structures and appurtenances to be erected and furnished by said party of the first part, as well as the management, operation, improvement and repairs thereof, shall in all matters not otherwise specifically provided for herein, be determined by the board of directors of said first party."

Here is the language of the parties themselves (the predecessors of complainants) put in writing a little more than a year after the transfer of the property to the defendant, by their own counsel.

Now, if the second parties to this contract (complainants' predecessors) were the beneficial owners of this property, why did they state in this contract that the Des Moines Union Railway Company was the owner of it, and why, if they were the beneficial owners of this property or entitled to use the same for railway purposes in perpetuity, were they contracting with the Des Moines Union Railway Company for such use or anything more than the mode of operating the property? And why, if the defendant company was organized merely for the purpose of holding the naked legal title to this property, do they recite the fact that it was organized for the purpose of owning and operating a line of railway in the City of Des Moines? And why do they state that in pursuance of its charter it has already acquired and owns a railway and intends to acquire and construct more? And why do they recite the fact that the parties of the second part (complainants' predecessors) are desirous of having the right to use said terminals in connection with their respective railroads, if they already had that right? And why, if the

Des Moines Union Railway Company was a mere agency for these three railroad companies, do they provide that the question of the extent of property to be acquired and constructed shall be vested in the board of directors of the Des Moines Union Railway Company?

If the court has any lingering doubt in its mind on the subject under consideration, examine now the proceedings of April 8, 1890, by which the articles of incorporation of the defendant company were amended, and the proceedings leading up thereto.

Upon a little reflection, the causes leading up to this action, and the purposes thereof, become perfectly apparent. The items to which we have called the court's attention demonstrate an intention on the part of all parties to give to the defendant company a perfect title to the property in controversy, notwithstanding the fact that as originally contemplated by the contract of January 2, 1882, the beneficial ownership of the property was to be in the three railroad companies parties thereto. An ambiguity had crept into the record by reason of the fact that the contract of January 2, 1882, had been included in the articles of incorporation as a preliminary recital thereto. We are not here going to set out the proceedings of April 8, 1890, as they have heretofore been quite extensively referred to in two different places in our brief. They concededly show an intention to forever put at rest any question about the title to the terminal property. The persons who took part in the meeting were the persons who knew what had been intended, because they had been the actors from the beginning. Complainants and their predecessors conducted the affairs of the defendant corporation under these amended articles of incorporation for more than seventeen years prior to the commencement of this suit. Read them and then answer the question of whether or not the defendants were authorized to believe that the defendant had a good title to the property in controversy, and that the capital stock of the defendant company represented a beneficial interest therein.

Let us now turn to the sale and transfer of the stock in the defendant company. The first transaction to which we will call attention is the contracts by which Polk & Hubbell acquired for the Des Moines & Northwestern Railway Company the line of road extending from Des Moines to Fonda and formerly owned by the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company, and a one-fourth of the capital stock of the terminay company.

It will be remembered that by the terms of the contract of October 9, 1886 (ex. 263, vol. IV, p. 1573), Polk & Hubbell agreed to purchase of the Purchasing Committee the line of railway formerly owned by the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company, and a one-fourth interest in the terminal property. By a supplemental agreement made the 10th day of September, 1887 (ex. 265, vol. IV, p. 1575), it was agreed in part as follows (p. 1576):

> "Simultaneously with the conveyance above mentioned of one-fourth interest in the terminal property at Des Moines, the same shall be mortgaged back to the Purchasing Committee for the further security of the said $145,000. In case, however, the terminal property at Des Moines shall be merged in a terminal company either before or after the transfer of one-fourth interest as above, the bonds and stock received from the Terminal Company in exchange for said one-fourth interest shal be transferred in lieu of the property of Messrs. Polk & Hubbell, or their assignees, or transferred by them to the Committee, to be held by the Committee as a further security for the payment of the $450,000 above mentioned."

Now, by the terms of this contract the Purchasing Committee agreed to transfer to Polk & Hubbell a one-fourth interest in the terminal property, without any reservation whatever, on "in lieu thereof," the stock and bonds received from the terminal company in exchange for said one-fourth interest. It is apparent that one-fourth of the stock and bonds couldn't be equivalent to one-fourth of the property unless the corporation issuing the stock and bonds had a perfect title to the property.

It will be remembered that in February, 1890, Mr. Hubbell and General Dodge each purchased of the Purchasing Committee certain bonds of the Des Moines Union Company and one-eighth of its capital stock, and this purchase was formally ratified at a meeting of the directors of the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company held April 8, 1890, at which were present James F. How, C. M. Hays, F. M. Hubbell, A. B. Cummins, H. S. Priest and George C. Grover, all of whom, except Mr. Hubbelel, were officers or attorneys for the complainant, The Wabash Company. We have already shown that the purchase price for this stock was paid to the Purchasing Committee and by them paid to the complainant, The Wabash Company, and that the latter still retains this purchase price. We have also shown that the contract covering this purchase was prepared or revised by Colonel Blodgett. Now what were the members of the Purchasing Committee and Colonel Blodgett, Mr. Hays, Mr. How, and the attorneys of The Wabash Railroad Company trying to do when they sold this stock to Hubbell and Dodge? There is no room for question here. On the one side they were selling, and on the other were buying, what on both sides was believed to be of substantial value.

In this connection, it is important to note that the action of the Purchasing Committee was specifically ratified by the board of directors of the complainant, The Wabash Company, after the same had been reported to it by the Purchasing Committee and investigated by E. B. Pryor, then assistant auditor of the railroad company. Commencing on page 1540 of volume IV will be found a report made by the Purchasing Committee to the board of directors of the Wabash Company on August 16, 1898, in which it makes an accounting to the railroad company of all its doings. The Purchasing Committee reports the sale of the stock and bonds of the Des Moines Union Railway Company and accounts for the proceeds thereof (see top of p. 1543), and again reports the amount received as interest on bonds and stock of the Des Moines Union Railway Company (see p. 1544, near bottom of page). Upon presentation of this report to The Wabash Company, Mr. E. B. Pryor, assistant auditor, makes an affidavit that he has examined in detail the books and accounts of the Purchasing Committee, as well as the attached report, and he believes the same to be correct (near bottom of p. 1551).

Passing upon this report, the board of directors of The Wabash Company state in part as follows (p. 1552):

"Whereas, Said report, and the form of said conveyance and assignment are satisfactory to the Board of Directors; Now, Therefore, Be It Resolved, That said final report and statement of the accounts and doings of said Committee under said agreements, be, and the same hereby are approved."

How can The Wabash Railroad Company, which received and retains this money, now claim that the stock didn't represent anything of value?

The same remarks apply to the subsequent transaction of June, 1890, by which Mr. Hubbel purchased of the Purchasing Committee an additional 500 shares of stock in the defendant company, as to the details of which we do not here need to go.

It will be remembered that all the stock acquired by Mr. Hubbell and General Dodge from the Purchasing Committee afterward became the property of the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Company, and that about October, 1893, F. M. Hubbell purchased of this Company 2,500 shares of this stock, which was immediately transferred to F. M. Hubbell & Son on the books of the defendant company and has ever since so remained. F. M. Hubbell & Son paid a valuable consideration for this 2,500 shares of stock and paid it to the predecessor of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company, and that Company acquired its first interest in its predecessor with full knowledge that these 2,500 shares of stock had been transferred to F. M. Hubbell & Son, and that the only interest which its predecessor had in the terminal property or the terminal company was the interest represented by the 1,000 shares of stock which its predecessor then had and which is now owned by the complainant, the Milwaukee Company. Subsequently the Milwaukee Company acquired the property of its predecessor by purchase, and never suspected that it thereby acquired any interest in the terminal property except that represented by this 1,000 shares of stock.

Among the things upon which the Hubbells were justified in relying, as indicating that the complainants and their predecessors claimed only a stock interest in the property, is the fact that from the very beginning (May 1, 1888), the affairs of the defendant company were managed by its own stockholders, its board of directors and its officers. It acquired additional real estate, it constructed depots, buildings, tracks and other terminal facilities, made contracts with the complainants, their predecessors and other parties and performed all its obligations to the public as a common carrier.

In every way, for a period of nearly twenty years prior to the bringing of this suit, the defendant treated this property as its own, and all this with the knowledge of the complainants and their predecessors, because at every annual stockholders' meeting the complainants or their predecessors were present, as shown by the record, and at each of these meetings there was read for the information of the stockholders the minutes of all the meetings of the directors and the executive committee since the last preceding annual stockholders' meeting, and the action of such directors and executive committee was formally approved.

Not only this, but the record shows that from the time F. M. Hubbell & Son acquired this stock in 1893, it was voted by them at each stockholders' meeting for the purpose of managing the affairs of the defendant company, and no question was ever raised with respect to their right so to do. In other words, the defendants, with the knowledge and acquiescence of complainants and their predecessors, treated this stock as though it represented a valuable interest in this property, and because thereof they gave their time for the best part of their lives to the development and improvement of this property without any compensation whatever except that which will accrue to them by reason of the increase in the value thereof. Not only this, but the question of the ownership of this stock by F. M. Hubbell & Son was specifically brought to the attention of the complainants and their predecessors.

It will be remembered that the twenty-sixth section of the contract of May 10, 1889 (vol. II, p. 486), which was executed before any certificates of stock were issued, provided that the stock of the defendant company should be issued one-half to the Des Moines & St. Louis Company, and one-fourth each to the Des Moines & Northwestern Company and the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Company.

Subsequent to the date the defendant, F. M. Hubbell & Son, acquired the 2,500 shares of stock in the defendant company and the same were transferred upon the books of the defendant company to F. M. Hubbell & Son, negotiations were had for the renewal or extension of the operating contract of May 10, 1889.

Several drafts of such a contract were prepared and considered by the defendant and by the complainant, The Wabash Company.

These proposed agreements appear in volume IV as defendants' exhibits 382 (p. 1694), 383 (p. 1703), 384 (p. 1712) and 385 (p. 1713). In each one of these drafts appears the following as a part of the last section (pp. 1702, 1711, 1722 and 1733):

"It is further understood and agreed that this contract is entered into in lieu of and as a substitute for a certain agreement entered into on the 10th day of May, 1889, between the Des Moines Union Railway Company, the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, the Des Moines & Northwestern, and the St. Louis, Des, Moines & Northern Railway Company, * * * and that the capital stock of the said Des Moines Union Railway Company therein mentioned is now rightfully held as follows, to-wit:

The Purchasing Committee of the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company	500 Shares
The Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Company	1,000 Shares
F. M. Hubbell & Son	2,500 Shares

Of the above shares belonging to said Purchasing Committee, two shares stand upon the books of the Company as follows: Joseph Ramsey, Jr., One Share, and H. L. Magee, One Share.

Of the shares belonging to the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Company two shares stand upon the books of the Company as follows: A. B. Cummins One Share, F. M. Hubbell One Share.

Of the shares belonging to the said F. M. Hubbell & Son five shares stand upon the books of the Company as follows:

F. M. Hubbell, One Share.
F. C. Hubbell, One Share.
H. D. Thompson, One Share.
A. N. Denman, One Share.
C. Huttenlocher, One Share."

These proposed contracts were discussed and criticized by the officers and attorneys of the complainant, the Wabash Company, and the defendant, the Des Moines Union Company, and various changes were from time to time proposed, but at no time was any question raised about the correctness of this portion of the proposed contracts reciting the ownership of the capital stock.

The making of this new contract took the shape of what is known as the ratification contract of July 31, 1897.

This contract had the following provision in it referring to the issuance of stock provided for in the contract of May 10, 1889 (vol. II, p. 508):

> "But it is expressly provided that so much of the said contract (contract of May 10, 1889), a copy of which is hereto attached, as relates to the issuance and the distribution of the capital stock of the said Des Moines Company, is no longer binding, and that the capital stock of the said Des Moines Company is held as follows:
>
> The purchasing committee of the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company, 500 shares.
>
> The Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Company, 1,000 shares.
>
> F. M. Hubbell & Son, 2,500 shares.
>
> Of the above shares belonging to said purchasing committee, two shares stand upon the books of the company as follows: Joseph Ramsey, Jr., 1 share; and H. L. Magee, 1 share.
>
> Of the shares belonging to the Des Moines, Northwestern Railroad Company, two shares stand upon the books of the company as follows: A. B. Cummins, 1 share; and F. M. Hubbell, 1 share.
>
> Of the shares belonging to said F. M. Hubbell & Son, five shares stand upon the books of the company as follows: F. M. Hubbell, 1 share; F. C.

Hubbell, 1 share; C. Huttenlocher, 1 share; H. D. Thompson, 1 share; A. N. Denman, 1 share."

This contract was signed by the plaintiff, The Wabash Company, by O. D. Ashley, president, as well as by the Des Moines Union Railway Company and the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Company.

Its execution was authorized and ratified at a meeting of the directors of The Wabash Company held October 5, 1897, and a copy of it spread upon the records of that company (ex. 237, vol. IV, p. 1540). Its execution was also ratified at a meeting of the board of directors of the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railway Company, predecessor of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company, on September 7, 1897 ex. 145, vol. IV, p. 1357).

The things to which we have called attention are only a portion of the things sustaining the proposition that the defendants were at all times authorized to understand that the ownership of the terminal property by the defendant company was conceded and recognized at all times by the complainants and their predecessors.

The court can open this record at any place and find evidence to sustain this theory.

It seems hardly worth while to discuss the question of whether or not the defendants relied upon these acts and representations of the complainants and their predecessors, and whether they changed their position relying thereon. Mr. Hubbell testified as to their reliance and there is no evidence to dispute it, and it is undisputed that the defendants, F. M. Hubbell and F. C. Hubbell, parted with their money for this stock, and that they have devoted a great share of their lives to the conservation and building up of the terminal property without hope of reward except such as may grow out of the increase in the value of the stock.

The time and effort spent by the Hubbells in conserving, extending and transacting the business of the terminal company is no small or insignificant item. The testimony of Mr. F. M. Hubbell as to the services performed by him appears in volume III, commencing at the bottom of page 1036 and continuing to about the middle of page 1039. According to his testimony, he has been active in financing the defendant company, in extending and building up its property, in negotiating contracts for tenant companies other than complainants and their predecessors, and in many other ways has helped to develop the property. The testimony of defendant F. C. Hubbell on this subject appears commencing near the bottom of page 1195 and extending to about the middle of page 1197 of volume III. An examination of this testimony and the voluminous correspondence and other documents contained in defendants' book of exhibits will disclose the fact that Mr. F. C. Hubbell, who became president of the defendant company in January, 1892, has ever since said date devoted substantially all his time to the prosecution of its business. While his title has been that of president, he has in fact been performing the duties of general manager and purchasing agent. Not only this, but the devotion of the Hubbells to the interests of the Des Moines Union, the satisfactory character of their services, the success that has attended their efforts to develop the property and promote its interests, or the time and effort devoted by them thereto, is not, and cannot be questioned by the complainants.

IV.

THE COMPLAINANTS ARE ESTOPPED BY THEIR LACHES FROM THE BRINGING AND MAINTAINING OF THIS SUIT.

For the purpose of this question it is necessary to refer to the statute of limitations of the State of Iowa. Section 3447 of the Code of Iowa, 1897, provides:

> "Actions may be brought within the times herein limited, respectively, after their causes accrue and not afterwards, except when otherwise specially declared. * * *
>
> Those founded on unwritten contracts, those brought for injuries to property, or for relief on the ground of fraud in cases heretofore solely cognizable in a court of chancery, and all other actions not otherwise provided for in this respect, within five years."

As we understand the doctrine of laches, the cause of action contained in this bill would be barred at the end of five years from the time it accrued, unless complainants should allege and prove facts which would make it inequitable to follow the rule of law on that subject.

The subject of laches as applied to this case, and the facts bearing thereon, have necessarily been inferentially discussed in our entire argument, and specific reference to the doctrine as applied to the amendments to the articles of incorporation of April 8, 1890, has been made in our discussion of those amendments. We may, therefore, include a more general discussion of the subject here.

As we understand complainants' theory, one of their claims is that the property in controversy is charged with a trust in their favor. It is necessary, then to consider the character of the alleged trust, because if the trust is an express one then the statute of limitations does not commence to run until there is a disclaimer of the trust, but if the trust is an implied one the statute of limitations commences to run and therefore the doctrine of laches applies at the time the trust relation attached.

In order to determine the character of this alleged trust, it is necessary to consider the title to the property in controversy, and the law of the State of Iowa, in which the property is situated, with respect thereto.

The rule on this latter subpect is stated by this court in

Kerr v. Moon, 9 Wheat. 565, in the following language (p. 569):

> "It is an unquestionable principle of the general law that the title to and disposition of real property must be exclusively subject to the laws of the country where it is situated."

Again, in the case of

McCormick v. Sullivant, 10 Wheat. 192, the court, speaking of the title to certain lands in the State of Ohio, said (p. 201):

> "By the law of the State of Ohio, lands lying in that state may be devised by last will and testament in writing, but before such will can be considered as valid in law it must be presented to the court of common pleas of the county where the land lies for probate and be proved by at least two of the subscribing witnesses. If the will be proved and recorded in another state according to the laws of that state, an authenticated copy of the will may be offered for probate in the court of the county where the land lies, without proof by the witnesses, but it is liable to be contested by the heirs at law as the original might have been.

It is an asknowledged principle of law that the title and disposition of real property is exclusively subject to the laws of the country where it is situated, which can alone prescribe the mode by which the title to it can pass from one person to another."

Having determined that the title to this property depends upon the law of the State of Iowa, and therefore the question of whether or not it is subject to a trust, and if so, the character of the trust, must be determined by such law, let us examine the statutes and decisions of Iowa.

Section 2918 of the Code of 1897, which has been in force since long before the conception of the terminal scheme, provides as follows:

"Declarations or creations of trusts or powers in relation to real estate must be executed in the same manner as deeds of conveyance; but this provision does not apply to trusts resulting from the operation or construction of law."

Under this section, clearly the property in controversy is not charged with an express trust in the hands of the defendant company, because no declaration of trust was ever executed by it as provided by this statute.

But what we understand complainants to claim is that by reason of certain provisions in article 2 of the original articles of incorporation of the defendant company, and by reason of incorporating therein as a preamble thereto the contract of January 2, 1882, the property in controversy in the hands of the defendant company is charged with a resulting trust.

As we understand the rule with respect to resulting trusts, the statute of limitations commences to run at the time of the creation of the trust, or, to apply the doctrine of laches in determining the time within which the trustee will be protected, the time commences to run at the time of the creation of the trust.

In the case of

Boone v. Chiles, 10 Pet. 177, 222,

the court said:

> "Though time does not bar a direct trust as between trustee and cestui que trust, till it is disavowed; yet where a constructive trust is made out in equity, time protects the trustee, though his conduct was originally fraudulent and his purchase would have been repudiated for fraud. * * * So where a party takes possession in his own right and was prima facie the owner and is turned into a trustee by matter of evidence merely."

And in the case of

Speidel v. Henrici, 120 U. S. 377, 386,

the court said:

> "In the case of an implied or constructive trust, unless there has been a fraudulent concealment of the cause of action, lapse of time is as complete a bar in equity as at law."

But whatever the rule may be with respect to the character of the alleged trust in question, or when the statute commences to run, as applied to implied or resulting trusts, the rule is established by all the authorities, that the time commences to run at least as soon as there has been a repudiation of the trust. As to this proposition, we will not take the time here to quote from the authorities, but a few of them will be found in our brief.

It is clear from the record in this case that if the property in controversy was ever charged with a trust in the hands of the defendant company, that trust was expressly repudiated on April 8, 1890. We have already called the court's attention to what occurred on that date, and we may here content ourselves with summarizing it as follows:

1. On that date the defendant company, at a meeting of its stockholders, eliminated from its articles of incorporation the contract of January 2, 1882.

2. It amended its articles of incorporation by eliminating therefrom all those provisions by which it had been attempted to restrict the power of the defendant company with respect to the alienation of its property, or which in any way qualified the defendant's title.

3. It amended its articles of incorporation so as to deprive complainants' predecessors of the power to nominate the members of the defendant's board of directors.

4. It passed resolutions expressly declaring that the defendant company was the absolute owner of the property in controversy.

5. The amendments to its articles of incorporation were properly executed, filed and recorded, and notice thereof was published as required by statute.

6. Not only did complainants and their predecessors have the notice of these transactions with which they were charged by reason of the execution, filing and recording of these amendments, and giving notice thereof, but at the next annual meeting of the stockholders of the defendant company at which complainants' predecessors were present as stockholders, the proceedings of April 8, 1890, were read, so that their special attention was called thereto.

7. The affairs of the defendant company were carried on under these amendments to the articles of incorporation for more than seventeen years after the adoption of these amendments and these resolutions, before any complaint was made thereof.

It appears, therefore, that seventeen years prior to the commencement of this suit the defendant expressly repudiated any trust in relation to this property, if one existed, and therefore, under the rule as established by the courts, the complainants must fail on account of their laches.

But the doctrine of laches, as applied to this case, may be considered in even a broader aspect. The doctrine as laid down in

is as follows:

"No doctrine is so wholesome when wisely administered as that of laches. It prevents the resurrection of stale titles, and forbids the spying out from the records of ancient and abandoned rights. It requires of every owner that he take care of his property and of every claimant that he make known his claims. It gives to the actual and longer possessor security, and induces and justifies him in all efforts to improve and make valuable the property he holds. It is a doctrine received with favor, because its proper application works out justice and equity, and often bars the holder of a mere technical right, which he has abandoned for years, from enforcing it when its enforcement will work large injury to many. The equitable rule that one who is negligent shall not have relief, and the barring of proceedings after the lapse of stated periods of time by statutory enactments, are alike based upon public policy, as well as upon considerations affecting only individual rights. It is to the public interest that stability in the title to property should exist, and that all uncertainties and disputes as to the ownership of the land should be speedily put at rest. Hence, there lies at the foundation of the principle that the lapse of time will become a defense to the title of one in possession of property not only consideration for his personal rights and equities, but also a recognition of the higher public interests which can only be subserved by putting at rest, as speedily as possible, all doubts and uncertainties touching the title to realty to which end it is the duty of courts to discourage delays in the assertion of conflicting claims thereto."

The rule was laid down and applied by this court in the leading case of which involved the title to some real estate in the City of Tacoma in the following language:

* * * The laches of the appellant is such as to defeat any rights which she might have had, even if these prior questions were determined in her favor, and in this respect it is worthy of notice that there has been in a few years a rapid and vast change in the value of the property in question. It is now an addition to the City of Tacoma. The census of 1880 showed that to be a mere village, the population being only 1,098. The census of 1890 discloses a city, the population being 36,006. Of course, such a rapid increase during this decade implies an equally rapid and enormous increase in the value of property so situated as to be an addition to the city, and the question of laches turns not simply upon the number of years which have elapsed between the accruing of her rights, whatever they were, and her assertion of them, but also upon the nature and evidence of those rights, the changes in value, and other circumstances occurring during that lapse of years. The cases are many in which this defense has been invoked and considered. It is true that by reason of their differences of fact no one case becomes an exact precedent for another, yet a uniform principle pervades them all. They proceed on the assumption that the party to whom laches is imputed has knowledge of his rights, and an ample opportunity to establish them in the proper forum; that by reason of his delay the adverse party has good reason to believe that the alleged rights are worthless or have been abandoned; and that because of the change in condition or relations during this period of delay it would be an injustice to the latter to permit him to now assert them. * * *

But it is unnecessary to multiply cases. They all proceed upon the theory that laches is not like limitation, a mere matter of time, but principally a question of the inequity of permitting the claim to be enforced—an inequity founded upon some change in the condition or relations of the property or the parties."

Applying the principle announced in this case to the case at bar, we are unable to conceive how counsel for complainants are going to avoid its application. It will be noted that the three principal elements which form the basis of the doctrine are:

First. The party to whom laches is imputed has knowledge of his rights and an ample opportunity to establish them in the proper forum.

Second. That by reason of his delay the adverse party has good reason to believe that the alleged rights are worthless or have been abandoned.

Third. That because of the change in condition during the period of delay it would be an injustice to the latter to permit him to now assert them.

The rights of complainants and their predecessors with respect to the matters set up in the bill, if any they ever had, have been known to them since their inception. The contract of 1882; the fact that the Wabash Company and General Dodge advanced the money to originally acquire the terminals; the incorporation of the terminal company; the resolutions and deeds of 1885, 1887 and 1888; the contract of May 10, 1889, and the ratification thereof July 31, 1897; the amendments to the articles of incorporation of April 8, 1890, and the resolutions passed at that time; have all been known by complainants and their predecessors from the time of such transactions, because they were all parties thereto and had both actual and constructive notice thereof. During all these years the terminal company has treated this property as its own, and with such knowledge on the part of the complainants and their predecessors, the management of the affairs of the terminal company has been controlled by its stockholders. There has been no reason why complainants or their predecessors could not at any time have brought their suit in the proper forum, to establish the rights set up in the bill, if the same existed. So that the first element supporting the doctrine conclusively appears.

For nearly twenty years prior to the bringing of this suit, the terminal company had possession of this property under contracts and deeds which purported to give it an absolute title. For nearly twenty years, with the knowledge and acquiescence of the complainants and their predecessors, the terminal company has treated this property as its own. For nearly twenty years the affairs of the terminal company have been managed and controlled by its stockholders in the ordinary and usual way. For more than sixteen years prior to the bringing of this suit, the terminal company, with the knowledge and acquiescence of complainants and their predecessors, have been acting under the articles of incorporation as amended April 8, 1890, at which time the contract of 1882 was formally repudiated.

Under these circumstances, the respondents in this case had good reason for believing that the rights which are set up in the bill, if they ever existed, were worthless and had been abandoned, not only because of the failure of the complainants and their predecessors to bring their suit in the proper forum to establish their rights, but also because they treated this property during this period as the absolute property of the terminal company. The second elementary basis of the doctrine, therefore conclusively appears.

Both the condition of this property and the relations of the parties thereto have been changed during this time. Commencing with May 1, 1888, the date when the terminal company took possession of the property, that company has from time to time acquired additional property as a part of the terminal, paid for it with its own funds, improved the same, and the property, because of the fostering care of the terminal company and its officers, especially the respondents, the Hubbels, has increased very largely in value, as shown by the increased and increasing "surplus earnings" (see p. ..... of this brief). The relation of the stockholders to the property has changed. The Hubbells have bought stock of the predecessors of both complainants; and the complainants and their predecessors have had the benefit of the money and still retain it. The Hubbells have sold their interest in the northern lines to the complainant, the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, upon the theory that such northern lines owned one-fourth of the stock of the terminal company, and that five-eighths of it was owned by F. M. Hubbell & Son. For twenty years the two Hubbells have devoted a very large portion of their time in caring for and developing the property of the terminal company, without any compensation, except what they receive by reason of the increase in the value of their stock. To enter a decree such as is prayed for in the bill would not only be inequitable and an injustice to the respondents in that it would deprive the terminal company of property which it has bought under a contract with the complainants and their predecessors and for which it has paid the full market value, and deprive the Hubbells of what they have contracted and paid for, and the fruits of their labor for more than twenty years, but would give to the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company a large and valuable property for which it has never paid a cent and which it never suspected it was purchasing, and which it was plainly told it was not purchasing, and would give to the complainant, The Wabash Company, property which it and its predecessors have sold and for which it has received and retained the price. The third element of the doctrine is, therefore, established.

The case of

involved the title to some real estate in the City of Washington. The court discussed the doctrine of laches quite fully, and in holding that under this doctrine complainant's suit was barred, says, in part, as follows:

> "The relief sought cannot be given consistently with the principles of justice, or without encouraging such delay in the assertion of rights as ought not to be tolerated by courts of equity. Whether equity will interfere in cases of this character must depend upon the special circumstances of each case. Sometimes the courts act in obedience to statutes of limitations; sometimes in analogy to them. But it is now well settled that, independently of any limitation prescribed for the guidance of courts of law, equity may, in the exercise of its inherent powers, refuse relief where it is sought after undue and unexplained delay, and when injustice would be done in the particular case, by granting the relief asked. It will in such case decline to extricate the plaintiff from the position in which he has inexcusably placed himself, and leave him to such remedies as he may have in a court of law."

It will be noted that in the case at bar there is no attempt, either in the bill or in the testimony, to furnish any excuse for the delay in bringing this suit.

Suits to establish implied trusts fall within the class of cases in which the federal equity courts follow the courts of law in applying the statute of limitations.

Beaubein v. Beaubein, 23 How. 190, 207.
Speidel v. Henrici, 120 U. S. 377, 386.
Riddle v. Whitehill, 135 U. S. 621.

The case of

Speidel v. Henrici, supra, was one in which was involved an accounting for a trust fund. Upon the doctrine of laches, we quote from the opinion of the court (p. 386) as follows:

"In the case of an implied or constructive trust, unless there has been a fraudulent concealment of the cause of action, lapse of time is as complete a bar in equity as at law. Hovenden v. Annesley, 2 Sch. & Lef., 607, 634; Beckford v. Wade, 17 Ves. 87. In such a case, Chief Justice Marshall repeated and approved the statement of Sir Thomas Plummer, M. R., in a most important case in which his decision was affirmed by the House of Lords, that 'both on principle and authority, the laches and non-claim of the rightful owner of an equitable estate, for a period of twenty years (supposing it the case of one who must within that period have made his claim in a court of law, had it been a legal estate), under no disability, and where there has been no fraud, will constitute a bar to equitable relief, by analogy to the statute of limitations, if, during all that period, the possession has been under a claim unequivocally adverse, and without anything having been done or said, directly or indirectly, to recognize the title of such rightful owner by the adverse possessor.' Elmendorf v. Taylor, 10 Wheat. 152, 174; Cholmondeley v. Clinton, 2 Jac. & Walk. 1, 175, and 4 Bligh, 1.

Independently of any statute of limitations, courts of equity uniformly decline to assist a person who has slept upon his rights and shows no excuse for his laches in asserting them. 'A court of equity,' said Lord Camden, 'has always refused its aid to stale demands, where the party slept upon his rights, and acquiesced for a great length of time. Nothing can call forth this court into activity, but conscience, good faith and reasonable diligence; where these are wanting, the court is passive, and does nothing. Laches and neglect are always discountenanced, and therefore, from the beginning of this jurisdiction, there was always a limitation to suits in this court.' Smith v. Clay, 3 Bro. Ch. 640, note. This doctrine has been repeatedly recognized and acted on here."

For a full discussion of the principle as applied by this court, see Penn M. L. I. Co. v. Austin, 168 U. S. 685, 696.

Baker v. Cummings, 169 U. S. 189, 206.

To sum up the doctrine of laches as applied to this case:

A cause of action of this character is barred by the statutes of the State of Iowa five years fro[illegible] accrues.

The rule in the federal equity court is that a cause of action arising under the laws of the State of Iowa will be barred by laches at the expiration of five years, unless the complainants show some good excuse for not bringing their suit within that time. No such excuse is offered in this case.

So far as the Wabash Railway Company is concerned, no trust ever existed in favor of that company, unless it was because of the fact that that company furnished a large proportion of the money with which to purchase the original properties. This would be a constructive trust against which the statute ran a long while ago.

If it be claimed that an express trust was created in favor of the three railroads parties to the contract of 1882, that trust was terminated by the organization of the terminal company, followed by the passage of the resolutions of 1887, and the execution and delivery of the deeds to the terminal company in pursuance thereof, the payment of the purchase price, and the execution of the contract of 1889 and the ratification contract of 1897.

Any possible claim for an express trust was expressly repudiated by the amendments to the articles of incorporation of April 8, 1890, which were placed upon record and published as required by law, and of which complainants and their predecessors had both actual and constructive notice. In any view of this case the doctrine of laches applies.

V.

THE SALE AND TRANSFER OF THE TERMINAL PROPERTY TO THE TERMINAL COMPANY WERE NOT VOID AS AGAINST PUBLIC POLICY.

Counsel for petitioners assert the principle which we accept as sound that a railroad company may not disable itself from the performance of its public functions and hence they conclude it may not divest itself of any property which it has acquired for public purposes. The conclusion does not follow.

Public policy requires nothing of the kind and general usage is to the contrary.

There is scarcely a railroad company in the country that has not from time to time parted with some of its property, and has performed its public functions all the better for so doing. Tracks have been taken up and the land has been sold or abandoned, in order to get a new line with lower grades, with less curvature or to diminish the length of the line between two places.

For a proper terminal system in a large city, which means a unitary system, it is absolutely necessary that the lines entering it part with some of their urban property. Union terminals were not and could not well be built in the beginning of railroad construction. It was in Des Moines as in other cities. The different lines of railroad reaching it or passing through it, were not all built at the same time, but at intervals of years. Each line as it came in acquired its own terminals, which proved upon many accounts to be a bad plan. It was expensive in construction and in operation. It was inconvenient to the traveler.

sightly and dangerous to the inhabitants. And so Union Terminals suggested themselves and everywhere were countenanced and encouraged by statutory enactment.

The City of Washington has its Union Terminals and this involved withdrawing from railroad use large tracts of land in the city. When the new station building was erected, the old stations were abandoned. And this was done under sanction of Acts of Congress.

The respondent, the Des Moines Union Railway Company, has for itself and for what it has done and is doing, the sanction of the statutes of Iowa as expressly declared by the Supreme Court of the State in the case of Morgan against the Company, 113 Ia. 561.

Union Terminals being desired by the railroad companies and by the public whoever will may participate in creating them. A corporation for the purpose is practically indispensable. And it must be a distinct institution. The railroad companies contribute money or property. Individuals may do the same. But this will not be in equal proportion. Bonds or stocks or both are issued in consideration of the money or the property contributed and appropriately in the measure of the contribution. The contributors are entitled to a return upon their investments. They are property in this respect as is any other form of investment, subject only to the restriction, which is not applied to property, not charged with a public use, that the return is not all they can get, if left entirely to themselves, but that the return may be only a reasonable one upon the value of the property.

So here the railroad companies did not disable themselves from the performance of their public duties. They simply contributed, as it was to their interest and the public interest to do, to the construction of Union Terminals in the City of Des Moines.

U. S. v. Terminal Ass'n, 224 U. S. 401.

The cases cited by counsel, Thomas vs. Railroad Co., 101 U. S. 71, and Central Transportation Co. vs. Pullman Co., 139 U. S. 26, are not in point, because of the radical difference in the facts.

And here are transactions completed many years ago and the courts will not disturb them upon the suggestion of want of power in the parties at the time.

In St. Louis R. R. Co. vs. Terre Haute R. R. Co., 145 U. S. 393, the contract by which one of the companies transferred its railroad and equipment, as well as its franchise to maintain and operate the road, to the other, was assailed for want of power to make it. Assuming that the contract was ultra vires, the Court said, p. 406:

> "It does not, however, follow that this suit to set aside and cancel the contract can be maintained. If it can, it is somewhat remarkable that, in the repeated and full discussions which the doctrine of ultra vires has undergone in the English courts within the last fifty years, no attempt has been made to bring a suit like this. The only cases cited in the elaborate briefs for the plaintiff, or which have come to our notice, approaching this in their circumstances, are in American courts not of last resort, and present no sufficient reasons for maintaining this suit. • • •
> The general rule, in equity, as at law, is In pari delicto potior est conditio defendentis; and therefore neither party to an illegal contract will be aided by the court, whether to enforce it or to set it aside. If the contract is illegal, affirmative relief against it will not be granted, at law or in equity, unless the contract remains executory, or unless the parties are considered not in equal fault, as where the law violated is intended for the coercion of the one party and the protection of the other, or where there has been fraud or oppression on the part of the defendant. Thomas v. Richmond, 12 Wall, 349, 355; Spring Co. v. Knowlton, 103 U. S. 49; Story Eq. Jur., sec. 298.

While an unlawful contract, the parties to which are in pari delicto, remains executory, its invalidity is a defense in a court of law; and a court of equity will order its cancellation only as an equitable mode of making that defense effectual, and when necessary for that purpose. Adams on Eq., 175. Consequently, it is well settled, at the present day, that a court of equity will not entertain jurisdiction to order an instrument to be delivered up and cancelled, upon the ground of illegality appearing on its face, and when, therefore, there is no danger that the lapse of time may deprive the party to be charged upon it of his means of defense. • • •

When the parties are in pari delicto, and the contract has been fully executed on the part of the plaintiff, by the conveyance of property, or by the payment of money, and has not been repudiated by the defendant, it is now equally well settled that neither a court of law nor a court of equity will assist the plaintiff to recover back the property conveyed or money paid under the contract. Thomas v. Richmond, above cited; Ayerst v. Jenkins, L. R. 16 Eq. 275, 284. For instance, property conveyed pursuant to a contract made in consideration of the compounding of a crime, and the stifling of a criminal prosecution, and therefore clearly illegal, cannot be recovered back at law, nor the conveyance set aside in equity, unless obtained by such fraud or oppression on the part of the grantee, that the conveyance cannot be considered the voluntary act of the grantor. • • •

In the case at bar, the contract by which the plaintiff conveyed its railroad and franchise to the defendant for a term of nine hundred and ninety-nine years was beyond the defendant's corporate powers, and therefore unlawful and void, of which the plaintiff was bound to take notice. The plaintiff stood in the position of alienating the powers which it had received from the State, and the duties which it owed to the public, to another corporation, which it knew had no lawful capacity to exercise those powers or to perform those duties. If, as the plaintiff contends, the contract was also beyond its own corporate powers, it is certainly in no better position. In either aspect of the case, the plaintiff was in pari delicto with the defendant. The invalidity of the contract, in view of the laws of which both parties were bound to take notice, was apparent on its face. The contract has been fully executed on the part of the plaintiff by the actual transfer of its railroad and franchise to the defendant; and the defendant has held the property, and paid the stipulated consideration from time to time, for seventeen years, and has taken no steps to rescind or repudiate the contract.

Upon this state of facts, for the reasons above stated, the plaintiff, considered as a party to the unlawful contract, has no right to invoke the assistance of a court of equity to set it aside. And so far as the plaintiff corporation can be considered as representing the stockholders, and seeking to protect their interests, it and they are barred by laches. Harwood v. Railroad Co., 17 Wall. 78; Graham v. Birkenhead &c. Railway, 2 Hall & Twells 450, S. C. 2 Macn. & Gord. 146; Ffooks v. Southwestern Railway, 1 Sm. & Gif. 142, 164; Gregory v. Patchett, 11 Law Times (N. S.) 357.

This case is not like those in which the defendant, having abandoned or refused to perform the unlawful contract, has been held liable to the plaintiff, as upon an implied contract, for the value of what it had received from him and had no right to retain. Spring Co. v. Knowlton, 103 U. S. 49; Logan County Bank v. Townsend, 139 U. S. 67, and vases there cited.

But the case is one in which, in the words of Mr. Justice Miller in a case often cited in this opinion, the court will not disturb the possession of the property that has passed under the contract, but will refuse to interfere as the matter stands. Pennsylvania Railroad v. St. Louis, Alton & Terre Haute Railroad, 118 U. S. 290, 316, 317. See also Union Trust Co. v. Illinois Midland Co., 117 U. S. 434, 468, 469; Central Transportation Co. v. Pullman's Car Co., 139 U. S. 24, 56, 57, 61."

The rule established in the cited case has never been repudiated or departed from or modified by any subsequent opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States or any other court of last resort, and is the established law in this forum.

THE ORAL TESTIMONY.

The court will observe that we have made little use of the oral testimony in arguing this case. The transactions from the very beginning down to the time of the trial of this suit are fully shown by contemporaneous documentary evidence, and about this documentary evidence there is no dispute, as it was all agreed to by counsel. It has been our thought that oral testimony of transactions taking place anywhere from fifteen to thirty years prior to the time of taking the oral testimony was of very little value as compared with documentary evidence of the same transactions about which there is no dispute. And this is especially true when the testimony is with respect to ordinary transactions of very busy men, such as was the case in the case at bar.

The unreliability of the testimony of Mr. Hays, Colonel Blodgett, and Mr. Pryor is demonstrated by an examination of their evidence. In the first place, the questions propounded to them are ingeniously stated in order to permit them to testify to their conclusions. Their cross examination discloses the fact that when it comes to any fact they have no reliable recollection about it. For instance, take the testimony of Colonel Blodgett: He testified that he didn't know of the sale of stocks and bonds by the Purchasing Committee to Mr. Hubbell for a good many months after the sale had taken place (vol. II, p. 371), and yet he drew the contract providing for the sale (ex. 298, vol. II, p. 1600). Now Colonel Blodgett was honest in this matter, but he had simply forgotten it.

Take the testimony of Mr. Hays (vol. II, p. 229). An examination of it will disclose that he attempted in his direct examination to testify to certain facts, but his cross examination shows that he had no accurate recollection about them.

The same is true with respect to the testimony of Mr. Pryor, who attempted to testify to things which happened in Des Moines many years before he was ever in Des Moines.

With reference to the testimony of Mr. F. M. Hubbell, his testimony would be of some value if it were necessary to use it, because it was based upon entries which he made in a diary at the time the transactions occurred and with which he refreshed his recollection, but we have scarcely referred to his testimony because the same facts are so much more satisfactorily shown in the documentary evidence.

Counsel for the Wabash lay great stress upon the oral testimony of the parties that they didn't intend by the amendment to the articles of April 8, 1890, to affect the title to the terminal property. The fact is that none of them at the time thought there was any question about the title to the terminal property. They all understood that the title was in the terminal company and they simply were amending these articles and the record for the purpose of having them conform to the facts as they all understood them.

TITLE OF HUBBELL AND SONS TO THE SHARES OF STOCK.

Counsel for petitioners challenge the title of Hubbell and Son to the stock they hold in the Des Moines Union, and charge that the shares were obtained by fraud from the Des Moines, northern and Western Railway Co. (Brief, p. 171 et seq.)

Nobody interested in the last named Company as creditor or shareholder complains and why should the Milwaukee which acquired its interest long after and with full knowledge of the facts?

The consideration paid may seem small at this time, but that was in January, 1894, when the prospects for all these properties were very unpromising. But if it was not a fair price, that was the grievance of shareholders or creditors. General Dodge was next to the Hubbels the principal shareholder and was advised of the facts at the time and invited to share in the purchase, but declined to do so (Rec. Vol. III, p. 1018).

Other shareholders were all satisfied and in the twenty-six years that have passed, no note of discontent has been heard from any of them.

The creditors have all been paid. The Metropolitan Trust Company has no complaint to make. It never had a lien upon this stock for it was in express terms excluded from its mortgage (Rec., Vol. II, p. 637). Moreover, the mortgage debt of the Metropolitan Trust Company has long since been paid.

All the grievances complained of by counsel are the concern of people who feel no grievance and who do not complain.

The Wabash of course had no right to complain; it had no interest in this stock at that time. Indeed, fifteen hundred shares of it had once been held by the Wabash and had been sold by it. And in the ratifying contract of 1897 this shareholding of the Hubbells in the Des Moines Union was explicitly set forth, recognized and affirmed.

This argument was in principal part in type when the brief for petitioners was received and in the main we must rely upon what we have set out in anticipation of its argument. Some matters of omission and of commission, however, we call attention to.

REPORTS TO THE EXECUTIVE COUNCIL.

There is an attempt to make much of the reports made by the Des Moines Union to the Executive Council for purposes of taxation.

These reports will be found on pages 719 to 724, volume II, of the record.

These reports were made upon blanks prescribed by the state. Schedule 5 calls for a statement of "gross earnings for the year," and is followed by a form divided into columns headed:

Name of line	a
From passengers	b
From freight	c
From express service	d
From mail service	e
From telegraph service	f
From track rent	g
From car rent	h
Miscellaneous	i

Now, the Des Moines Union, while incorporated in name as a railway company and being an operating company, had no earnings from any of these sources because it did not at that time do an independent business in any of these respects, but was rendering a terminal service for which it received compensation in the manner provided in the contract subsisting between it and the railway companies, and in explanation of the fact that it had no earnings to report of the kind called for, it made the statement that it was simply "a representative company," acting as an agency at Des Moines for the three railway companies. We conceive this characterization to be an entirely appropriate one for any terminal company, as it certainly is an agency through which the railway companies perform a part of the functions which they have undertaken to perform, and in respect of these operations performed by a terminal company, the terminal company is responsible as a principal to the shipping or traveling public. And as to each one of the railway companies using a terminal railway, that terminal is a part of its line in respect of each and all of the transactions in which it employs that terminal. So the terminal company may well be called a representative and an agent, and some explanation was required to show why it had no specific earnings of the kind called for by the report, and there is nothing in this recital which could possibly operate by way of estoppel in behalf of any one. Its effect as evidence can be of no force whatever, because in the same report the Des Moines Union Railway Company states itself to be the owner of all of the terminal property which is here in question. The case is parallel with that, for example, of the Pullman Company, which, as to the public, is an agency of the railroad companies over which its cars are operated, employed by the railroad company as a convenient means of furnishing certain falicities to the traveling public; and the railroad company is responsible to its passengers in like manner and to the same extent as if the railroad company itself owned and operated the cars. It is a matter of general knowledge that these cars are owned by the Pullman Company, and also that the operation of the car itself, as distinguished from the operation of the train, is by the Pullman Company and not by the railroad company; but the fact that the Pullman Company is the agent of the railway company and that the railway company is responsible for its acts, does not at all impair the ownership of the cars by the Pullman Company, and neither does the fact of ownership of these cars by the Pullman Company and the operation of them by that company, relieve in any sense the railroad company from responsibility to the passenger.

Counsel say, p. 149, that:

> "It is significant that the report signed and verified on February 16th, 1894, immediately succeeding the transaction of January 29, 1894, by which > Hubbell acquired his five-eighths interest in the Des Moines Company, states that the Des Moines Company "is the owner of the property hereinbefore described" (Rec., p. 724).

This is a plain intimation that the prior reports contained no such statement, else it could not be significant.

The record, page 719, contains a stipulation for the purpose of abbreviation that all the reports from 1888 to 1894 are in substantially the same form and "that each contains * * * a description of its real and personal property." The stipulation is further to the effect that the "real property so described includes by specific description each of the lots and parcels of ground described in the following deeds," being the deeds by which How, Dodge, and the St. Louis, Des Moines and Northern Railway Company and the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company had made the conveyance of the terminal properties to the Des Moines Union Company, and including all the land the Des Moines Union had acquired up to that time.

Of course, if there was significance in the fact that the reports first included a statement that the Des Moines Union owned this terminal property, after Hubbells acquired these shares, then too there was significance in the stipulated fact that the reports made by the Des Moines Union from the very first, that made for 1888, and for each and every year thereafter, contained the same statement. But the significance is of another kind.

The change made in the reports was simply that made under the head of general remarks. As to this Mr. Cummins says:

"A. I had nothing whatever to do with the operation of the Des Moines Union Railway Company; knew nothing about the details of its operation. At the time of the first report to which my attention was called, was presented to me, Mr. Hubbell, F. C. Hubbell, who I think then was President of the Company, was away from Des Moines, and I signed that report without even reading it. I think I ought to apologize to everybody for having done it; but I was a busy man, and it came up to me in a perfunctory sort of a way, and I did it. When the other came on, in some way or other, I don't remember how it was, my attention was called to that subject, and I myself prepared and put on it, my recollection is, the slip pasted over; anyhow, it was put in as a substitute for the remarks that were in the report as it came to me, and which were probably identical with those contained in the previous report that I had signed."

The case of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Company vs. Des Moines Company, 165 Ia. 35, is cited on a question of estoppel but with suggestions of bad faith on the part of the Hubbels. The issues in that case are in no sense involved here and we have only to say that the claim of the Des Moines Union was based upon the facts that it had purchased and paid for the portion of the Railway in question, had expended large sums in maintaining and improving it and that when the Milwaukee bought the Northern lines, it was advised that the Des Moines Union claimed ownership of the tract between Farnam and Twenty-eighth Streets. The good faith of the Hubbells in attempting to sustain the ownership of the Des Moines Union in that litigation is evidenced by the fact that the decree of the trial court adjudged the title to be in the Des Moines Union and there was a dissenting opinion in the Supreme Court approving that title.

There are a number of matters as to which it seems to us, counsel should have stated their views. Among these are the following:

(1) If the organization of the defendant Company was for the sole purpose of providing the corporate trustee referred to in the contract of 1882, as claimed on pages 99-100 of their argument, why did they organize a corporation having the power and assuming the obligation of a Railway Company and why did they organize a corporation for pecuniary profit?

(2) If it was the purpose to transfer to the defendant Company simply the legal title to the Terminal property then why the following:

(a) Why did the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company, in whose name the title to no part of the Terminal stood, in January, 1895, pass a resolution authorizing its officers to transfer to the Terminal Company all of its interests in the Terminal Company of whatever kind and character?

(b) Why did the Northwestern Company, the Northern Company and the St. Louis Company, each, in their resolutions of January, 1885, authorizing their officers to convey this property, use this language:

> "convey, assign and transfer to said company all its right, title and interest of whatever name and character in and to the real estate, franchises, choses in action, and rights in possession or contingent to all the property in the City of Des Moines east of Farnham Street in said City now held, enjoyed or claimed by either or all of the signatories of said contract of January 2nd, 1882, or any agent or trustee thereof purchased, acquired, or held in pursuance of said contract." (Rec., Vol. II, p. 427.)

(c) Why did Col. Blodgett, whose integrity and ability are unchallenged, who had lived these transactions and who knew the intention better than can counsel or the Court, in preparing the deed of the St. Louis Company in carrying out these resolutions, prepare a warranty deed, and why did he formulate it so as to convey not only the property which stood in the name of that Company but also "all of the real estate within the City of Des Moines • • • also all its embankments, bridges, side tracks, • • • all its railroad property acquired or to be acquired and everything appurtenant to said railroad" (p. 458).

(d) Why did the Northern Company in its deed after describing the property which stood in his name use the following language:

"Together with all and singular the tenements, herditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging, or in anywise appertaining, and the reversion and reversions, remainder and remainders, rents, issues and profits thereof. And also, all the estate, right, title, interest in the above described property, possession, claim and demand whatsoever, as well in law as in equity of the said parties of the first part, of, in or to the above described premises, etc." (p. 456).

(e) Why was it provided in the original articles of incorporation of the defendant Company that its capital stock should be issued in payment for the Terminal property?

(f) Why was it recited in the contract of May 10th, 1889, that the defendant Company owned this property?

(3) If the contract of May 10th, 1889, was supplemental to the contract of January 2, 1882, why does it not recite this fact?

INACCURATE STATEMENTS AS TO WHAT THE RECORD CONTAINS.

On page 35 of the brief, counsel say the resolutions of November 5th and 8th, 1887, were addressed to the same object as the resolution of January 1, 1885, namely: the transfer of the trust properties to the Des Moines Company as corporate trustee. Substantially the same assertion is made at numerous other places in the brief. This is not true. The resolutions of January, 1885, do not purport to authorize Howe and Dodge as trustees or otherwise to convey any property but are restricted to the authorization of the three Railway Companies to a transfer of the ownership of the properties. The resolutions of 1887 are directed solely to Howe and Dodge as trustees except that the St. Louis Company is again authorized to transfer the ownership.

On pages 44 and 45 and at several other places in the brief it is asserted that at a meeting of the directors of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, held March 31st, 1888, a resolution was passed directing Col. Blodgett to prepare a thirty-year contract supplemental to the contract of January 2, 1882, and that the contract of May 10th, 1889, was prepared and executed in pursuance of that resolution and therefore counsel denominate the contract of 1889 as the "supplemental contract." The facts are not as asserted by counsel. The resolutions are as follows:

"Resolved, That the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Company, the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company and the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company, or their successors or assigns, shall pay the operating expenses, taxes and interest on bonds that are or may be issued, after deducting any amount received from other sources for rental, pro-rated on a wheelage basis, and that said payments, including interest charges, shall be made monthly, and when for any reason, said Companies, or either of them, shall be or become in default in the making of any such payment, or any part thereof, on the day when the same shall be or become due and payable as aforesaid, interest shall be collected upon amount so in default to the time same shall be fully paid and satisfied.

Resolved, That Col. W. H. Blodgett be requested to prepare an agreement for three years from May 1st, 1888, based on the above resolution and covering in detail the conduct and operation of the Des Moines Union Railway Company. Said agreement to be approved and executed by all the lines now holding an interest in the property.

Said agreement shall provide that if at the end of six months from date of same, either party to the contract shall feel that the terms of same are unjust to them, and give notice to that effect, it shall be a matter for readjustment.

Resolved, That the terms and conditions on which the several lines now interested, or which may hereafter become interested, shall enjoy the use of these terminals, be fully set forth in a supplemental agreement to be made and executed between the Des Moins Union Railway Company and each of the lines using the said terminals."

The first contract mentioned is not to be for thirty years, but for three years. And the second contract which is referred to as supplemental is manifestly to be supplemental to the three years' agreement. The agreement of 1882 is not mentioned from beginning to end of the proceedings. The actual conclusion of the matter was that the parties determined to make one bite of the cherry and so they drew up the contract of May 10th, 1889, to be effective from May 1st, 1888, and to run for thirty years. And this contract was comprehensive and complete in itself and not supplemental to anything else. And in no document and in no letter or record entry is it referred to as supplemental. That designation came in with this litigation and is the contribution of counsel.

On pages 26 and 27 counsel state the provisions contained in the Articles of Incorporation of the defendant company. They call the defendant always the "Depot Company." They put the name in quotation marks and italicize it as if it were quoted from the articles.

The fact is that the defendant Company is not referred to as the "Depot Company," in the Articles of Incorporation, the amendments thereto, or in any resolution, contract, deed, or other document found in the Record.

Referring to the Stockholders' Meeting of April 8th, 1890, at which the Articles of the defendant Company were amended, counsel, on page 55, say it is conceded that no one held a proxy representing the persons and interests whom the Record showed were represented at that meeting and in support thereof refer to Mr. Hubbell's testimony on pages 1165-9. What Mr. Hubbell testified to was that at the time of taking his deposition in May, 1911, more than twenty-one years after the Meeting of April 8th, 1890, he was unable to find these proxies. Again referring to this same Meeting of the Stockholders, counsel on page 126, say, "no conference, however, took place between Blodgett and Cummins; Cummins alone redrafted the proposed amendments to the Articles." With respect to this Senator Cummins testified "it (the draft of amended articles of incorporation) was submitted to Col. Blodgett and I had a conference with him; possibly more than one" (p. 1201).

On page 90 counsel say, "after the concentration of the trust properties in the Des Moines Company no equitable tenant in common in such trust properties ever conveyed, released or otherwise relinquished to the Des Moines Company its equitable estate therein." This statment is substantially repeated on pages 108 and 153. While it would not be correct to say that so far as these statements assert that the three railway companies did not after once transferring this property to the defendant Company, again transfer it, they are not true, these statements are misleading in that they tend to induce the belief that the three Railway Companies did not at any time transfer the ownership to the defendant Company.

Company.

The transfer of the ownership was the result of the resolutions of 1885 and 1887 and the deeds executed in pursuance thereof and the payment therefor by the Terminal Company. All these transactions were at or prior to the concentration of the ownership in the Des Moines Company.

Speaking of "surplus earnings," counsel say, on page 186, "although the Record does not show the amount of these accumulations at the present time, the testimony having been taken a number of years ago, it seems proper to state to the Court that these accumulations now amount to approximately Two Million Dollars ($2,000,000.00)." There is nothing in the Record to sustain this statement and it is not true as a matter of fact. The Record does show that a substantial sum is involved in this issue.

DEFECTIVE STATEMENT OF AGREEMENT OF 1882.

In their many refereneces to and statements concerning the agreement of 1882, counsel for petitioners never quote, never mention and never refer to a significant clause in the tenth paragraph. This paragraph provides for the use of the terminal railroad by companies whose roads do not extend to Des Moines and that this may be had by any such company upon payment of a fair sum for rental and its proportion of the maintenance account." Up to this point counsel are free in quotation and comment. But the paragraph proceeds, "the rental to enure to the Companies hereto in the same proportion as the original outlay." Here is a distinct assertion of proprietary right and interest. The Company that owns a one-half interest in the property is to receive one-half the rental, and the company that owns but one-fourth is to receive but one-fourth of the rental. The rental is not to go to the reduction of operating expenses, but is in the nature of what the parties later called surplus earnings. And so if they had organized a depot company on the plan of this agreement, the stock representing the property would have had the benefit of these rentals. True the parties did not organize such a company and being all agreed they were not bound to do so, and so too they might subsequently agree as they did to a different disposition of this particular rental, but the clause goes to show that the contributions to the enterprise as invested capital, and as well the stock afterward issued on account of such capital investment, as such stock was to have a value as property. So all consideration of this provision of the agreement was studiously avoided by counsel.

So, too, counsel avoid all mention of the letter of Hubbell to Miller, February 22nd, 1894. They argue and assert by implication that the Milwaukee Company was not informed as to the shareholding in the Des Moines Union Company. This letter was written at the very beginning of the negotiations that resulted in the Milwaukee finally acquiring the Northern lines, and before it had invested a dollar or done anything in the premises. In this letter Mr. Hubbell says:

> "The Des Moines Northern and Western Railway Company own one-fourth of the capital stock of the Des Moines Union Railway Company. The Wabash own one-eighth, and five-eighths is owned by individuals."

To bring this letter into the discussion would make absurd any suggestion that the Mliwaukee Company was not fully advised of the rights of Hubbell and Son and that it did not buy subject to those rights. So the letter was left out of consideration as the easiest way of dealing with it.

Counsel say that our position results in a disregard of the terms on which local aid was voted to the Northern line by some of the townships through which it passed. It is not for the Milwaukee to make such a defense. If such an issue had any place here, the Milwaukee Company would have no standing, for it would have no right to the line. One of the conditions on which aid was voted was that "said railroad shall never pass under the control of any of the lines constituting what is known as the Chicago pool or of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul R. R. Company" (Rec., Vol. II, p. 789). As the people who voted the aid are not complaining of what has been done here, no one else has any warrant for assuming to speak in their behalf.

RELATION OF MR. CUMMINS TO THE TRANSACTION.

It is repeated over and over again in the brief of counsel that Mr. Cummins was the personal counsel of F. M. Hubbell and Son and in such way as to suggest that he acted in their behalf rather than in behalf of the Wabash and the Des Moines Union, whose counsel he also was, in the transactions in which he had part. But the evidence is conclusive that everything done or advised by him was done in the open, after long notice and full knowledge by all concerned. He did not come into the situation until in 1888. He had nothing to do with the contract of 1882 nor with the organization of the Des Moines Union, nor yet with the sale and transfer to it of the terminal properties. He did not draft the contract of 1889. Nor had he aught to do with the sale of the Des Moines Unon stock to Hubbell and General Dodge. Col. Blodgett drew up the papers covering that transaction. The rough draft of the memorandum of sale of the stock is in evidence. (Rec., Vol. IV, p. 1600.) It is admittedly in part in the handwriting of Hubbell and in part in the handwriting of Col. Blodgett (p. 1601). Mr. Cummins was not so much as present.

The important transaction in which Mr. Cummins had considerable part was the amendment of the Articles of Incorporation. This matter was months under way. It was under consideration at various meetings of the Company, stated and adjourned. It was the subject of correspondence and of discussion in personal conferences. The amendments were adopted only after grave consideration and the fullest deliberation and when the strong men of the interests other than Hubbell's were present, Col. How, for many years Vice President of the Wabash, and Hays, one of the ablest and most progressive railroad men in the country. General Dodge was not present in person, but he had been fully informed and he approved and was present by proxy. And when it came to the execution of the Articles in form for recording, General Dodge, Col. Blodgett, Col. How and Charles M. Hays signed and acknowledged the articles as officers and directors of the Des Moines Union. To say that these men were in any way misled or that they knew not what they did is the sheerest nonsense. They none of them ever said so. These men were all of them save Col. How, living while this suit was pending. The testimony of Col. Blodgett and Mr. Hays was taken. Neither of these men said that they did not understand the amendments at the time of their adoption or that any misrepresentations were made to them by anybody. Their recollection of matters is dim as is natural after so many years, but there is no impeachment of the integrity of anything that was done. And, indeed, the status of the Des Moines Union Company and the character of its title to the property it held and the nature of its rights and interests therein were all fixed before Mr. Cummins came upon the scene.

The subtle suggestion of anything inviting criticism or distrust of his conduct is as baseless as the gross charges of the forgery of records made in the amended bill of complaint and abandoned without attempt at proof.

We pass now to a consideration of the question of "surplus earnings," the subject of the cross petition.

IN THE

Supreme Court of the United States

OCTOBER TERM, 1919

DES MOINES UNION RAILWAY COMPANY, F. M. HUBBELL, F. C. HUBBELL and F. M. HUBBELL & SON, Petitioners,
vs.
CHICAGO, MILWAUKEE & ST. PAUL RAILWAY COMPANY and WABASH RAILWAY COMPANY, Respondents.
No. 279

On Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

STATEMENT, BRIEF AND ARGUMENT FOR PETITIONERS

STATEMENT.

In discussing the questions involved in this cross-petition for certiorari we will continue to designate the parties as we have done in the case involving the main issue, believing that this will avoid confusion, the Milwaukee and the Wabash Companies as petitioners or complainants and the Des Moines Union Railway Company and the individual parties as respondents or defendants.

The issue here is as to what are known in the record as being moneys received by the defendant company as compensation for switching services rendered companies other than the complainants or their predecessors, rentals from property owned by the defendant company and not at the time needed for terminal purposes, rental for station privileges, etc.

A very considerable portion of this fund was used to acquire additions to and make improvements on the terminal property, done by consent of all parties at the time. The unexpended balance of the fund, in the treasury of the defendant company on January 1st, 1907, the last date as to which we have testimony, was $125,276.78 (Vol. IV, p. 1397). The record does not show the subsequent accumulations.

The question is who is entitled to this fund, the Des Moines Union Railway Company or the Milwaukee and the Wabash Companies?

This controversy involves the construction of the contract of May 10, 1889 (vol. II, p. 479). By the terms of this contract the defendant agreed, for the period of thirty years from May 1, 1888, to furnish to complainants' predecessors terminal facilities and certain terminal services. In consideration of this it was agreed:

> "Section Three. Each of said parties of the second part for itself and its assigns, agrees to pay to said party of the first part a sum of money to be ascertained as follows, to-wit:

1st. There shall be ascertained the amount required to pay five per cent interest upon the mortgage bonds of the party of the first part, one-twelfth of which, less any deduction hereinafter provided for, shall be payable monthly as hereinafter specified.

2nd. At the expiration of each month, or as soon thereafter as practicable, there shall be ascertained the expenses of maintaining and repairing the property of the party of the first part, including the maintenance and repair of tracks, depots, round houses, engine houses, etc., during the preceding month. And in like manner there shall be ascertained the taxes, general or special, levied upon or against said property and paid during the preceding month, or to be paid during the next succeeding month, and the insurance, if any, paid during the next succeeding month.

3rd. There shall be likewise ascertained the costs and expenses of every nature connected with the operation of said terminal station, freight and passenger depots, depot grounds, round houses, transfers and other properties, which is to include every item of expense or disbursement incurred or made by the party of the first part not hereinbefore mentioned, except the expenses specified in Section Nine hereof.

Section Four. Having so ascertained the monthly aggregate of all the items and sums mentioned in the preceding section, there shall be deducted therefrom the amount, if any, which other railway companies may be under obligation to pay by virtue of contracts for the use of said property, or parts thereof, for the preceding month, and the remainder shall be paid by the parties of the second part in the proportion that the wheelage of each of said parties bears to the entire wheelage of all said second parties during such preceding month."

The question is, whether the complainants are entitled to credit for the items making up this fund, such items not being items "which other railway companies may be under obligation to pay by virtue of contracts for the use of said property, or parts thereof."

The Circuit Court of Appeals held that this fund belonged to complainants and it is this provision of the decree which defendants bring up for review by their petition for certiorari.

ASSIGNMENTS OF ERROR.

The Circuit Court of Appeals erred in holding:

"I That the contention of petitioners that the only character of credit items to which the respondents were entitled under the contract "were such as were paid by some other railway by virtue of a contract for the use of the property" while a strict construction of the exact wording of the contract is not "a fair construction of the spirit of the agreement."

II. That its conclusion as to what was the "spirit of the agreement was based upon or warranted by the history of the transaction.

III. That its construction of the contract giving the surplus earnings to the respondents was justified by the reading of the contract in its entirety.

IV. And in its order, judgment and decree directing the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of Iowa to so modify its decree "that the surplus earnings belong to the railways, and to appoint a master under instructions to ascertain the part due each upon a wheelage basis."

POINTS AND AUTHORITIES.

I.

THE CONTRACT OF MAY 10, 1889, WAS CLEAR AND UNAMBIGUOUS, AND ITS INTERPRETATION DOES NOT REQUIRE A CONSIDERATION OF THE ACTS OF THE PARTIES THEREUNDER.

Where the meaning of a contract is clear in the eye of the law, the courts will not resort to the acts of the parties for its construction.

ARGUMENT.

I.

THE CONTRACT OF MAY 10, 1889, WAS CLEAR AND UNAMBIGUOUS AND ITS INTERPRETATION DOES NOT REQUIRE A CONSIDERATION OF THE ACTS OF THE PARTIES THEREUNDER.

In the conduct of its business as a terminal company, the Des Moines Union Railway Company from time to time moves cars from and to industries located on its lines, for carriers other than complainants, for which it makes and collects a charge. It also leases certain pieces of its property not needed at present, for railway purposes, for which it collects rentals. It also leases certain portions of its union depot, for which it collects rentals. The funds received from these sources are what have been known in this record and in the books of the terminal company as "surplus earnings."

The Des Moines Union Company took possession of the terminal property May 1, 1888, as already shown, and began the operation thereof.

On May 10, 1889, the defendant company entered into a written contract with the predecessors of complainants, by which it granted to them a certain qualified use of the terminal property and agreed to furnish to them certain terminal services (vol. II, p. 479). In section 3 of the contract (p. 481) it was agreed that plaintiffs' predecessors should pay for such terminal services a monthly sum to be ascertained in a particular manner, and then section 4 of the contract provides:

"Having so ascertained the monthly aggregate of all the items and sums mentioned in the preceding section, there shall be deducted therefrom the amount, if any, which other railway companies may be under obligation to pay by virtue of contracts for the use of said property, or parts thereof, for the preceding month, and the remainder shall be paid by the parties of the second part in the proportion that the wheelage of each of said parties bears to the entire wheelage of all said second parties during such preceding month."

The Circuit Court of Appeals said with respect to our position in this argument that "this latter contention is a strict construction of the exact wording of the contract" (Rec., vol. V, p. 2115). There is nothing in any other provision of the contract to qualify or impair the force of "the exact wording of the contract."

Where a contract itself is clear and unambiguous, extraneous facts cannot be resorted to for the purpose of construction. This is the accepted rule.

In the case of

Railroad Co. v. Trimble, 10 Wall 367, this Court, in discussing the effect to be given to the acts of the parties in construing a contract, l. c. 377, said:

"• • • Where there is doubt as to the proper construction of an instrument, this feature of the case is entitled to great consideration; but where its meaning is clear in the eye of the law, the error of the parties cannot control its effect. In this view of the subject, conceding that Trimble took this conveyance, not out of abundant caution and to solve in his favor a doubt which might otherwise possibly arise against him, but because he deemed it necessary to give him a title which he did not already possess, his legal rights in this controversy are just what they would have been if that instrument had not been executed."

The case of

Russell v. Young, 94 Fed. 45 (C. C. A.), involved the construction of a contract between an attorney and his client with respect to compensation for legal services. One of the claims made by the plaintiff in the case was that the contract had been construed by the act of the parties. The opinion was written by Circuit Judge Lurton, and referring to the question under consideration, he says (p. 47):

"Plaintiff offered to prove that he had deducted 7½% of every cash collection made by him and remitted the remainder to Mr. Carlisle with a statement showing that he had retained 7½% as compensation for the collection of the particular remittance, and that no exception had ever been taken by Mr. Carlisle to this construction of the contract. This evidence was offered for the purpose of showing that the parties had construed the contract according to the present contention of plaintiff in error. The evidence was rejected upon the ground that the contract was not doubtful and needed no such sidelight in its interpretation. Evidence as to the particular construction by the parties of a doubtful or ambiguous instrument is often of great importance, but such evidence can never control the effect unles the legal meaning is doubtful. Railroad Co. vs. Trimble, 10 Wall 367,377; Lang Co. vs. Doll, 35 Md. 89; Fogg vs. Insurance Co., 10 Cush. 337. To give effect to a written agreement according to an erroneous construction placed upon it by the parties would not be to construe, interpret and enforce the written agreement upon which the action is brought, but to enforce a new and different contract."

The case of

Ralya v. Atkins, 61 N. E. (Ind.) 726, was a suit upon a contract which, it was claimed, had been construed by the acts of the parties. Referring to this subject the court says (p. 728):

"* * * This action is founded on the contract in writing, executed by the parties, and it is sought to enforce the same as executed, not modified by any oral agreement or otherwise. It is true that when the terms of a contract are of doubtful or ambiguous meaning, the construction placed on the same by the parties by their conduct and acts may be shown for the purpose of arriving at their true intention. The construction placed on such contract by the parties is entitled to great weight and may be controlling. * * * When, however, the contract is free from ambiguity and its meaning is clear, such rule is not applicable. * * * In Morris vs. Thomas, 57 Ind. 322, this court said: 'If there is any obscurity, uncertainty or ambiguity in the terms of a contract, then the acts of the parties in connection therewith, as suggested by appellant's counsel, would furnish valuable aid in the construction of the contract; but where, as in this case, the terms of the contract are plain, intelligible and free from doubt and uncertainty, rules of construction are unnecessary and of no possible service. In such a case it is certainly not the province of the courts by any rules of construction to make another and entirely different contract for the parties from the one they made for themselves."

In the recent case of

the Supreme Court of Iowa had to say upon this subject the following (p. 473):

> "we understand the law to be that where the parties to an agreement have acted upon a certain interpretation of it, this interpretation will not be followed by the courts where the contract is not ambiguous, since a construction contrary to the plain meaning of the instrument is necessarily erroneous, and the parties are not bound by their erroneous construction of it. Spencer v. Millisack, 52 Iowa, 31, 2 N. W. 606; also Railroad Company v. Trimble, 10 Wall. (77 U. S.) 367, 19 L. Ed. 948. But where there is doubt as to the proper construction of an instrument, the construction put upon it by the parties is entitled to consideration. Railroad Company v. Trimble, supra.
> A written instrument is ambiguous only when found to be of uncertain meaning by persons of competent skill and information. 1 Greenleaf on Ev. (Lewis Ed.) § 298."

Turning now to an examination of the contract of May 10, 1889, for the purpose of determining whether or not it is ambiguous with respect to the subject matter of this inquiry. Two things must be kept in mind, because, in the language of the Supreme Court of Iowa, "a written instrument is ambiguous only when found to be of uncertain meaning by persons of competent skill and information." (Comtograph Co. v. Burroughs, supra.)

One of these facts is that the charter of the Des Moines Union Railway Company contained, among other things, the following (vol. II, p. 420):

> "The general nature of the business to be transacted shall be the construction, ownership and operation of a railway in, around and about the City of Des Moines, Iowa, including * * * the transfer of cars from the line or depot of one railway to another, or from the various manufactories, warehouses, store-houses or elevators to each other or to any of the railways or depots thereof, now constructed or to be hereafter constructed, in or around said City of Des Moines."

When the Des Moines Union Railway Company accepted this charter it not only acquired the powers, but assumed the obligations of a common carrier, and included in this was the power and obligation to perform switching services not only for complainants and their predecessors, but for any other railroad or shipper who desired transportation over its line. In other words, the duties and obligations of the Des Moines Union Railway Company were not confined to serving the railways parties to the contract of May 10, 1889, but it owed the duty of performing the services of a common carrier for any other railway company with which it might connect, or any shipper who desired to use its line for transportation. For these services the Des Moines Union Railway Company was entitled to compensation. Not only this, but it had long been the custom of railway companies to lease privileges in their depots, to charge storage for baggage, etc. It was therefore certain that from these sources the defendant company would receive an income, whether great or small.

The other fact is that this contract of May 10, 1889, was drawn by Col. Wells H. Blodgett, then general solicitor for The Wabash Company, who, as the record shows, had been exclusively employed in the railroad service for years prior to the drawing of this contract and therefore knew the sources of revenue upon which the defendant company might depend.

Knowing by whom this contract was drawn, we would naturally expect to find it clear and unambiguous and its provisions stated in no uncertain terms, and in this expectation we are not disappointed. The language selected by Colonel Blodgett to evidence the agreement is as follows (vol. II, p. 481):

> "Having so ascertained the monthly aggregate of all the items and sums mentioned in the preceding section, there shall be deducted therefrom the amount, if any, which other railway companies may be under obligations to pay by virtue of contracts for the use of said property, or parts thereof, for the preceding month."

Now there are three things which must appear before the complainants are entitled to have a credit upon their accounts, and these three things are the following:

(a) The sums must be paid by other railway companies.

(b) They must be paid by virtue of a contract.

(c) They must be paid for the use of the property.

The idea that the complainants are entitled to credit for any items which do not come within the above classification is excluded by the very language of the contract following that above quoted, which is as follows:

> "and the remainder shall be paid by the parties of the second part."

The word "remainder" means the aggregate of the sums ascertained as provided in section 3 of the contract, after deducting the items specifically authorized in section 4.

It is undisputed that almost from the beginning the terminal company did receive payments from other railway companies by virtue of the contracts for the use of this property, and that these sums have been consistently credited upon the bills of the complainants and their predecessors.

For instance, the record shows that the Chicago Great Western Railway Company has for many years paid large sums annually for the use of the terminal property, and that likewise other railroad companies are paying such items, but all these sums, as we have said, have been credited to the complainants and their predecessors.

Upon this subject Mr. E. B. Pryor, a witness for the complainants, and vice president of The Wabash Company, and who had examined the books of the terminal company for the purpose of qualifying himself as a witness, testified in substance:

The Wabash, and the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad Company, are the only present users of the terminals who are successors to the original parties of the second part to the contract of May 10, 1889. The other railroads which are now using the terminals, or parts of them, are the Chicago, Great Western, the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railroad Company, and the St. Paul & Des Moines Railroad Company. The amounts which these companies are under obligation to pay by virtue of their contracts for the use of the property for the preceding month, using the language of the contract, 'are deducted from the bills rendered to your Company and the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company.' Among these amounts the Chicago Great Western Railroad Company, and its predecessor, the Chicago Great Western Railway Company, has been paying one-third of all the taxes as a part of the rent, which it pays, and an amount equal to one-third of the maintenance and other amounts which are specifically set out in the contract. (Vol. II, p. 353.)

We have, therefore, the situation that it was perfectly apparent that the terminal company would have earnings of the character which make up the fund in controversy, and we have a contract drawn which specifically confines the credits to which the complainants are entitled, to items other than those under consideration, and the contract excludes the items under consideration by specifically providing that the remainder should be paid by the tenant companies. Language more appropriate to carry out what was in the mind of the parties could scarcely be selected.

Even if we resort to the conduct of the parties as an aid to construction, the result is the same.

As we understand counsel for petitioners they do not really contend that the contract is ambiguous, but ignoring the rule of law which we have cited they contend that the conduct of the parties under the contract put a construction upon it which gives to them these surplus earnings.

What was that conduct? We concede that at the beginning the Des Moines Union credited these earnings, then very small, to the railway companies. Why it did this the record does not show. There is no testimony indicating that there was any discussion of the subject. These earnings belonged to the Des Moines Union and it could do with them what it pleased. The ultimate beneficiaries of these revenues at that time were very much the same whether they went to the Des Moines Union or to the tenant companies.

The first record action taken with respect to them was the resolution of the Des Moines Union of February 11th, 1891 (Rec., Vol. II, p. 497), as follows:

> "It is ordered that the rents collected for the use of the Company's real estate and the switching charges paid in be credited on bills of the different tenant companies occupying this company's terminals, giving to each company its share ascertained by wheelage."

Now this had been done for a few months previously. This resolution was the action of the Des Moines Union, disposing in the way indicated of its own revenues. The credit, it is to be observed, was to be allowed to all the tenant companies, including the Chicago, St. Paul & Kansas City Company, which was neither a shareholder in the Des Moines Union nor a party to the contract of 1889. If by that contract these revenues belonged to the petitioners' predecessors, the Des Moines Union had no right to give them in part to the C., St. P. & K. C. Company, for it was not a party to the contract. What that Company paid under its own contract with the Des Moines Union was under the contract of 1889 to be deducted from the expense charges against the other railway companies, and it was entitled to nothing on the score of receipts by the Des Moines Union on switching and rental accounts. But the Des Moines Union had the right to make concessions from its own revenues to any or all of its tenant companies. That the C., St. P. & K. C. Company shared in the credits to the tenant companies, so long as they were allowed is shown by Rec., Vol. II, p. 279 to 313.

This concession for whatever reason made ceased January 7th, 1892, less than three years after the contract of May, 1889, when the directors of the Des Moines Union passed the following resolution (Rec., Vol. II, p. 499):

> "Whereas, this Company is in need of a cash capital with which to purchase supplies and pay current bills, which come in before it receives its monthly revenue from the tenant companies:
> Therefore, be it resolved that until the further action of the Board, the sums received as rents of real estate and all switching charges shall not be credited upon the accounts of the tenant companies, but shall be used for the aforesaid purposes."

In other words, the Des Moines Union wanted a working capital fund and got it by its own action in withdrawing from the tenant companies, all of them, what before it had allowed them.

And this new order was to continue until further action of the Des Moines Union. Strange that the disposition of these revenues whatever that might be, should from the beginning be determined by the sole action of the Des Moines Union if it was not the owner of them.

No action was ever had respecting these revenues by any other company until many years after, in 1906, when this suit was in the brew.

And after January, 1892, these revenues were never again credited to any of the tenant companies, but they were used entirely in the acquisition of additional property, in improvements and in the accumulation of surplus.

The first reference to surplus earnings in the record after the passage of the resolution of January 1, 1892, is contained in the record of a meeting of the board of directors of the terminal company held May 26, 1894, (ex. 130, vol. IV, p. 1338), where it was resolved to pay what is known as the Hill mortgage of $4,000 out of this fund. At this meeting the only Wabash representative present was its local attorney, Mr. A. B. Cummins.

At the meeting of the board of directors held June 7, 1894, at which Charles M. Hays, general manager of the Wabash Company, was present, the following appears in the record:

> "The records of the meeting held May 26th, 1894, were read and the proceedings therein set forth were, on motion, unanimously approved and agreed to with the exception of the Resolution to pay the mortgage upon lot seven (7) in block fifteen (15) of the Original Town of Fort Des Moines amounting to $4,000.00, out of the funds on hand realized from rents of real estate and from switching cars. On motion to approve this part of the record, Mr. Hays wanted further time." (Ex. 132, vol. IV, p. 1340.)

At a meeting of the board, held July 10, 1894, the following appears of record (ex. 133, vol. IV, p. 1341):

> "On motion of F. M. Hubbell, the treasurer was directed to pay the Abbie Bechtel mortgage of two thousand dollars ($2,000) with accrued interest thereon, upon the south forty-four (44) feet of lot ten (10) in block thirty-five (35) Fort Des Moines, Iowa, upon which is situated in part, the Freight House of this Company; and upon payment of same to have the mortgage cancelled of record, provided, however, that the written consent of Chas. M. Hays could be procured."

On June 19, 1894, Mr. Hays wrote Mr. Hubbell as follows (see cross examination of Hays, vol. II, p. 256):

> "Referring to the M. L. P. Hill note of $4,000 which you reported at a meeting of directors of the Des Moines Union Railway Company, held June 7th, as having been paid by you, which you suggested should be taken out of the surplus earnings of the Des Moines Union Railway, and upon which I withheld my vote until I could consult with President Ashley, of the Purchasing Committee, after discussion of the matter with Mr. Ashley and General Solicitor Blodgett, they concur in the opinion that a proper disposition of the payment will be to charge it to the surplus earnings as proposed, and you may therefore be governed accordingly. Please ascertain from treasurer and advise me what balance this still leaves in the hands of the treasurer to the credit of 'surplus earnings.'"

And again on August 9, 1894, Mr. Hays wrote Mr. Hubbell (see vol. II, p. 256) as follows:

> "I have yours of the 7th showing surplus earnings of Des Moines Union Railway on hand July 1st of $15,312.89, and after paying note of L. P. Hill of $4,000 interest, $180, $11,132.89 on hand, I approve of your application of $2,000 of this amount to the payment of the Abbie-Bechtel mortgage."

Defendants' exhibits 312 to 316 inclusive (vol. IV, pp. 1623-7), are letters passing between Mr. Hubbell and Mr. Hays in October and November, 1894, in reference to the application of surplus earnings to the payment of the indebtedness on the Heath property, which application Mr. Hays approved.

In pursuance of this correspondence the board of directors of the terminal company, at a meeting held November 14, 1894 (ex. 135, vol. IV, p. 1343), at which Mr. Hays was present by proxy to A. B. Cummins, a resolution was passed appropriating out of the surplus earnings $10,775.00 to apply upon said indebtedness and to pay the balance of said indebtedness, amounting to $40,000.00, and evidenced by unmatured notes out of the surplus earnings as the notes became due, and the following was also enacted:

> "The words 'Surplus Earnings' as herein used, mean that fund arising from the rentals of such real estate and from switching charges."

On November 19, 1894, the same subject was considered by a meeting of the board of directors of the terminal company (ex. 136, vol. IV, p. 1344).

At the annual meeting of the stockholders held February 14, 1895 (ex. 138, vol. IV, p. 1347), there were present, among others, C. M. Hays, general manager of the Wabash Railroad, Mr. H. L. Magee, a representative of the Wabash, the Purchasing Committee of the Wabash by Charles M. Hays, proxy, and the Des Moines Northern & Western Railroad Company by F. M. Hubbell, president. The following appears in the record:

> "On motion, the minutes and proceedings of all meetings of the Board of Directors and Stockholders held during the year 1894, were read and approved and all of the acts of the Board of Directors and Officers done during year 1894, were confirmed and ratified."

In August, 1896, Mr. J. Ramsey, Jr., then vice president and general manager of The Wabash Railroad Company, wrote to F. C. Hubbell, president of the Des Moines Union Railway Company (ex. 357, vol. IV, p. 1666), as follows:

> "This will be handeed you by Mr. Pryor, our assistant auditor, whom I have requested, in company with Mr. Garrett to go to Des Moines, and look over the methods and cost of operating the joint terminals.
>
> I do not do this because I have any doubt or apprehensions as to the property being handled in the best way possible for the interests of all, but only in order to fully post myself on the whole situation at that point.
>
> I find our company has not been in the habit of receiving any statement from the Des Moines Union, other than the one showing the cost of operation, and we have no information, whatever, as to the revenues of the company, their general disposition, etc., nor any of the detailed information which I think we should have in order to keep properly informed.

Will you kindly have the officers of the Des Moines Union furnish Messrs. Pryor and Garrett every opportunity necessary for them to become properly posted in the premises."

From this it appears that at this time the new vice-president and general manager of the Wabash learned all the facts as to the way in which the business of the Terminal Company was conducted, what its revenues were and how its accounts were kept.

II.

THE RATIFICATION CONTRACT OF 1897.

Of greatest significance here is the history of the proceedings which ended in the contract of July 31st, 1897.

The original railway companies parties to the contract of 1889 were no longer operating their respective properties and question seems to have arisen as to whether the contract was binding upon their successors. This doubt affected the market value of the Des Moines Union bonds, which in large part were held by the Wabash Company. Mr. Ashley, President of the Wabash, wanted that doubt removed. On December 28th, 1896, he wrote to Mr. Hubbell as Secretary of the Des Moines Union as follows (Rec., vol. IV, p. 1673):

"Permit me to remind you of our understanding to the effect that you would have prepared at once a new agreement for the tenant companies of the Des Moines Union Railway Co. to sign, this new agreement being considered necessary on account of the foreclosure of the Des Moines & Norwestern. I understand that the agreement will be exactly as before, except that the time must be made to correspond with the life of the bonds, or to be made for a period to extend beyond their maturity.

I write now for the purpose of urging the immediate preparation of this agreement, as without it we cannot well dispose of our bonds. When it is ready please forward it to Colonel Blodgett, asking him to examine the same and to send it to me as soon as possible. I should not suppose it would take long to have the agreement prepared and as time in this case is of importance I hope you will see that the paper is gotten under way at once. Perhaps you have already taken the matter in hand and if so, so much the better."

On February 3, 1897, Mr. Hubbell wrote to Colonel Blodgett (ex. 367, vol. IV, p. 1679), enclosing the proposed new contract prepared by Mr. Cummins. This proposed contract is defendants' exhibit 383 (vol. IV, p. 1703).

It is significant to note that so far as the passages in the proposed contract under which the subject of surplus earnings arises are concerned, the proposed contract which Mr. Cummins prepared and which was forwarded to Colonel Blodgett was identical with the contract of May 10, 1889, the provision being contained in section 3 as follows:

"Having so ascertained the monthly aggregate of all the items and sums mentioned in the preceding section, which shall embrace every item of expense or liability of whatsoever name or character, there shall be deducted therefrom the amount, if any, which other railway companies may be under obligations to pay by virtue of contracts for the use of said property or parts thereof, for the preceding month, and the remainder shall be paid by the Des Moines & St. Louis Company," etc.

Immediately upon this proposed contract coming into the hands of Colonel Blodgett, the question of what was to be done with the surplus earnings was raised. The form of the question, however, was not as to who was entitled to the surplus earnings under the contract of May 10, 1889, but what change could be made in the contract so as to entitle the tenant companies to such surplus earnings, or a portion thereof. It seemed to be conceded that under the contract of May 10, 1889, the surplus earnings belonged to the terminal company, and it was Colonel Blodgett's idea that this feature of the contract should be changed.

In a letter of Colonel Blodgett to Mr. Hubbell dated March 26, 1897 (ex. 377, vol. IV, p. 1687), Colonel Blodgett encloses two forms of section 3 which he proposes to be inserted in place of section 3 as prepared by Mr. Cummins. These forms are exhibits 378 and 379 (vol. IV, pp. 1688-91), and provide for crediting the surplus earnings upon the accounts of the tenant companies. If these tenant companies were entitled to credit for these surplus earnings under the provisions of section 3 of the contract as prepared by Mr. Cummins, which we have shown are the same provisions as are contained in the contract of 1889, then, of course, it was unnecessary for Colonel Blodgett to insist upon any change in this section. The clear inference is that in the opinion of the parties neither the proposed contract as drawn by Mr. Cummins, nor the contract of 1889, entitled the tenant companies to these credits.

The subject of the surplus earnings was threshed out by the parties, as will be ascertained by the follow-in gexhibits (vol. IV): 367-a, 368 (p. 1680), 375-6 (pp. 1684-7), 382 (p. 1694), 377 (p. 1687), 378 (p. 1688), 379 (p. 1689), 380 (p. 1691), 381 (p. 1692), 384 (p. 1712), and 385 (p. 1723).

It will be noted from an examination of these exhibits, that nowhere do the Wabash officials take the position that they were entitled to a credit for these surplus earnings, either under the contract of 1889, or because of any alleged construction put thereon by the acts of the parties, but their contention is that in this new contract a change shall be made with respect to the surplus earnings, which would give to the tenant companies such earnings, or a portion thereof.

The result of the conferences and negotiations was what is known as the ratification contract of July 31, 1897 (vol. 11, p. 506), which was a ratification and adoption of the contract of May 10, 1889, except as therein changed, and no change was made in the language of the latter contract under which the question of surplus earnings arises.

This ratification contract was executed by the Des Moines Union Railway Company on the one hand, and by the complainant, The Wabash Railroad Company, and by the Des Moines Northern & Western Railroad Company (predecessor of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company) on the other.

This contract, referring to the contract of May 10, 1889, provides among other things as follows:

> "And the Wabash Company for itself agrees to make the payments therein provided for at the times and in the manner prescribed for the said

Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company so long as it operates the railroad of the said Des Moines & St. Louis Company."

The Complainant, the Wabash Company, agreed therefore, to make payments to the Des Moines Company, not according to any modification of the contract of May 10, 1889, or any subsequent construction thereof, but strictly, as "therein provided." It was provided in the contract of May 10, 1889, that the Des Moines & St. Louis Company would pay its share of all the expenses of the Des Moines Company ascertained on a wheelage basis, except there should > "be deducted therefrom the amount, if any, which other railway companies may be under obligation to pay by virtue of contracts for the use of said property or parts thereof, for the preceding month."

It therefore appears that the attempt to change the contract with respect to the disposition of the surplus earnings was abandoned, and it was agreed that the Wabash Company should pay in accordance with the terms of the original contract.

With respect to the predecessor of the Chicago, Milwalkee & St. Paul Railway Company, the contract provided (p. 508):

> "And the said Des Moines, Northern & Western Company for itself agrees to assume all the obligations of a lessee railroad company as prescribed in the said contract for the entire term named therein, and as though it had been named in and was a party to the said contract when originally made, and to pay to the said Des Moines Company at the times and in the manner therein prescribed the sums of money which may become due, computed according to the terms and provisions of the said contract with respect to a tenant company."

Here is the Des Moines, Northern and Western bound like the Wabash to pay at the times and in the manner prescribed by the contract of 1889 the sums of money which might become due, computed according to the terms and provisions of that contract.

What Mr. Ashley wanted in the new contract was placed there. The obligation imposed upon the tenant companies by the contract of 1889 were expressly assumed by their successors.

III.

SUBSEQUENT CONDUCT OF THE PARTIES.

The primary purpose of this contract of July, 1897, was, as we have said, to help the salability of the bonds of the Des Moines Union Company on the general market. The Wabash Company held the largest block of these bonds and evidently wished to dispose of them. So far as concerned the Des Moines Union Company and the tenant railway companies and their relations inter sese the contract of 1889 needed no amendment because there was the tacit agreement between all of them that the railway companies had succeeded to the rights of their predecessors in this contract. But a prospective purchaser of bonds would desire something more than this and that would be a binding obligation upon the railway companies to perform the terms of the contract and to make the payments therein prescribed, and so the contract of 1897 was made and this purpose of improving the credit of the bonds was accomplished. But there was another thing that might be done to help to this same end of making bonds salable and that was to list them upon the New York Stock Exchange, where merchants in such wares most do congregate, and Mr. Hubbell, on behalf of the Des Moines Union with the approvel and aid of Mr. Ashley as President of the Wabash Company, made application in due form to the Stock Exchange for the listing of these bonds. The rules of the Exchange seemed to require that the resources available for payment of the bonds, principal and interest, shall be disclosed, so that dealers in them, buyers and sellers, may be able to form some opinion as to their intrinsic value.

The Record, Vol. 4, pages 1734 and following, contain a full history of this listing of the bonds. The Stock Exchange required a "complete financial statement of said corporation for a period covering at least one year before its reorganization: i. e., a detailed statement of its earnings and receipts from every source, a detailed account of all expenditures and the amount of its outstanding indebtedness in detail of every description and a balance sheet of its books, etc., etc." (p. 1736).

Responding to this requirement, the Des Moines Union Railway Company on September 28, 1897, in its application to the Committee on Stock List of the New York Stock Exchange, set forth its ownership of the terminal properties and the various functions which it performed and then said (p. 1744):

> "The terminal facilities offered by this Company are at present shared by the Des Moines & St. Louis R. R. (owned by the Wabash R. R. Co.), the Chicago Great Western Railway, and the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad. Each of these companies for itself has agreed to pay monthly, as rental for the facilities used, a sum equal to one month's interest on the outstanding bonds, besides they pay for their proportion of the expense of operation. In addition, the Company derives considerable revenue for switching cars for other railroads (not tenants) and in rents for the use of various portions of the property."

In this same application it made a statement of receipts and expenditures for the year ending July 30, 1897, as follows:

"RECEIPTS AND EXPENDITURES
For the year ending June 30, 1897.

RECEIPTS.

Amount Rec'd from The Wabash R. R. Co. on wheelage basis	$31,251.14
Amount Rec'd from Des Moines N. & W. Ry. Co. on wheelage basis	58,447.66
Amount Rec'd from Chicago G. W. Ry. Co. on a wheelage basis	47,190.71
Amount Rec'd for outside switching and rent of real estate	10,282.42
	$147,172.00

EXPENDITURES.

Interest paid on First Mtge. Bonds	$28,450.00
Taxes for year ending June 30th, 1897	6,260.25
Conducting Transportation	66,147.27
Maintenance of Way Structures	15,935.55
Maintenance of Equipment	13,679.33
General Expenses	6,390.11
	$136,889.51
Surplus	$10,282.49"

This application was forwarded by Mr. F. M. Hubbell as Secretary of the Des Moines Union Railway Company to Mr. Ashley as President of the Wabash Company and by Mr. Ashley was presented to the proper Committee of the Stock Exchange and by that Comittee it was approved and bonds were listed as desired.

Here is a statement made for the use of the investing public and we have here the direct statement in the text of the application that in addition to the sums which the Railway Companies have agreed to pay monthly "the Company (the Des Moines Union) derives considerable revenue for switching cars for other railroads not tenants and in rents for the use of various portions of the property." And in the statement of receipts and expenditures for the preceding year we have set forth in detail what the Des Moines Union received from each of the tenant companies and the additional item of revenue "for outside switching and rent of real estate, $10,282.42." Deducting the various charges to which the revenues of the Des Moines Union were subject there was left the surplus of $10,282.49, the amount received for outside switching and rent of real estate. This puts the matter absolutely beyond controversy. These surplus earnings belong to the Company which owned the property from which they were derived and they were morally pledged to every purchaser of one of these bonds as resources out of which the bonds, interest and principal, might be paid.

The contract of 1897 ratified the terms of the contract of 1889 in every respect. It made two changes of any kind and only two. The first was a change as to parties. It substituted living and active parties for those who had become defunct or moribund. And it set out in full and in detail the shareholding in the Des Moines Union Railway Company. This second change showed the ownership of the stock to the extent of 2,500 shares, a majority of all, in private hands, owned by F. M. Hubbell and Son. The contract in its entirety was one of value to the Des Moines Union as such, and to its shareholders ratably, for it recognized in the property of the Des Moines Union the ordinary and usual incidents of property, that is the right of the owner to the rents, issues and profits thereof. The contract was one of value during its term, to the Des Moines Union because it reserved to that company the earnings that it derived from switching done by it for outside parties and the rentals received from property not in railroad use. And so it was of value to the shareholders, and equally so, whether these earnings were distributed as dividends or reinvested in the property. And this contract was made, ratifying that of 1889 according to its very terms, with the Hubbells asserting their ownership, which indeed was undisputed, of the 2,500 shares of the capital stock of the Terminal Company, and asserting, what was agreed to, the ordinary and usual rights incident to such ownership. Nothing here was furtively done, but everything desired upon the one side or the other was openly proclaimed. Nor was anything done in haste. Beginning the matter in December, 1896, it was not concluded until July 31st, 1897. Here was a case where counsel was perhaps little needed, for the representatives of the parties interested were men capable and experienced in such affairs. But counsel attended at every stage. And when it was concluded so far as adjustment between the parties was concerned on July 31st, 1897, they proceeded to deal with the public, consistently with the arrangement between themselves, in their listing of the securities upon the Stock Exchange of New York. And between themselves they did the same.

The execution of this contract was ratified by the directors of the Des Moines Northern & Western Railroad Company on September 7, 1897 (ex. 218, vol. IV, p. 1497), and by the directors of the Wabash Company October 5, 1897 (ex. 237, vol. IV, p. 1540).

At no time, either before or after the execution of the ratification contract, did The Wabash Company make any claim to these surplus earnings until just prior to the commencement of this suit, and as a step preliminary thereto.

Turning now to the attitude of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company with respect to these surplus earnings, it will be noted that its predecessors never at any time made any claim to them. The first interest, either direct or indirect, which the Milwaukee Company acquired in the property of its predecessors was by virtue of a contract with F. M. Hubbell & Son, made in 1894, and which was negotiated between Mr. Roswell Miller, president of and representing the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company, and Mr. F. M. Hubbell, representing F. M. Hubbell & Son and the Des Moines Northern & Western Railroad Company. During the negotiations leading up to this contract, Mr. Miller was advised by Mr. Hubbell that the only interest which the Des Moines Northern & Western Railway Company had in the terminal property was the interest represented by its 1,000 shares of stock, and that 2,500 shares of stock in the terminal company was owned by the defendant, F. M. Hubbell & Son.

The Milwaukee Company in 1899, having acquired all the outstanding stock and bonds in the Des Moines Northern & Western Railway Company, took the title to the property of the latter company and consolidated such property with its own, and thereafter the Milwaukee Company had such interest in the terminal company as it acquired from the Des Moines Northern & Western Company.

On November 22, 1898, Roswell Miller, president of the Milwaukee Company, wrote Mr. Hubbell (ex. 411, vol. IV, p. 1758), in reference to the terminal contract, evidencing the fact that he had examined and understood the contents thereof.

On January 16, 1899, Mr. Myers, who was then secretary of the Des Moines Northern & Western Railroad Company, and also secretary of the Milwaukee Company, wrote asking for additional copies of this contract.

On March 7, 1904, one H. G. Haugan, who seems to have been a new comptroller of the Milwaukee, writes to Mr. J. A. Wagner, defendant's superintendent, the following (ex. 504, vol. IV, p. 1843):

> "I understand that at the Des Moines Union station there are a number of offices rented, also news stand, lunch room and other privileges which are not accounted for in your monthly statements and bills. I believe you are also collecting rents on certain property on which we have to pay our proportion of taxes.
>
> I do not remember having seen any statement or account of rents collected by your company.
>
> It seems to me that these rents, etc., should be applied towards paying part of the operating expenses similar to the manner in which the business is conducted at the Union Depots at Chicago, Omaha, St. Paul and Kansas City."

On March 22, 1904, Mr. Wagner replies to Mr. Haugan as follows (ex. 505, vol. IV, p. 1843):

> "Replying to your letter of March 7th, our auditor sends your Mr. Winne each month a statement of all rentals of the character to which you refer. These rentals have nothing whatever to do with the proportion of the expense to be paid by your company. Our monthly bills against you for such expenses are made out in strict accord with our terminal contract. We have frequently in the past few years, explained the matter to the various officials of your company in response to their inquiry."

Of course the letter of Mr. Haugan to Mr. Wagner above quoted cannot be considered as a protest on the part of the Milwaukee to the terminal company's retaining these earnings, nor a claim that the tenant companies were entitled to them under any contract. His thought that they should be credited with these earnings is based, not upon the contract, but upon the fact that the Milwaukee had some different sort of an arrangement with respect to terminal property at other places. This correspondence, however, shows two things:

First. That the Milwaukee Company knew of these earnings, because the terminal company was furnishing to the auditor of the Milwaukee Company a statement of them each month; and Second. That the Milwaukee Company knew they were not being credited with these earnings, and the reason therefor was that the Des Moines Union Company was claiming the right to them under the contract.

Further, it appears that the question of the surplus earnings was threshed out between the Des Moines Union Company and the Milwaukee Compnay some four or five years prior to the correspondence above quoted.

On December 2, 1898, Mr. Roswell Miller, president of the Milwaukee Company, wrote to Mr. Hubbell the following letter (ex. 418, vol. IV, p. 1765):

> "I observe that the contract between the Des Moines Union Railway Company and the Des Moines, Northern & Western Railroad Company is only for 20 years. I think it should be for 50 years. Have you any objections to extending it for so long?"

This was during the negotiations between the Milwaukee and Mr. Hubbell, the result of which was that the Milwaukee acquired all the stock and bonds of the Des Moines Northern & Western Railroad Company preparatory to consolidating the property of the latter company with that of the Milwaukee, and shows that the president of the Milwaukee was familiar with the contract of May 10, 1889, and the ratification contract of July 31, 1897. An examination of defendants' exhibits 420 (vol. IV, p. 1766), 321 (p. 1767), 425, p. 170), 430 (p. 1772), 456 and 457 (p. 1802), 458 and 459 (p. 1803), and 460 (p. 1804) will demonstrate, as we have said, that this whole question of surplus earnings was threshed out in an attempt on the part of the officers of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company to have the contract of May 10, 1889, extended for a period of thirty years. In these negotiations the complainant, the Milwaukee Company, became thoroughly familiar with the situation with respect to these surplus earnings; with the contract of May 10, 1889, and July 31, 1897, and with the attitude of the respective parties with relation to surplus earnings. These negotiations were abandoned in the latter part of 1899 by reason of the parties being unable to agree upon the terms of the proposed extension. No claim was made in any of these negotiations that the complainants or their predecessors were entitled to these surplus earnings under the existing contracts, but the attitude of the defendant company with respect thereto was acquiesced in.

At a meeting o fthe stockholders of the Des Moines Union Railway Company held January 4, 1900, at which there were present, among others, C. A. Goodnow and A. J. Earling, officers of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company, each holding one share of stock, and the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company by A. J. Earling, president, holding 998 shares of stock, and the Continental Trust Company of New York by F. M. Hubbell, proxy, holding 498 shares of stock (ex. 156, vol. IV, p. 1370), there was presented the report of J. A. Wagner, superintendent, showing the use of the surplus earnings by the Des Moines Union Railway Company in acquiring additional real estate and improvements, and this report was approved upon motion of Mr. Earling.

Again, at a meeting of the stockholders of the Des Moines Union Railway Company held January 5, 1906, at which were present the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company holding 998 shares of stock, and E. W. McKenna and W. J. Underwood, officers of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company, each holding one share of stock, and F. A. Delano and

E. B. Pryor, officers of The Wabash Railroad Company, each holding one share of stock (ex. 164, vol. IV, p. 1383), there was presented the report of the superintendent of the Des Moines Union Railway Company for the years 1900, 1901, 1902, 1903, 1904 and 1905, which showed the use of the surplus earnings by the Des Moines Union Railway Company for the purpose of acquiring additional property and improvements, and no objection was made to the appropriation of this fund by the defendant company.

It is interesting to note that when objection was made to the use made of the surplus earnings by the Des Moines Union Railway Company, it was not made by one who had aught to do with any of the contracts, articles of incorporation or amendments thereto, or of any of the dealings of any of the companies with any of these, from 1882 down to 1906, and not until "there arose a new king over Egypt, who knew not Joseph." The first demand for the surplus earnings of petitioners was at a meeting of the directors of the Des Moines Union Company on March 12th, 1906, and the names of those noted as present on behalf of the tenant companies are new names. Dodge, Ashley, How, Hays, Blodgett, Ramsey, Priest and Grover are none of them there (Rec., Vol. II, p. 333 et seq. Counsel were present, Vrooman for the Milwaukee and Travons for the Wabash Company and made demand for the earnings in identical terms and this may be said to be the inception of the suit. The demand, presented in writing recites that "the repeated requests heretofore made upon you for the distribution and crediting to the tenant companies of the receipts from real estate rentals, switching charges, etc., having been ignored, etc.," an assertion utterly barren of support in fact.

The original bill was filed February 5th, 1907, and the testimony was closed on the last day of 1912. Here was no haste, but ample time for bringing forward any and all existing testimony. And a record was made during this period of nearly six years which extends to five printed volumes and twenty-one hundred printed pages, and we challenge the production from that record of anything savoring of a demand by the tenant companies of these surplus earnings or of an assertion of a right to them by those companies or any of their predecessors prior to March 12th, 1906. Neither in the oral testimony, nor in the correspondence of the officials of the various companies, nor in the records of the directorate or company meetings is evidence of any such demand to be found.

From 1892 to 1906 these surplus earnings were appropriated as of right by the Des Moines Union Company to its own uses, and the other companies concerned acquiesced in and assented thereto. Specific acts of such appropriation have been cited by us, but no protest appears against any of them. More than fourteen years of accord between the conduct of the parties and the literal terms of the contract of 1889 conclusively shows that the interpretation of the contract according to its very terms is the right one.

We respectfully submit that upon both branches of the case the merits are with the defendants to the original suit, and we pray for a decree accordingly.

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES.

OCTOBER TERM, A. D. 1918.

No. .....

THE DES MOINES UNION RAILWAY COMPANY, FREDERICK M. HUBBELL, FREDERICK C. HUBBELL and F. M. HUBBELL & SON, Petitioners,

vs.

THE CHICAGO, MILWAUKEE & ST. PAUL RAILWAY COMPANY and THE WABASH RAILROAD COMPANY,

Respondents.

REPLY TO CROSS-PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI.

Supplementing the reply of respondent, the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company, to the cross-petition for writ of certiorari, attention is called to the following additional matters:

I.

The contract of May 10, 1869, on which petitioners rely (Record, p. 150), after describing the terminal property, including the proposed union passenger depot and additional facilities to be constructed, obligated the predecessors of respondents to pay the maintenance and operating cost, interest and taxes, etc., and then by section 6 (Record, p. 152) "the party of the first part in consideration of the payments to be made to it by said parties of the second part hereby grants to said second parties the use of its terminal properties as aforesaid"—a grant not merely of a right to use, but of the "use of", i. e., entire usefulness or usufruct of "its terminal properties", and, of course, includes the income derived from switching, station privileges, etc.

That the language of the grant expressed the intentions of the parties is obvious from the fact that all parties understood at the time that the grantees owned the terminal properties as shown by the evidence of Colonel Blodgett in regard to the purposes of the contract (Record, p. 366) by the resolution of the Des Moines Union Railway Company (hereinafter called the Des Moines Company), requesting him to prepare it "to be approved and executed by all lines now holding an interest in the property", and by its resolution that "the terms and conditions on which the several lines now interested or which may hereafter become interested shall enjoy the use of these terminals be fully set forth in a supplemental agreement to be made and executed between the Des Moines Union Railway Company and each of the lines using the said terminals" (Record, p. 478). The contract could have been supplemental only to the contract of January 2nd, 1882 (Record, p. 120) and according to the resolution its purpose was to define the terms and conditions on which the grantees should enjoy the use of the terminals, not to define or recognize any right in the Des Moines Company, and accordingly no rent or compensation for the use of the terminals was reserved and all the covenants were by or for the benefit of the grantees—the Des Moines Company not having the slightest interest in their performance—it being merely an umpire or agency employed to unify the operations and bookkeeping and enforce the covenants as between the grantees for whose sole benefit they were made.

II.

(a) The parties at the outset committed themselves to a construction of the contract which entitled the grantees to the income produced by switching, station privileges, etc., by crediting it on their bills, first, under the direction of the joint superintendent (Record, p. 271), and after February 11, 1911, pursuant to resolution of the Des Moines Company (Record, p. 497), and they were so credited until December, 1891 (Record, p. 333), when the Des Moines Company passed a further resolution that "the sum received as rent of real estate and all switching charges" should be used "to purchase supplies and pay current bills which come in before it receives its monthly revenue from the tenant companies" (Record, p. 499), which was equivalent to crediting the sum on the grantees' bills because cash purchases of supplies and payment of current bills would to that extent lessen the grantees' bills. This method of applying such income was to be temporary "to accumulate a small fund for working capital", and it was intended the practice of directly crediting the bills should be resumed January, 1893 (see Supt.'s letter, Record, p. 338).

(b) After the Des Moines Company had thus committed itself to a construction of the contract which entitled the grantees to the income from the switching, etc., the grantees paid for the coal, labor and material necessary for the operation and maintenance of the engines, tracks, passenger station and real estate which produced the income in controversy. The petition states, on page 12, "at the time of the trial in the District Court these earnings aggregated about half a million dollars, and they have accumulated since at the rate of about one hundred thousand dollars a year." The outlays by the grantees for fuel, labor, material, etc., in producing those earnings must have been very considerable, which, together with the protest made by the grantees when first advised, shortly before the bringing of this suit, by F. M. Hubbell, that he claimed the grantees were not entitled to such earnings (Record, p. 329), justifies the inference that the grantees made such outlays on the faith of the uniform construction of the contract by all the parties. Having stood by and knowingly permitted the grantees and their assigns to pay the cost of producing the income in controversy on the assurance of said resolutions that they were entitled to it, the Hubbells are now estopped from causing the Des Moines Company to claim, and it is estopped from claiming, the contrary.

III.

The income from switching, etc., belongs to the respondents because it was derived from the use and occupation of the terminal property which the predecessors of ~~petitioners~~ respondents secured to themselves and their successors by the contract of January 2nd, 1882 (Record, p. 120); articles of association of the depot company (Record, p. 123) and the resolutions pursuant to which the terminal property was transferred to (Record, pp. 131-7) and received by the Des Moines Company (Record, pp. 130-1).

The right to the "use and occupation" of railroad property by a railroad company under the laws of Iowa embraces the entire usefulness of the property (Cummins v. Des Moines, St. Louis Railroad Company, 63 Iowa 397, l. c. 405; Smith v. Hall, 103 Iowa 95, l. c. 96-97).

The contract of May 10th, 1889, was merely an operating agreement defining the operations of the interested railway companies for a period. The Des Moines Company under its articles of incorporation (Record, p. 123) is the agency of these companies who nominated its directors, it having undertaken by article II to exercise all of its powers "in accordance with the terms and spirit of the aforesaid contract entered into on the second day of January, 1882".

IV.

The petition states on page 24 that "the Hubbells, father and son, gave liberally and freely, the son for many years entirely, their time and service to this enterprise. They fostered it during all the thirty years of the contract of 1889, which certainly they would not have done if this contract had been a barren one and their stockholdings barren also", but no reference is made to the record to justify this statement. The record shows that the Hubbells agreed when they purchased the stock from Ashley that "the stock should be held by a railway company entitled to use the terminal property" and that "it would be prejudicial to sell any of this stock to outsiders" (Record, pp. 1059-1060), and contrary to this understanding they acquired the stock from the companies they dominated at a nominal value (Record, pp. 1096-1097). The stock, therefore, was "barren" and they knew it was barren, and are not entitled to derive contrary to their agreement any profit from it. Hubbell testified, "I stated very clearly that I am in charge of that property (meaning the terminal property); I know all about it, manage it, buy all the material. I decide on the location of every track, side tracks and main line, changing of the tracks, everything in reference to the details of the business" (Record, pp. 1200-1201).

The son testified:

> "Q. Did you or your father, or together as a firm, own and deal in real estate located near the lines of the Des Moines Union?
>
> "A. Yes, sir; F. M. Hubbell has bought considerable lands along the Des Moines Union, and I have, also. I am a trustee in his estate.
>
> "Q. Well, didn't you and your father make a large sum of money in those real estate transactions?
>
> "A. The real estate which we have bought and held I think has gone up in value very considerably.
>
> "Q. You have made plenty of money out of that that you have sold, haven't you?
>
> "A. I do not recall ever having sold any at a loss, because property has always advanced in Des Moines; I mean, as a general rule (Record, pp. 1198-1199)."

The Hubbells own the Des Moines Terminal Company and the Des Moines Western Terminal Company, which also own terminal railroad properties in Des Moines, and the Hubbells operate them for their own profit in connection with the operation of the Des Moines Company (Record, pp. 1200-1201).

It is respectfully submitted the question sought to be reviewed by petitioners is not an open one and that the petition should be denied.

Respectfully submitted,

JAMES L. MINNIS,

Counsel for Respondent Wabash Railway Company.

OCTOBER TERM, 1920.

CHICAGO, MILWAUKEE & ST. PAUL RAILWAY COMPANY and WABASH RAILWAY COMPANY, Petitioners, vs. DES MOINES UNION RAILWAY COMPANY, F. M. HUBBELL and F. C. HUBBELL, and F. M. HUBBELL & SON, Respondents.	No. 66
DES MOINES UNION RAILWAY COMPANY, F. M. HUBBELL, F. C. HUBBELL and F. M. HUBBELL & SON, Petitioners, vs. CHICAGO, MILWAUKEE & ST. PAUL RAILWAY COMPANY and WABASH RAILWAY COMPANY, Respondents.	No. 67

PETITION FOR REHEARING.

Come now the Des Moines Union Railway Company, F. M. Hubbell, F. C. Hubbell and F. M. Hubbell and Son, Respondents in Case No. 66 and Petitioners in Case No. 67, and hereby petition the court to set aside the judgment and decree heretofore entered in these cases and to grant a rehearing thereof and in support of their petition respectfully say:

We are led to present this petition for rehearing because the decree authorized by the opinion of this court will result in a most grievous injustice to the defendants. It gives to one party—the Milwaukee Company—a one-half interest in a valuable property, for which, concededly, it never paid a dollar and never thought it was buying. It gives to another party—the Wabash Company — an interest which it sold many years ago at what was then its full value. This property is taken from persons who not only acquired it with the full knowledge of everybody interested, but made it valuable by devoting their full business life to its care and development. Such a decree can only be justified by the best of reasons. It is therefore with the utmost respect, but with the utmost assurance of the justice of our cause, that we ask a re-examination of this record.

The district court and circuit court of appeals having concluded that complainants were estopped by their conduct and laches, found it unnecessary to determine the primary and fundamental question of whether, by reason of the transactions leading up to the transfer of the property to the Terminal Company, it took an absolute title to the terminal property or simply the legal title in trust for complainants' predecessors. We therefore desire to devote our energies to persuading the court that it has fallen into a serious error in determining this fundamental proposition in favor of complainants.

In this discussion we will designate complainants and their predecessors the "Railway Companies" and the defendant corporation the "Terminal Company."

THE OPINION OF THE COURT.

A careful analysis of the opinion will, we hope to convince the court, disclose elements which if given due consideration must result in its own destruction.

For this purpose we must inquire into the evidence upon which the court bases its conclusion that it was intended to form a trust. Where, and what is it?

It is probably not fair to the court to assume that the opinion contains a reference to all the facts upon which reliance is placed to support its conclusion, but we think it is fair and must be true that the incidents referred to constitute the outstanding and most persuasive facts contained in the record.

It is unnecessary, of course, to discuss the contract of 1882 in this connection, because, concededly, under that contract the Railway Companies were the absolute owners of and had absolute dominion over the property in controversy. They could make any disposition of it they saw fit. They could have vested the title in the Terminal Company in trust or in fee.

The incident referred to in the opinion primarily in point of time and importance is the language contained in article two of the original articles of the Terminal Company, reading as follows:

> "All the powers exercised by this Company shall be in accordance with the terms and spirit of the aforesaid contract (contract of 1882)." (Vol. 11, p. 420).

It is this language, the court says, which "amounts to a declaration of trust."

This language does not necessarily amount to a "declaration of trust." It is at best ambiguous. It is not the language one would expect competent lawyers and business men to use for that purpose. That this is so is recognized by the court when it found it necessary to explain, in connection therewith, other items of evidence found in the record, such as the provision in article three authorizing the Terminal Company to acquire the terminal property "in payment" for its stock and "the absolute form of the conveyances."

With respect to these matters the court further says:

> "The absolute form of the conveyances, and the issuance of stock and bonds 'in payment,' were intended to give credit to the company in its dealings with outside parties and to render its bonds more readily salable; but they constituted the mere mechanism for carrying into effect the main purpose of the parties, and as between them were controlled by that purpose and by the articles and resolutions that manifested an express declaration of the trust."

For the moment we may leave out of consideration the resolutions, because "outside parties" were not charged with notice of them.

If this language means anything, it means that "outside parties" in dealing with the Terminal Company and its property were justified in concluding from an examination of the articles of incorporation and the deeds that no trust existed, and that the Terminal Company owned the property.

"Outside parties" were charged with knowledge of the following:

1. The contract of 1882.

2. That article two contained the following language:

> "All the powers exercised by this Company shall be in accordance with the terms and spirit of the aforesaid contract entered into on the 2d day of January, A. D. 1882." (Vol. II, p. 420).

3. That the Terminal Company had the right to lease or otherwise dispose of the use of any part of its franchise to any other railway company, provided the Railway Companies assented in writing.

4. That the corporation was authorized to issue its capital stock "in payment" of the terminal property.

5. The method adopted by article four for nominating and electing directors.

6. That no contract, lease or other agreement amounting to a permanent charge upon the property should be executed without the approval of the Railway Companies and the approval of three-fourths of the stockholders of the Terminal Company expressed at a stockholders' meeting.

7. The deeds transferring the property were absolute in form.

All of these were public records of which every person dealing with the corporation was required to take notice.

The court says that it was "intended" by the parties to so formulate these proceedings as "to give credit to the company in its dealings with outside parties and to render its bonds more readily salable." "Outside parties" knew all the provisions of the contract of 1882, because it was a part of the articles; they knew of the provision of article two, heretofore quoted, because it was a part of the articles; they knew of the limitations on the power of alienation for they were part of the articles; they knew of the method of control of corporate affairs, because it was contained in the articles. Likewise they knew that the corporation was organized with power to own the property, and was authorized to issue its stock in "payment" therefor, as well as the absolute character of the conveyances, because they were all parts of a public record.

Manifestly it is impossible to say that they formulated a part of these proceedings for the purpose of expressing the intent that the Terminal Company should own the property, and another part to express a trust. Manifestly it is impossible to say that all of them taken together were intended to express a good and complete title and at the same time express a trust.

Manifestly, also, if the use of the language quoted from article two is assumed "to amount to a declaration of trust," then the explanation of the Court of the provision for the issuance of the stock in "payment" and of the absolute form of the deeds, does not explain since no force or effect is allowed to these facts. The failure to give consideration to these cogent circumstances we submit is an adequate reason for a reconsideration of the case.

Right here let us refer to another error the court has made in explaining the form of these deeds. It says:

> "But if, as here, the subject of the trust be a legal interest in property and capable of legal transmutation, the trust is not perfectly created unless the legal interest be actually vested in the trustee. Adams v. Adams, 21 Wall. 185, 192, 194. Hence the necessity in this case of deeds conveying the fee to the terminal company."

The Adams case does not sustain this conclusion. What was there held was that it was necessary to convey the legal title. What was here done was to convey the fee—the ownership. The form of the deeds can not be explained by saying it was necessary to convey the legal title.

It is fundamental in the law of trusts in real estate that the title is in one and the ownership in another. Justice Story defines it as:

> "an equitable right, title or interest in property, real or personal, distinct from the legal ownership thereof."

2 Story, Equity Jurisprudence, ¶964.

It was not necessary, in order to perfectly create the trust, that these deeds should have been absolute in form.

It is manifest, therefore, that a trust can not be inferred from the provisions of the articles (including the contract of 1882) and the deeds, because to do so would defeat the intended purpose of giving the corporation credit in its dealing with "outside parties" by reason of its apparent ownership of the property.

Of course, it does not necessarily follow from this that a trust was not intended. But it does necessarily follow that evidence of the trust must be found in some records outside of the contract of 1882, the articles and the deeds. To these records we will now give attention.

In support of the trust theory the court refers to the resolutions of the Railway Companies. One of the resolutions passed by the Railway Companies, after reciting the fact of the execution of the contract of 1882 and the subsequent organization of the Terminal Company, reads as follows:

> "Resolved, That this Company accepts and ratifies so far as its interests are affected thereby, the Articles of Incorporation of the Des Moines Union Railway Company as in substantial accord and compliance with the terms and conditions of the said contract of January 2, 1882, and undertakes to discharge all the obligations imposed upon it by said contract in order to make effective the purposes of said Des Moines Union Railway Company." (Vol. II, p. 424.)

Do these recitations and resolutions tend to establish a trust? Would they have put "outside parties" who were expected to extend credit upon the theory that the Terminal Company owned the property, on inquiry with reference to the trust had they learned of them? They simply recited the fact of the contract of 1882 and the corporate organization, facts which outside parties were bound in law to know. The resolution simply ratifies the corporate organization and pledges the Railway Companies to discharge their obligations in order to make effective the purposes of the corporation, one of which was to secure credit from "outside parties" on the strength of the ownership.

This resolution is followed by another:

> "Resolved: That the proper officers of this Company be authorized upon the issuance to it of the share of the bonds and stock of said Des Moines Union Railway Company to which it may be entitled, under said contract to convey, assign and transfer to said Company all its right, title and interest of whatever name and character, in and to the real estate, franchises, choses in action, and rights in possession or contingent to all the property in the City of Des Moines east of Farnham street in said city, now held, enjoyed or > claimed by either or all of the signatories of said contract of January 2, 1882, or any agent or trustee thereof purchased, acquired, or held in pursuance of said contract." (Vol. II, p. 424.)

There is nothing in this resolution suggesting a trust. It authorizes the transfer of ownership in the most specific language. It authorizes the transfer of every possible interest in the property.

The remaining resolution passed at this time was as follows:

> "Resolved, That the proper officers of the Company be authorized to transfer the management and operation of its property in Des Moines, so far as the same may now be vested in the Company to the Des Moines Union Railway Company on the 1st day of January, 1885, or as soon thereafter as practicable, leaving the question of settlement between this company and the Des Moines Union Railway Company as authorized under the resolution for that purpose heretofore this day adopted to be arranged as directed therein, and the same being duly considered was adopted by the meeting, all the stock present and represented, voting therefor." (Vol. II, p. 427.)

This resolution, instead of tending to express a trust, emphasizes the thought that it was designed to convey the ownership. Management and operation of the property were to be transferred to the Terminal Company as soon as practicable, the matter of settling the terms and method of payment for the property, not the trust, conveyed to be settled later.

The resolutions passed by the Terminal Company at this time are of like character in every respect, and we need not set them out or comment on them. There is, therefore, nothing in the resolutions of 1885 tending to express a trust.

This brings us to the resolutions of 1887. These resolutions, in so far as they authorize How and Dodge to transfer, are not significant except as they require evidence of promises to pay as conditions precedent. Otherwise they are just such resolutions as would be expected whether it was intended to establish a trust or otherwise.

The only resolution other than these was that of the Des Moines & St. Louis Company, as follows:

> "Resolved, That the president and secretary of this company be and they are hereby authorized and directed to execute to the Des Moines Union Railway Company a deed conveying to it all its real estate rights of way, franchise, roadbed and other property of said company lying and being in the City of Des Moines, east of Farnham street, whether the same was acquired by grant from City of Des Moines or by purchase or condemnation, this resolution being offered for the purpose of carrying out the contract of date January second, 1882, entered into by and between this company, the Des Moines North Western Railway Company, the St. Louis, Des Moines and Northern Railway Company and others." (Vol. II, p. 439.)

This is the only resolution which can be said to be so much as ambiguous. And there is no ambiguity in it, unless we ignore the provision for the transfer of the property and what the parties did pursuant thereto.

Manifestly they did not intend to carry out the contract in accordance with all its terms. Many of its provisions could not then be carried out. The primary purpose was to provide terminal facilities which they might use in connection with their lines of railway. The means of doing this might be and were several times changed.

We contend that what they had in their minds in using this language was this primary purpose. This is demonstrated by what they did under and immediately following this resolution, to which we will later refer.

The deeds of conveyance do not contain anything tending to establish a trust. This is conceded by the court in its attempt to explain them.

We are therefore necessarily driven back to the articles themselves for any evidence there may be of the establishment of a trust.

Considering the articles, the court says that the parties put into article two the provision that the powers exercised by the corporation should be in accordance with the terms and spirit of the contract of 1882 for the purpose of declaring a trust, and then put into article three a provision that the corporation should receive the terminal property "in payment" of its stock for the purpose of making it appear to "outside parties" that it owned the property and that this latter purpose was emphasized by the form of the deeds.

This manifest inconsistency is a sufficient ground to require, in justice to defendants, a re-examination of this record. This is so because the defendants are entitled to the judgment of this court based upon a proper appreciation of the purposes of the transactions upon which that judgment is based, and manifestly this they have not had.

This brings us to a consideration of the record which may properly be urged in support of defendants' theory, and first

THE ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION.

Of these it is to be said that they are not skillfully drawn. The author of them either did not have clearly in mind the purpose to be accomplished or was unhappy in his choice of method and language in expressing himself. There are some features, however, which are beyond dispute. Manifestly the corporation acquired the power to own a terminal property and operate it for its own profit and that of its stockholders. Manifestly, also, it assumed the power to acquire the ownership of the terminal property in question and pay therefor by issuing its stock. We think it is also manifest that the Railway Companies did not, by the organization of this corporation and transferring to it the terminal property, intend to lose control of that property. They simply intended to change the plan of control. Theretofore they had controlled it because they owned it and had physical possession of it. By this new plan they intended to control it through their stock ownership. This new plan was perfectly feasible. The fact that they later parted with some of the stock for a valuable consideration does not warrant a rescission of the whole transaction but on the contrary emphasizes the argument that they took this stock in exchange for their original direct beneficial interest in the Terminal property.

In considering the articles it is important to note that the power to be the recipient of a trust is not expressly assumed. Such power, if it existed, must be found included in its general powers, or inferred by construction. The language in section two from which the court infers this power and intent is at best ambiguous. In and of itself is it not sufficient to establish a trust. This the court recognizes when it resorts to other facts and circumstances for the purpose of interpretation. The effect of this language must depend upon other facts and circumstances.

In article three is contained the provision authorizing the corporation to issue its stock "in payment" for the terminal property. The natural import of this language is to express an intent that the corporation should acquire the ownership. This the court recognizes by attempting to explain it upon the theory that it was intended to give third parties assurances contrary to the facts. This explanation is, as we have demonstrated, an obvious error.

In sections two and four are contained provisions restricting the power of alienation and regulating the method by which the Railway Companies should control the corporation through their stock ownership. These provisions, the court says, "were intended not as a substitute for, but as safeguards of, the trust." With this conclusion we take issue. If the Terminal Company simply took the title to this property in trust, it had no power of alienation and therefore there was no necessity for a restriction thereon. Those restrictions were only useful or necessary if the corporation owned the property.

We wish, however, to emphasize the fact that under the Iowa statute these articles were, like the deeds, public records of which "outside parties" were required to take notice.

(Dempster Mfg. Co. vs. Downs, 126 Iowa, 80.)

The question we have is, what was the character of the title acquired by the Terminal Company as a result of the transactions culminating in the transfer to it—was it an absolute title or simply in trust? The question is one of intent. Did the Railway Companies intend that the Terminal Company should have an absolute title—the ownership—of this property, or simply its legal title in trust?

How are we to determine this intent? Strictly speaking, of course, a corporation can have no intent. It has neither mind, body nor soul—it can act only through its authorized representatives. The intent of the authorized agents of these Railway Companies, therefore, was the intent of the Companies themselves. To solve the question, then, we must inquire into the intent with which these persons acted.

Who were they? They were Col. Wells H. Blodgett, general solicitor of the Wabash Railroad Company, and a director in its subsidiary, the Des Moines & St. Louis Company; James F. How, vice-president of the Wabash Railroad Company, and president and director of the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company; James F. Joy, a member of the Purchasing Committee and president of the Wabash Railroad Company; O. D. Ashley, a member of the Purchasing Committee, a director and afterward president of the Wabash Railroad Company; Edgar T. Welles and Thomas H. Hubbard, members of the Purchasing Committee and directors of the Wabash Railroad Company; G. M. Dodge, president and principal owner of the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Railway Company, and, to a lesser degree, C. M. Hays, general manager of the Wabash Company.

Unfortunately, all of these men, except Blodgett and Hays, passed from their earthly labors before the trial of this case, or at least we find in the record only the testimony of these two persons, so, as to all except Blodgett and Hays, we must ascertain their intent entirely by the record they left of their actions.

Colonel Blodgett was and had been for years general solicitor of the Wabash Company and continued to occupy this or a similar position up until long after the commencement of this suit. At the time his testimony was taken he was one of counsel in this case. He assisted in conducting this litigation during its earlier years. He it was upon whom reliance was placed to guide the affairs of the Wabash Company. In him was reposed the confidence of the responsible managing officers and directors of the company. He knew their intent. It was his duty to formulate the proceedings to carry out their intent. He knew what was intended by the transactions which culminated in the transfer of the title of this property to the Terminal Company. He and counsel who examined him at the time his testimony was taken in this case knew that the vital question was that intent, but they carefully avoid putting that question to him. Nowhere in Colonel Blodgett's testimony can be found a reference to the intent with which these transactions were conducted. Colonel Blodgett's oral testimony, then, is not enlightening on the subject, except that it is significant that he is not examined with respect to it. It was competent for Colonel Blodgett to testify directly as to the intent with which these transactions were consummated.

Mr. Hays' testimony on this subject was equally unenlightening. He did not occupy a position of responsibility in the Wabash organization until the latter part of 1887, and, according to his testimony, had no recollection with reference to the details of the transactions nor of the purposes for which they were had.

We are therefore compelled to rely entirely upon the written record made by these gentlemen, which, however, is not subject to the infirmities necessarily inherent in oral testimony, especially as to transactions long past.

THE RESOLUTIONS OF 1885.

To correctly weigh the evidence contained in these resolutions and other material documents, it is important to keep in mind the situation as it then existed. At this time, under the contract of 1882, the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company was the absolute owner of one-half, and the other two railway companies each the owner of a one-fourth, interest in the various items of property making up the terminal, the record title of which stood partly in the name of the Des Moines & St. Louis Company, partly in the name of the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Company, and partly in the name of Dodge and How, as trustees. It was competent for the Railway Companies to vest in the Terminal Company the legal title in trust, reserving the beneficial ownership to themselves, or to vest the ownership in the Terminal Company, taking to themselves simply the evidences of indebtedness and the capital stock.

Upon the completion of the organization of the Terminal Company, the Des Moines & St. Louis Company (the subsidiary of the Wabash, which had furnished the bulk of the money), under date of January 1, 1885, passed the following resolution:

> "Resolved, That the proper officers of this Company be authorized upon the issuance to it of the share of the bonds and stock of said Des Moines Union Railway Company to which it may be entitled under said contract to convey, assign, and transfer to said company all its right title and interest of whatever name and character, in and to the real estate, franchise, choses in action, and rights in possession or contingent to all the property in the City of Des Moines, east of Farnham street in said city, now held, enjoyed or claimed by either or all of the signatories of said contract of January 2nd, 1882, or any agent or trustee thereof, purchased, acquired or held in pursuance of said contract." (Vol. II, p. 431.)

This resolution was probably prepared by Colonel Blodgett—at least, he was present at the meeting and voted for it, and therefore approved the form. There is nothing ambiguous about it. It authorized the following things:

1. A transfer by the Des Moines & St. Louis Company of the property which stood in its name.

2. A transfer by the Des Moines & St. Louis Company of its beneficial interest in the property which stood in the name of How and Dodge, trustees.

3. A transfer by the Des Moines & St. Louis Company of its beneficial interest in the property which stood in the name of the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Company.

4. A transfer by the Des Moines & St. Louis Company of "all its right title and interest of whatever name and character," in any of this property.

5. A transfer by the Des Moines & St. Louis Company of its "franchises, choses in action, and rights in possession or contingent" in all the property held by any of the parties to the contract of 1882, or any agent or trustee thereof, acquired or held in pursuance thereof.

There was no possible interest, beneficial or otherwise, which the Des Moines & St. Louis Company had in this property that was not authorized to be transferred by this resolution.

The court in its opinion says, in effect, that this resolution doesn't mean what it says; that what it means is that there should be vested in the Terminal Company simply the legal title in trust, reserving to the granting company the beneficial ownership. We respectfully urge that no such conclusion can be legitimately drawn, either from the resolution itself or the recitations which precede it. Neither this resolution nor any other passed at this meeting authorized a transfer of the legal title to the terminal property, except in so far as that legal title stood in the name of the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company. So far as the remainder of the property was concerned, it only authorized the transfer of the beneficial interest. If the theory adopted by the court is right, why did this resolution authorize the transfer of all possible interest which the Des Moines & St. Louis Company had in the terminal property, instead of authorizing the transfer simply of the legal title of that portion of the property which stood in its name? This query can not be answered by saying that this was done in order to give third parties to understand that the Terminal Company was the absolute owner of the property, because this record was not a public record and did not enter into the chain of title of which third parties must take notice.

What we claim for this resolution is emphasized by the following resolution enacted at the same time:

> "Resolved, That the proper officers of the company be authorized to transfer the management and operation of its property in Des Moines so far as the same may now be vested in the company on the first day of January or as soon thereafter as practicable leaving the question of settlement between this company and the Des Moines Union Railway Company as authorized under the resolution for that purpose heretofore this day adopted to be arranged as directed therein." (Vol. II, p. 432.)

Resolutions in almost identically the same language were adopted by the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern and the Des Moines Northwestern Railway Companies. Separate consideration need not be given to them except to observe that none of this property stood in the name of the Des Moines Northwestern Company, and so far as it was concerned, the only subject to which its resolution could refer was the beneficial interest it owned under the contract of 1882.

On the same day the Terminal Company passed resolutions accepting each of these two separate propositions, a record of which will be found on page 433 of Volume II. These resolutions demonstrate that these parties were dealing with respect to this property in good faith, as vendor and purchaser, and that the amount which the Terminal Company was to pay for this property was a subject for negotiation in which it was interested, which could not have been true if it was simply intended that it should be a trustee and a mere agency for the Railway Companies.

It is significant that in none of the resolutions passed in 1885 was any attempt made to authorize How and Dodge, trustees, to transfer to the Terminal Company the titles which they held in trust, which was the only thing necessary to be done, so far as the property which stood in their name was concerned, if it was intended that the Terminal Company should hold the property in trust. On the contrary, the resolutions are carefully framed, to the end that a transfer of the beneficial ownership of the property should be authorized, the legal title so far as these resolutions are concerned remaining in How and Dodge.

The resolutions of 1887, with the single exception which we will hereafter note, were confined to authorizing How and Dodge, as trustees, to transfer the title held by them to the Terminal Company, a step necessary to be taken before the Terminal Company could be vested with the title to the property, whether in trust or absolute. These resolutions are entitled to no weight in determining the question at issue, because what was done here was the natural thing to have done, irrespective of the character of the title which the Terminal Company was to receive, except that it is significant that in these resolutions they were careful to fix, as one of the conditions upon which the trustees should transfer the title to the Terminal Company, that the latter should execute to them written assurances that it would pay the purchase price as agreed—something which was entirely unnecessary if the Terminal Company was a mere trustee and an agency of the Railway Companies.

In addition to the resolutions authorizing How and Dodge, as trustees, to transfer, the Des Moines & St. Louis Company passed a resolution the material part of which is as follows:

> "Resolved, That the president and secretary of this Company, be and they are hereby authorized and directed to execute to the Des Moines Union Railway Company a deed conveying to it all its real estate rights of way, franchise, road bed and other property of said company lying and being in > the City of Des Moines, east of Farnham street, whether the same was acquired by grant from city of Des Moines or by purchase or condemnation, this resolution being offered for the purpose of carrying out the contract of date January second, 1882, * * * " (Vol. II, p. 439.)

If we consider this resolution by itself, it would not be entirely clear what was meant. It will be noted that it authorizes the transfer of all the "real estate rights of way, franchise, road bed and other property of said company lying and being in the City of Des Moines," which would indicate that it was the purpose to give to the Terminal Company an absolute title, because if it was intended to simply give the Terminal Company the legal title of the property in trust, it was only necessary for the Des Moines & St. Louis Company to transfer the title of that portion of the property which stood in its name. However, it says the resolution is offered for the purpose of carrying out the contract of January 2, 1882. This, of course, does not mean that it was for the purpose of carrying out the contract of 1882 in its literal terms, because, as the court has held, the plans as evidenced by this contract had been changed, and it therefore means, in accordance with that contract as changed by their modified plans.

However, when we come to consider what Mr. How, who offered this resolution, and Colonel Blodgett, who was present at the meeting at which it passed and who no doubt drew it, or at least approved it, immediately did in carrying out its purpose, the meaning of the resolution is perfectly clear, and this brings us to a consideration of

THE DEEDS TRANSFERRING THE PROPERTY TO THE TERMINAL COMPANY.

To our minds, these deeds, and especially the deed of the Des Moines & St. Louis Company, are the most persuasive items of evidence in this case. The latter deed was prepared by Colonel Blodgett, who, as we have said, was the lawyer whose duty it was to formulate the documents by which the parties were to carry out their intention. It was executed by James F. How, president of the Des Moines & St. Louis Company, and vice-president of the Wabash Company, who had for years been the active man, not only in the Terminal matter, but in all of the larger matters of the Wabash Company. Both of these gentlemen knew what the intention was. It was executed by the corporation which the court says intended thereby to retain the beneficial ownership of the property. While the form of the deed was a very proper one if executed by a third party for the purpose of conveying property to a trustee, it must be remembered that this deed was executed by the party whose successor claims to be the beneficiary of the alleged trust.

The deed, in form, is a warranty deed, and after describing that portion of the terminal property standing in the name of the grantor, reads as follows:

> "And all of the real estate within the City of Des Moines, Iowa, which is the property of the grantor, together with all real estate which may hereafter be acquired by this grantor either by condemnation proceedings or otherwise. Also all its embankments, bridges, turnouts, side-tracks, buildings and structures, water tanks and fixtures, shops, engine and other houses, depots, turntables and all its railroad property acquired and to be acquired, and everything appurtenant to said railroad, and all franchises and rights it may have > acquired by grant, donation, purchase or otherwise, and particularly all rights, franchises and privileges granted by the City of Des Moines, Iowa, under an ordinance "granting the right of way to the Des Moines and St. Louis Railroad Company and its assigns, over, across, along and upon certain streets and alleys in the City of Des Moines, Iowa, and the right to bridge the Des Moines River on the south alley in said City between Court avenue and Vine streets.' And the said Des Moines and St. Louis Railroad Company hereby covenants to Warrant and Defend the said premises against all the lawful claims of all persons whomsoever, claiming by, through or under it." (Vol. II, p. 458.)

The deed of the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Company is no less significant. After describing the property standing in its name it says:

> "Together with all and singular the tenements, hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging, or in any wise appertaining, and the reversion and reversions, remainder and remainders, rents, issues and profits thereof. And also, all the estate, right, title interest in the above described property, possession claim and demand whatsoever, as well in law as in equity of the said parties of the first part, of, in or to the above described premises, and every part and parcel thereof, with the appurtenances. To Have and to Hold all and singular the above mentioned and described premises together with the appurtenances, unto the said parties of the second part and assigns forever." (Vol. II, p. 456.)

This latter deed was prepared, or at least approved, by Colonel Blodgett, and therefore contains language to express what he intended by the transaction.

Notwithstanding all these things, the court says—at least inferentially—that when the Des Moines & St.

Louis Company said that it sold and conveyed to the Des Moines Union Railway Company all its real estate within the City of Des Moines, Iowa, and all its railroad property of every kind and character, it didn't intend to do it and didn't in fact do it, but on the contrary it retained the ownership of all this property which it so carefully described in this deed, and, further, when the Des Moines & St. Louis Railroad Company covenanted "to warrant and defend the said premises against all the lawful claims of all persons whomsoever, claiming by, through or under it," it didn't make any such covenants—that what it in fact did by this language was to reserve unto itself and those claiming by, through or under it the beneficial ownership of this property.

The court in its opinion further says, inferentially, that when the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern Company in its deed asserted that it thereby conveyed all the property specifically described "and the reversion and reversions, remainder and remainders, rents, issues and profits thereof," it didn't do anything of the kind, but it thereby retained to itself the rents, issues and profits thereof, together with the reversion, reversions and remainder; and also, when this company asserted that it thereby conveyed "all the estate, right, title, interest * * * as well in law as in equity," that it didn't do anything of the kind—that in equity it retained the ownership of this property as well as the rents, issues and profits thereof; and also, when it covenanted in said deed that the grantee should have and hold all of said property and all interest therein for itself and its assigns forever, it didn't do anything of the kind—it retained to itself not only the ownership of the property but the right to recover the same at any time it saw fit.

Frankly, competent lawyers don't do business this way. The parties who were instrumental in the execution of these deeds were of mature age and sound mind, and were among the most experienced and skillful lawyers and business men of their period; they were honest and they knew how to formulate the English language to express their intention.

What possible reason could Colonel Blodgett and James F. How have had for formulating these deeds in this way had it been their intention to retain to the grantors the beneficial ownership?

We have already demonstrated that it could not have been for the purpose of making the trust effective, because for that purpose it was only necessary to transfer the legal title: nor would it help the Terminal Company to obtain credit, as being the absolute owner, from "outside parties," because the evidence of the trust, if any there was, was to be found in the articles, of which "outside parties" were charged with notice."

But this explanation is unwarranted for another reason. If the Terminal Company took this property charged with a trust, one of the conditions of the trust was that it should maintain and operate the property. It was only for the purpose of discharging these functions that it was required to have credit with "outside parties." For any such purposes they had the power to charge the trust property. Therefore it was unnecessary to make it appear to "outside parties" that the corporation had a good title to the property.

There is no possible explanation of these deeds, except that Colonel Blodgett, James F. How, General Dodge and the others having to do with the transactions intended that the Terminal Company should receive an absolute conveyance of the Terminal property —become the absolute owners of it—and this was the interpretation they gave to the provision of the articles and the resolutions of 1885 and 1887. We contend that these deeds from the beneficiaries of the alleged trust are conclusive unless some reasonable explanation of them is given consistent with the trust theory, which has not been done.

THE CONTRACT OF 1889.

With respect to this contract the Court say:

> "The agreement of May 10, 1889, between the Terminal Company of the first part and the three proprietary companies of the second part fixed the terms upon which the property should be managed and the terminal service performed for a period of thirty years to date from May 1, 1888. It constituted a working arrangement for that period, but did not in terms or by implication set aside the trust or place a time limit upon it."

While it is true that this contract does not purport to, and indeed could not, change the terms of the trust, if one existed, yet this does not destroy or impair its probative value as bearing upon what was intended by the parties as the result of the transactions theretofore completed by which the title to the terminal property was vested in the Terminal Company when we come to consider the language in the contract and the circumstances under which it was made.

It was drawn by Colonel Blodgett and executed in behalf of some of the parties by James F. How and General Dodge. These persons knew what was intended by the previous transactions because they were the persons who consummated them. Their intentions were the intentions of the corporations.

It has been the contention of counsel for the Railway Companies (apparently concurred in by the Court) that this contract was supplemental to the contract of 1882, and the occasion for its execution a desire to change in some few particulars the terms of that contract. This theory is supported by the testimony of Colonel Blodgett given many years after the transaction and after he had evidently compared the two contracts and ascertained in what particulars they differ. He says that the reasons for making this contract were:

> 1. That the agreement of 1882 made no provision for payment of interest or how the interest charge should be distributed among the railway companies;
> 2. That it did not obligate the Railway Companies to use the terminal; and
> 3. It was desired to apportion the expense of operating the roundhouses upon a different basis from that provided in that contract. (Vol. II, p. 366.)

When we come to examine the contract we find that Colonel Blodgett was careful to state therein the reasons for its execution, but we do not find among those reasons the ones he stated in his testimony many years after.

The reasons stated in the contract are as follows:

> "Whereas, the said party of the first part (the Terminal Company) is the owner of valuable terminal facilities in the City of Des Moines, Iowa, as hereinafter described; and
> Whereas, the respective parties of the second part have railroads in the State of Iowa which terminate at, or run into and through said City

of Des Moines, and in order to prevent unnecessary expense, inconvenience and loss attending the accumulation of a number of stations, and in order to facilitate the public convenience and safety, it has become important that said second parties should have the use of the terminal facilities of said first party; and

Whereas, said party of the first part has become incorporated and organized under the laws of the State of Iowa for the purpose of owning and operating a line of railway in the said City of Des Moines, Iowa, extending from the eastern boundary line of said City to Farnham Street, in the western part thereof; and

Whereas, said party of the first part, in pursuance of said charter has acquired and now owns a railway in said City, as above set forth, and has already acquired or constructed a large number of valuable main and side tracks, depots, depot grounds, lands, yards, shops, roundhouses, freight houses and other terminal facilities, and intends to acquire and construct more; and

Whereas, said second parties are each desirous of having the right to use said terminals in connection with their respective railroads; * * * "
(Vol. II, p. 479.)

According to the opinion of the court, when Colonel Blodgett drew, and Mr. How and General Dodge signed, this contract and said that the Terminal Company was the owner of this property, they meant it was owned by the Railway Companies; and when they said that it was important for the Railway Companies to secure the right to use the terminal facilities, they meant that the Railway Companies were the beneficial owners of the terminal facilities and had the right to use them irrespective of any contract; and when they said that the Terminal Company was organized for the purpose of owning the terminal property, they meant it was organized for the purpose of holding its legal title in trust; and when they said that the Railway Companies were desirous of having the right to use these terminals in connection with their respective railroads, they meant that they owned them and already had the right to use them.

Why did Colonel Blodgett write, and Mr. How and General Dodge sign, these erroneous statements? What purpose had they to accomplish by it? This was a private contract between the parties which was not intended for record and was not so executed that it could be recorded, and therefore was not so drawn for the purpose of deceiving anybody. The language is unambiguous and is not possible of any construction other than that these persons thought that the Terminal Company owned this property. To say that this contract does not correctly and truthfully set out the relations of the Terminal Company to this property as the same was understood by these persons is to convict them of incompetency. We repeat that competent and honest men do not do business this way. While they may inadvertently execute a contract that is susceptible of more than one construction, they do not say one thing and mean something entirely to the contrary.

The opinion refers to some other provisions of this contract relating to the issue and division of the stock; restricting the transfer and sale thereof. These provisions were all perfectly consistent with the theory of ownership of the property by the Terminal Company. These parties being the owners of this stock, it was competent for them to contract between themselves as to its disposition—something entirely unnecessary under the trust theory. These provisions not only do not furnish evidence of a trust, but are inconsistent therewith.

THE AMENDMENTS OF 1890.

For our purpose the question of the legal effect of these amendments may be ignored. Whatever their effect, no one reading the record can be in doubt as to what it was intended to accomplish by them.

The proceedings leading up to and incident to their adoption were formulated by Senator Cummins. He was and is an able and conscientious lawyer. He was not concerned in the transactions leading up to a transfer of the property nor in the execution of the contract of 1889. His knowledge with respect to the matter was gained from an examination of the record of those transactions and information given him by those who took part in them, all of whom he knew and with all of whom he talked. That Senator Cummins in good faith believed that it was intended by these transactions to vest a good title in the Terminal Company is beyond doubt. That he was in as good a position as anybody could be to know what the intention was is beyond question. An examination of the record disclosed to him that some ambiguities were contained therein. The purpose of the proceedings had on April 8, 1890, was to clear up those ambiguities and make manifest the agreed purpose of the parties in vesting the title. That all the parties interested were advised of this purpose is also beyond question. That Senator Cummins relied upon the good faith of those representing the Railway Companies and failed to appreciate that some day some representative of those companies who was not personally concerned in the transactions might raise the question, and therefore failed to secure the formal action of the boards of directors of the Railway Companies, is our misfortune. But his failure to do so does not in any way weaken the value of this testimony as bearing upon the intent.

It will be remembered that the proceedings of April 8, 1890, were not hurriedly taken. They had been under consideration and discussion since the annual meeting of January 3, 1890. The amendments were presented at a meeting of the stockholders held on February 18, and the meeting adjourned to April 8, to give further time for consideration.

Why, in the amendment to article two, was the clause relied upon by this Court—"All the powers exercised by this company shall be in accordance with the terms and spirit of the aforesaid contract entered into on the 2nd day of January, A. D. 1882,"—stricken out? Was it not to make clear the purpose of the parties with respect to the title to this property?

Why were articles three and four amended so as to put it beyond question that this corporation should transact its corporate affairs as an ordinary corporation? Was it not for the same purpose?

Why was it provided in article fifteen that certain preambles, including the contract of 1882, should be repealed, stricken out and expunged? Was it not to remove any doubt as to the purposes of the parties?

And why, after amending these articles, did they recite in a resolution:

> "Whereas, the Articles of Incorporation have been amended so as to conform to the true intent of the several parties," etc. (Vol. II, p. 496.)

Can there be any doubt that the people who were present and took part in these transactions thought they were conforming to the true intent of the several parties by putting the title to this property beyond any question?

If these transactions had been formulated and carried out by persons who were not active in the organization of the terminal property and the transfer of the property to it, and were therefore not in a position to know absolutely the intent with which it was done, this evidence would lose much of its weight. But we find the active man at this meeting to be James F. How, who was the most active man in all the prior proceedings, and who, beyond question, knew the intent thereof, because his intent was the intent of the parties. Another active man was Charles M. Hays, who had been connected with a portion of the prior proceedings. They were concurred in by Colonel Blodgett, who signed the amended articles and caused them to be published to the world. These people were not attempting to perpetrate a fraud upon the corporations which they represented, but were attempting in good faith to express by formal record the intention with which the transactions then under consideration were had.

Obviously there was not intended by these amended articles of incorporation any change in the relative rights of the terminal company and the railroad companies in and to the terminal property; and the amendments were designed only to express more clearly what was intended by what had been previously done, and that was that the agreement of 1882 had been carried out fully, although in somewhat changed terms, by the incorporation of the terminal company, the conveyance of the property to it and the distribution of its stock to the railroad companies in the measure of their original interest in that property.

THE ATTITUDE OF THE OTHER RESPONSIBLE OFFICERS AND DIRECTORS OF THE RAILWAY COMPANIES.

We know, of course, that while James F. How and Colonel Blodgett were the active men in attempting to carry out the purposes of the Wabash Company, back of them were the directors and other responsible officers of that corporation. These persons were James F. Joy, O. D. Ashley, Edgar T. Welles and Thomas H. Hubbard, officers and directors of the Wabash Company and members of the Purchasing Committee. An examination of their record makes their intent equally clear. The fifth paragraph of the supplemental contract between Polk and Hubbell and the Purchasing Committee relating to the sale of the Fonda line (Vol. IV, p. 1576) cannot be explained on any theory other than that the Terminal Company was to have a good title to the property because an undivided interest in the terminal property itself and a proportionate share of the stock of the company acquiring the property were dealt with as exact equivalents.

The proposition of the Purchasing Committee of February 5, 1890 (Vol. IV, p. 1599), and the contract of February 11, 1890 (Vol. IV, p. 1601), made in pursuance of the proposition of February 5, and the contract of June 15, 1890 (Vol. IV, p. 1613), by which the Purchasing Committee undertook to sell to the Hubbells a portion of the stock of the Terminal Company, can only be explained upon the theory that the Purchasing Committee were either attempting to defraud the Hubbells by selling them something of no value, or that they understood that this stock represented a valuable interest in the terminal property.

This court, of course, cannot base its decree upon the theory that the responsible representatives of complainants' predecessors were attempting to defraud, and thereby put its seal of approval upon a fraudulent transaction. With respect to this sale the court says:

> "We deem it clear, however, that the intent of the purchasing committee, known and assented to by Hubbell and Dodge at the time, was merely to enable the latter to sell the three-eighths interest to some railroad company capable of participating in the use of the terminal."

If this comment had been made with respect to the stock contracted for by Polk and Hubbell on September 10, 1887 (Vol. IV, p. 1575-6), there would be no answer to it, because it appears from that transaction that the stock was acquired for the Northwestern Company, for it was agreed that it should at once be pledged for the indebtedness of that company. But as applied to the transactions under consideration, the conclusion cannot be justified by the record for the following reasons:

First: Because so far as the two northern lines were concerned, each held one-fourth of the stock in the terminal company and, under the trust theory, were the beneficial owners of the property itself. Additional stock would have been of no value to them. There could have been no inducement for Dodge and Hubbell to invest their money in this stock if it represented nothing of value, and this the Purchasing Committee knew as well as the purchasers.

SECOND: Nor was a sale to some other line of railroad through Hubbell and Dodge as conduits contemplated. Why should they buy the stock and tie up their money in it if they could by no possibility profit by the transaction and might lose their money altogether if no such railroad company should appear.

But let us suppose that such a company did appear and did buy this stock of Hubbell and Dodge. What would that company get by its purchase? Just what Hubbell and Dodge got by theirs. It could not get more, for it would, equally with Hubbell and Dodge, be charged with notice of the agreement of 1882 and the provisions of the articles of incorporation. The quality of the stock would be the same as to each. It could not signify one thing as to one party and another thing as to the other party. And so if there was no intent to convey anything of value to Hubbell and Dodge, then a fraud was intended upon the contemplated purchasing railroad company.

We wish to emphasize that the fundamental error of the Court's opinion is that the agreement of 1882 and the articles of incorporation meant something different to Hubbell and Dodge from what they meant to outside parties. But this cannot be unless there was some other instrument or some other transaction connected with them in some way impressing upon them a significance for Hubbell and Dodge different from that apparent upon their face and with which outside parties could not be charged. But nothing of that sort appears in the record. Every resolution, every deed of conveyance is to the effect that it was intended to convey the entire right and title in the terminal property to the terminal company.

THIRD: The contract of February 11, 1899, contained the following provision:

> "And said Committee hereby authorizes and empowers said Des Moines Union Railway Company, or the proper officers thereof, to issue to said Hubbell or his assigns, one-eighth of all the capital stock in the said Des Moines Union Railway Company." (Vol. IV, p. 1601.)

FOURTH: Coincident with the execution of this contract the Purchasing Committee agreed that they would consent to an amendment to the articles which would permit one director of the company to be nominated by any person holding one-eighth of the stock of the company. (Vol. IV, pp. 1601-2.)

From these instruments it is clear that the Purchasing Committee, the members of which, as we have said, were also officers and directors of the Wabash Company, understood, not as the court has said, that this stock should be transferred to some railway company, but that it might be held by Hubbell or any other individual, and that the ownership of said stock would give to such owner a voice in the management of the property. These acts of these individuals, if we give them credit for being ordinarily honest, could be predicated only upon their understanding that the Terminal Company owned the property.

In this connection the Court says:

> "In correspondence between Mr. Hubbell and the Purchasing Committee antecedent to this transaction, they warned him that it would be necessary 'to confine a sale of the stock to such railway companies as would be interested in the station,' and he assented to this, acknowledging that 'it would be prejudicial to sell any of this to outsiders, and I understand it as you do that the > stock can not be sold without the consent of the different railroad companies who now form the terminal company.' "

The correspondence to which the Court refers is found on pages 1059-1061 of Vol. III of the record. Mr. Ashley says, indeed, that he "always supposed it would be necessary to confine the sale to such railroad companies as would be interested in the station," but nothing in the articles of incorporation so confines it. It would be to the advantage of the Terminal Company to sell to such a purchaser, as that would mean a greater use of the terminal facilities. This correspondence occurred in June, 1888.

On May 10, 1889, the railway companies and the Terminal Company executed their operating contract. In this it was provided (Rec., Vol. II, p. 487) that the shares of the Terminal Company > "are not transferable in whole or in part, without the consent in writing of all the parties of the second part (the railway companies) to this agreement."

With such consent they were, of course, transferable.

Almost a year expired after this before the proposal by Mr. Ashley to sell some of this stock was made. It was an independent transaction. It had no relation to the sales suggested in 1888. The right to sell with the consent of all the railway companies to any purchaser had been provided for. The negotiations for the sale to Hubbell and Dodge were with Hubbell individually. The memorandum contracts for the sale were made with him individually. And the sale included bonds of the Terminal Company as well as stock. The terms of the agreement were the same as to bonds and stock. The preliminary correspondence is found in Vol. III, pages 1061-1063, and the memorandum contracts, Vol. IV, pages 1599-1602 and page 1613. It is conceded that the sale of the bonds was to Hubbell individually and absolutely, and there is no reason for the assumption that the sale of the stock was in any wise different.

The Court, however, holds that the sale of the stock was not absolute, but with the purpose and, in effect, upon the condition, that it should be resold "to some railroad company capable of participating in the use of the terminal."

But even from this view of the transaction it does not follow that the title of the Terminal Company to the terminal property was that of a naked trustee and that the holders of the shares had not the usual indirect and substantial interest in the property itself.

This anticipated railroad company would acquire an interest in the Terminal Company and the terminal property like in kind to that held by the other proprietary companies and to the extent measured by its shares. That beneficial interest in the property had great value, reflected, among other things, in what were called surplus earnings, derived in part from other than railroad uses of the property.

It is a fair inference from the Court's opinion that if Hubbell had sold to a railroad company which would make use of the terminal facilities, that railroad company would not simply have acceded to a naked trusteeship, but would have acquired something of substantial value and this it would have gotten from Hubbell.

After thirty years this value, with the increment the years have brought, is taken from the Hubbells and given to the Wabash, which sold it, and to the Milwaukee, which never bought it. Something more than the purchase price of this stock, paid at a time when the outlook of the enterprise was most dubious, should be awarded upon the cancellation of the stock at this time.

CHICAGO, MILWAUKEE & ST. PAUL RAILWAY COMPANY ET AL. v. DES MOINES UNION RAILWAY COMPANY ET AL.

DES MOINES UNION RAILWAY COMPANY ET AL. v. CHICAGO, MILWAUKEE & ST. PAUL RAILWAY COMPANY ET AL.

CERTIORARI TO THE CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE EIGHTH CIRCUIT.

Nos. 66, 67. Argued March 23, 24, 1920.—Decided December 6, 1920.

1. It needs no particular form of words to create a trust, so there be reasonable certainty as to the property, the objects and the beneficiaries. P. 208.
2. If the subject of a trust be a legal interest in property and capable of legal transfer, the trust is not perfectly created unless the legal interest be actually vested in the trustee. But it is not necessary that the trust be expressed in the same instrument that transfers the title; various instruments may be read together in order to ascertain the intention to establish one. Id.

Three railroad companies agreed that they would contribute in stated proportions to establish a terminal for the common use of themselves and of such other railroads as they might admit, that the title should be in a trustee, that they would share the cost of maintenance and operation in proportion to their use of the terminal, and that a depot company might be formed to take permanent control and issue its mortgage bonds to them for their respective contributions to the purchase and improvements. Later they caused to be formed a terminal railroad company with broad corporate powers to which they conveyed, by absolute deeds, the property they had acquired for the terminal. The bonds and stock of the terminal company were declared to be issued to them "in payment," but recitals and provisions of its articles, and resolutions attending the transfer, evinced that the main object was, not to abandon, but to effectuate the plan of the original agreement. A subsequent contract between the four companies fixed terms for management of the property, for performance of the terminal service and division of the cost among the three railroads according to use, permanently allotted the stock among them, authorized one of them to sell one-half its allotment to any outside railroad, acceptable to a majority of them, which might then be admitted as a party to the agreement, but provided that, with such exception, admission of an outside company to the use of the terminal should require consent of all three. Held:

3. That the terminal company took the title in trust to maintain and operate the property and to exercise all its corporate powers for the common use and benefit of the three railroad companies, their successors and assigns, and such other companies as might be admitted by them to a proprietary participation in the terminal. Pp. 202–206.
4. That the subsequent contract was a modification only of the original plan and inconsistent with a purpose to treat the terminal company as an independent entity subject only to contractual obligations and remit the proprietary companies to the ordinary rights of stockholders. P. 208.
5. That, as between the proprietaries and others having notice, the stockholding interest was restrained to the full extent necessary to give effect to the trust, and the shares, representing the right to participate in the trust, could not be regarded, while the trust continued, as having an independent exchange value. P. 210.
6. That the fiducuary character of the terminal company extended to its officers and directors. P. 211.
7. That, where stock in the terminal company was sold by one of the proprietary companies to fiduciaries, officers and directors of the terminal company, for value, to enable them to sell it to some company capable of participating in the use of the terminal, the successor of such vendor company was not estopped from denying that the vendees acquired a substantial and valuable interest in the terminal company. P. 213.
8. That where a successor of two of the proprietary companies bought terminal shares from such individuals and afterwards, through its directors, transferred to one of them and to another officer and director of the terminal, in settlement of a loan, equivalent shares of the terminal and enough more to make more than a majority of the terminal stock, still retaining an interest, it was not estopped to dispute their claim of full ownership, or from asserting its rights under the trust and seeking relief against any inequitable use of the shares so transferred. P. 214.

9. That, in the absence of express authorization, agents deputed by the proprietary companies to vote their stock in the terminal company, including the presidents of two and the vice president of the other, were without power to amend its articles so as to do away with the trust or seriously impair the rights of the proprietaries under it. P. 215.

10. That the absence of any reference to the trust in deeds and mortgages of the property, including the terminal shares, of the proprietary companies, and in contracts made by the terminal company in discharging its functions, was not persuasive evidence against the existence of the trust. P. 218.

11. That, where the articles of the terminal company were in form amended so as to deprive the proprietary companies, as it was claimed, of their exclusive ownership and control, and in effect to discharge the trust, and the validity of the amendments was unchallenged for 17 years, and where certain individuals, for value, acquired from proprietary companies bonds and a majority of the shares of the terminal company, and held them many years during which the property increased in value, the successors of the proprietary companies were not estopped, or barred by laches, from asserting the trust against such individuals, it appearing that the latter were and remained officers and directors of the terminal company, with constructive and actual knowledge of the trust, and were not misled, that the amendments were not authorized or ratified by the proprietaries, that, although their officers acquiesced in certain internal changes in the terminal company directed by the amendments and in the de facto distribution of its stock, there was no substantial departure from the trust in the management and possession of the property, and it appearing further that no claim that the trust had been repudiated was made until shortly before the suit. Pp. 219–222.

12. That the fiduciaries holding such shares were estopped to avail themselves of incautious, negligent or mistaken acts of officers of the proprietary companies in order to obtain an advantage for themselves at the expense of those companies. Pp. 221, 222.

13. That the shares, held by such fiduciaries, represented no value or interest which they could set up against the proprietaries, and that the latter, upon repaying what the former had paid for them, with interest, were entitled to have the shares surrendered and canceled, and meanwhile to have any sale, assignment, transfer or voting of the shares prevented by an injunction. P. 223.

14. That, under contracts of the parties, earnings derived from switching and other terminal services and privileges should be credited, as they accrued, to the proprietaries in proportion to their use of the terminal, i. e., to wheelage. P. 225.

THE case is stated in the opinion.

MR. JUSTICE PITNEY delivered the opinion of the court.

This was a suit in equity brought in the year 1907 in the Circuit (now District) Court of the United States for the Southern District of Iowa by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company and the Wabash Railroad Company against the Des Moines Union Railway Company. By an amended bill the individual defendants, Frederick M. Hubbell, Frederick C. Hubbell, and their firm of F. M. Hubbell & Son, were brought in; and afterwards the Wabash Railway Company, having succeeded to the rights of the Wabash Railroad Company, was substituted as a complainant in its stead. Jurisdiction depended entirely upon diverse citizenship of the parties.

Complainants own and operate lines of railroad extending to the City of Des Moines, Iowa, and connecting there with a joint terminal property, legal title to which is held by the defendant Des Moines Union Railway Company (hereinafter called for convenience the terminal company), in which complainants hold a minority of stock, the Wabash Company an eighth, the other complainant a quarter, while the Messrs. Hubbell hold five eighths. Complainants assert that the terminal company holds its property in trust for their use, and that they are the sole beneficial owners, having an equitable tenancy in common, and being entitled to the joint use of the property in perpetuity, exclusive except as other railroads may be admitted to participate in such use with their consent. This is the principal matter in controversy. Intimately connected with it is the question of the validity as against complainants of the Messrs. Hubbell's claim to ownership of five eighths of the capital stock. A subordinate issue relates to the disposition of what are called "surplus earnings," acquired by the terminal company from outside parties during the operation of the terminal under an agreement made in the year 1889 between the terminal company and the predecessors of complainants and which expired in 1918.

Complainants base their principal contention upon a trust alleged to have been established under and pursuant to an agreement made January 2, 1882, between three companies then engaged in the construction of as many railroads converging at Des Moines, and through the incorporation of the terminal company in the year 1884 for the express purpose of acting as trustee for the three companies, and the conveyance to it by them of the terminal property, followed by the working agreement of 1889; from all of which it is contended that the terminal company has from the beginning held and still holds all its property subject to a trust under which the three railroad companies and their successors and assigns, and such other railroad companies having lines terminating at Des Moines as may be admitted with their consent, are entitled to have the terminal property maintained and operated for their use and benefit at the actual cost of the terminal service performed. Complainant Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company is the remote successor of two of the three companies, owning what may be called the Northern and the Northwestern lines. Complainant Wabash Railway Company is the remote successor of the original company that owned the third, which may be called the St. Louis line. The bill of complaint prayed for a decree declaring and establishing the trust; an accounting for all income and profits received by the terminal company for switching or handling traffic at the terminal for companies other than complainants and their predecessors, and for rentals of real estate and the like; and specifically and generally for other appropriate relief. The defenses set up in the answer and attempted to be supported by the proofs are, briefly, that by the deeds of conveyance made to the terminal company it took title not as trustee but absolutely and for its own sole use and benefit; that, whatever relation may have arisen from the provisions of the original articles of incorporation, whether fiduciary or merely contractual, was substantially modified, and if fiduciary terminated, by amendments adopted April 8, 1890, alleged to have been thereafter recognized by complainants and their predecessors as valid and so treated by defendants and all others concerned; that complainants by their conduct and that of their predecessors are estopped from setting up the equitable title alleged, and have been guilty of laches barring relief in equity; hence that they are not entitled to assert any right or interest in the terminal property except such as arises from their ownership of a portion of the stock of the terminal company and from the provisions of the agreement of 1889; and that by the proper construction of that agreement the so-called surplus earnings are the property of the terminal company and not of complainants.

Upon final hearing the District Court made a decree from which both sides appealed to the Circuit Court of Appeals, where it was held (one judge dissenting) that the terminal company had complete and absolute title to the terminal property; that complainants, except as holders of its stock or bonds, had no interest in it, nor voice in the control or management; that by the true construction of the 1889 agreement complainants were entitled to the surplus earnings until May 1, 1918, and that thereafter the rights of the parties respecting the use of the terminal were only such as sprang from their nature as carriers and their physical and business relations to each other and to the terminal; by reason of which the terminal company must furnish them with reasonable terminal facilities at reasonable charges to be agreed upon, or in default of agreement to be fixed by the proper public tribunal. 254 Fed. Rep. 927.

Cross-writs of certiorari bring the resulting decree here for review.

The facts are intricate, and the evidence so voluminous that any detailed recital of it would be unduly tedious. It is sufficiently referred to in the prevailing and dissenting opinions delivered in the Circuit Court of Appeals, and we will content ourselves with touching upon the salient points. The case involves no abstruse legal or equitable doctrine; the application of familiar principles to the facts as they are developed will direct us to the proper outcome.

The agreement of January 2, 1882, was made between the three railroad companies and two individuals in whose names certain titles had been taken for the benefit of the companies. Its principal provisions were that terminal facilities in Des Moines should be purchased, constructed, and maintained at the joint expense of the three companies and held and used in common; that the expense of acquisition should be borne one-half by the St. Louis Company, one-quarter by each of the others; "that a depot company may be organized and may take permanent charge of the property upon the terms herein set forth, and that said company may issue and deliver to the companies, parties hereto, its mortgage bonds to the amount of their respective portions of the cost of the said purchases and improvements. . . . The title to said property shall be and remain in a trustee to be named by agreement of said companies, but subject to the joint use and occupation of all of said railway companies upon the terms herein described." The St. Louis Company was to be charged with police control, supervision, and maintenance of the terminal, and the expense thereof (including taxes) apportioned between it and the other companies according to the use they should respectively make as evidenced by the wheelage; spur tracks were to be built connecting the terminal with factories and other sources of trade in and about the city, but if either of the companies should deem the construction of any such track not advantageous the question of constructing it and which of the three companies should pay for it was to be determined by arbitration; any railroad company having a line not extending to Des Moines but having effected an arrangement for running its trains into the city over the line of either of the three companies was to be entitled to the use of the terminal facilities upon paying a fair sum for rental and a proportion of the maintenance account, the rental to inure to the three companies in the same proportion as the original outlay, and the sum due for maintenance to be determined in the same manner as in the case of the three companies; railroad companies having lines extending into Des Moines might be admitted to the use of the terminal by agreement of all three companies; differences arising under the agreement were to be referred to arbitration.

The terminal company was organized by representatives of the three companies under articles of incorporation dated December 10, 1884, which recited the 1882 contract in full, with special emphasis upon the provision that a depot company might be organized to take permanent charge of the property, and declared that the new company was organized for this purpose as well as others that were expressed. The articles contained apt provisions to comply with the laws of the State of Iowa so as to enable it to construct, own, and operate a railway in, around, and about the city, with depots and everything else useful and convenient for the operation of railways at the terminal point, and with all the powers conferred upon corporations for pecuniary profit. Its corporate existence was to continue for fifty years, with the right of renewal. It was expressly declared: "All the powers exercised by this company shall be in accordance with the terms and spirit of the aforesaid contract entered into on the 2nd day of January, A. D. 1882." There was a provision that the written assent of the three companies should be necessary before the terminal company should lease or otherwise dispose of the use of any part of its franchises to any other railroad company. The capital stock was to be $1,000,000, divided into shares of $100 each, and paid in as the board of directors might determine, with authority to the board to receive in payment the property and franchises in Des Moines held by the three companies and their trustees. Four members of the board of directors were to be nominated by the St. Louis Company, two members by each of the other proprietary companies, and no stockholder to be eligible for membership in the board unless so nominated; this provision to apply to and be enjoyed by any grantee or assignee of either of the three companies. No contract, lease, or other agreement amounting to a permanent charge upon the property of the corporation to be entered into unless first approved by the three companies or their assigns and by more than three-fourths of all the stockholders.

January 1, 1885, each of the three companies held a stockholders' meeting, at which formal resolutions were adopted reciting the contract of January 2, 1882, and the organization of the terminal company as contemplated in that contract and in order to carry out its purpose; each company thereby accepting and ratifying, so far as its interests were affected, the articles of incorporation of the terminal company as in substantial accord and compliance with the terms and conditions of the contract, and authorising its officers to transfer to the new company all its right, title, and interest in the terminal property in exchange for a proper share of the bonds and stock of the terminal company.

On the same day the board of directors of the terminal company adopted resolutions accepting the transfer, management, and operation of the terminal property, appointing a committee to confer with the three railroad companies with respect to the terms and price at which the terminal property and franchises should be conveyed to it, and to procure from them "such conveyance and transfer as may be necessary to fully invest this company with the title, control and management of said properties as provided for in said contract of January 2nd, 1882"; and authorizing the issue of all its capital stock and not exceeding $500,000 of bonds to be secured by mortgage of the properties so to be conveyed; the bonds and stock to be used in paying for the property, maintaining, operating, and improving it, and purchasing other property necessary to carry out the objects of the company.

Due apparently to the financial embarrassment of the original Wabash Company, which dominated the St. Louis and the Northwestern, terminal matters remained in abeyance until November, 1887, when deeds were authorised, which, between that time and the following April, were made by the companies and the individual trustees with the effect of vesting in the terminal company complete legal title to the properties that had been acquired for the purpose of establishing the terminal. The deeds were absolute in form. The terminal company by amendment of its articles increased its capital stock from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000, and authorized the making of a mortgage, which afterwards was given as of date November 1, 1887, to the Central Trust Company of New York as trustee, to secure an issue of $800,000 of 5 per cent. bonds for the purpose of paying for its property and completing improvements thereon; the mortgage covering all its real estate, rolling-stock, etc., then owned or thereafter to be acquired.

Until May 1, 1888, the terminal property continued to be operated by the St. Louis Company under the original agreement; on that date the terminal company took possession, and ever since then has continued to operate it and render terminal service thereon to the three railroad companies and their successors, as well as to other companies admitted from time to time under special agreements.

Upon a review of all the evidence, construing the writings in the light of the circumstances and the manifest purpose and intent of the parties, we are clear that the effect of the transactions thus far recounted was to establish a trust in the full and proper sense of the word, the terminal company being invested as trustee with complete legal title, but without beneficial ownership, and subject to a duty to maintain and operate the property and exercise all its corporate powers for the common use and benefit of the three railroad companies, their successors and assigns, and such other companies as might be admitted by them to a proprietary participation in the terminal.

The gist of defendants' argument to the contrary is that the incorporation of the terminal company and the conveyance of the property to it by deeds absolute in form manifested a substantial change of plan from that embodied in the contract of January 2, 1882; stress being laid upon the fact that the powers of a terminal railway company as acquired under the articles of incorporation were much more extensive than those of a depot company, and it being contended that the provisions of the articles respecting the control of the terminal company and the resolutions providing for the transfer of the property to it, the form of the deeds themselves, and the issuance of stock and bonds to the proprietary companies in payment, demonstrated a purpose to invest the terminal company with title for all purposes. But the main object of establishing a joint terminal at the common expense and for the common use of the three companies and to retain their proprietary interest in it while confiding its maintenance and operation to their trustee is so manifest that all the proceedings are properly to be construed as designed to give effect to it, and seeming inconsistencies and ambiguities resolved accordingly. The provision of the articles that "all the powers exercised by this company shall be in accordance with the terms and spirit of the aforesaid contract" is not merely contractual, but amounts to a declaration of trust and together with the other evidence shows clearly that the powers were procured from the State expressly to enable the company the better to fulfill the purposes of its existence as such trustee, and not to set it up in business on its own account. The substitution of the terminal company with more elaborate powers in place of the depot company contemplated at the beginning shows a development and modification of the original plan, but no departure or substantial change. The particular stipulations contained in the articles respecting the control of the terminal company were intended not as a substitute for but as safeguards of the trust. The absolute form of the conveyances, and the issuance of stock and bonds "in payment," were intended to give credit to the company in its dealings with outside parties and to render its bonds more readily salable; but they constituted the mere mechanism for carrying into effect the main purpose of the parties, and as between them were controlled by that purpose and by the articles and resolutions that manifested an express declaration of the trust. All the circumstances, and what we have quoted from the resolution of the terminal company directors, show that the title was conveyed for the purpose of enabling that company to control and manage the terminal in furtherance of the objects of the 1882 agreement.

It needs no particular form of words to create a trust, so there be reasonable certainty as to the property, the objects, and the beneficiaries. Colton v. Colton, 127 U. S. 300, 310. But if, as here, the subject of the trust be a legal interest in property and capable of legal transfer, the trust is not perfectly created unless the legal interest be actually vested in the trustee. Adams v. Adams, 21 Wall. 185, 192, 194. Hence the necessity in this case of deeds conveying the fee to the terminal company. But it is not necessary that the trust be expressed in the same instrument that transfers the title. Various instruments may be read together in order to ascertain the intention to establish one. Loring v. Palmer, 118 U. S. 321, 340.

The agreement of May 10, 1889, between the terminal company of the first part and the three proprietary companies of the second part fixed the terms upon which the property should be managed and the terminal service performed for a period of thirty years to date from May 1, 1888. It constituted a working arrangement for that period, but did not in terms or by implication set aside the trust or place a time limit upon it. It provided that for the terminal service the proprietary companies should make payments, in proportion to the wheelage of each, to cover interest upon the mortgage bonds, the cost of maintenance, repairs, taxes, and insurance, and the cost of operating the terminal, including all expenses (except the operation of engine-houses, care of engines, and repairs thereto, which were separately dealt with), after deducting any amounts which other railway companies might be obliged to pay for the use of the property. Engine-house expenses were to be apportioned according to the number of engines of each company, engine repairs to be charged to the company for which the work was done. The agreement contained other provisions of permanent effect, providing for the allotment of the stock of the terminal company to the proprietary companies and declaring the terms upon which outside companies might be admitted to ownership of the stock or the use of the property. It recited that the proprietary companies were entitled to the stock in the proportion of one-half to the St. Louis Company, one-fourth to each of the others, and provided for the issuance of certificates accordingly, and that these should express upon their faces that they were not transferable without the consent in writing of all the proprietary companies, except as to shares issued to qualify directors. And there was a provision that the St. Louis Company might sell one-half of its stock, or one-quarter of the whole, to such railroad company as might be acceptable to a majority of the proprietary companies, in which case the purchasing company might be admitted as one of the parties to the agreement upon the same terms and conditions as those stipulated for the other parties of the second part; and that, except as thus provided, other railroad companies should not be admitted to the use of the terminal property without the consent of all the parties of the second part.

Here again we have a further modification of some of the details of the original plan, but in respects altogether consistent with the continuance of the trust; inconsistent, indeed, with a purpose to treat the terminal company as an independent entity subject only to contractual obligations and remit the proprietary companies to the ordinary rights of stockholders. Their contributions to the original cost of the property having been secured by mortgage bonds according to the plan of 1882, provision was now made for distributing the entire capital stock according to the original proportions, one-half to the St. Louis, one-quarter to each of the two other companies, but with certain material restrictions upon the ordinary rights of stockholders expressed in the agreement and others necessarily implied.

Since, from the very nature and terms of the trust, all the property and franchises of the terminal company were to be held for the benefit of the proprietary companies, and all its corporate powers exercised in the administration of the joint terminal for their common use, the stockholding interest in the terminal company necessarily must be modified, as between the parties, to the extent necessary to give full effect to the trust. In the hands of the proprietors of the connecting lines the stock was the evidence of their right to participate in the benefits of the trust, in the control and management of the terminal company, and in the use of the terminal; but such use, in the nature of things, must be proportioned, not according to the magnitude of their respective stock holdings, but according to their respective traffic requirements. And since the terms of the trust required that these connecting lines should have the entire beneficial use of the property upon paying the cost of the terminal service, there was no room for a profit from the operations of the terminal company out of which dividends could be paid. Except in the theoretically possible but extremely improbable event of an abandonment of the terminal (as to the effect of which no opinion need be expressed), it is plain that, as between the parties to the trust and others having notice of it, the stock could have little or no exchange value except to a company owning or operating a railroad line connecting or capable of connecting with the terminal. In the hands of others having notice of the trust, the stock represented no substantial property interest. Some recognition of the anomalous status of the stockholding interest is to be found in the acts of the parties above set forth, especially in the provisions of the agreement of 1889. The amount of stock provided for shows that it was deemed probable that eventually the property would have a value in excess of the original cost represented by the bond issue, or that value might be given to the stock through liquidation of the bonds or otherwise, and that upon a sale of a participation in the terminal property and facilities to an outside railroad company, evidenced by a transfer of stock in the terminal company, some return could be got for such increased value. The apportionment of the original issue, and the stipulations of the 1889 agreement, recognized that the St. Louis Company, as representative of the original Wabash Company, was equitably entitled to preference in any profits that might be derived from such a sale to an outside company. And evidently it was then anticipated that there would be four proprietary companies, each holding one-fourth of the stock, with equal representation in the board of directors.

We are not here concerned with any question pertaining to the rights of the bondholders. It may be assumed that, if necessary for their protection, the mortgage would be treated as conveying the entire estate, both legal and equitable, in the terminal property. No express provision appears to have been made for paying off the principal of the bonds. Whether the beneficiaries of the trust, as between themselves, were or are entitled to have provision made for discharging the principal by including periodic amortization charges as a part of the cost of operating the terminal is a question that we need not consider.

Nor are we at this moment concerned with any question that might arise if stock of the terminal company had come or should come to the hands of a bona fide purchaser for value without notice. The principal controversy arises from the fact that defendants F. M. Hubbell and F. C. Hubbell have become the holders of five-eighths of the capital stock, upon which fact, together with the alleged effect of the amendments to the articles of incorporation adopted April 8, 1890, defendants rest the insistence that the proprietary companies have lost their right to control the action of the terminal company, that the Messrs. Hubbell as stockholders are entitled to control it and to have dividends out of its profits, and that from and after the expiration of the 1889 agreement, complainants have no right to the use of the terminal except upon terms to be agreed upon by the terminal company as controlled by the Messrs. Hubbell.

It is important, therefore, to consider the circumstances under which their stock was acquired and the amendme. adopted.

Obviously the fiduciary character of the terminal company extended to its officers and directors as to all others concerned in its management, charging them with a duty to uphold the trust and imposing upon them the usual disability about reaping a personal advantage at the expense of the beneficiaries. And it is clear and undisputed that the Messrs. Hubbell acquired their stock with full notice of all essential facts pertaining to the trust; they themselves at all times material were officers and directors of the terminal company and acted in a fiduciary capacity in everything relating to its affairs. Mr. F. M. Hubbell was an officer and director of that company at the beginning and continuously thereafter, especially active in its management; and during a period which included the important transactions in question he also was a director and officer of each of the proprietary companies and their trusted representative in respect to terminal matters at Des Moines. Mr. F. C. Hubbell became a director of the terminal company in January, 1890, president two years later, and has been such continuously since.

In the year 1886 and thereafter until and during the year 1890 the property of the Wabash system, including the stock of the St. Louis Company with control of its part of the stock of the terminal company, was in the hands of a purchasing committee as trustees for the Wabash bondholders. In February, 1890, F. M. Hubbell obtained from this committee an option for the purchase of $135,000 of the terminal company bonds and a quarter interest in its capital stock for $135,000, accepted the option, made over to General Dodge a half interest in it, and Hubbell and Dodge each received one-half of the specified bonds and one-eighth of the outstanding capital stock, with a guaranty on the part of the purchasing committee that the St. Louis Company would approve the transfer (as it afterwards did, through its board of directors), and that the committee would consent to such change in the articles of incorporation of the terminal company as would permit one director to be nominated by any person or company holding one-eighth of the stock. At this time General Dodge was president of the terminal company, and also president and principal stockholder of the Northern Company; Hubbell, besides his relation to the terminal company, was president of the Northwestern Company and its controlling stockholder. In correspondence between Mr. Hubbell and the purchasing committee antecedent to this transaction they warned him that it would be necessary to confine a sale of stock "to such railway companies as would be interested in the station"; and he assented to this, acknowledging that "it would be prejudicial to sell any of this stock to outsiders, and I understand it as you do that the stock cannot be sold without the consent of the different railroad companies who now form the terminal company." Later Hubbell acquired from the purchasing committee $50,000 of the bonds and an additional eighth interest in the capital stock of the terminal company for $57,736, being par and accrued interest for the bonds and 15% of par for the stock, upon the understanding expressed in writing that an eighth interest should be "sufficient to represent a proprietorship in the company, according to the understanding we had when you were here"—evidently meaning that the eighth retained by the purchasing committee should carry with it a proprietary interest and influence in the terminal not limited in proportion to the amount of the stock.

Defendants insist that because the purchasing committee sold the stock to Hubbell and Dodge for a valuable consideration, they must be taken to have dealt with it as having substantial value; and that since, in afterwards making report to the board of directors of the Wabash Company, with an account of their financial transactions, the committee included their receipts from sales of the stock and bonds of the terminal company, and the directors approved the account, complainant Wabash Railway Company is estopped from denying that Hubbell and Dodge acquired a substantial and valuable interest in the terminal company. We deem it clear, however, that the intent of the purchasing committee, known and assented to by Hubbell and Dodge at the time, was merely to enable the latter to sell the three-eighths interest to some railroad company capable of participating in the use of the terminal. Whether consistently with their fiduciary relations or not, they took advantage of this opportunity in the following year, when the Northern and Northwestern companies were consolidated and they sold to the consolidated company the stock in question, apparently and presumably at a profit over and above what they paid the purchasing committee for it. There is no foundation for the suggested estoppel.

The title now asserted by the Messrs. Hubbell to five-eighths of the terminal company stock was derived not directly from the Wabash purchasing committee, but from the consolidated Northern and Western company. That company, in addition to the three-eighths transferred to it by Hubbell and Dodge, had the two quarter-interests originally owned by those companies, making seven-eighths in all. In October, 1893, the consolidated company pledged to F. M. Hubbell & Son five-eighths of the terminal company stock (2,500 shares) as security for a debt. The stock was transferred to the Hubbell firm on the books at that time, and so remained down to the institution of this suit, except as to five "qualifying shares" placed in the names of individuals but controlled by the firm. On January 29, 1894, the indebtedness was settled between the directors of the consolidated company and the Messrs. Hubbell upon terms that included a purchase by the latter of the 2,500 shares of terminal company stock at ten per centum of its par value. Passing for the moment certain special grounds of attack upon the title they thus acquired to these shares, it is obvious that they took them subject to all qualifications arising out of the trust that pertained to the property and franchises of the terminal company.

The quarter-interest in the terminal company stock retained by the consolidated company afterwards passed from it to the complainant Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company, which acquired at the same time the Northern and Northwestern lines. That company took with notice of the claim of the Hubbells to a five-eighths interest; but this does not estop it from disputing the validity of their claim, nor from setting up, as in this suit, whatever beneficial participation in the trust respecting the terminal property may be incident to its ownership of one-fourth of the stock of the terminal company together with connecting lines of railroad, and asking for relief against any inequitable use by the Hubbells of the five-eighths interest claimed by them.

As to the amendments to the articles of incorporation: These are alleged to have been adopted at a meeting of the stockholders of the terminal company held April 8, 1890. Their purport was, briefly, to omit from the articles the copy of the contract of 1882 recited therein, the declaration that the powers exercised by the company should be in accordance with the terms and spirit of that contract, and the requirement that assent in writing of the proprietary companies should be necessary before any disposition of the franchises of the terminal company should be made; to set aside previous proceedings respecting the amount of capital stock to be issued to the proprietary companies and provide for the distribution of a much decreased amount ($400,000 par instead of $2,000,000) but in the same proportions as before, the remaining capital stock ($1,600,000 par) to be issued only by resolution of the stockholders adopted by vote of more than seven-eighths of all the stock theretofore issued; and to eliminate the former method of selecting directors and provide that they should be elected by the stockholders, but that it should require the votes of more than seven-eighths of all the stock to elect a director, and that as to all matters except the ordinary operation of the property the directors could act only upon unanimous vote of the eight members of the board. One of the articles adopted purported to repeal, strike out, and expunge the proceedings of a stockholders' meeting held December 10, 1884, at which the original articles of incorporation were adopted.

It is plain enough, and is conceded, that the corporation could not, by merely altering its own internal organization, affect the interests of its cestuis que trustent. It is as evidence of a modification of the agreement between the stockholders of the terminal company—themselves beneficiaries of the trust—that the amendments are invoked. So regarding them, the question is, by what authority and with what intent were they adopted? The stockholders' meeting was attended by six individuals (including the two Hubbells), and two others by proxy, each of whom assumed to represent, and in a general sense did represent, one or the other of the three proprietary companies. F. M. Hubbell himself was president of the Northwestern Company and assumed to represent it. Others present were the vice president of the Northern and the president of the St. Louis companies. The evidence fails to show that those present had express authority to act for the proprietary companies in amending the articles; and action of this kind—materially affecting the property interests of the three companies in a matter so vital as the ownership and control of an important terminal—was so far out of the usual or ordinary course of business that authority to represent their corporations in assenting to it was not to be implied as coming within the general scope of their duties. Nor did either of the proprietary companies, by any formal corporate action, accept or ratify the amendments.

Moreover, it affirmatively appears, and both courts below in effect found, that there was no actual intent on the part of any of the parties concerned to affect the substantial rights or equities of the proprietary companies, or to terminate, repudiate, or substantially modify the trust respecting the terminal property. It does appear that some of those active in proposing the amendments, and assuming to act for the proprietary companies in assenting to them (there is a question whether they actually were adopted by a proper vote of the stockholders, but we do not go into this), were under the impression that the contract of 1882, recited in the articles of incorporation, already had been abrogated and the trust set aside by the issuance of the terminal company's bonds and apportionment of the stock to the proprietary companies in payment for the property conveyed and by the making of deeds absolute in form; that both in respect to the ownership of the property and the management of it under the contract of 1889 the original arrangement had been abandoned; and that it was desirable to amend the articles so as to make them conform to the situation actually existing.

Clearly, this was a mistaken impression, as will appear from what we have said. It was a mistake not indeed as to any mere matter of fact, nor on the other hand as to any pure question of law, but rather as to the existing legal rights, interests, and relations of the parties resulting from antecedent transactions. Whether it was such a mistake as to furnish — and for a cancellation of the amendments in equity, is a question into which we need not enter. (See Snell v. Insurance Co., 98 U. S. 85, 90; Griswold v. Hazard, 141 U. S. 260, 284; Utermehle v. Norment, 197 U. S. 40, 56; Philippine Sugar Co. v. Philippine Islands, 247 U. S. 385, 389; Pom. Eq. Jur., §§ 841-849.) For the fact that those who assumed to act for the proprietary companies in assenting to the amendments were mistaken as to the existing legal situation, so that the amendments, if given effect according to their terms, instead of bringing the articles into conformity with the situation already actually existing, would materially change the situation to the disadvantage of the proprietary companies by putting an end to an important trust contrary to their actual intent as parties beneficially interested, is a cogent reason for holding as we do that authority on the part of agents to assent to such amendments is not to be implied where it was out of the ordinary course of business and express authority was not conferred.

In support of the contention that the terminal property was not subject to any trust either before or after the amendments, defendants cite a series of contracts in which the terminal company asserted its ownership without qualification, and of conveyances, mortgages, etc., by the proprietary companies recognizing the legal title of the terminal company to its property and asserting in themselves only a title to shares in the terminal company. But when a trust is once established and acknowledged it does not need to be constantly reiterated or confessed. None of the instruments referred to is in anywise inconsistent with the trust; the contracts of the terminal company were made in the very course of its administration of the trust; and the mortgages and conveyances of the proprietary companies dealt with legal titles only, their equitable interests in the terminal passing without mention as incidental to their ownership of the stock together with the connecting lines.

The majority of the Circuit Court of Appeals held that the control of the proprietary companies was relinquished by reason of the amendments and the conduct of the parties at the time and thereafter, upon this theory: that although the amendments were neither previously authorized nor afterwards formally accepted or ratified by the three companies, yet since their executive officers were aware of and approved the action of the meeting; since Hubbell was encouraged to purchase the bonds and stock, the value of the stock being wholly prospective; since after the amendments the stock of the terminal company was issued in accordance therewith and directors elected by the new method, the railroads making no attempt to exercise their right of naming directors in certain proportions as before; since for seventeen years the railroads acted, as it seemed to the court, in harmony with the amended articles, not questioning their validity until this suit was commenced; they could not, after such delay, enforce their rights in a court of equity against defendants who to their knowledge had acted upon the belief that such rights did not exist, and had acquired and held property which had largely increased in value in the interval. It was held that this result had come to pass although the railroads never had intended it; that the sale of a part of the Wabash stock by the purchasing committee to Hubbell and Dodge, then influential in the two other roads, would seem at the time a mere rearrangement of the interests of the three companies in the terminal company; but that the effect of the amendments was a severance of the control of the roads over the terminal company, and subsequent events confirmed this, so that when the Hubbells disposed of their interests in the Northern and Northwestern to the Milwaukee, retaining for themselves a majority of the terminal holdings, the result was that the railroads themselves had gradually let slip that exclusive ownership and control which at the beginning they had so much valued and so carefully guarded.

Convinced that the relation of the parties was fiduciary and not merely contractual, we are unable to accept the view thus outlined. It would require a clear case to warrant a court of equity in declaring that the trustees of an express trust, in the very course of their administration of the trust, had acquired a dominant interest in the trust property and in effect a discharge of the trust, through mere inattention or even negligence—not raising an estoppel or amounting to laches—on the part of the parties beneficially interested, or of their executive officers. Conduct merely equivocal, or apparently inconsistent with a vigilant insistence upon the obligations of the trustee, is not sufficient to discharge a trust. The cestui que trust is entitled to rely upon the fidelity of the trustee, until plainly put on guard against him. And the trustee is at all times disabled from making a profit for himself out of any dealings in the trust property without the express consent of the cestui que trust.

Nothing appears to create an estoppel against complainants. Neither they nor their predecessors have misled defendants to their disadvantage. The purchasing committee accepted a money consideration from Hubbell and Dodge for the transfer of a block of stock. But the purchasers had more complete and intimate knowledge of the situation than the committee had, and were specially put on notice, as the correspondence shows. Indeed, their knowledge of the true nature and office of the terminal company constituted adequate notice. And again, when the Messrs. Hubbell reacquired the same three-eighths with an additional one-quarter interest from the consolidated Northern and Western Company, they were as before chargeable with full notice of all the facts out of which the equities of complainants arise.

The question of laches presents more difficulty; but after mature consideration we are convinced that it must be resolved in favor of complainants. Acquiescence by the executive officers of the proprietary companies in the changed situation resulting from the amendments of April 8, 1890, is stressed by counsel for defendants, as it was in the majority opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals; it being pointed out that after the amendments directors were elected in the new mode, and that in an agreement of ratification dated July 31, 1897, made for the purpose of giving recognition to the participation of the Wabash and of the consolidated Northern and Western Company in the obligations of the 1889 agreement, it was declared that so much of that agreement as related to the issuance and distribution of the capital stock of the terminal company was no longer binding, and the stock was held in specified proportions, including "F. M. Hubbell & Son 2,500 shares." This was a recognition of their status as de facto stockholders, but not a concession that the fiduciary character of the terminal company had been changed, or that the stock possessed any quality or value other than was consistent with the nature and terms of the trust. The parties acted in harmony with the amended articles so far as the internal organization of the company was concerned, but the company remained in possession of the property as before and continued to manage it in accordance with the terms of the agreement of 1889. Such possession was as consistent with a continued recognition of the trust as with the opposite; and it does not appear that at any time until shortly before the bill was filed defendants contended that the amendments amounted to an express repudiation of the trust or that the terminal company would be free from obligation at the expiration of the agreement. Prior to this there had been a difference about the disposition of the "surplus earnings," but this was no more than a question about the proper construction of the working agreement.

It seems to us the court below attributed undue weight to the conduct of the executive officers of the proprietary companies indicating acquiescence in a supposedly changed situation resulting from the amended articles. It would not be surprising if occasionally there was a failure to appreciate fully and accurately the rights and obligations growing out of the trust. But the Messrs. Hubbell, because of their fiduciary relation, are estopped from laying hold of the incautious, negligent or mistaken acts of the executive officers as a ground on which to build up a profit or advantage for themselves at the expense of the proprietary roads which were their cestuis que trustent.

Upon the whole case, it is our conclusion that the trust with respect to the terminal property continues substantially as it was established at the incorporation of the terminal company; that this company holds all its property and franchises—whether conveyed to it at the beginning or acquired since—in trust for the purpose of carrying out, in substance, the terms and spirit of the contract of January 2, 1882, with such minor changes as have been agreed upon since, and is bound to exercise all its powers (including its power to renew the corporate charter) in furtherance of the trust; that the amendments of April 8, 1890, were unauthorized by the proprietary companies and had no effect in discharging or modifying the trust; that complainants are the sole beneficial owners of the property and franchises of the terminal company, and they and their successors and assigns, and such other railroad companies owning or operating lines of railroad extending to or near to Des Moines as may be admitted to a proprietary interest by consent of complainants and their successors and assigns, are (as between the present parties and their successors) entitled to the sole beneficial use of the terminal property upon paying the cost of the terminal service, including interest upon the mortgage debt and other proper charges, after crediting all revenues derived from other sources, and without profit to the terminal company; and that from and after the expiration of the 1889 agreement complainants were and are entitled to have a similar working arrangement renewed from time to time perpetually: its specific terms to be agreed upon between themselves, or judicially ascertained if they are unable to agree.

Complainants are entitled to a decree establishing the trust, with all appropriate incidental relief. We do not attempt to lay down the particular provisions of the decree. These may be settled by the District Court upon the going down of the mandate.

To consider, next, the status of the Hubbell stock: The title acquired by them from the consolidated company is attacked by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul on the ground that it was acquired by inequitable means, the Hubbells being at the time in control of the board of directors. It is attacked by the Wabash on the ground that the consolidated company could not in equity pass the stock to the Hubbells and thus impair the interest in the terminal company then held by the St. Louis Company, to which the Wabash has succeeded. We have not found it necessary to consider whether these contentions ought to be sustained as independent grounds of substantive relief, or to what extent they would be affected by the agreement of July 31, 1897, in which the consolidated and the Wabash companies apparently gave recognition to the ownership of the stock by the Hubbells.

We pass this, because convinced that as incidental to the principal relief granted, and necessary to give full effect to it, complainants are entitled upon equitable terms to have the Hubbell shares (including all "qualifying shares" controlled by them) surrendered for cancellation. Our reasons, briefly, are as follows: The issuance of the stock to the Messrs. Hubbell, and the clause of the 1897 agreement relating to it, already have been considered with other evidence cited by defendants to show an assent to or acquiescence in a modification or abandonment of the trust, and are found insufficient for the purpose. Hence this stock, being like all other stock of the terminal company subordinate to the trust that dominates all its property and franchises, does not represent in the hands of the Hubbells any property interest that they are entitled to set up as against the proprietary companies. When they acquired it, and at all other times material, they themselves were and still are acting in a fiduciary relation to the trust; hence they cannot be heard to assert any right in the stock that is inconsistent with the trust. Manifestly it would be inequitable for them to sell it to a bona fide purchaser who might claim (even though unsuccessfully) to hold it exempt from the trust. They may have expected to sell it at a profit to one of the proprietary companies, or with their consent to an outside company or companies qualified to participate in the beneficial use of the terminal property under the trust. But, because of their fiduciary character, they are debarred in equity from trafficking in the trust property in this or any other way, without the express consent of the beneficiaries; they would be bound to account for any profit that might accrue; and any seeming consent on the part of the beneficiaries to waive such profit in advance, not amounting to a termination of the fiduciary relation, is in its nature revocable. The Hubbell stock, therefore, representing no legitimate proprietary interest as against complainants, serves merely to evidence a voting power and to qualify its holders to act as directors and officers of the terminal company: in short, to participate in a fiduciary employment, without profit beyond compensation for the value of the services rendered. But complainants, being the sole present beneficiaries of the trust and equitable owners of the terminal property, are entitled in equity to a controlling voice in the choice of directors, and especially to have the management of the trustee company, now and hereafter, freed from the domination of a stock interest that represents no property interest in the concerns of the trust. To guard against such alien control and at the same time prevent the danger of the Hubbell stock getting into the hands of bona fide holders who might set up rights under it which the present holders are debarred in equity from asserting—in short, to avoid undue jeopardy to the trust—complainants are entitled to have this stock surrendered, retired and canceled, and, until surrendered, to an injunction against any sale, assignment, or transfer of it or any part of it, and against the exercise of any voting power thereon; but upon terms that complainants shall repay to the Messrs. Hubbell the amount they paid to the consolidated Northern and Western Company for it, viz., $25,000, with interest thereon from January 29, 1894. How this should be apportioned, as between complainants, has not been discussed. It may be settled by the District Court.

The issue as to the surplus earnings relates to a considerable accumulation of moneys received by the terminal company from sources outside the proprietary companies. Possibly it may have become a moot question, in view of the result we have reached upon the main matter; but as this is not altogether clear we will dispose of the issue as raised. The agreement of 1889 provided that in making up the net cost of maintenance and operation chargeable to the proprietary lines on a wheelage basis, there should be deducted "the amount if any which other railway companies may be under obligation to pay by virtue of contracts for the use of said property or parts thereof." In the course of time, the terminal company received not only payments from outside railroad companies under contracts technically for participation in the use of the terminal property—which have been credited to complainants and their predecessors according to their wheelage—but, in addition, substantial sums from railroad companies and others for switching and other terminal services and for rent of portions of the property and privileges thereon. Receipts of the latter character were called "surplus earnings." For a period of nearly two years after the making of the 1889 agreement they were included in the credits given to the proprietary companies. This was done at first by the accounting officers of the terminal company under the general direction of its president and executive committee. In February, 1891, the practice was approved by action of the board of directors. About a year later the board resolved that until its further action sums received as rents of real estate and all switching charges should not be thus credited, but should be used as a cash capital "with which to purchase supplies and pay current bills which come in before it receives its monthly revenue from the tenant companies." Thereafter the surplus revenues were not again credited to the proprietary companies.

We concur in the opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals that by the fair construction of the 1889 agreement and the practical construction placed upon it by the parties at the beginning—a construction entirely consonant with the terms of the trust—complainants and their predecessors were entitled to credit for the surplus earnings as they accrued, each company to a share proportioned to its wheelage; and that the 1897 contract did not change this. It was decreed that these earnings belonged to complainants, and that there should be an accounting to ascertain the part due to each upon a wheelage basis. As to this the only question that occurs to us is whether the accounting should include sums that have been appropriated out of these earnings and devoted to capital expenditures for acquiring additional property and for permanent improvements—sometimes, apparently, with approval of complainants or their predecessors, sometimes without. This would hardly seem to be of serious consequence in view of the result we have reached upon the main issue. It is chiefly of interest to complainants; but they have not argued the question, declaring indeed that the entire controversy as to the surplus earnings would be material only should this court decide that complainants had no proprietary interest in the terminal company. Defendants have assigned error to so much of the decree of the Circuit Court of Appeals as awards the surplus earnings to complainants, but have not furnished data enabling us to draw an accurate line between those that were and those that were not disbursed for permanent improvements, or between those disbursements that were approved and those that were not. Unaided by counsel we hardly could be expected to unravel the somewhat obscure evidence bearing upon these points. We must therefore content ourselves with simply affirming that portion of the decree which relates to the surplus profits.

The main portion of the decree as attacked by complainants must be reversed, and the cause remanded to the District Court for further proceedings in conformity with this opinion.

As to costs, the decrees of the courts below apportioned them one-half to complainants and one-half to the terminal company. We leave this disposition undisturbed. The entire costs in this court should be paid by defendants Frederick M. Hubbell and Frederick C. Hubbell.

No. 66. Decree reversed.

No. 67. Decree affirmed.

Cause remanded to the District Court for further proceedings in conformity with this opinion.
